The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II. No 1. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1867. No. 51

ANNUAL MISSIONARY SERMON.

BY REV. N. L. BRAKEMAN.

Preached before the Mississippi Mission Conference, at its last session in New Orleans, and published by order of the Conference.

"This is the Word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying: Not by might, nor by power, but my Spirit saith the Lord of Hosts."—Zech. iv. 6.

This language and prophecy belongs to the period of Jewish history known as "the Restoration." For nearly two centuries (186 years), had the children of Israel wandered in a captivity from which as tribes they never returned.—The seventy years of Judah's captivity were ended, and under the guidance of Zerubbabel their governor, favored by a decree of Cyrus, some 50,000 Jews returned to Palestine—their beloved Canaan—and to them still "the land of promise." Exiles in heathen lands, their hearts had been in the home of their fathers, and in far distant Media, they had wept when they remembered Zion. Now they were indeed, restored, but how changed was everything.—Their fathers dead and buried in an enemy's land, themselves impoverished; they returned to find their country inhabited by strangers, their "temple burned," Jerusalem "a desolation," their homes a desert, and "all their pleasant things laid waste!" Judea, once their glory, now occasions them grief; once a kingdom, it is now a province; once a flourishing nation and receiving tribute, it is now a dependency, subdued, tributary, ruined.

But Cyrus restored unto them "the vessels of the house of the Lord," and other treasures, and they determined to rebuild the temple, and repossess and restore their land—Ezra, chap. 2. They began the work, kept the feast, laid the foundation and with mingled joy and sadness dedicated it to God—(see Ezra, chap. 3). No sooner had they begun to build than "the people of the land weakened the hands of Judah and troubled them in building," and hindered the work, "all the days of Cyrus." And when Ahasuerus, the Cambyses of the Greeks, succeeded to the throne, he reigned seven years and a half, during all which time he hindered the work. At his death, Artaxerxes usurped the empire, and from him the enemies of Judah obtained a decree to arrest all the workmen, and "they made them to cease by force and power." And the work stood still till the second year of the reign of Darius, a period of almost twenty years, from the first year of Cyrus.

At this time God spake to his people by the word of the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, saying: "My house shall yet be built and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem.....My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad, and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion," and bid them go forward with the work. But disheartened by their past experience they were ready to say: "It is useless, we are few and feeble; our enemies are numerous and strong; what can we do?—how can we build the temple?" Zechariah replies in the language of the text: "This is the word of the Lord, &c;" and adds these encouraging words: "Who hath despired the day of small things? The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house, his hands shall finish it, and he shall bring forth the head-stone thereof with shoutings of grace, grace unto it! Who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shall become a plain, and thou shalt yet know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me!" And he who moved upon the heart of Cyrus to release the Jews from captivity, now moved upon the heart of Darius to issue that remarkable decree found in Ezra, sixth chapter, 6th to 12th verses: "And the house was finished in the sixth year of the reign of Darius, the king," and amid great rejoicings was dedicated to God, according to his word by the prophet.

But, in the language of the text, and context, in this history, in this prophecy, we behold a deeper significance: In "my servant the Branch," we recognize Christ; in Zechariah, Joshua, and Zerubbabel we see typified his offices of Prophet, Priest and King; in the temple, a type of the Christian Church; in the opposition to its erection and the delay of the work, are typified the foes of Christianity and its retarded progress in subduing the world; in the completion of the temple, the type and pledge of the Gospel's final and universal triumph; and in God's chosen and designated means—"My Spirit,"—we behold the Chief Agent and instrumentality of our success.

I. Let us survey the field and glance at some of the obstructions in the way of Christianity: "The field is the world." What are the difficulties with which, on this vast field, the Gospel has to contend in its progress? "Who art thou, O great mountain?"

1. Moral darkness: It pervades a large portion of our globe. The "candle of the Lord" has thrown its beams but a little way, as yet, into this "night of time." Millions have no light of hope and immortality, and are "without God in the world." Gross darkness covers them, and

"Their souls for lack of knowledge die."

Whole nations yet sit in the regions of the shadow of death. But to be a little more specific: We will estimate the present population of the world at 1,160,000,000. Of these, there are of Pagans, 676,000,000; Christians, (nominally) 330,000,000; Mahommedans, 140,000,000; Jews, 14,000,000. The 330,000,000 of Christians are divided as follows: Roman Catholic, 170,000,000; Greek and Eastern Churches 60,000,000; Protestants 100,000,000. So that we see eight hundred and sixteen of earth's teeming millions (embracing Pagans and Mohammedans) have no true knowledge of God whatever. Enveloped in a moral darkness that may be felt, they grope in a night which has no morning, and with scarcely a glimmering star to relieve their "midnight of the soul." We see 244,000,000 (embracing the Jews, Catholics, Greek and Eastern Churches,) holding the truth in unrighteousness. They maintain some of the forms of Christianity, but have lost, and now deny its power. They have a name to live, but are dead. There are doubtless many good and pious people among them, but they are lost and swallowed up in the organizations, which maintain more of ignorance, superstition, bigotry, intolerance, infidelity and corruption than of true Christianity. While only 100,000,000 profess a true faith And of these, how many alas! only profess it and know nothing, practically, of its purity and power.—How much of moral darkness we see even where the true light shineth. Israel was God's chosen nation, and yet, 780 years before Christ, He said of them by Hosea: "I have a controversy with this people, because there is no truth nor mercy, nor justice, nor knowledge of God in the land; but by swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, and oppressing the poor they break out, and blood toucheth blood." How applicable is all this to our own land and nation in this year of grace, 1866! Through all this moral darkness the Church must make her way. What a mountain to be removed!

2. Individual corruption: From the wide world we turn to the human heart—from the millions to the man. Christianity is personal. God not only has a controversy with nations, but with individuals. He claims each heart, and in its conquest strong and numerous foes are to be overcome. "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked—who can know it?" Christ said (Mark 7, 21,) "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornication, murders, theft, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, pride, blasphemy, foolishness." And Paul added (Gal. 6, 20) "Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like," (as though the catalogue were endless,) and says: Of them "I tell you as I have told you in times past, that they which do such things cannot inherit the kingdom of God."

Here, we see the master passions of the soul. And how many of the phenomena of the general history of the world are traceable to them: The unrighteous tricks of trade, the inordinate graspings of avarice, the deep woes of poverty, the heartless oppressions of power, the unequaled corruptions in politics, the blasphemous speculations of philosophy, the tyrannies of governments, the horrors of war, the absurdities of religion; all these, and more, spring from these spirits and passions as streams from the fountain—as plants from the soil. See how in our own land these evils of the heart pervade the masses and entrench themselves in society, state and nation. See the power of avarice, the desecration of the Sabbath, the devastation of intemperance, and the corruption of youth. See the "Social Evil" spreading everywhere, and in flaunting robes of guilt, with heart on fire of hell, stalking forth at noonday almost without reproof, and certainly without correction. Look at our seaboard and inland cities, very Sodoms for corruption. Some say Christianity is losing ground. Vice is certainly growing respectable. Champions of the brutal prize ring, and professional gamblers are supposed to make good representatives in Congress; while we know that representatives and senators make good gamblers and drunkards.—Verily, individual corruption is a mighty power in the earth.

3. Organized unbelief: This is the sin of our race. Faith is the opposing power. Upon it hang the destinies and thrones of eternity. "He that believeth shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned." "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." Unbelief was the besetting sin of God's chosen people, and has been the chief crime of humanity in every age. It made war in heaven, changed angels into devils, made hell a necessity, "brought death into our world, and all our woe," crucified Christ, has persecuted his church, and has damned more millions than now people the globe. Its forms are many, its name is Legion. It is the offspring of a bad heart. Ignorance of God, and individual corruption are the hot-beds in which it grows There is Atheism, which denies the existence of God; Secularism, which denies his government; Pantheism, which denies his personality; Naturalism, which denies the special providence of God; Indifferentism, which denies his goodness; Spiritualism, which denies the word of God; Unitarianism, (in a variety of forms) which denies the Son of God; and Formalism, which denies the Spirit of God; these are its organnized forms. If we look for its causes, we find them in moral corruption, speculative philosophy, social disaffection the corruption of Christianity, religious intolerance, and the disunion of the churches. It has ample means, humanly speaking, by which to subsist and to propagate itself. It has its literary clubs and scientific associations, Its platform, press and pulpit, philosphy and poetry, cunning and eloquence are pressed into its service. It has the pen of the ready writer, the tongue of the orator and the ear of the populace, is a busy worker in our very midst, and rests not day nor night.

4. We cannot fail to notice that these evils exist to a certain extent in the purest forms of our Protestant Christianity The remains of moral darkness, individnal corruption and blind unbelief are found in our churches. There was an Achan in the camp of Israel, and a Judas among the Twelve, and their successors continue to this day. They haunt our temples, sit in our pews, and kneel at our altars. They repeat their creeds, say their prayers and sing their psalms while God is not in all their thoughts. And this reminds us that the very prosperity which Christianity gives—the civilization, intelligence and wealth it brings—becomes a snare Impiety keeps pace with our progress.—Our lines of travel, our means of communication, our extended commerce, our places of amusement and public resort are, at the same time, channels of corruption—broad ways to death. The lowest degree of moral corruption may coexist with the highest point of civilization. Art and science may advance while, morally, man sinks. Often one evil only makes way for another—as when, under the influence of knowledge, superstition is driven out that infidelity may come in—and this we call progress. Let us not be deceived.

Thus we have hastily surveyed the field, and verily "there is much land to be possessed." We have "reconnoitred the enemy" and "felt his forces," and find themnot to be despised. They are not imaginary, but real; not pigmies, but giants; not few and feeble, but numerous and strong; not stationed at one point, but fortified everywhere; not timid and fearful, but bold and defiant. Here are principalities and powers, spiritual wickedness in high places; rulers of the darkness of this world, and they defy us to the field. How shall we conquer? And as we cast about, half disheartened, for means to assure us of a victory, the the great Captain of our salvation comes to our relief, and leads us forth to glorious war, shouting the battle-cry of the text: "Not by might, not by power, but by my SPIRIT, saith the Lord of Hosts!"

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

Conundrums.

Why are large rivers like trees? Because they have branches.

Why is a fool's speech like a poor man's pocket? Because it wants sense (cents.)

Why is the Caspian Sea like a prison to a prisoner? Because it has no outlet.

From the Missouri to the Great Salt Lake—A Three Months Journey with Troops over the Plains and Mountains.

BY AN OFFICER OF THE ARMY—NO 14.

The Mormon Hierarchy—The Presidency — The Patriarch—The Apostles—The "Seventy"—The Bishops—The High Council—Other Officials—The Church and Temporal Power—The "Bowery"—Public Service—Sermons by Brigham Young and his Private Secretary—Ward Meetings—Semi-Annual Conferences—Brigham Young—His Fondness for Dancing and the Theatre—Hon. C. Kimball—Dan'l H. Wells—The Masses—Their Nationality How Emigrants reach Utah—Why They Remain—Industry and Honesty of the People.

I will in this letter conclude my remarks about the Mormon Church, and the characteristics of its members, individually and as a people.

In the Church organization there are a greater number and variety of officials than in any other sect with which I am familiar. But, notwithstanding this apparent division of authority, it is probably the greatest ecclesiastical despotism now extant. The head of the Church has in his power the lives and property of his deluded followers, and to him all acknowledge the most profound allegiance, while the masses virtually worship him. As he is not nominally the only power in the Church, I will proceed to explain the different branches of the hierarchy, which consists of the following:

I. The Presidence. This consists of three individuals, Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball and Dan'l H. Wells, (the latter also Mayor of Salt Lake City and Lieutenant General of the militia of the Terrritory, the act of Congress abolishing such office to the contrary notwithstanding.) They are known respectively as the 1st, 2d and 3d Presidents, and constitute the supreme power among the Mormons, both in temporal matters, and in matters ecclesiastical. Brigham Young is the power that controls the Presidency, and the Presidency controls the people. They claim divine authority for all their acts, but are elected by the people, the masses of whom regard the first President as unsurpassed in wisdom by any save the Omniscient. His mandate, or, rather, a simple expression of his wishes, without making it a commnd, is undisputed authority, and is obeyed implicitly. As policy on the part of this autocracy, it is nominally made to be responsible to the twelve apostles; but, so implicit is the faith of the apostles, that their judgment and conscience would yield at once, if they presumed for a moment to question the wisdom of their seer.

II. The Patriarch. This official is one who administers solely in spiritual atters, and his duties consist in bestowing patriarchal blessings upon the faithful who desire them, and are willing to pay for them. He will lay his reverend hands upon the head of a Saint, and bless him with houses and lands, and wives (number specified) and children and heirship to eternal glory, if faithful. These blessings are written out and signed by the Patriarch, and are highly prized by the ignorant. Of course, if the holder of the certificate fails to realize all that is promised therein, there is a saving clause for the Patriarch at the conclusion of the blessing, by which the failure is always satisfactorily explained.

John Smith, a nephew of the first prophet, now fills this office, and, making occasional tours through the territory, returns laden with chickens, ducks, homespun cloth, and everything else which is raised or manufactured in the country, which is portable and not immediately perishable. He is supported by such fees.

III. The Twelve Apostles, or "special witnesses of the name of Christ in all the world." This body ranks next after the Presidency, and have general superintendence of missionary labor. The apostles ordain subordinate officials of the clerical order, baptize, administer the sacrament, and are the principle preachers and expounders of the faith. The names of but two of the "twelve" are familiar to the public, and I will not enumerate them here.

IV. "The Seventy" are chosen men for missionary labor, and to build up the Church in all her "stakes." There are of the original "seventy" seven presidents elected, who have authority to appoint other seventies, whose presidents may appoint still others, and the number so multiplied ad infinitum or to the extent of the wants of the Church for such laborers in the vineyard.

The missionaries are sent abroad without purse or scrip, and are expected to live on the people among whom they labor. They are not required to do this, however, but many use their private funds, if they so desire.

V. The High Priests. This is a body of Church officials, who are elected to administer principally in spiritual concerns, under the immediate direction of the President. They have authority to officiate in any office when there are none of the properly constituted for such offices present. They are not entirely an ecclesiastical body, as the Bishops of the High Council form part of it. The unbelieving Gentiles say they do the President's "dirty work," but in what way, if at all, I am unable to say, except upon the authority of general rumor.

VI. The Bishops. Their duties pertain more to temporal matters than to ecclesiastical. There is one appointed to every settlement in the territory and to every ward in Salt Lake City. They are collectors of tithes, keep the census of their several districts, and settle difficulties existing among the Saints, when they can do so, subject to appeal to higher authority. They are supposed to administer to the spiritual wants of the people of their charge, and visit their homes for this purpose. In this respect their duties are made similar to those required of Methodist class-leaders, and are discharged about as inefficiently as the majority of our Methodist brethren.

VII. The High Council. This consists of twelve High Priests, with the President of the Church at its head. It is the highest authority to which parties may appeal when they feel aggrieved by the decision of their Bishop or other local authority. The President is required to give the decision in all cases brought before the Council when the others vote upon it. The reader may imagine how far the opinion of one who is thought incapable to err has to do with the vote of the Council. Its jurisdiction is confined to temporal matters.

Litigation, which should properly come before United States Courts, which the Mormons decline to recognize further than absolutely compelled to, is decided upon by the High Council, and from this there is no appeal. It is true that such cases might then be taken before a lawful court, but no Mormon dare do such a thing.

Besides the officials of the Church here enumerated, there are several other classes, known as Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons, but as the duties of all these are included among those of higher grades, and as they interlace and overlap each other, so I will not occupy more space in referring to them.

It will be seen by the foregoing, that the Church is virtually a State organization as much as an ecclesiastical, but it would not be in keeping with the pretended liberality of the Church (which I may say is in reality more illiberal and despotic than the Church of Rome) to have it appear that the people are governed in their temporal affairs by a Church which is governed by one man. So the temporal government is made nominally distinct, and is known as the "State of Deseret." This, of course, is an unlawful organization. Brigham Young is Governor, and will continue to be the Governor as long as he lives. But no such organization will make the Church other than a temporal soverignty. The President is also the Governor; the High Council is the Supreme Court, and the Bishops the Magistrates or Police Judges.

There are U. S. territorial officers in Utah, but they are almost impotent to enforce the laws. A case requiring trial by jury would necessitate the empanneling of a jury of Mormons, and under no circumstances would they decide contrary to the teaching of the Church, and under no circumstances would a Mormon apply to a U. S. judge for redress for any grievance, if indeed they could consider any outrage a grievance, after it had been adjudicated by their highest tribunal.

The public worship of the Mormons consists of services at the Tabernacle, every Sunday morning and evening, and on the first Thursday of every month, which is regarded as fast day. There are also ward meetings every Sunday night. The form of worship in the Tabernacle is similar to services in Methodist churches on such occasions. Their present Tabernacle, which is used until the larger one shall be completed, is entirely too small for the assemblages during the summer months, and a temporary shelter from the sun is made, by placing green boughs over a framework, covering a space capable of seating several thousand people. This is known as the "Bowery."

The scene during service in the Bowery reminded me of an old fashioned camp meeting, such as I have attended when a boy. The uprights which supported the boughs take the places of the trees, and a rough stand in front conforms to the preachers' stand at the meetings I referred to. There is a row of seats along the back of it. The central one is raised a little more than the others, and is occupied by Mr. Young, with the Apostles, Bishops, &c., arranged according to rank on his right and left.

At both morning and afternoon service at least two sermons are preached, and the Prophet is usually one of the speakers in the afternoon, when there are the largest congregations. I have attended several meetings in the Bowery, and on the first day heard Mr. Geo. Q. Cannon, one of the Apostles and Private Secretary to the President, address the people. The burden of his sermon (for I suppose it is styled such) was faithfulness to the Church, without specifying in what it consisted, and an abuse of the government, to which he referred rather ingeniously as "our enemies," though at times was not at all ambiguous, and spoke of "conspirators against the Church by men in high places, from the head of the nation down." He declared that notwithstanding all this the Church would succeed, and remarked that God had wrought greater miracles in delivering the Latter Day Saints from their enemies than he ever did in the deliverance of the children of Israel. Mr. Cannon is one of the best educated men among the Mormons, and appears to have a well balanced mind, and I am not willing, therefore, to accord to him that honesty which characterizes the great mass of the people, to which I shall refer hereafter. I have also heard the Prophet in the Tabernacle. His "say" consisted in comments upon the remarks, and a history of the religious life of a speaker, who had preceeded him; in the hackneyed subject of faithfulness to the Church, and in abuse of the government because of what he declared was persecution and inconsistency, and as regards the latter, branched off on political topics a little, and referred to the inconsistency of Congress, which four years ago couldn't conceive of authority enough to give the President, but now wants to take from him that delegated in the Constitution. Among other strange remarks he made was that the Latter Day Saints were the only sane people on the subject of religion on the face of the earth. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper is administered every Sunday afternoon. Water is substituted for wine as one of the emblems, and after being blessed is passed around through the congregation, during the delivery of the sermon, and appeared to me as any other than a solemn service.

Fasting on Sunday morning before going to "meeting" is enjoined upon all the members, and they are expected to contribute the value of the breakfast thus saved to charitable purposes.

The exercises in the temple I would not have supposed to be of a religious character if the hymns and prayers had been omitted, but those of the ward meetings partake much less of worship, though they are called religious meetings. They are presided over by the Bishops, who explain to the people the most successful ways of raising poultry, cattle, &c., and settle any little disputes that may have occurred during the week about their irrigating, water, &c.

The grand religious occasions of the year are during the sessions of the semi-annual conferences in April and October. These meetings are for the transaction of Church business, by the Bishops and others, when their presence in a collective capacity is necessary, but the laity are also assembled to elect officers and attend religious services. During the sessions, which continue for four or five days, there is service morning and afternoon of each day at the Bowery, but the extensive accommodations it affords are very inadequate for the occasions. The people collect in vast crowds, and stand patiently within sight, but not within hearing of the speaker, reminding me of the scene at an inauguration of a President in Washington, when a large proportion of the crowd are unable to hear a word that is said, but appear very much interested in the gesticulations of the speaker. Conference days the city is crowded with people. Every variety of vehicle to be observed at a country camp meeting may be seen standing about the streets, and the enthusiasm of the peo-

Continued on Second Page.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Orders left at 65 Poydras Street, or at our office, No. 7 Prytania Street, will receive full attention.

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

TO OUR PATRONS.

The second year of the New Orleans Advocate begins January 1st, 1867. Most heartily thanking our patrons for their support during the first and trying year of its publication, we now confidently solicit the continuance of their Subscriptions and Advertisements for the year to come. Words cannot express our gratitude to you. You responded to our call in the hour of need.

The Advocate has steadily increased in public favor, and our income has equalled our out-lay. It is read in no less than

FIFTEEN HUNDRED FAMILIES.

It circulates in every State in the Union. It is a light in the

HOMES OF THE FREEDMEN.

They read it with delight. It advocates their rights; it contributes to their elevation.

As in the Past, so in the Future, the Advocate is to be devoted to "Religion, Patriotism and Learning."

Each number will contain a Sermon by one of our Colored Preachers. Each issue will reflect

LIFE IN THE SOUTH.

Several gentlemen of ability, residing in different States, have consented to write "Letters" for our paper

As the Advocate circulates both in the larger towns and in the interior of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, we hope our Advertising Patrons will continue their favors.

Dear Friends, we appeal to you to sustain this

CHRISTIAN, LOYAL JOURNAL IN THE SOUTH.

Our present Subscribers will please remit the amount of their subscription for the coming year, without delay.

To any person who will send us $16, we will mail him FIVE COPIES of the Advocate.

Send your remittances in Post Office Orders, and address the Editor by name.

PUBLISHER ADVOCATE.

New Orleans Advocate.

NEW VOLUME.

It is exceedingly gratifying that the second year of the Advocate opens with such flattering prospects. Our friends appear determined that our paper shall not only live, but that its circulation shall be greatly increased. They are at work in good earnest. Within a week over One Hundred and Fifty New Subscribers have been added to our list. One of our preachers has sent us twenty and another twenty-eight, as the result of their first efforts. This is glorious.

on, Brethren, in the good work. d bless you! Send in the names.

Let us have Two Thousand New Subscribers for 1867.

Brethren, remember this is Your Paper. Then make one grand rally. Put the Advocate in every family. It will prepare your way and will preach to the people every day. It will go where the Missionary cannot go. Then let all our preachers engage heartily in this great work.

Premiums! Premiums!

As an inducement to our Preachers to obtain subscribers for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867, we offer them the following premiums:

1. To any Preacher who shall obtain for us Forty New Subscribers for the year 1867, and send us the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the Bible, consisting of six large volumes.

2. For Thirty Subscribers and the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the New Testament, in two large volumes.

3. For twenty Subscribers and the money, we will give Watson's Theological Institutes, in two volumes.

4. For Ten Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Sermons, in two volumes.

5. For Five Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Notes on the New Testament.

Brethren will observe that these Subscribers are to be for the Whole Year. The money may be paid to the Presiding Elder of your District, quarterly, in advance; but, where it can be done, pay the $4, in advance.

Now, Brethren, for a Grand Rally! Go to work. The prize is before you. Who will be the first to obtain the Premiums?

Renew!

Send or call at our office, No. 7 Prytania street, and renew your subscription for 1867. Office hours from 12 M. to 3 P. M

Dr. Newman

Will preach in the large hall of the Mechanics' Institute to-morrow (Sunday) morning, at 11 o'clock.

New Year's

Was a cold, rainy day in New Orleans; yet the New York custom of "calling" was very generally observed.

Snow

Fell in New Orleans on the night of the 3d inst., and the next morning the ground was white with the "beautiful snow."

The article which appeared in the Ladies' Department last week, entitled "A Night at Sea," contained several typographical errors, which annoyed the fair writer. The date should have been the 4th of December, and not the 14th.

Telegrams.

Galveston, Dec. 29.—Bishop Simpson, of the M. E. Church, accompanied by his son, arrived here last evening. He is the guest of Major B. Rush Plumly, and will remain several days. He preaches Sunday morning in the Turners' Hall.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 3.—The returns from twenty-three conferences of the Southern Methodist Church show that the proposition to change the name is defeated, and also indicate the probable defeat of the lay delegation proposition.

The Congressional Committee

Completed their investigations in this city on the 3d inst., and left for Washington on the 6 P. M. train. These gentlemen deserve all praise. Congress never sent forth a more industrious committee. Commencing their labors on each day at 8 A. M., they continued them till 10 P. M. Quietly, patiently, impartially they pursued their work, for eleven consecutive days. They examined a large number of witnesses touching the July massacre and the political condition of Louisiana. According to rumor there was much remarkable evidence given, and if published will astonish the nation. As the examinations were not public, of course we cannot even anticipate the conclusions reached by the committee, but we feel confident that the loyal people of our city will be vindicated and that truth and justice will triumph.

Congressional Visitors.

Five United States Senators and seven Representatives, with their wives and daughters, visited New Orleans last week. They were the most consequential fraction of seventy-two tourists who were making experiments on "reconstruction" on dynamical and gastronomical principles. The lofty idea was the conception of Col. Markland, of Washington, D. C., and the execution of the plan was entrusted to that immense military genius, P. G. T. Beauregard.—The idea was a good one, for there is nothing like a good ride, except a good dinner. The guests were transported in the most elegant cars, drawn by the swiftest engines. At all the stopping points, from the National Capital to the Crescent City, the tourists were entertained in a manner to affect their "reconstruction." The honorable gentlemen were permitted to mingle with the Southern people and receive assurances of their loyalty and hospitality. Certainly, they needed to be assured on both of these points. There is nothing like a free railroad, except a free hotel.

On their arrival in town, the "seventy-two tourists" were the "guests of New Orleans," and were entertained at the St. Louis Hotel. Here, under the same roof, where they were feasted, their fellow-Congressmen were in committee, to inquire into the causes and facts of the massacre of July 30th. Ample arrangements had been made for the pleasure of our distinguished visitors. The steamer Ruth had been engaged for a sail on the Mississippi to inspect our shipping and our broken levees; but the heavens were black, and rain fell in torrents, and therefore the levees were not inspected. This was a sore disappointment; yet the storm did not interrupt the festive plans at the hotel. On the night after the arrival of the "seventy-two," they were entertained by our "City Fathers," at a magnificent banquet at the St Louis. The invitations for the occasion had been issued with great consideration for the feelings of "our guests," and only those were invited who stand high in our community for "unquestioned loyalty." Around that festive board that night, sat in sweet counsel and good-fellowship, such patriots as Gen. P. G. T. Beauregard, and Gen. O. O. Howard; Judge Abel and Senator Lane; Mayor Monroe and Ben Wade. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Mirabile dictu! mirabile visu! In the exercise of their consummate discretion the "committee" withheld invitations from those turbulent radicals who can boast of fidelity to the Flag, but whose presence might have disturbed the placid souls of such conservative patriots as Ben Wade, and Lane, the Hoosier.—Yet, as "reconstruction" on a gastronomical principle was the end in view, we think history will deplore the committee's obliquity in purposely omitting the "radical," as they are all good eaters, and when full, the happiest mortals outside of paradise. It was such a splendid opportunity for our City Fathers to have manifested their earnest desire for the return of good feeling and a common loyalty; and we have the best of reasons for believing that Messrs. Wade, Lane, and the rest of the "seventy-two" would not have withdrawn from the banquet disgusted with their presence.

But the dinner was superb, and the gastronomical plan of reconstruction was pronounced a magnificent success. Speeches on a full stomach are not always profound, but pithy, witty, pretty. After the "third course," the "feast of reason" began, and after "The health of our invited guests" had been gravely considered, Col. Robert Owen, President of the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, proposed "The restoration of this Union to its pristine purity, and the hope that we of the South may rise like Antaeus of old, rejuvenated and strengthened by our late struggle and fall."

Vice President Foster replied somewhat as follows:

"A week ago this morning our party left the national capital for the purpose of taking a glance at your country and its people, and this morning, at an unseemly hour, we found ourselves in the city of New Orleans. We have been the recipients of the courtesies and hospitalities of your people, and you now receive us at an entertainment which calls to mind the memories of the old-time liberality and magnificence of New Orleans hospitality. Even without this, we should have been fully compensated for our journey. But, in addition to this, the effects of such a meeting as the present, if I mistake not, are of more and greater importance. inasmuch as they remove misunderstandings and do away with mutual prejudices, and thus we really become in heart one people.

"These social gatherings, too, provoke a feeling of nationality. I feel that were we to mingle together more we should be better friends, and it would be next to impossible to make us enemies.

"We have been showing, thus far, a considerable capacity for receiving hospitalities. But we also hope to show at no distant day that we are able to return them. I, who live in the far East, can say for myself and for my constituents, that if you will come North to our firesides and our homes, we shall always give you the same kindly welcome which you have given to us here."

Senator Lane, being called upon, rose and made the following remarks:

"We shall carry from your city sunny memories from sunny lands. The Crescent City, in queenly robes, is yet destined to become the greatest commercial emporium of God's green earth—although our traditions are historical matters, our stand-points may differ, yet in brotherhood, in nationality, in historic memories, we are one. The dramatist assures us that 'brevity is the soul of wit.' I therefore curtail my remarks in proposing the following toast: 'The Crescent City—may her horns always be full.'"

As these eloquent Senators resumed their seats, the company smiled and the "committee" exclaimed, "Magnificent success." Other speeches were made, but we have not space for them in this issue. For some unexplained cause, the banquet terminated at the early hour of 10 P. M. Calls for other speakers were made, but the senatorial ladies suddenly withdrew, and the gentlemen of course, followed.

Thus ended the feast. The good work was done; and the "City Fathers" sang with Peter Pindar:

"Venison's a Caesar in the fiercest fray;
Turtle! an Alexander in its way;
And then, in quarrels of a slighter nature,
Mutton's a most successful mediator!
So much superior is the stomach's smart
To all the vaunted horrors of the heart,
E'en Love, who often triumphs in his grief,
Hath ceased to feed on sighs, to pant on beef."

Steady for the Right.

When our fathers organized this government, on the basis, as they fondly supposed, of liberty and equality, influenced by a specious delusion they failed to eradicate at once and completely a principle directly opposed to free institutions. Under the belief that slavery would wither amid the light of freedom, they generously allowed it time for a natural death. That fatal mistake has cost our nation long years of fierce excitement, followed by a cruel war that destroyed half a million of lives and wasted five billions of treasure. This fearful penalty for compromising with wrong, should have taught our nation a lesson. But slow to learn from the past, we are now in danger of repeating its blunders and involving our nation in a fresh betrayal of humanity.

We have indeed a great opportunity to do right. We might now lay the foundation of our government on the broadest basis of human liberty, and, removing forever the incongruous element of caste from republican government, secure to the nation rest for a hundred years to come. But, blinded by prejudice, misled by a false conservatism, and more anxious for peace than purity, we are likely to let slip the golden moment, and leave for our children, or perhaps our children's children, after long agitation, to settle the question of the universality of the rights of man.

That the right of suffrage belongs equally to all is a fundamental principle of republican government. Our nation never yet has been more than partially republican. Its convulsions have arisen from defection to the principles on which it has claimed to be based. In a representative government suffrage is not a privilege, but a right, and is as inalienable as life, liberty, or the pursuit of happiness. We need never expect quiet till we cease to violate inalienable rights. Our fathers, notwithstanding the blunder of permitting slavery to survive the Declaration of Independence, yet so clearly recognized the manhood of its citizens as to permit free negroes to vote. They voted even in South Carolina, that hot-bed of secession, and in Tennessee, the home of Andrew Johnson The right of freemen to cast their ballot was recognized, and important elections, more than once, have been changed by the colored man's vote.

We are now almost hedged in to this duty. The Constitutional Amendment lately proposed has been rejected. It is, perhaps, well that this has been done. That amendment, in itself, is nothing more than the compromise of a great principle—the surrender of the rights of loyal blacks on condition that the rebels agree to punish their leaders.

The Southern people have rejected this proposed amendment, on the ground, as they allege, that it would be a violation of their honor. There is weight in their reasoning. A judge or jury may well hesitate in passing sentence upon others for crimes of which they themselves have been equally guilty. The men who are directed to throw stones are fully the equals in guilt with those at whom they are to be hurled, and we do not wonder that they have hesitated to do so base a thing. We hope, for the honor of the South, that they will never do it, and that Congress will withdraw all that portion of the amendment which requires traitors to prescribe a punishment for rebellion.

What then? Admit Southern representation without any guarantees whatever? No. Let Congress remove its demands from the perilous grounds of a proposed compromise of the rights of others—a compromise it has not the right to propose—a compromise which the honor of our nation pledged to a brave soldiery utterly forbids, and base its demands on the broad ground of inalienable rights. Neither President nor Congress is at liberty to barter away the rights of our colored citizens.

That powerful party, so triumphant at the late elections, and which, for the time, holds the fate of great principles in its hands, cannot now afford to be false to its deep convictions. If it should prove recreant to its trusts its day of power will be ended and its doom unalterably sealed.

There is a disposition among some of the would-be leaders of the Republican party, to shrink from the great work of securing universal suffrage, and accept of some miserable patch-work in its place. If the Thirty-Ninth Congress can take no better action than this it may well be pronounced a failure. Such a course would be a flagrant wrong to every loyal Unionist in the South, and would grievously disappoint the high hopes which have centered in our present national legislature.

But it is asserted that if we confer the right of suffrage on negroes their former masters will control their votes. They might do so on one condition. If they will do better for the colored man than we are willing to do they may and ought to control his vote. But if we will do better for him than his former owner is able or willing to do, we can and ought to secure his aid for our measures. Hitherto, almost without exception, the negro has had sagacity sufficient to understand where his interests lay. We think the same sagacity may be trusted for the future. The people that, in their dark night of ignorance, and despite reiterated misrepresentations, could send two hundred thousand loyal braves to uphold their country's cause, will not be likely, when the light shines clearly upon them, to go over to their enemies. No. If there is a people in all this broad land that can be trusted, it is the colored population of the South. Not even the loyal North, with all its wealth of intelligence and glorious patriotism, has stood half so true as these unlettered and long oppressed people. We can trust them, and we must trust them, or we shall prove ourselves unfit for the work entrusted to our hands, and shall do a wrong to four millions of our people that shall shake our government and bring back the fearful retribution we had well nigh escaped.

We trust that Congress will drop that portion of the Constitutional Amendment so obnoxious to the South, and insist, in its stead, upon universal suffrage. This would be less humiliating to the South; would offend her prejudices less; would produce less chafing and less bitterness; would secure to Union men a fair chance, and would be an immediate great blessing to the South It would at once lift to the heights of manhood a large portion of her population, and in elevating a part would elevate all. To bring up the lower classes of a country is to raise the higher classes, and, in lifting up the negro, we must, by a general law of the social state, lift the entire South to a higher plane.

[CONTINUED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

From the Missouri to the Great Salt Lake—A Three Months Journey with Troops over the Plains and Mountains.

BY AN OFFICER OF THE ARMY—NO 14.

ple is kept up by bands of music playing near Temple Square on Main street. They are great days in Zion!

A few days after my arrival at Camp Douglass I gratified my curiosity by calling upon the President at his residence. I was received in his private office, and no one being present but his second colleague and the gentleman who introduced me, I had a good opportunity of conversing with the remarkable man, and of observing him under favorable circumstances. Mr. Young is a native of Vermont, was born in 1801, and is remarkably well preserved for a man of his age. I should not have recognized him as the individual I had seen in the Tabernacle, or the one whose photograph I had obtained. He appeared not so large, nor was his bearing as commanding or dignified. His forehead is contracted and his eyes small, with cunning well depicted in them, and giving him a reserved expression; his mouth of moderate size, with thin compressed lips and a prominent chin indicating decision. His hair is sandy, mixed with silvery threads, and his unshaven face, with beard of two weeks growth, which he was making into whiskers, gave to the face the usual unsightly appearance under such circumstances. At first he seemed inclined to reticence, but in a few minutes this past off, and he conversed freely and even perpetrated a joke. Whenever I spoke he seemed to observe my countenance closely, as if studying my character in my phisiognomy. His health is robust and his habits exceedingly regular. He never employs a doctor for himself or any member of his family. He is said to be the best dancer in Salt Lake City, and, though sixty-six years of age, trips across the floor as lightly and with all the fancy steps of a young dancing master. He is fond of the amusement, and indulges freely in it at social parties. He is also an admirer of the Drama, and is seldom absent from the theatre when there is a performance; has a box used only by himself and last wife, and occasionally some friend or relative. Such habits are hardly in keeping with his position as prophet, seer, revelator and translator of the Church of Latter Day Saints.

I was rather disappointed in the man. I think he is without that strength of intellect which is generally attributed to him by both Mormon and Gentile. He is unquestionably a man of indomitable will, of great diplomacy, of remarkable business capacity, and, as a financier, is probably without an equal west of the Missouri, but I should not egard him as having a great mind. His early advantages of education have not been great, nor has he improved himself very much in riper years. His pronunciation is decidedly bad, and his bad grammar cannot be altogether the result of carelessness. His general information, I should think, was very good. I was treated with much courtesy and persisted in addressing him as Mr. Young, rather to the annoyance of my friend, who always styled him Mr. President in conversation. Upon rising to leave we shook hands, and walking towards the door cordially invited me to call again.

I had no conversation with the Second President, Heber C. Kimball, to whom I referred as being present, but when about leaving he shook me warmly by the hand and asked that the blessing of the Lord might follow me. I must be very brief in my allusions to Mr. Kimball, as well as other personages in the Church, as the manuscript now before me, and the memorandum of other things to which I desire to refer, reminds me that I am making this letter too long. Heber C. Kimball is about the age of Brigham Young. He is a large, muscular man, and his appearance would not lead a stranger to suspect that he was the second president of a religious sect. He was a blacksmith before he joined the Mormons, and looks not unlike one now. He has a Sun-of-Thunder style of delivering his harrangues from the pulpit. His elocution would cause Professor Bailey, of Yale, to faint, and his irreverance would be pronounced profanity by any Christian minister I know, except, perhaps, one I once met in Washington, who is somewhat of the same manner of man. But irreverence is not the striking peculariety of his sermons. They often partake of such disgusting obscenity that a sense of propriety and modesty would not allow me to refer to here even in general terms. And still he publicly declares that his sermons are not prepared before hand, but he speaks only as he is moved by the Holy Spirit. One might suppose the influence of some other spirit operated. Heber Kimball is wealthy, and has a greater number of wives than Brigham Young—how many I am unable to say. He is illiterate and vulgar in every sense of the word. Knowing the man by reputation, I did not feel safer or more comfortable after receiving his benediction.

Mr. Daniel H. Wells, the third president, is a man of considerably over fifty years, tall, spare, with a thin, sharp face, and a prominent, crooked nose, presenting altogether a very ungainly appearace for a Mormon President or Lieutenant General. In the latter capacity he was in the field in command of the army of Saints in 1857-8, when they occupied a position in Echo Canon, to which I referred in a previous letter. I have not been in the society of Mr. Wells, but learn that he is quite illiterate, and is an honest Mormon.

But few of the other leaders of the Church are known to fame, and I will not occupy space in referring to them, as I have the three presidents. Orson Hyde, John Taylor, Geo. Q. Cannon and Orson Pratt, are probably the best educated men among them. The last named is regarded as the Philosopher of the Church. I quoted him in my last in explaining doctrinal points.

The large majority of their preachers are exceedingly illiterate, and it is torturing to sit and hear their bad English, when there is an entire absence of argument or point in their remarks.

The masses should receive more notice than I can give them in this article. Nine tenths, if not nineteen twentieths, are converts to the faith through the labors of missionaries in England, Wales, Scotland and Denmark. There are but few Germans among them, fewer Irish, and still fewer Americans, though the principal officers are natives of this country. Nearly this entire foreign emigration is from the lowest order of peasantry in the countries mentioned. The ideas of religion of this class of people, and they all must have had some religious advantages, are almost as crude as those of the Hottentot, and it is not astonishing that many are willing to abandon a life of poverty and degredation, after hearing portrayed, in the most extravagant language, the advantages to be derived from joining the Mormon Church, and emigrating to a land which is to become a Heavenly Zion, according to their materialistic ideas. They are not only convinced of that, but offered material aid in reaching their new home. They rank below the average of emigrants who arrive in this country, and many have not come independently of the Church, because they had not the means to do so, hence the opportunity of migration is an additional inducement held out to them to become Mormons.

These deluded people rendezvous at some seaport in their own country, and are shipped in emigrant vessels to New York, when they are transported by railroad to the Missouri, and thence journey across the plains and mountains to their new home in Utah. In the early part of the history of the Church in this locality the poor emigrant was not only required to perform the trip on foot, as they are still, but had to draw in hand carts, a distance of more than twelve hundred miles, their baggage and subsistence for the journey. At present a different system is adopted. Members of the Church are required to furnish, according to their ability, wagons and animals for these trains. These wagons, however, are to transport supplies and baggage only. The poor emigrants, men, women and children, are required to go on foot the whole distance. I have seen old, decripid men, tottering along far in rear of the slow moving ox trains, because they were unable to keep up with them, and aged, feeble women, wearing wooden shoes, plodding along in the same way. When observing these trains, I seemed at a loss to determine whether I should feel the greater pity for those suffering under the weight of years of hardships, or the healthy, blooming young girls who were unwittingly entailing upon themselves lives of degradation and suffering. These emigrants are limited in their subsistence, which is of the plainest kind; are exposed to inclement weather; when sick they die or recover,as the unaided prowers of nature may terminate the disease; but notwithstanding, all murmur not, and are cheerful in anticipation of what has been promised to them. Their religious enthusiasm is kept up by meetings morning and evening, before leaving and after going into camp, at which they are harrangued about the beauties of Zion, to which they are journeying, and the rewards that await them in the future, if faithful.

When the trains reach Salt Lake City an account is then made of the expense the Church has incurred in bringing the emigrants from their former homes and each individual is required to give his obligation to the Church to refund the amount. This explains to some extent the secret of the power of the Church in holding the people together, but I do not regard it as the controlling influence with the majority. I have no doubt of the honesty of nearly the entire community in their religious sentiments. They are Mormons simply because they have been taught to be and have been taught nothing else. No one but Mormon missionaries have ever appeared to take any interest in their spiritual welfare. They are sincere, and are willing to make more sacrifices for their religion than any other sect. I would here remark that Utah seems to me as no ordinary field for missionary labor. I believe the judgments of these people might be so enlightened as to cause a large proportion of the more sincere to abandon their faith and become Christians. The only difficulty would be the opposition of the leaders of the Church. They have so strong a hold upon the people that they dare not disobey. When the country is more thickly settled a different state of things will exist. I might add, they know as little about our government as they know about the Christian religion. They hear only abuse of both. Let them be enlightened in regard to either, and they will be a different people.

The Mormons are almost entirely an agricultural people, and in point of industry are unequalled in the country. Let the stranger go through their settlements and their farming lands, in a valley where they have made arid wastes the most fruitful fields, and he will at once be convinced of the fact. In point of morality, as they understand it, they are also unequalled. Excepting, of course, their one sin, which they are taught is a virtue, Salt Lake City is the most moral place I have ever seen, for one so large. Drinking is rare. I have seen ten drunken Gentiles where I have seen one drunken Mormon, and the proportion of Gentiles to Mormons is not as one to twenty. There is not a house of ill-fame or a Mormon Gambling house or a Mormon bar-room in the city, except the one in Brigham Young's hotel, be it said to his shame. Their merchants are fair in their dealings, and I would rather to-day purchase of some of the Mormons than of prominent Gentiles could mention.

While I have seen much in the people of Utah to admire, I have seen everything in their church to condemn. Let not the reader suppose for a moment that that which I have written as praiseworthy in this infatuated people will, to the slightest extent, extenuate the horrible crimes that have been perpetrated by them under the direction of their leaders. Gentile writers, generally, speak of the whole people in terms of most unqualified abhorrence,but there is much of good in the motives of the majority. Brigham Young, however, has admitted, in a public speech, "that he has some of the most adroit scoundrels in the world in Zion!" The Mountain Meadows massacre, in 1857, where a hundred and seventeen men, women and children were slain in cold blood, by the Mormons, with a few Indians as allies, and in which leading men in the church participated, was one of the most horrible deeds ever recorded in history. I have no doubt the majority of the slayers of the innocent on that occasion acted in good conscience, and thought they were doing God's service, but I shudder when I think of the enormity of the crime and the frightful responsibility that rests upon the heads of their deceivers. General Carlton had the bones of the slain in this horrible massacre collected together, from where they lay bleaching in the sun, and buried, and over them erected a monument with the inscription, "vengeance is mine and I will repay, saith the Lord!" But this monument was afterwards destroyed, probably by order of the President, as its demolition occurred soon after his first visit to this locality.

There are also incontestable proofs of the horrible murders of other unoffending citizens in those dark days of Mormonism, but I cannot refer to them here.

In this and my last letter I have carefully refrained from stating anything based upon rumor and from indulging in the extravagant abuse of the Mormons which characterizes the talk of most Gentiles on the subject. I have written nothing in malice, and I would to God that I could say somethiug in extenuation of some of the crimes of their leaders. They disgrace humanity, and are foul blots upon the history of our government!

It may be agreeable intelligence, my dear friend, Dr. Newman, as well as to the reader, when I announce that my next letter will conclude the series which have occupied so much space in the Advocate. In that letter I will say something about the Indians of the plains and mountains.

New Year's Eve.

AT WESLEY CHAPEL, (COLORED.)

LOVE FEAST.

On the previous Saturday and Sabbath,the first quarterly meeting for this Conference year was held at Wesley Chapel. According to appointment the Love Feast was held on Monday evening, the last night of the old year. It was a high time among the Sons of Ham. In accordance with immemorial custom, the doors were open an hour and a half previous to the commencement of the exercises, and all who were not present within that time were not admitted; but before the appointed hour had arrived the church was filled From the time the people began to assemble the spirit of the Lord was there, and songs and shouts went up to His praise. As the clock struck eight, the pastor, Rev. Anthony Ross, gave out the hymn commencing,

Come let us use the grace divine,
And all with one accord, which was followed with prayer, by Rev. Emperor Williams, whose lips seemed touched with a living coal from the heavenly altar. Then the choir sang,

In the resurrection morning
Ye shall see the Saviour coming, during which the stewards passed the bread and water, the emblems of Christian love. As a peculiarity of the feast we noticed that each member took a handful of the prepared bread, and retained it till all were served. The stewards were then called around the altar, and each took his handful. Old Father Ross then said: "Brethring and sisters, you will now have five minutes to break bread with each other, to show that there is no malice among you." Then followed a scene difficult to deseribe. Simultaniously the whole audience rose and began to exchange morsels of bread, one with another, amid singing and shouting. After this lively scene the speaking commenced.

Rev. N. L. Brakeman, P. E., spoke briefly of his conversion and of his joy in meeting his brethren in their new relations to him. After him an old man arose and said, "I's was converted in old Missip, and members it right well. I tought dat I was good enough without religion, but when I's begun to pray I's found as much devil in me as anybody else, and den de Lord took de hard heart out of me." He was followed by a sister, who exclaimed, "I thank God that I see this day. I was converted at nine years old, when I was separated from my parents, bnt God kept me. I found it hard to be a Christian, but I determined I would love God and serve Him, if it cost me my life. (Great shouting.) He has led me by the still waters, and I have lived to see the end of another year. Praise the Lord!"

Not less than four now rose at once to speak, but a venerable woman gained the attention of the audience and said, "Jesus found me when I was 11 years old, and I thought I was religious, but I soon found I had a wicked heart. I sank under my sins, away down in the horrible pit, but the loving Jesus came down and saved me, and put my feet on the rock. Brethren, I want to live right, and if so be this is my last year, you will say iSster Lucy has gone to heaven."

There were many responses to this remark,when a brother said, "Brethring, I feel 'tis good to be here. Dis am de Lord's house and dese am His people. I hab been long in the way and hab had many combats—hard trials and tribulations. I's seen de day when I wore irons for Christ, but now, thank God, I am a freeman in Christ. Sometimes de storms beat me bout, but dese bring me nearer de throne." He had not taken his seat when, in the middle aisle, a sister commenced to speak, whose words awakened shouts of praise in every part of the house. She said, "I am proud I have this religion. I come from Old Virginia, many, many years ago, and my child, twelve years old, was sold from me. This was a great grief to me, and I thought my heart would break, but Jesus said, 'Never mind it, daughter—I will be with you.' I was brought to this city and kept in prison till I was sold again. I peeped through the iron gates and thought I saw Jesus. My sins weighed me down and my troubles were too many, but the blessed Jesus came to the prison and said, 'Susan, Susan! I am with you, and I will set you on a throne in glory.'" (Great weeping and shouting.) She was followed by a converted Roman Catholic, who spoke intelligently and very much to the point "I was," he remarked, "a dead Catholic. I had been taught that man had power to pardon sin, but this is not true. Man may talk, but he is not master of himself. My wife came to this church, and when I heard that she had gone to the mourners' bench, I said I would knock her down, but that night a hand appeared to me, and it came and took hold of my heart, and I said there must be something in religion, and I went with my wife to the altar. The struggle was hard and lasted all night. The darkness was great, but in the morning it burst like a coal of fire, and as I arose my sins were forgiven. Gave up all. All is well. Learned in the wisdom of God." This young convert was followed by Brother Bowie, who exclaimed, "God is good. I was once the chief of sinners and would do anything the devil told me; but, like St. Paul, I was converted at mid-day. I feel young to-night. Religion don't get old. I have my ups and downs, but, as the Bishop said, none of these things move me. When God is in me nobody else is there. Aint I happy? Jesus brought me out of Egypt and I am not going back there again. I am going to a land of plenty, to walk on streets of gold. In me is no strength. Bless God that I decay. I embarked in 1838, and since then I have gone up and down, like a ship at sea, but I shall soon be housed in Heaven. Run steady. Walk gently." Now one of the mothers of the church spoke with great effect: "I am anchored in Christ. He hath loved me for twenty-five years. There has been many a long day since, when my head hung down and my heart was heavy. When day came I wished for night,and when night came I wished for day. Then I heard of Jesus, and was told to keep hunting for Him. I looked out on the world, but He was not there. I saw beneath me a burning hell. My old mistress said I was mad. But Jesus came, and He reached down His lily white hand to me, and the last day of the old year finds me with God." Now a young minister arose and said, "Twenty years ago my mother lay on a cooling board. She had brought me over the ocean, from old Maryland, when she was sold into Louisiana. I was her only child who saw her die, and promised to meet her in Heaven. Many a time since I was afraid to speak for God. Why? Because my master would give me twenty-five lashes or send me to jail, or I had to fly to the rabits in the woods. But I am free now and can speak for Him. He has been good to me. I married a Catholic wife, but she has got this American religion and we are happy."

During the evening many others spoke, whose words we cannot here record. But the most exciting scene occured after the love feast. Under the animating influence of some favorite hymn, the people leaped for joy, while the whole congregation marched through the aisles, and as they marched they sang and shouted God's praises. Thus the night was passed. As we looked upon this novel sight we speculated on the modifying influence of education on the minds of these fervent worshipers.

Ladies' Department.

"Early Crowned."

I am happy to be in possession of a promised treasure in the form of a neatly bound volume, entitled "Early Crowned."

The style of this book, both as to form and arrangement of contents, is chaste and refined, and methinks some angel must have whispered the beautifully appropriate title.

The recollections I have of the subject of this striking memoir—Mary E. North—comes to me at this twilight hour as a pleasant dream. Her elegant form, the beauty of her face, the grace of her manners, lead me to exclaim "She was too pure for earth." Thus the angels claimed her companionship, and with them she is now singing her sweetest song.

While carefully perusing every line of this deeply interesting book, I was impressed with the purity of her inner life, hid as it was with Christ in God, and many times did I pause to look up with humble confidence to God in prayer, that all who read these lines may be imbued with her spirit and be led to emulate her virtues.

I knew and loved Mary when she was far away from home, and hoped to renew this love in the charmed circle where her presence was always sunshine; this I did not enjoy—but it was my happiness, only a few weeks since, to mingle with the still happy family—where her invisible presence is now "a light in the window." Her white wings seem to hover over them—"Heaven is not far away"—they speak not of her as lost—only flown—while each of the precious household appears to be pluming their wings to rise with her.

While gazing on the magnificent landscape that spreads itself like a gorgeous panorama around Mary's earthly home—the variegated scenery, the noble Hudson, the distant mountains—I did not wonder that she so often expressed herself in raptures while contemplating God in his works, as recorded so frequently in her letters and journal.

If her brief and beautiful stay on earth was but the bud of beginning, what height of glory must be hers around the great white throne!

This volume will be a precions gift-book to those we love, and will find its place in all our Sunday-school and Bible-class libraries.

Published at 200 Mulberry street, New York Remember the beautiful title, "Early Crowned."

EVANGELINE.

The Heavenly Cherubs.

The juvenile journal called "The Little Corporal" is rapidly becoming a favorite, and will be a joy and sunshine in any household. Mr. Sewell, who publishes this paper, also publishes an exquisite engraving, "The Heavenly Cherubs," from Raphael, which is a genuine work of art, and greatly enhanced in value by its being the work of an American artist It will beautifully adorn any lady's parlor or boudoir. By all means secure it, and thus encourage art in this country.

This superb engraving is sent free as a premium to every one who sends to the publisher three new subscribers for one year to "The Little Corporal." Mr. Sewell also offers to give Organs and Melodions to schools or persons who send large clubs. The price of the Corporal is one dollar a year, in advance; sample copy, telling all about the premiums, ten cents.

Address Alfred L. Sewell, publisher, Chicago, Ill.

Our Baby.

BY M. ANNESLY.

"Just as in joyous infancy,
Before the woes of life awaken thought."

It is said that the coming of a baby into a household brings love with it, and we know the advent of one blessed infant gave joy to those who placed it in the manger, while its star brought peace on earth and good will to men, so that his birth was heralded by a seraphic choir, and the story of the babe of Bethlehem may now be on every tongue and float on every breeze.

Even babyhood has been blessed with the presence of Jesus, and we know by happy experience that infant life is a sun-beam in a house.

The little one's unconcern in coming to our care draws out our softest sympathy, and one after another of the family fall in train of attention and affection to the helpless stranger.

And again, a multitude of peculiar emotions rise in the heart while we press an orphan baby to our bosom. It knows not its loss, but is pleased with what it receives, always paying back the heart that loves it. Many thoughts of a like nature have passed our minds since the coming of our baby.

She was born in a far off clime, and after a few weeks of her tiny existence a heavy cloud fell on her baby-brow. Her father died suddenly, and she never knew a father's smile; but he gave her a pet name, "Cassy." This is her only memorial of his love.

She was the little bosom friend of her poor, stricken mother, who would, in the agony of her loneliness and desolation, wake her baby from its sleep for company to her stricken heart.

But the dear pet will never hear that mother relate how great a comfort she was to her in the midst of the gloom of death.

A few months more and another cloud fell on that little head. The mother was also taken "to the world we have not seen."

Then a dear relation hastened to the desolate home and pressed this infant to her heart, to give it a mother's love and carry it to her distant home with another of sufficient years to feel her loss.

If any one had asked us, this time last year, if we wanted a baby in our house, "O, no!" we would have said, we have plenty to do without a baby.

But our baby found a hearty welcome, and there would now be a great vacuum without her. She has been with us long enough to attach every heart to her. She is beginning to use her tongue, and woman-like she is most pleased with the whole field of gossip. She wishes no replies, but to talk on, and on, to the end. Of course her tongue is unknown to us, yet it has some very beautiful flute-like notes; and then, again, she seems to be making her own ideal fun. All the world is bright to her, except when she cannot carry out her little earnest pride, to her own loss. Small as she is, she is a little mystery to us, in habits and ways. he knows how she should be treated and taken care of, and lets us know when we fail in any duty. She certainly understands more than she can make us realize of her little embryo mind, pent up in such a helpless existence. We have often strange thoughts and feelings while taking care of our baby, and more than once it has come to mind, if, in addition to her black, shiny eyes, she had a black skin, a curly head, and we had all been a few years ago in another part of the land, she might have been snatched from us some night, or Sabbath, while we were at church, and we would never see our darling baby again. The very thought has been maddening. And would every man and boy about the house have fled in different directions with whatever weapon they could find, and pursued the thief with hasty revenge?

But while we love, and are permitted to cherish, and keep our baby, we rejoice to know that the darker skinned jewels of mother's loves are nestling safely in mother's bosoms, and God only can take the liberty of placing the lambs in a better fold.

Bemis Heights.

There are many battle-fields in our country still fresh and gory, the very thought of which causes the blood to chill within our veins. We remember it was a domestic strife, and brother met brother in deadly combat. Alike this, and yet unlike, there is a grandeur and sublimity connected with the heroic struggle of our forefathers! for independence.

Memory loves to linger on the historic page of their renown. We delight to dwell on all that is noble and brave, loyal and just, in their illustrious characters. Thereby we seem to live with them, see their venerable forms, and listen to their immortal deeds.

He is not a true American who visits the classic land of Greece, rich in ancient lore, and turns with a cold philosophic mind on the doubly interesting epochs of American History.

I feel the fire of enthusiasm while listening to the hardships and distresses of Plymoth Rock and to the heroic determination on Bunker Hill, which far surpasses the delight from reading the tales of oriental chivalry.

Prominent among the events of the Revolution is the battle of Bemis Heights, fought under discouraging circumstances, yet followed by brilliant results, embracing at the same time both military skill and prestige. Early in June, General Burgoyne had started from Canada with a powerful army. Coincident with his march Sir Henry Clinton was attempting to force his way up the Hudson.

The American army was commanded by General Gates.

We will not attempt to dwell upon the battle that ensued. It is enough to know that in ten days thereafter the British were forced to capitulate to the victorious Americans.

The ravages of time have obliterated many of the interesting features of this ground. Still there are many proofs of the sanguinary strife. Conspicuous at the present day is the house occupied by Generals Morgan and Poor, whose walls and doors bear marks of the conflict, and a few yards from this house is the well from which they obtained water. There are faint signs of embankments which were hastily constructed. On the hill near the Bemis Heights Tavern, were the headquarters of General Gates. From the northwest Gen. Morgan led on his Virginia riflemen at the beginning of the second contest,and near him Morgan singled out Frazier to his men. A bass-wood tree now marks the spot where he fell.

An old resident, by the name of Nelson, has preserved many interesting relics found on the battle-field, consisting of cannon-balls, bullets, flag-staffs, knives, buttons, and coins of various sizes and dates.

Every year many pilgrims, who still cherish the recollections of the victory by our forefathers, wander over this interesting ground, which will ever be as fresh in the mind of every true American as the green meadows that now spread over the site.

WM. D. ENSIGN.

The Methodist Quarterly Review.

Friends of religious culture and of Methodist literature, both lay and clerical, have you this centenary year remembered the Quarterly Review? or are you contented to do without it? or have you supplied its place with some other publication, inferior in real merit, but more satisfactory to you, because edited by another than a Methodist scholar and theologian, and published elsewhere than at 200 Mulberry street? These are questions of some moment in these times, as affecting our entire current literature. For those who know us best ignore the fact, that in certain directions it is somewhat fashionable, and is thought to be a sign of great catholicity of spirit, to substitute for our publications and periodical literature those bearing the imprint in thought and theology, as well as in the mere material, of other establishments.

The Methodist Quarterly Review stands at the head of our periodical literature. By common concession it occupies a leading position among religious American quarterlies. Having an opportunity to see several of them regularly, we have felt a denominational pride in the comparisons we have been sometimes compelled to make in favor of our own Review. Its noble editor, DR. WHEDON, in his independent, original style, is attractive as well as classical and erudite. The articles of our scholars, which appear in it from time to time, are fresh, stimulating, scholarly, and up with the times. The foreign Religious and Literary intelligence is, with a single possible competitor, superior to that of any of our American Quarterlies. Its circulation is still the largest of any; its price is for its value lowest of any.—Any intelligent layman, much more minister, who intends to be up with the age, and is a growing man, must have just the class of reading it furnishes. And it is worth the while of every such person to consider well the question before going among strangers to get that which is best, prepared at home.

Others are speaking well of us, why should we not appreciate our own advantages, and avail ourselves of them? The New York citizen, one of the most spirited weeklies of this city, says: "A very able and dignified quarterly is the Methodist Quarterly Review. It is scholarly, and at the same time wide awake. It is neither bigoted nor illiberal in any respect. A review of the 'Life and Character of Frederick W. Robertson,' in this [the October] number, would not be out of place in any of the leading English quarterlies."

Gov. Cox of Ohio, says: "In your Methodist Quarterly the whole world recognizes the fact that philosophy and theology have been discussed with a profundity unsurpassed."

We began this article not intending to say all we have, but earnestly to ask what, starting into a new century, the Quarterly ought to receive—five thousand subscribers? We owe it to ourselves as a Church, as ministers, as laymen. Four thousand three hundred issue [and that under our present editor] is the largest issue it has ever had. And why? Not because we cannot afford it, nor yet because we have not sufficient intelligence. There are tens of thousands among us who are reading as advanced a standard of periodical literature, but it is not ours; it is not Arminian in theology nor Methodist in spirit. The fact is, we lack denominational self-respect.

The Quarterly circulates mostly among our ministers and presidents and professors of literary institutions. This is not so of necessity. Nor would it be so if our ministers, all of them, did their duty in this direction. There are but few who could not obtain a single subscriber, if it was presented to the membership, and its character made known.

Where are our strenuous advocates for "lay delegation" among the laity? One qualification we fear they lack, for an intelligent participation in the councils of the Church, if we are to judge from the subscription list of the Quarterly, namely, a correct knowledge of our Church literature. Two thousand intelligent laymen ought to-day to be subscribers to this Review. M.

Bramwell on Holiness.

The work continued almost in every meeting, and sixty persons in and about Dewsbury received sanctification and walked in that liberty. Our love-feasts began to be crowded and people from every neighboring circuit visited us. Great numbers found pardon and some perfect love. They went home and declared what God had done for them.

The more I consulted the acts of the Apostles, and Church history, the more I was convinced that this was no new thing, either in the manner or effects, but that in every great work of God similar effects are produced.

Questions for Debating Societies.

If three feet make a yard how many will it take to make a garden?

If one pine tree makes pitch how many will it take to make pitchers?

Can a big man ache harder than a little man?

Where does a fire go to when it goes out?

When a house is burnt does it burn up or down?

Why is a furnished chamber like a river? Because it has a bed.

Why is the freight of a ship like a locomotive? Because it makes the cor-go.

Why is snuff like the letter S? Because its the beginning of sneezing.

What is it that causes a cold, cures a cold, and pays the doctor? A draft.

One with Christ.

I have always Union with God. I feel nothing but pure love in the greatest afflictions. I am often powerfully tempted, and sometimes heavy:—this was in our Lord.

I feel I am going on. I have a continual opening between God and my soul, in prayer, love and gratitude. I have a constant heaven in dependence upon the Lord. I feel weaker than ever, and God my all. Amen!—Bramwell.

BLEEDING FROM THE NOSE.—A subscriber to the Scientific America writes that recently, while walking in Broadway, in New York, blood commenced running from his nose. He adds: "I stepped aside and applied my handker chief, intending to repair to the nearest hotel, when a gentleman accosted me saying, "Just put a piece of paper in your mouth, chew it rapidly, and it will stop your nose bleeding.' Thanking him rather doubtfully, I did as he suggested, and, the flow of blood ceased almost immediately. I have seen the remedy tried since, quite frequently, and always with success." Doubtless any substance would answer the same purpose as paper. Physicians state that placing a small roll of paper or muslin above the front teeth, under the lip, and pressing hard on the same, will arrest bleeding at the nose.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Gravesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London, Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte.

1-42y1

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting in a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano Forte with that of the Pipe Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $650, $800, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c., they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismund Thalberg, the world renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expense. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhan, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not on y our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives of great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of syles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 556 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington Street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 313 C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

S. D. Moody & Co.,

67..... TCHOUPITOULAS STREET.....67

WHOLESALE GROCERS

—AND—

Commission Merchants.

☞ DEALERS IN DRY AND PICKLED FISH. ☜

jan6

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM.

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STREET

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

50 PER CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington Street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—the best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says; "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Advertiser says; "The testimony to their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache, Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.

Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.

Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.

Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.

Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.

Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.

Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.

Poor Appetite and General Debility—The appetite restored and the whole system strengthened.

Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.

Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.

A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.

Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.

Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.

Pale Faces and Haggard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor,

No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,

Gen'l Agent for United States

r10—1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine of Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philadelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists.

m12—3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,

Agent for locating Homesteads,

Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.

Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100.

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.

feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALS.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,

Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies."

My19-1y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores through out the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other muscal instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.

Corner of Gold street.

FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

NATIONAL Freedman's Savings & Trust Company.

Branch at New Orleans.

Money received on deposit for safe keeping, to be returned whenever called for.

Monday, June 4, 1866.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, and for the present on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

SAVE YOUR MONEY.

Deposits of one dollar and upwards received.

THOMAS J. DURANT,

Chairman Advisory Committee.

M. T. HEWITT, President.

D. LANSING LAMBERT, Secretary,

☞ Principal office No. 87 Cedar street, American Exchange Bank Building, New York City.

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.

D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,

Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,

BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

For Circulars Address

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the 'Convent of the Sacred Heart,' in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,

Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

CENTENARY PICTORIAL.

DEAR BROTHER:—The Centenary Committee have authorized the publication of a Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism. Dr. Curry, of the C. A. & Journal, Editor, assisted by the first men and women of the church. It will be the same as Harper's Pictorial, only on much finer paper, and more beautiful pictures.—We intend to establish an agency in every town in the United States and Canadas. We want to sell one million copies. It will be the most useful, curious, popular and cheap publication of the Centenary year.

We give you a few of its attractions:

1. An article on Camp Meetings; 2. On Itinerancy: 3. On class Meetings; 4 On our literary Institutions; 5. On Periodicals and literature; 6. On Methodism in the East; 7 Methodism in the West: 8. On our Book Rooms; 9. One Hundred, or a Century of Anecdotes illustrating Methodism all along the Century; 10. A Fac simile of the Diary of Mr. Wesley's Mother, written 150 years ago; 11. A Fac-simile of a skeleton of a Sermon from Rev. John Fletcher. 12. An article in which the striking traits of one hundred men are presented, making a centenary of men and a centenary of years, as representative men of methodism, by Dr Roach, assisted by Bishop Thompson and others; 13. The Noble Women of our Church, by Mrs. Olin; and other articles of general and local interest.

On comparison we find there will be as much matter in it as in an ordinary dollar and a half book.

PICTURES.—A picture of Methodism: 1. Mr. Wesley and his little class; 2. An itinerant scene; 3. An immense congregation of every nation and costume listening to the Gospel; 4. A happy death bed scene; 5. Mr. Wesley in the centre, surrounded by a cloud of light all encircled with a beautiful wreath, worked by 100 artists, making a most attractive centenary picture; 6. The largest picture of a camp meeting in full operation ever made. Both these pictures will make beautiful parlor ornaments, and either of them worth more than the cost of the whole work. And numerous pictures of our representative men and women of colleges and churches. Historic scenes, as the graves and homes of our fathers; Sister Heck breaking up the ard party; first meeting places, etc., etc.

Price 25 Cts.; With Covers 30 Cts.

The high Cost of living will prevent most of our ministers from doing as much for the centenary cause as they would like. Now we want in the circulation of this paper, to put eighty thousand dollars into the centenary fund. This you can do, brethren, and have the credit of it. Almost any minister can bring this matter before his people and sell from 100 to 300, having from $10 to $30 to put in the centenary cause, or to use in any other way he may please. If you cannot or do not want to do this yourself, you can have it done by some person and share with him the profits, or use it through the Sunday school.—Every scholar who will sell 12 shall have a medal, and 30 per cent. of all they sell credited to the Sunday school to which they belong, to give to the centenary fund, or to be disposed of by the officers as they see fit. Send to

N. TIBBALS,

145 Nassau Street, N. Y.

It will interfere with no subscription, but rather inspire benevolent centenary gifts.

Please send us 25 cents for a copy, to examine and canvass with.

N. B. We cannot put so much information into the hands of our friends in other churches on the subject of the Centenary of Methodism in so attractive a form and as cheap as with the Pictorial. You can send it to any part of the country for two cents.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circulars. aug 11-1y

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation,)

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and WILL PAY $1,000 to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of

CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY

—AND—

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs:

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or Webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitters is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum or Whisky, and cannot make Drunkards, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous System. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,

W. S. SEIGFRIED,

No. 254 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMTH,

966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. H. KENNARD,

Eighth, below Coates street.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berks county, Pa., was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

JONES & EVANS,

(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)

Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States ma10 ew

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,

West Troy, N. Y.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.

feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

THE ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL FOR MARCH. Contains Cornelius Vanderbilt, Hon. Ezra Cornell, Prof. Mapes, Frederika Bremer, Lavater, Las Casas, Sir John Franklin, Capt. Cook, Revs. John Wesley and Jonathan Edwards;—Taleut and Genius;—Extraordinary prediction;—Ghosts;—Origin of Coal;—Varieties of Sheep;—Iron, its uses;—Putting on a bad face;—Tribulation Trepid, and Mr. Hopeful;—The Jew;—Love and Lovers, the Philosophy of Engagements; an Excellent Number, only 20 cents or $2,00 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway New York.

ADDISON S. DIOSSY.

ATTORNEY and COUNSELLOR

71 Nassau, corner John St.

Room No. 8.] CITY OF NEW YORK.

DAVID D. TERRY,

Attorney & Counsello

79 NASSAU STREET,

Room 12. NEW YORK.

Commissioner U. S. Court of Claims for New York New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan and Western States.

Notice to Planters.

In addition to our stock of Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes and Hats, we have constantly on hand large assortment of Plantation Clothing,

From our own Manufactory in this city, which is offered at very low prices.

WALLACE & CO.,

(Slocumb Buildings,)

No. 74 CANAL STREET, and

91, 93 & 95 COMMON STREET,

m19 NEW ORLEANS.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,

NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95..... .....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

WM. H. HIRE, M. D.,

Physician Surgeon and Accoucheur,

264 Magazine St., Cor. Poyfarre,

NEW ORLEANS,

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

CHASE & MILLER'S

Book and Job Printing Office,

65 Poydras Street, Cor. Tchoupitoulas.

Are now prepared to execute all work in their line,

SUCH AS

BILL HEADS,
BILLS OF LADING,
DRAY RECEIPTS,
LAWYER'S BRIEFS,
PAMPHLETS,
BUSINESS CARDS, Etc

All orders neatly and promptly executed, at the shortest possible notice, and on reasonable terms

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton seed and "ax" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Line Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb. 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consutation free—stamps not "forgotten."

[feb3]

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music, Music Books and Music Merchandize in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y.

mr10-1y

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No. 2. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1867. Whole No.—52

From the Missouri to the Great Salt Lake—A Three Months Journey with Troops over the Plains and Mountains.

BY AN OFFICER OF THE ARMY—NO 15.

Indians—Similarity in Habits of Different Tribes—Their Physique—Squaws Their Dress — Pappooses — Births—The Men Warriors. &c—Weapons—Scalping—Smoking—Marriage—Their Dead—How They Define Time—Signs—Diet—Concluding Remarks on the Indian Character.

The several tribes of Indians living on the prairies, and in the mountains of the West, are so similar in their habits and in traits of character, that I may not improperly speak of them all as one people, and refer to any peculiarities of a single tribe that may occur to me as I write.

The tribes that come under my personal observation during the march, of which I have given some account in this series of Letters, were respectively the Otoe, Pawnee, Sioux, Cheyenne, Utes and Shoshonies. The first named is but the remnant of a tribe, now living on an Indian Reservation in Kansas. The Pawnees have also been greatly decimated by their conflicts with the Sioux, who were vastly their superiors in numbers, though for gallantry and skill in Indian warfare they did not surpass their unfortunate enemies. The Pawnees also occupy a Reservation in the eastern part of Nebraska. The Sioux and Cheyenne roam over the prairies, bordering the mountains, and up into them, and the former claim as their favorite hunting ground a portion of Dakota Territory, through which the government has established, and is endeavoring to protect an emigrant route. This they refuse to give up, and in a large council at Fort Laramie last June, no advantageous treaty for the possession of that country could be made. The Sioux tribe is the largest on the plains, and their hostilities to emigrants since the failure of the Indian Commission to treat with them satisfactorily on the occasion referred to, will probably result in another Indian war next summer. The Utes and Shoshonie (or snake) Indians have their section within and west of the Rocky Mountains.

The general appearance of the Indian and his physique is too well understood to justify a description of it here. I must add, however, that in stature and in physical strength he fell far below my expectations. The Indians of the West, who go to Washington on business with the Indian Bureau, or to visit their "Great Father," and the noble looking figures which appeared in Mr. Stanley's collection of paintings, destroyed by fire in the Smithsonian Institute two years ago, are by no means representatives of the masses. I have seen but one Indian, (the chief of the snake tribe), in all my travels, who could be classed with such as I referred to. In physical strength and muscular developement they are much the inferior of the average of white men, and will never encounter them in single combat.

Let me write first about the squaws, though they are of the degraded sex, as I have so much to write about their "lords," that I might occupy all the space allowed for this letter without referring to them.

The beauty of the squaws, as I have observed them, is all a myth. I have yet to see one bearing the slightest comparison in point of beauty with Pocahontas as she is described and painted. I found the large majority of them exceedingly homely and many horribly ugly. This is the case particularly with the old women, some of whom have the most unsightly faces I ever saw on a human form, and to make their appearance still more disgusting, are their filthy persons and habits. They have no incentive to be otherwise, for they are the most complete slaves of the men, (not the old squaws only, but all), and are required to do all manner of druggery. They dress and tan skins, prepare and dry game, put up and take down lodges, transport them on the animals they ride, catch and saddle the ponies of the men, and in a word, do everything but hunt and fight. They are not easily distinguished from the men at a distance, when their features cannot be observed, and, in indeed, many times I have been unable to distinguish them by their features, or in any other way, as the outer dress of both is alike—a buffalo skin or a blanket. They are generally shorter and broader than the men, and formed not unlike the negroes. The dress of the female consists of an unnamable garment extending from the neck to the knees, open under each arm nearly to the waist, a pair of short leggings, the moccasin, and the robe or blanket. They ride in the same manner that men do. Both sexes have their heads uncovered, as a rule, though sometimes the men wear old hats obtained from soldiers or emigrants, and both wear their hair long, which is invariably thick and black.

The squaws carry their pappooses in a variety of contrivances. Some fold their blankets in a way to form a bag on their back, large enough to hold the young one in an upright position, with his head out; others have a leather or skin pouch in which the babe is carried, hung to the back of his mother; and others carry, in the same way, a case made of bark or stout skin, resembling a metalic burial-case more than anything else I can compare it to, with a round opening over the face. When the hopeful cries, the mother sways herself from side to side, or back and front, to pacify it. Walking or riding, as a rule, they are carried on the back, but I have seen a pappoose, in a skin pouch, suspended from the pommel of a saddle, like a pistol and holster.

When the mother gives birth to her young it is not uncommon for no third person to be present. She then lives in a hut, or lodge, by herself, until the child is 25 or 30 days old, when she takes it to its father, who then sees his child for the first time. Chastity is observed by the young squaw and guarded by the mother, because it increases the chances of her becoming the wife of a "big Indian." Infidelity is not common among wives, but when it occurs is often followed by severe punishment to both guilty parties. The lover may be slain, but it is not uncommon to appease the anger of the injured husband by the present of a pony or other valuable gift.

Indian children of a few years, of both sexes, I think, are more attractive, in appearance, than when they become older. They are generally treated very kindly, and soon become "spoiled children." When a youngster of six or eight strikes his father it is regarded as a hopeful sign of coming bravery, and is spoken of accordingly.

The men are hunters and warriors only. They consider it degrading to the sex to do any kind of manual labor. I think there is combined with this pride a laziness, which, of itself, might account for their habits as long as they have their women with them to do the work. This, they think, is her sphere of life. I was amused one day at the conduct of an intelligent and rather fine looking warrior, when asked by one of the ladies if he loved his wife. The fellow understood and spoke English. The idea seemed quite absurd to him, and laughing and shaking his head, he turned to his father-in-law, who was sitting next to him, and said something very amusing to him also, probably that the pale-faced women were big fools to think of their sex being lovable creatures.

The men and boys are all good riders and prize their ponies very highly, though their ill-treatment of the animals seem rather inconsistent with real fondness for them. Their sporting arms and war weapons are of great variety, from the Henry repeating rifles and Colt's revolver to their primitive weapons, the bow and arrow and the lance. The large majority are armed only with the latter. In their the hands bow and arrow is decidedly the most effective, and these they use with great skill, shooting their arrows in rapid succession, with remarkable accuracy, and a force that will send them entirely through the body of a buffalo. The arrows are sometimes poisoned, for war purposes, by the tribes east of the mountains. This is done by touching their tips in the poison of the rattle-snake, and some vegetable poison they also use for the purpose. The bows vary in size. The Indians who always go mounted have short ones, say three feet long, while some of tho tribes in the West, who fight on foot, have them nearly twice as long. Each tribe makes its arrows of a particular kind of wood, or in a peculiar way, so that the tribe can be told by its arrows.

Scalping is still the practice among all tribes, and not only the warrior who is slain in battle, but the lonely Indian hunter or the poor emigrant, who falls by an arrow from the bow of his wily foe, have their bodies mutilated in the same way. Nor are the dead only subjected to this barbarous practice, but a wounded enemy is scalped when he is supposed to have a mortal wound, or one such may be given him after the process. Sometimes their wounds do not prove fatal, and the injured party recovers, minus a slice of the skin and hair along the top of his head. Scalps with long hair attached are more highly prized, and used in decorating the person of the brave who owns them. The insignia of rank is often made from these, and consists of portions of the scalp attached to the shoulder, or on the fringe of the leggings, &c.

A "scalp dance" is no ordinary occasion of rejoicing. It occurrs after the warrior returns to his friends with his trophies. If after a battle, in which some of the tribe may have been killed, the mourning of the relatives is turned into rejoicing, at the evidence of revenge for their slain, and all are merry alike. The scalps not used as ornaments are carefully preserved by the owners as evidence of their prowess, and if at any time a dispute as to the bravery of a warrior arises, he produces his trophies of battle, or cold-blooded murder, as the case may be

The tribes I have seen are not the inveterate smokers the nation have the reputation of being, but all seem to indulge more or less. Pure tabacco is never smoked by the Indian, and with many no tobacco at all but the dry bark of the young willow tree. Their kinnikinik is supposed to consist of a mixture of one-third tobacco and the remainder of willow-bark or dried Sumac leaves

The Indian smokes differently from the white man, and inhales the smoke into his lungs, hence he cannot tolerate the pungency of our tobacco. I have seen three or four caughing and contorting their faces after a puff or two from the pipe of an officer, who passed it to them as evidence of friendship.

The Indian is not named in childhood, but assumes a name as he grows up for some distinguishing feat or peculiar characteristic, and changes it from time to time as more fitting ones are suggested. Some of their names are very odd and some quite obscene.

The wife is sometimes "wooed and won," as if there was something of sentiment in the Indian character, but oftener purchased without the wooing. When the desired object is particularly attractive, and of a good family, the courting and purchasing both may be required. Indians are polygamists, and when a brave or chief desires to multiply the number of his wives he often marries several sisters, if they can be had, not because of any particular fancy he may have for any but the one who first captivated him, but because he thinks it more likely to have harmony in the household when they are all of one family. Not even squaws can live happily together when each may have a part interest in a man as their husband jointly. Polygamy is inconsistent with the female character, whether in barbarity or civilization.

Chieftainship is not always hereditary, though the son of a "Big Chief," the head of a tribe, is an under chief by virtue of his birth, but at the death of his father he does not succeed him as the head of the tribe unless he has arrived at proper age, and has exhibted such discretion and valor as to entitle him to the position. Tribes are divided into bands, and over each is a chief, and bands have also their subdivisions, with their chief. At the death of the head of a tribe the other chiefs select from their number his successor, giving preference to the child-chief, all other qualifications being equal.

The Indian dead are disposed of in several ways. Some of the tribes, the Sioux among them, place the body on an elevated platform in an unfrequented place; others bury it in the ground; and others hide it in crevises of the rocks, &c. All that pertained to the dead, while living, in the way of robes, blankets, weapons, cooking utensils, &c., are left with the body. In some instances the horse is buried also with the dead body of his former rider placed in the saddle. They believe that the spirit of the deceased wanders off to distant hunting grounds, and as it may have to pass over a country where there is no game, a quantity of dried buffalo meat is usually left with the body for its subsistence while on the journey. The tribes that bury their dead are careful to leave nothing that would indicate a grave, though the friends observe land marks by which they can ever afterwards tell the exact spot where they lie. These places of sepulture are held sacred as a Christian nation's, and when a tribe is again passing such localities, they will make a detour, rather than go the more direct road, by the resting place of their dead, while the relatives leave the trail and go alone to the spot, and there repeat their mourning as if in the presence of the departed. They also leave there presents for the dead of such little trinkets as he most prized before he departed to his new hunting ground. How beautiful this practice of a barbarous nation, which savors so much of the finer sensibilities of the most enlightened

The Indians are almost universally fond of whiskey, and have a strong propensity for gambling. They will risk at cards almost everything they own, and if unsuccessful appear quite satisfied with their loss. I wonder if there is something in the atmosphere of the far West that makes gambling so general. Upon that hypothesis I might account for the habits of a good many of my pale-faced friends.

The Indians have a peculiar way of defining time. When they wish to designate an hour of the day they point to the position the sun should be in at that time. The number of days is the number of sleeps. Ask a Shoshonie how far it is from Salt Lake City to Fort Bridger and he will place the side of his head upon the palm of his hand, signifying sleep, and hold up four fingers, meaning that number of days or sleeps will be passed on the journey. Their next division of time is the number of moons, instead of our months, and the years are indicated as the number of seasons.

There is a language of signs common to all the tribes, by which one tribe may communicate with another, without being able to speak or understand its dialect. Each tribe is known by some particular sign.

The principle diet of the Indians of the West is meat, which they obtain by hunting wild game, and eat it fresh in season or where it abounds, and dry it for use when away from their hunting grounds. They also make use of some varieties of wild vegetables, but none of the tribes that I have named cultivate the soil. They by no means dispise many articles of the white man's diet. Of coffee they are fond, but sugar they prefer to eat undissolved, and seem to regard it as a very great delicacy.

The tribes that pretend to be friendly, and some that don't even pretend to be, are supplied with presents by the Government yearly. These presents consist of blankets, clothing, hatchets, knives, &c., and I have no doubt butcher knives which are included, and when presented to Indians at Fort Laramie last summer, were used within two months of the time they received them in scalping emigrants within a hundred miles of the post.

There are other things connected with the habits of the Indian I might mention, but I have already extended this letter longer than I intended, and I shall have to condense some concluding remarks which I wished to add concerning the moral character of this people.

"The noble red man" is a prolific subject for the novelist, who knows nothing about his real character, and the "Poor Indian" is made to live in song very prejudicial to the character of those who have to deal with them.

The settler in the far West, and the emigrant journeying across the continent, regard the red skin in a very different light from the novelist and the poet. I know of but two or three Indians of the Rocky Mountain tribes who are supposed, even by the pseudo humanitarians in the vicinity of Salt Lake City, to possess a single trait of true nobility. The character of Pocahontas, in saving the captive Smith, is so out of keeping with the character of squaws of the present day, that if I regard her as a specimen of her nation, then I must consider the squaws now debased beyond hope of improvement.

The Indian does everything through motives of policy. He has none of the kindlier feelings of humanity in him. He is as devoid of gratitude as he is hypocritical and treacherous. He observes a treaty or promise only so long as it is dangerous to disregard it. The white man he has baen taught is his enemy, and he has become the most implacable enemy of the white man. His most fiendish murders of the innocent is his sweetest revenge for a wrong that has been done by another. When will the whites in an Indian country be rendered safe in life and property? The answer is only when the Indian shall have been taught some ideas of moral obligations, or when he is surrounded by a sufficient number of muskets, either in the hands of soldiers or settlers, and the latter authorized to use them after the manner of the Indian. The former safeguard I think will not exist with the present generation of Indians. To christianze the adults among them is next to impossible. The other expedient will not be adopted as long as there is an Indian Bureau, with its civil officers, independent of the War Department. The great West will be settled after a frightful sacrifice of life, and until the settlers are sufficiently numerous to defend themselves and defy their brutal foes.

[Concluded from last Week.]

ANNUAL MISSIONARY SERMON.

BY REV. N. L. BRAKEMAN.

Preached before the Mississippi Mission Conference, at its last session in New Orleans, and published by order of the Conference.

"This is the Word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying: Not by might, nor by power, but my Spirit saith the Lord of Hosts."—Zech. iv. 6.

II. Let us consider the Chief Agent and Instrumentality by which the Church is to succeed in evangelizing the world: "By my SPIRIT, saith the Lord."

That Spirit is the third Person in the God-head, and His agency and operations in the kingdoms of Nature, Providence and Grace are not enough considered. There is no danger of too much preaching upon the divinity of Christ, but we preach too little upon the Personality and Deity of the Holy Ghost. He is, in Bible language, represented as creating and upholding, as speaking and searching, as striving, reproving, convincing, helping, commanding, guiding, testifying, bearing witness, and working. He is grieved, quenched, tempted, resisted, blasphemed, and sinned against. This proves him a Person. Divine works were performed by him; divine titles are given him; divine worship is paid to him, and divine attributes belong to him, which proves that He is God. He is eternal, omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent. In Creation's morning He "moved upon the face of the waters" and "garnished the heavens." He appeared in the flaming sword of our lost Paradise, and strove with the wicked in the days of Noah. He dwelt of old with patriarch, priest and prophet; appeared in the "flaming lamp," in "the burning bush," the "pillar of fire," and the glowing "Shechinah." He inspired the artists for the Tabernacle and Temple, breathed upon Ezekiel's "valley of dry bones," touched Isaiah's lips with fire, moved upon the hearts of Cyrus and Darius, and 690 years before Christ, revealed the scenes of Pentecost to Joel. (See text, also.)

Thus was He manifested to the world and to men of old, though these were but intimations of His presence, his power and glory, compared with that which was to be revealed. (2 Cor. iii, 7-10.) As Christ was in the ancient church before his incarnation, so was the Spirit before his effusion. The advent manifested the fullness of Christ's life; Pentecost the fullness of the Spirit's power. That fullness was foretold by the prophets. We have not time to "trace His rising track" through the beginnings of the New Dispensation, nor speak of His visit to the Virgin, His revelations to Simeon, His inspiration of John the Baptist, nor His descent upon Christ at the Jordan.—We pass the precious promise of the Comforter, the death, resurrection and ascension of our Lord, the tarrying at Jerusalem, the fulfilment of the promise and the Pentecostal scene—to remark that this is eminently a spiritual dispensation; is indeed the Spirit's dispensation.

The "Comforter" has come, and is now the "Head of the Church," as Christ, enthroned and sceptred, is "head over all things for the church." We have "another Paraclete"—the other Advocate"—as the Savior promised.—(Compare John xiv, 16, 17, with 1 John ii, 1.) Christ is our Advocate in heaven, with the Father; the SPIRIT is our Advocate on earth; He comes forth from the Father and the Son, that He may bear His part with them in the work of man's salvation, and His spiritual power is to us, instead of Christ's presence. He makes our cause His own, and works in us, and by us, and for us; for the church and for the world; through time and for eternity. As He operated with creative energy in the natural world, so does He now in the spiritual world. "In the beginning the earth was without form, and void;" He gave law and system, and brought order out of chaos. "Darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the waters, and said: Let there be light! and there was light." He garnished the heavens and flooded them with glory, breathed life into all animated nature, and gave spiritual existence and immortality to angels and men. So, in the spiritual world, He shall bring order out of confusion, light out of darkness, beauty from deformity, harmony from discord, good from evil, joy from sorrow, and life from death. As of old He moved the hearts of kings to favor God's people, and inspired prophet and builder for the erection and completion of a material temple, so does He now, and will He, operate upon nations and men, until the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of Christ, and earth's deserts rejoice and blossom as the rose—till the spiritual temple is completed and the head-stone brought forth with shoutings of Grace, grace, unto it!

Here, then, is the all-sufficient Agent to accomplish this work of regenerating the world:

1. We have seen a large portion of the earth in moral darkness, but here is light for the world. The day has dawned. "The true light now shineth." Inspired by this Spirit, the prophet saw this light, and was glad, and as if appealing to a long-benighted world, exclaimed: "Arise and shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee! Darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and His glory shall be seen. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. The sun shall no more be thy light by day, nor the moon by night; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." (Isa. 60th chapter.) With this accord the office and work of the Eternal Spirit: He "turns us from darkness to light," translates us "from the power of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son." In the darkness of their ignorance men know not God—His character, attributes or works; they know not themselves—their nature, duty or destiny.—But "receiving an unction from this Holy One," they "know all things necessary to their present and eternal salvation.

2. This Spirit cures individual corruption:

He makes the heart his home, the body his temple, and man a new creature. We saw the "work of the flesh," what are the fruits of the Spirit? "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, righteousness, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, truth, faith, meekness, courage, knowledge, temperance, patience, humility, purity, honesty, justice, mercy, benevolence, kindness, charity"—in a word, "Godliness." (See Gal. v, 22; Eph., v. 9; Phil. iv, 8; 2 Pet. i, 5.) This last is secured in the first "fruit" of the Spirit [love] which, above all things, is God-like. God the Father is sovereign love; God the Son is redeeming love; God the Spirit is regenerating love; hence of the Triune Jehovah it is written: "God is love." And if we have this attribute we are God-like—are "partakers of the divine nature." And this we have, for "the fruit of the Spirit is love." The individual being thus "created anew unto good works," we have the remedy for all those evils we saw "springing from the heart as plants from the soil and pervading the family, society, state and nation. The The contrast is a pleasing one, but we have not time to pursue it. The change is great—all things are new—the tree made good—the fruit holiness, the end life, intellectual and moral, social and civil.

3. Here, too, we have the remedy for unbelief:

"And when the Spirit is come He will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment; of sin, because they believe not in me; of righteousness, because I go to my Father; of judgment, because the Prince of this world is judged:" "Of unbelief, because they believe not in me." We have seen the far-reaching and deadly influence of this sin, and how the Bible insists upon faith in Christ. Upon these two principles are suspended the fortunes of two worlds, the destinies of men and angels, the issues of time and the retributions of eternity. And yet no man or minister, no voice of conscience, no terrors of the law, no prayers of the church or promises of heaven, have power to correct this giant iniquity. It is the sin of the heart. But the Spirit's office is to search the heart, and convict it of this sin. And this it does, compelling, often, the stoutest hearts to cry out: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." [See Acts, ii, 37 to 40.]

4. Thus far we have spoken of the agency of the Spirit. There are other instrumentalities to be used in spreading "the knowledge of the glory of God." But we refer to them to notice that they are only efficient as they are made so by the Spirit.

[Continued on Second Page.]

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Orders left at 65 Poydras Street, or at our office, No. 7 Prytania Street, will receive full attention.

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

TO OUR PATRONS.

☞ The second year of the "New Orleans Advocate" begins January 1867. Most heartily thanking our patrons for their support during the first and trying year of its publication, we now confidently solicit the continuance of their Subscriptions and Advertisements for the year to come. Words cannot express our gratitude to you. You responded to our call in the hour of need.

The Advocate has steadily increased in public favor, and our income has equalled our out-lay. It is read in no less than

FIFTEEN HUNDRED FAMILIES.

It circulates in every State in the Union. It is a light in the

HOMES OF THE FREEDMEN.

They read it with delight. It advocates their rights; it contributes to their elevation.

As in the Past, so in the Future, the Advocate is to be devoted to "Religion, Patriotism and Learning."

Each number will contain a Sermon by one of our Colored Preachers. Each issue will reflect

LIFE IN THE SOUTH.

Several gentlemen of ability, residing in different States, have consented to write "Letters" for our paper

As the Advocate circulates both in the larger towns and in the interior of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, we hope our Advertising Patrons will continue their favors.

Dear Friends, we appeal to you to sustain this

CHRISTIAN, LOYAL JOURNAL IN THE SOUTH.

Our present Subscribers will please remit the amount of their subscription for the coming year, without delay.

To any person who will send us $16 we will mail him FIVE COPIES of the Advocate.

Send your remittances in Post Office Orders, and address the Editor by name.

PUBLISHER ADVOCATE.

Premiums! Premiums!

As an inducement to our Preachers to obtain subscribers for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867, we offer them the following premiums:

1. To any Preacher who shall obtain for us Forty New Subscribers for the year 1867, and send us the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the Bible, consisting of six large volumes.

2. For Thirty Subscribers and the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the New Testament, in two large volumes.

3. For twenty Subscribers and the money, we will give Watson's Theological Institutes, in two volumes.

4. For Ten Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Sermons, in two volumes.

5. For Five Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Notes on the New Testament.

Brethren will observe that these Subscribers are to be for the Whole Year. The money may be paid to the Presiding Elder of your District, quarterly, in advance; but, where it can be done, pay the $4, in advance.

Now, Brethren, for a Grand Rally! Go to work. The prize is before you. Who will be the first to obtain the Premiums?

Renew!

Send or call at our office, No. 7 Prytania street, and renew your subscription for 1867. Office hours from 12 M to 3 P. M.

Texas Conference.—We are indebted to our esteemed brother, Rev. Jos. Welch, for his timely report of the organization and proceedings of the Texas Conference, and he will accept our hearty thanks for the same.

We regret that Rev. A. Ross' sermon and other valuable articles do not appear in our present issue; they will, however, appear next week.

Bishop Simpson and son returned from Texas to New Orleans on Tuesday evening. The Bishop is in excellent health.

Preaching.—There will be preaching in the large hall of the Mechanics' Institute, on Sabbath morning, at eleven o'clock.

Angel of the Vale.

The first number of a series of articles entitled "Angel of the Vale," written by a lady, will appear in our next week's issue

The New Political Hope.

It is wonderful with what avidity and confidence the South grasps at each new illusion which promises success to its darling schemes. During the late fearful conflict at arms a succession of expectations were indulged, each furnishing encouragement for a brief season and each ending in bitter disappointment. Confidence was reposed in the goodness of their cause; in their superior prowess; the sovereignty of cotton; the assumed weakness of Lincoln; the divisions of his Cabinet; the interposition of foreign powers; the anti-war spirit and opposition to the draft; the financial prostration of the North; the expected triumph of McClellan and the Democratic party at the Presidential election; and, when other hopes failed, it was thought that by arming the slaves disaster might yet be avoided, and success secured. When, at length, rebellion was crushed into the earth, hope again sprang up, from the mild conditions imposed by the Government upon the vanquished, and this reviving hope, strengthened by the ascertained defection of the President from the principles on which he had been elected, finally led to the determination to secure on the field of political maneuver what had been staked and lost on the field of battle.

Aided by the powerful patronage of the Administration, success for a time seemed probable, but the late elections, resulting in an overwhelming defeat of the Presidential policy, sent dismay for a time through the rebellious ranks, and blasted their hopes of regaining control of the Government. The vital principle of republican government, requiring that the will of the majority shall be obeyed; the pledge of the President to abide the decison of the people; the unmistakable verdict which they rendered, seemed to destroy all hope of carrying out their purposes. It was a poor relief that the President, faithless to his professions, had resolved to disregard the expressed will of the people. He was powerless in the hands of a triumphantly endorsed Congress. There seemed no prospect of evading the decision rendered at the polls, and the South, from sheer necessity, was debating the propriety of yielding to the demands of the loyal people.

But a new hope has been revived, and under its impulse the late rebels have suddenly been hurried forward to a desperation, a bitterness and a defiance that parallels the frenzy which precipitated the war. The immediate inspiration is the decision rendered by the Supreme Court in the case of Milligan, who was engaged in secretly forming a powerful military organization in Indiana, in 1864, for the purpose of resisting the draft, of inducing insurrection and liberating rebel prisoners of war confined at the North. Under the provisions of a law of Congress, enacted in 1863, he had been arrested and held as a prisoner, and by order of Gen. Hovey, commander of the Military District of Indiana, he was tried before a military commission and sentenced to be hung. The case, on petition of the prisoner, was carried up to the Supreme Court of the United States, and it has been decided that he is entitled to be discharged from arrest, a majority of the judges holding that under no circumstances can a citizen of a State not in insurrection, and who is not in the military or naval service, be tried before a military tribunal. This opinion, and it is nothing more, dissented from by Chief Justice Chase and Associate Justices Wayne, Swayne and Miller, has wonderfully elated the rebels of the South. They now believe they have not only the President, but the Supreme Court on their side, and are satisfied that the same influences which secured the utterance of this opinion will secure a decision against the constitutionality of the proposed amendment to the Constitution, and also of all other obnoxious measures proposed by the present Congress.

Embodened by this new acquisition, the New Orleans Times now declares "The impeachment of the President will inevitably tend to revolution," and warns the radicals that if "they commence rolling the ball they will be responsible for the result."

The North Carolina Dispatch says, "The people of the South are united as one man in opposition to the threatened policy of Congress....They will drive the usurpers from their seats of power. ....In this approaching conflict, for conflict there will be if Congress destroy the States, they will have nearly half of the North as allies, and will be themselves united.... They will fight to the knife and then to the hilt!"

Such are the criminal utterances which are encouraged by the opinion so unnecessarily rendered by a majority of the Supreme Court. There is but one other opinion uttered by that high tribunal with which it can compare—that of the Dred Scott case, rendered for purely partizan purposes and to establish in this government the principle that the negro has no rights which a white man is bound to respect. It had been fondly hoped that that opinion would stand apart and alone in its infamy, as a monument of the corruptions of the times. But its parallel is found in the gratuitous argument which would deny that Congress could, under any emergency, provide that conspirators, leagued together in our midst to overthrow the government, should be punished otherwise than by the slow process of courts which might themselves be controlled by these men or their allies. No wonder that rebels are in ecstacies over this blow attempted at the power of Congress. Such a decision, if given four years earlier, might have wrought ruin to the nation. It would have allowed Valandigham and his traitorous hordes to have plotted insurrection without any adequate restraint. What are the effects of rendering an opinion not required in the determination of the case before them?

1. It lowers the dignity and diminishes the respect which should belong to the court of highest appeal in our government.

2. It furnishes President Johnson with a new pretext for disregarding the popular will.

3. It grants, according to the Presidential interpretation, virtual impunity to disloyal citizens in any violence they may use against the freedmen and white loyalists of the South.

4. It encourages an expectation that the proposed amendment to the Constitution, and all other measures tending to secure the rights of loyal citizens in the South will, be decided to be unconstitutional.

5. It tends to confuse the efforts made to organize and strengthen the loyal element in the South.

6. It encourages the rebels of the South to set the Congress of the United States and the overwhelming loyal majority of the nation at defiance.

7. It destroys, to a great extent, the efficiency of the Freedmens' Bureau, of the Civil Rights Bill, and of the military order of Gen. Grant, which requires the arrest and detention for trial of offenders against whom the local courts refuse to act.

8. It is a new and strong encouragement to the policy, so emphatically condemned by the people of the United States at the polls, which leaves the Southern loyalist helpless in the hands of the enemies he assisted to subdue.

Scarce had this opinion of the Supreme Court been promulgated, when the President directed the immediate release of Dr. Watson, who had deliberately murdered a negro in Virginia and who, having been discharged after the farce of a trial, had been arrested by Gen. Schofield, under Grant's order No. 44. It seems to be the issue toward which this administration is steadily tending, to place all the freedmen and loyalists in the South completely at the mercy of the disloyal. The pivotal principle of Johnson's policy is evidently that the loyal minority in a State shall be ruled by the disloyal majority. This abhorrent principle, which is the key to all of Johnson's movements, would have made secession right in every State where the popular voice demanded it, and is evidently the principle on which every State Government organized under Johnson's direction is administered.

We regret it should be published to the country that our present executive, after conferring with the Supreme Judges, should give out in advance that the Supreme Court would sustain his policy, and declare the South unconditionally in the Union. It is painful to read such declarations; and if such a decision is indeed forthcoming, it will manifestly be purely partisan, and have no more moral force than any other political document. It is humiliating that the Supreme Court of our country should form the chief reliance of rebels in attempts to regain power in our Government.—We would hope that it is not of design that it has rendered so much comfort to our enemies. But let them not be too sanguine. These judges, Democrats though they be, may refuse to accede to all the demands made upon them.—And there is a power mightier than Presidents or Supreme Courts. The people are stronger than any agents of their creation, and to their will Congress, and President, and even the Supreme Court must bow. The genius of freedom is on her triumphal march over the continent, and the people are rallying to her call. In spite of adverse combinations, the path of progress is leading humanity upward. The enemies of liberty may succeed in covering themselves with infamy, but no effort can bring back the dark years of the past and restore the plantation rule now crushed forever.

[Continued from First Page.]

ANNUAL MISSIONARY SERMON.

BY REV. N. L. BRAKEMAN.

If we speak of truth—the Word of God—"the truth as it is in Jesus," it has no power to save the world. "The entrance of thy word giveth light," and it may illuminate the mind; but it cannot change the heart or convict the infidel of his unbelief: It is the Spirit's sword, and is only effectual as it is used by the Spirit: It is not the electric current, but the conductor along which the current flows: It is necessary, as is the wire to the telegraph; but alone, is as inefficient as the wire without the electricity. If we speak of the ministry, how powerless is it without "the holy unction!" Its prayers may be addressed to human ears, but they will never gain audience with Deity. Solemn truths may be pronounced in perfect periods, as powerless as they are pretty. There may be learning eloquence, genius, every adornment, and yet a starless crown at last. Let the ministry remember it is not by might or power, but by the Spirit of God that he is to succeed.—Knowledge is power, but it must be the knowledge of God. Wealth is power, but it must be consecrated to God. Influence is power, but it must be wielded for God. There is power in a true conversion, in a fervent, effectual prayer; in a consecrated, self-denying, cross-loving life.—There is power in a holy heart, a single eye, a blameless life, and a godly conversation. But all these are the fruits of the Spirit, as was manifested upon the day of Pentacost. With these instrumentalities in successful operation we may be assured of victory.

5. It will illustrate our subject, and will strengthen our Christian courage and faith to refer to the "Great Commission" and the early church: In Matthew, xxviii, 18, 19, 20, Christ had proclaimed himself King, and marked out the ministers and army, the weapon of their warfare, the extent of their field, the badge of citizenship, the law and limit of their commission, the royal glory and presence which should attend them, and the duration of His kingdom, in these remarkable words: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

Again, in Acts I, 4 to 9, we behold him with his disciples for the last time. He renews the promise of the Spirit, repeats the commission and ascends into heaven: "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. And when he had spoken these words, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight." The "commission" was command and precept, promise and prophecy, and it embraced the world: "Unto the uttermost parts of the earth," are the last words upon His lips. His word had declared and His ascent demonstrated His sovereign power. No wing, no hand, no chariot of fire, yet he ascends! "Upward He moves by His own power, and in that single act commands the homage of earth; for our globe has no law so universal and irreversible as that whereby it binds down all ponderous bodies to its surface. But that law gives way and the whole mass of the globe yields to the power of Christ." And now enthroned in heaven he reigns, and shall reign, till by the power of the Spirit all enemies are put under his feet. The disciples tarry, the Spirit comes, they are endowed with power, and prepared for their work.

And now as they go forth, follow them: Beginning at Jerusalem, what odds are against them: They are few and unlearned, their Founder is despised, their enemies are violent and numerous; there are the chief priests, scribes, Pharisees, Saducees, doctors of law, captains, officers and the Sanhedrim—the very men who had cried: "Away with him—crucify him!" Among Greeks and Romans they met with philosophers, poets, historians, statesmen, kings and governors, who disagreeing in everything else, conspire to oppose these men and put down the Gospel.—And what are the results? 3,000 saved on the day of Pentecost; 5,000 at a later period, and in one year, on the very soil where Jesus shed his blood, 10,000 converts shout His praise! In three years the Gospel has spread all over Judea and Samaria, into "the regions beyond."

And in two years it has reached Syria, and Lydia, and Egypt, and Arabia, Persia, Mesopotamia, Armenia, Parthia, Asia Minor, and many parts of Europe, and more than 500,000 souls were enlisted under its banner. According to Eusebius, there were in the second century, churches in Gaul, at Lyons and Vienna; in Africa, at Carthage, where, according to Tertullion, Christians were so numerous that, to extirpate them, would decimate the city. In the East, at the same early period, the cross was planted in Edessa, and the Gospel proclaimed in India.—(See Enseb. Hist. Eccl., book v, chap. 1–10.) In 300 years it had made conquest of the Roman Empire. In its march it had conquered Judaism in Jerusalem, Philosophy at Athens, Sensuality at Corinth, Idolatry at Rome and Ephesus, Barbarism at Milita, and ignorance, intolerance, superstition and worldly-mindedness everywhere. It suffered a long decline from its original purity and power. But revived again under Luther and his co-laborers. And again under the Wesleys and their contemporaries, and yet again under our fathers in this country. In these latter years it has destroyed Cannabalism in the South Sea Islands, broken the power of caste over millions in India, shaken Idolatry in China, and abolished slavery in Great Britain and America. And today, God is working wonders among the nations of the earth, for the triumphs of the Gospel over the Arabian imposture, and the Man of Sin, and the world universally, "Not by might, not by power, but my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

We close with some reflections:

1. The great want of the church, especially in her missionary work, is a spiritual baptism. And why may she not have it? This is still the Spirit's dispensation, and we believe that, but for unbelief, the Church might to-day enjoy, miracles apart, the scene of Pentecost renewed. Long ago might the world have been converted, had not the Church grieved and quenched the Spirit. As ministers and missionaries we shall never do our portion of that great work till we have clean hearts. We want the Holy Ghost and fire from heaven.—It must glow in our hearts, illuminate our minds, awaken our emotions, breathe in our thoughts, burn in our words, shine in our example, and be felt in our lives. Without it, wealth, influence, churches and ordinances, preaching and praying are but "ships of war, and ammunition, without guns or men;" and order, audiences, talent, truth, are "men and guns without fire."

2. We need, perhaps, as a Conference—as ministers and people—to be reminded that our sole security and protection, our hope and help, are in God. There have been times in the past year when our hearts have "trembled for the ark of God," when in tears we have thought of and prayed for each other; when our friends have trembled for us; and when the Church may have remembered us in her prayers. We called in vain for the protection of Government. God has taught us that we did not need it. The "Lo, I am with you," has been verified; He is still with us, and we are with each other again, and blessed be His name forever!

3. It is worthy of note that our first Conference met on Christmas, 1865, and saw the opening of our glorious Centenary year; and that with our second Conference we enter the second century of American Methodism. Fit time for thought and reflection! If our Zion has been a success—if its first century has a glorious history, let her remember it is not by might, (strength of our own nor by power, (authority, or permission from others,) but by "My Spirit."—by the providence, the protection, and the power of God. Thus has her temple, so far, been built; then let the good work go on. Let no arm of State, no power of man, no wisdom of this world be ever invoked for aid. "Trust only in God, for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." Let us "inquire for the old paths" of a personal experience. Let our hearts, like Wesley's, be "strangely warmed" by the Spirits fire—may we, like him, be "full of faith and the Holy Ghost."

"Oh, that it now from heaven might fall,
And all our sins consume!
Come, Holy Ghost, for Thee we call;
Spirit of burning come!"

4. Finally, "Who hath despised the day of small things?" If we apply this question to ourselves: We are few and feeble, and have but just begun to "build"—we are laying foundations.—Sometimes we become discouraged, and are ready to ask: "By whom shall Jacob arise, for he is small?" Then we hear the cheering words: "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." We fain would believe we are planting the mustard-seed that shall grow to a great tree; are hiding the leaven in the measures of meal; are cutting from the mountain of genuine Methodism (not without hands) the little stone which shall yet fill all this land. Our cause, we know, is just, and we believe the sun of prosperity shall shine more and more upon us, even unto the midday of perfect success. We send our thoughts forward to the close of the century upon which we are entered, and ask: "What shall the end be?" We shall look down from heaven, and see.

And now, let not the unbelieving world boast, nor the Christian fear, because so small a portion of earth is evangelized. The temple shall be completed, for the Lord hath spoken it: "For as the rain cometh down from heaven, and the snow, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bud and bring forth; so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish that which I please, and prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it; I will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all nations: Earth shall be filled with the knowledge of my glory, and all flesh shall see my salvation: The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and a little child shall lead them, and they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: Wars shall cease unto the ends of the world: Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls salvation and thy gates praise: Wherefore, strengthen the weak hsnds and confirm the feeble knees: Say to them who are of a feeble heart, Be strong, fear not; behold your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense—He will come and save you: For stones I will give iron; for wood, brass; for brass, silver, and for silver, gold: Instead of the thorn there shall come up the fir-tree; instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree, and it shall be to the Lord for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off: And the wilderness and the solitary place shall be made glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose: The heathen shall be given to the Son for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession: He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the rivers unto the ends of the earth, and they shall fear him as long as the sun and the moon endure: A little one shall become a thousand, a strong one a mighty nation, and a nation shall be born in a day: I, the Lord, will hasten it in his time."

All this the Savior reasserted to his disciples, published in their commission, and symbolized in his ascent to heaven, where, enthroned King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, he shall reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet—reign till He, the Eternal Spirit, who makes us new creatures in Christ, shall have made all things new, even a "new heavens, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The time may seem to us long—not so with God. One day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. Christ was long promised before he came, and the world was long in preparation for his advent; but when the fullness of time had come, God sent him forth, and in due time he died for the ungodly. And "in due time" he will subdue the world to himself, and all nations shall serve him. And now, "Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things! Blessed be His glorious name forever! And let all the earth be filled with His glory. Amen, and Amen!"

Which is the mother of the chickens, the hen who laid the eggs or the hen that hatched them.

If a husband deserts his wife which is the most abandoned, the man or the woman?

Organization and Proceedings

OF THE

Texas Mission Conference.

HOUSTON, Jan. 3, 1867.

The Board of Bishops having set apart the work in Texas for organization as the Texas Conference of the M. E. Church, the Rev. Bishop Simpson commenced the service preliminary to its institution, at three o'clock this afternoon, in the Houston M. E. Church, by reading the 60th chapter of Isaiah; the 571st hymn was then sung, and prayer offered by the Revs. Joseph Welch and William R. Fayle. The Bishop then made an appropriate address on the general interests and progress of the work.

He then announced the transfer from the Mississippi Conference of Joseph Welch, who, as the only member of the Texas Conference in full connection, was appointed Secretary.

Elias Dibble and Samuel Osborn, having been one year on trial, and James Davis and George Edward Brooks received on trial at the late session of the Mississippi Conference, were also transferred to the Texas Conference.

The question was then taken up—"Who are re-admitted into the traveling connection?"

William R. Fayle, Thomas B. Ferguson, Carl Biel and Edward Schneider, Ordained Elders, late of the traveling ministry of the M. E Church South, answering the disciplinary requirements, were received into full connection in the Conference.

Question—Who remain on trial? Elias Dibble, Samuel Osborn.

Brother Dibble gave a satisfactory and pleasing account of his work, reporting the Church in good condition and a general improvement in the moral character of the community.

Question—Who are admitted on trial? John. E. Stovall, an Ordained Elder from the Austin circuit.

The ordination services were appointed for to-morrow night at half-past seven o'clock.

Preaching was announced to-night by Benj. F. Williams.

Adjourned till 10 o'clock A. M to-morrow.

Closing services were conducted by the Bishop.

Second Day.

MORNING SESSION.

Jan 4, 1867.

The Conference met pursuant to adjournment, and the religious services were conducted by Chas. W. Bryant.

The journal was read and approved.

The question, "Who are admitted on trial?" was then resumed.

The following brethren, having been duly recommended, and being represented by the Presiding Elder, were received on trial:

Benjamin F. Williams, Chas. W. Bryant, Daniel Gregory, Benjamin O. Watrous, Isaac Wright, Alexander Gillem and Carl Urbantke.

Question—Who are elected to Deacons' Orders?

The following, having been duly recommended, were elected:

Elias Dibble, B. F. Williams, C. W. Bryant, D. Gregory, B. O. Watrous, Isaac Wright, George E. Brooks, James Davis

Brother Osborn then gave an account of his work during the year.

James Davis also gave a short history of his labors and early struggles.

S. J. W. Mintzer, Medical Director of the Freedmen's Bureau, and D. T. Allen, Assistant Superintendent of the School Department of the Bureau, were introduced to the Conference, and addressed it on the subject of the education of the freed people.

The following were appointed a Committee on Education:

Joseph Welch, Wm. R. Fayle, Carl Biel, Samuel Osborn.

It was on motion resolved that the Committee on Education be a Standing Committee, with power to act during the year, and report at the next session of the Conference.

The credentials of the Rev. George W. Honey, a traveling Elder of the Wesleyan connection, were presented to the Conference for action.

He was on motion received into full connection and recognized as an Elder.

The brethren elected to Deacons' Orders were requested to meet Rev. Jos. Welch at 3 P. M. to-day, for instruction.

The Bishop was requested to appoint the usual Missionary Committee.

W. R. Fayle was appointed a Committee to prepare a statistical report.

The Conference on motion resolved to hold an afternoon session commencing at 3 o'clock.

Closing services by Brother Elias Dibble.

Adjourned.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The religious services were conducted by Rev. Thos. B. Ferguson.

The journal was read and approved.

Thos. B. Ferguson gave a history of his trials and labors during the past year.

Carl Biel gave an interesting account of the state of the German work.

He was followed by Edward Schneider, one of the pioneers of Methodism among the Germans of Texas, and Carl Urbantke, who is now entering upon the work

B. O. Watrous then made a short statement of the field in the vicinity of Brenham, and Isaac Wright spoke of the progress of the Church at Austin.

It was on motion resolved that the Presiding Elders be a Committee to determine during the year the place of holding the next annual session, and report to the President of the Conference.

The following were appointed a Committee on Books and Periodicals: Thos. B. Ferguson and Edward Schneider.

It was on motion resolved that when we adjourn it be to meet at 9½ A. M. to-morrow.

On motion adjourned.

Religious services conducted by Isaac Wright.

ORDINATION SERVICES.

The ordination services took place according to appointment, in the church, at half-past seven o'clock.

The 215th hymn was sung and prayer offered by Jos. Welch.

The Bishop then read the 9th Psalm and the first part of the 4th chapter 2d Tim.

He then announced the 237th hymn and preached the ordination sermon, from the text, "Preach the Word." 3 Tim., 4. 7.

After the sermon Rev. Jos. Welch presented to the Bishop the candidates for ordination, who then ordained to the office of Deacons the following brethren:

Elias Dibble, B. F. Williams, Charles W. Bryant, Daniel Gregory, B. O. Watrous, Isaac Wright, James Davis and Geo. E. Brooks.

After which the services were concluded by the Bishop.

Third Day.

Jan. 5.

The opening services of the Conference were conducted by Rev. Joseph Welch, at 9½ A. M.

The journal was then read and approved.

The report of the Committee on Education was then read, adopted and placed on file.

The report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals was then read, adopted and filed.

It was on motion resolved that the Centenary collection, in the hands of Brother Welch, be sent to New Orleans in aid of the Advocate.

The Secretary then presented a Record for the use of the Conference, as a donation from Benjamin G. Welch, Esq., of Danville, Penn.

When it was on motion

Resolved, That the thanks of the Conference be and they are hereby tendered to Benjamin G. Welch, of Danville, Pa., for the presentation of a journal to this Conference.

The report of the Committee on Statistics was read, approved and filed.

On motion it was

Resolved, That Rev. Geo. W. Honey be placed on the journal as supernumerary without appointment.

The report of the Committee on Missions was read, approved and filed.

It was on motion

Resolved, That our preachers be required to establish Sabbath Schools in each appointment.

The following resolutions of thanks were adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Conference be and they are hereby tendered to our friends who have kindly entertained the members of the Conference during its session.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Conference be and they are hereby tendered to our beloved Bishop Simpson for the kind and efficient manner in which he has presided over our deliberations:

The journal was then read and approved.

The Bishop then announced the following Committees of Examination and the appointments of the preachers for the ensuing year:

Committee of First Year—W. R. Fayle, Carl Biel.

Second Year—Jos. Welch, Thos. B. Ferguson.

To Preach the Missionary Sermon—Thos. B. Ferguson.

The appointments were as follows:

GERMAN MISSION DISTRICT.

C. Biel, Presiding Elder.

Industry	Carl Biel
Independence	Edward Schneider
Round Top	Carl Urbantke

TEXAS MISSION DISTRICT.

Joseph Welch, Presiding Elder.

Belton	Thos. B. Ferguson
Red River	To be supplied
Austin Circuit	John E. Stovall
Austin	Isaac Wright
Liberty	To be supplied
Columbus	B. F. Williams & A. Gillem
Columbia	James Davis
Richmond	Daniel Gregory
Galveston	——— Samuel Osborn
Galveston Circuit	To be supplied

HOUSTON DISTRICT.

W. R. Fayle, Presiding Elder.

Houston	Elias Dibble
Houston Circuit	Chas. W. Bryant
Harrisburg	To be supplied
Hempstead	To be supplied
Millican	Geo. E. Brooks
Brenham	B. O. Watrous

Statistics of the Texas Mission Conference.

	Members	Probationers	Local Preachers	Baptisms Adults	Baptisms Infants	Churches	Val of Church Pro	S Schools	Scholars
Houston Circuit	50	57	1			1	400
Houston	110	136	1	2o	10	1	3500	1	80
Harrisburg	20	57	1	6		1	400
Richmond	95	62	8		1s	1		1	40
Columbus	97	23	1			1	400	1	30
Columbia	60		1
Hempstead	120	45	1			1
Millican	45		1
Austin	11o	23	1		21			1	60
Austin Circuit	20o	1oo	3					15o	6 195
Industry	75	15						1	9o
Belton	1o
Liberty	31
Galveston	68			1	14	22
	1o93	491	21	4o	71	5	485o	11	495

Report of the Committee on Education.

To the Bishop and Members of the Texas Conference:

Your Committee on Education beg leave to submit the following report.

Earnestly and anxiously looking at the condition of the Freed people among us, we behold a lamentable state of ignorance in which they have grown up under their previous bondage, and which they now inherit as one of its inevitable results While we rejoice that in the Providence of God the "great evil of slavery" has been removed, believing that light and truth ever go hand in hand with mercy and grace in a pure gospel, we feel called upon to put forth every effort to enlighten, and thus to save them. Therefore

Resolved, That a general system of free school education is the duty of society to itself, and that, in the absence of this provision, it becomes the duty of the Christian Church to provide, as far as possible, the means of education, and especially so for the children of the Church.

Resolved, That we believe it to be the duty of our pastors to provide an advanced religious training in addition to the usual elementary work of our Sabbath Schools, and we urge upon our brethren in the ministry special care in this direction.

Resolved, That we will give our earnest co-operation to the agencies in operation for the education of the freed people, and welcome the assistance of the benevolent societies of the nation in planting schools and supporting the teachers.

Resolved, That we appeal to the freed people of the State to enter the door now open to them, and embrace every opportunity to enjoy the advantages now placed within their reach.

JOS. WELCH,
W. R. FAYLE,
CARL BIEL,
SAM'L OSBORN.
Committee.

Report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals.

Your Committee beg leave to submit the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, There exists in our midst a destitution of religious literature, caused in a great measure by the operation of the late civil war, so that in many cases families are unprovided with the Scriptures, and religious reading is greatly needed by the people; and whereas, your committee deem the circulation of a good and wholesome literature second only in importance to the preaching of the Gospel, and we deem it important that our people should be supplied with Bibles, Hymn-books, Disciplines and Sunday-school libraries of our own publication, therefore

Resolved, That W. R. Fayle be authorized to order from our Book Concern, and keep on deposit in the city of Houston, an assortment of books such as shall be needed by our people.

Resolved, That we heartily support the publication of the New Orleans Advocate, edited by Rev. J. P. Newman D. D.

Resolved, That we deem it the duty of the ministry of our church to subscribe for and study the Quarterly Review, edited by Dr. Whedon.

Resolved, That our preachers be requested to procure the Missionary Advocate, for gratuitous circulation among our people.

THOS. B. FERGUSON.
EDWARD SCHNEIDER.

Christmas in Franklin, La.

We will be pardoned for copying from a private letter the following interesting account of the first Christmas Tree ever enjoyed by the Sunday School children of Father Jack Goodwin's Church:

"As everybody has something to say about their Christmas Trees, I must tell you about ours, because I think you would like to know that the poor children here were remembered on that eventful day. I had resolved to make each one a little present, and, when they were all collected together, I thought if we could have a tree, and some fancy paper to help ornament, we could make one look quite respectable. Our kind friend, Mrs. K., came the day before to help make up the packages, and agreed with me as to the desirableness of the tree. But how should we get and trim one in time? It was now eleven o'clock on Saturday, and we had proposed to have the happy gathering on Sunday morning, at the usual Sunday School hour. I was afraid of interruption if we had it on Christmas Eve. We went to work with a will that soon accomplished our task. A tree was found. One of the school girls happened in, all the help we had. Our horns of plenty were made of straw color, pink and white. We had a hundred well filled—also toys of various kinds, books, cards, etc., trimming off nicely with red, white and blue! It was hard work, but we felt richly paid the next morning, by seeing the happy faces, almost glistening in the anticipation of enjoying the fruit from their FIRST CHRISTMAS TREE. [Think of this, ye favored little ones, all over our Christian land!] We intended it for a surprise, but you would have thought that nothing else had been talked off for a month. There were one hundred and twenty-eight scholars present, and then I went out into the yard and gave to twelve more. We had a good supply of candies, calculating to return what was left, but instead had to send for more. The church was crowded with all ages, from babes in arms to grey-headed old men and women. They all seemed perfectly delighted, and Mrs. K. and myself, and our children, were aboat as happy as any of them. Our music was all vocal, but none the less pleasant. Our kind friend had been practicing the children with some choice pieces, which they sang on this occasion about as well as it could be done. It was a joyous, memorable time for the children, the parents and their friends."

Thoughts About Jesus.

Meditation upon the life, purity, sufferings and death of Christ, must ever be a source of pleasure as well as improvement to the Christian. Some reflections, however, will cause a mingling of sadness; and often the tear of sympathy and devotion will steal from the eye of one who really abides in the "vine." The keenness of sensibility in our Lord, and his consequent increase of suffering, must, when we reflect upon it, cause feelings of sadness, and deepen our affection for Him who bore our sorrows.

We offer a few suggestions to show in what manner Christ's sufferings were increased by his perfect sympathy with the woes of humanity.

We find that pain is always in proportion to the sensibility of the sufferer

From the vegetable, up through the animal world, we have ample evidence for this assertion. Suffering does in no case begin before sensibility. The animal which has the least sensibility suffers least, and as you ascend the scale of being, suffering is seen to increase until you find man the greatest sufferer of all. The amount of pain communicated through any organ of the body by a given cause is in proportion to its delicacy and sensibility. Thus the eye causes extreme pain from the presence of a mote, which the most delicate finger would ignore.

Men also differ in capability of suffering, just as they differ in degree of sensibility. Thus we find that chastened taste, increased power of perception, superior refinement of any kind, as they contribute to the perfection of the individual, also contribute to his anguish if placed in painful relations.

Sympathy with the sufferings of others is often a cause of pain. It cannot be denied that mothers often suffer far more than their afflicted babes. And while the husband in fever's deririum is enjoying pleasant reveries, the wife is wringing her hands in anguish, nearly beside herself with sympathetic grief.

We might, therefore, justly conclude that Christ suffered extremely in his contact with the woes of humanity, were no proof of this on record. For not only was his sensibility absolutely perfect, but he sympathized more intimately, more lovingly with every sufferer than is possible to any one else.

But if we glance at the instances recorded, argument gives place to evidence; persuasion to certainty; our admiration of his character deepens into wonder and awe, and we adore the wonderful, the mighty God.

Circumstances which to men in general would bring anger and a desire for revenge, filled his sensitive nature with sadness, his heart with sympathetic sorrow.

While healing the man with the withered hand on the Sabbath, and being accused of a breach of law, his grief at the wilful blindness of his accusers eclipses all anger, resentment or feeling of retaliation.

Perhaps nothing will provoke men in general more speedily, or wound them more deeply, than for an act, done with the purest motives, to be ascribed to a wrong intention. But here Christ performs a cure solely for the benefit of others, without possibility of reward; an act that should fill every beholder with gratifude, and cause the most indifferent to glow with admiration; and, though accused most causelessly, triumphs over self so completely that all thought of the injury to himself seems to be totally absorbed by the consideration of the woe resulting to his accusers as the legitimate consequence of their obliquity.

The feeling of sympathy which to ordinary men in like circumstances would be simply impossible from the strong uprising, and tumultuous clamor of baser passions, in Him is the monarch of the soul, subduing all else, and lavishly bestowing his gifts upon those whom human nature would bid to crush. Soaring above the present and the immediate, his thoughts weigh the future and the distant; he already sees the vengeance of the day of wrath, and is plunged in sadness and pensive grief.

Again, we find him at the grave of a friend, tears are coursing down his cheeks, and deep emotion heaves his sacred bosom. But is there anything strange in tears at the grave of a loved one? Do not all men possess such sympathy?

There were circumstances connected with this event which made those tears the most wonderful, the most sacred that ever moistened human cheek.

Much of the sorrow and many of the tears shed over the departed, arise from the feeling of personal loss; but Jesus wept not because he had lost a friend; for he knew full well that Lazarus should be raised, and had told his disciples that this sickness was not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of man might be glorified thereby. Neither can we accept the teaching of Strauss, that these were tears of hypocrisy. It must then follow that these were tears of sympathy; he wept because of the pain endured by others. Had ordinary humanity been in the place of Jesus, there might have been boastful pride; or there might have been the taunting jibe, even; but tears would have been completely impossible.

There is in this mystery of tears a whole volume of instruction, a sacredness of grief, an ocean of tenderness that is awful in its depth, and measureless in its immensity; our longest lines are thrown in vain; our steady, earnest gaze from the most dizzy heights are unrepaid with sight of shore; and shudderingly, sadly we turn our gaze within to regret the contrast between our sympathy, our affection, and that of our Master.

But the majesty of his suffering through sympathetic sensibility reaches the summit of its glory, as, shortly before his crucifixion, he gazes on Jerusalem and weeps over the devoted city.—That city, whose strongest power had been arrayed against his cause, whose streets had been paved with the bones of the righteous, and whose every locality, from the outer limits to the sacred altar itself, had been saturated with blood that cried to heaven for vengeance, till it had been said by unerring wisdom, "It cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem."

That city whose rulers exerted their power, not for his defence, but for his destruction; whose scribes and wise men prostituted their learning that they might entrap him in his words; whose priests thirsted for his blood; and whose people, mockingly envious of his purity, had often attempted to stone him, and now stood ready with open mouth to shout "away with him?"

That city which so soon was to mock and deride and crucify him, and thus fill the measure of her iniquity, now received his sympathy and beheld his tears.

Justice might have urged the swift descent of the stroke that should sweep her from existence; revenge would have added accumulated torture to her destruction; self-preservation alone would have suggested anything but pity; but—Jesus weeps. He passes by her history, he heeds not her malignant hatred, he ignores his own danger and her crime, and gazing sorrowfully into the future, he beholds vial after vial of God's wrath poured upon her, and exclaims: "O, Jerusalem! Jerusalem! thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate."

Need we doubt his sympathy with our sorrows in view of such proofs of affection?

And we should ever remember that this is the measure of the love to our brethren required of us: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." H. G. B.

LA CRESCENT, Dec. 22, 1866.

CABINET ORGANS.—We are sure we are doing a real service to smaller churches and Sunday-schools, as well as to lovers of music generally, in calling attention to the Cabinet Organs manufactured by Messrs. Mason & Hamlin. No one who hears these instruments will be surprised at the very strong favor with which they are regarded by our leading organists. Their uuality of tone is admirable, round, sonoaous, pure and sympathetic; while they have abundant volume of tone for any private house, and quite sufficient for smaller churches and for such halls as are usually occupied by Sunday-schools. With all this, their capacity for expression is wonderful, exceeding in some respects even that of the largest and most costly church organs.—This is mainly effected by the introduction of a swell, operated upon an entirely new principle, which gives the performer very efficient control of the tones he produces. The moderate prices at which they are sold, and the little space they occupy, are important practical advantages in these instruments.

MY LAMBS.

"FROM THE CHANGED CROSS."

I loved them so
That when the Elder Shepherd of the fold
Came, covered with the storm and pale and cold,
And begged for one of my sweet lambs to hold,
I bade him go.

He claimed the pet—
A little foundling thing that to my breast
Clung always, either in quiet or unrest;
I thought of all my lambs I loved him best;
And yet—and yet—

I laid him down
In those white-shrouded arms, with bitter tears,
For some voice told me that in after years,
He should know naught of passion, grief, or fears,
As I had known.

And yet again
The Elder Shepherd came. My heart grew faint;
He claimed another lamb, with sudden plaint,
Another! She who, gentle as a saint,
Ne'er gave me pain.

Aghast, I turned away!
There sat she—lovely as an angel's dream,
Her golden locks with sunlight all agleam,
Her holy eyes with heaven in their beam!
I knelt to pray.

"Is it thy will?
My Father, say, must this pet lamb be given?
Oh! thou hast many such, dear Lord, in heaven."
And a soft voice said, "Nobly hast thou striven
But—peace, be still!"

Oh! how I wept,
And clasped her to my bosom with a wild
And yearning love—my lamb—my pleasant child,
Her, too, I gave. The little angel smiled,
And slept.

"Go, go!" I cried.
For once again that Shepherd laid his hand
Upon the noblest of that household band
Like a pale specter, there he took his stand,
Close to his side.

And yet how wondrous sweet
The look with which he heard my passionate cry,
"Touch not my lamb; for him, oh! let me die!"
"A little while," he said, with smile and sigh
Again to meet.

Hopeless I fell;
And when I rose the light had burned so low,
So faint, I could not see my darling go;
He had not bidden me farewell, but oh!
I felt farewell,

More deeply, far,
Than if my arms had compassed that slight form;
Though could I but have heard him call my name,
"Dear mother!" But in heaven 'twill be the same—
There burns my star!

He will not take
Another lamb, I thought; for only one
Of the dear fold is spared—to be mine own,
My guide, my mourner when this life is done;
My heart would break.

Oh! with what thrill
I heard him enter; but I did not know
[For it was dark] that he had robbed me so,
The idol of my soul—he could not go—
O heart, be still!

Came morning. Can I tell
How this poor frame its sorrowful tenant kept?
For waking tears were mine; I sleeping wept,
And days, months, years that weary vigil kept,
Alas! farewell!

How often it is said!
I sit and think and wonder, too, sometime,
How it will seem, when in the happier clime,
It never will ring out like funeral chime,
Over the dead.

No tears! no tears!
Will there a day come that I shall not weep?
For I bedew my pillow in my sleep;
Yes, yes, thank God! no grief that clime shall keep no weary years.

Ay, it is well.
Well with my lambs, and with their earthly guide;
There, pleasant rivers wander they beside,
Or strike sweet harps upon their silver tide—
Ah! it is well.

Through the dreary day
They often come from glorious light to me;
I cannot feel their touch, their faces to see,
Yet my soul whispers, they do come to me—
Heaven is not far away.

Encouragement to Sinners.

Wherefore, sinner, be ruled by me in this matter; feign not thyself another man, if thou hast been a vile sinner. Go in thine own colors to Jesus Christ; put thyself among the most vile, and let him alone to put thee among the children. Thou art, as it were, called by name to come in for mercy. Thou man of Jerusalem, hearken to the call! Men in courts of Judicature do so, and shoulder through the crowd, saying, "Pray give way, I am called into the court." Why, then, standest thou still? "Begin at Jerusalem," is thy call and authority to come. Wherefore, up, man, and shoulder it! Say, "Stand away, unbelief! Christ calls me." "Stand away, all my discouraging apprehensions, for my Saviour calls me to Him to receive mercy." Men will do this in courts below. Why not thus approach the court above? Christ, as he sits on the throne of grace, pointed over the heads of thousands, directly to such a man, and says, "Come." Wherefore, since He says come, let the angels make a lane, and all men make room, that the Jerusalem sinner may come to Christ for mercy.—Bunyan.

The weather in New Orleans has never been more changeable than during the present winter, occasionally we have had a sunny day, but usually for days in succession the air has been cold and rain has fallen in torrents.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

KELLOGGS' UNITED STATES MERCANTILE REGISTER, FOR 1867.

We respectfully call your attention to the above-named work, which we have in preparation, and shall publish about the first of the year 1867, and annually thereafter. It will contain in

PART FIRST—The amended Tariff and Revenue Laws, Lists of Money-Order Post Offices and Telegraph Stations, Regulations of the Boards of Trade of the principal Cities of the United States, Tables of Foreign and Domestic Weights and Measures, etc., etc., in short, a large amount of valuable information selected and compiled with a view to make this part of the work a "HAND-BOOK" of ready reference, especially adapted to the wants of business men. In

PART SECOND—A complete Business Directory of Wholesale and Manufacturing Houses, Insurance and Express Companies, Banks, and Bankers, etc., etc., of the leading Commercial Cities of the Union—Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco. Each city will appear separately, and the names of the firms will be arranged alphabetically and classified according to business, the whole constituting a complete list of first-hand places of business, which no buyer can afford to be without.

The register will be sold by subscription only, will contain from 600 to 900 octavo pages, as per specimen pages within, and will be substantially bound in boards, with leather backs. Every exertion will be made to render it as complete and correct as possible.

Believing the business wants the Register is intended to supply to be general and widely felt, and inspired by the encouragement we have already received, we offer it confidently to the public at Three Dollars per copy, trusting to the just appreciation and liberal patronage of the business men of every section of this great country to sustain us in its publication at that price.

Subscribers will please fill out and remit inclosed subscription blank by return mail.

Kellogg, Johnston & Co.
116 Nassau St., New York.

For the Southern States—

Sullivan & Jordan,
3 St. Paul St., Baltimore.

A. J. JORDAN, Sup. for New Orleans,
Box 315. No. 187 Camp Street.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression, and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismund Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled,—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhan, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, cannot be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives of great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington Street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM.

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

HEADE 154 STREET,

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S
LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B T Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but flour, salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington Street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says; "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adverliser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened.
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Haggard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bile, foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA.
Gen'l Agent for United States
No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.
r10–1y

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicinal Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12–3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Bryden's Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office House, from 9 A. M. till 4 P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 128 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100.

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

ROBERT PATON,
Manufacturer of
CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.
24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores through out the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior

PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans. Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London, Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway, N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co... Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.
Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.
82-6

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,
MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.
Street Rails,
STRAP RAILS.
OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,
ROLLS,
ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY
Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS.

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS
Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,
HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

For CIRCULAR Address,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S
SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"
PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS
—OF THE—
MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the 'Convent of the Sacred Heart,' in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL
FREEDMEN'S SAVING
AND
TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
P. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary
SAM'L L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building.) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS
No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.
Interest payable in January and July, in each year.
All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.
All the profits belong to the depositors.
Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.
Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York.

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 6th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circulars. aug 11-tf

The Great Strengthening Tonic.
(Not a Whiskey Preparation.)
HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and WILL PAY $1,000 to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of
CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY
—AND—
DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or Webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitters is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum or Whisky, and cannot make Drunkards, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

* * * * * * * *

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous system. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,
W. S. SEIGFRIED,
No. 254 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMTH,
965 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,
J. H. KENNARD,
Eighth, below Coates street.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berks county, Pa., was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D, Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.
JONES & EVANS,
(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)
Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States ma10 ew

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy
Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Mattewan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
febl7 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

THE ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL FOR MARCH. Contains Cornelius Vanderbilt, Hon. Ezra Cornell, Prof. Mapes, Frederika Bremer, Lavater, Las Casas, Sir John Franklin, Capt. Cook, Revs. John Wesley and Jonathan Edwards;—Tailor and Genius;—Extraordinary prediction;—Ghosts;—Origin of Coal;—Varieties of Sheep:—Iron, its uses;—Putting on a bad face;—Tribulation Trepid, and Mr. Hopeful;—The Jew;—Love and Lovers, the Philosophy of Engagements; an Excellent Number, only 20 cents or $2,00 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway New York.

ADDISON S. DIOSSY.

ATTORNEY and COUNSELLOR

71 Nassau, corner John St.
Room No. 6. CITY OF NEW YORK.

DAVID D. TERRY,

Attorney & Counsellor

19 NASSAU STREET,

Room 12. NEW YORK.

Commissioner U. S. Court of Claims for New York New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan and Western States.

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES; plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops Prices $75, 90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

WM. H. HIRE, M. D.,

Physician Surgeon and Accoucheur,

264 Magazine St., Cor. Poydras,
NEW ORLEANS,

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CHASE & MILLER'S

Book and Job Printing Office,

65 Poydras Street, Cor. Tchoupitoulas,

Are now prepared to execute all work in the line,

SUCH AS

BILL HEADS,
BILLS OF LADING,
DRAY RECEIPTS,
LAWYER'S BRIEFS,
PAMPHLETS,
BUSINESS CARDS, Etc

All orders neatly and promptly executed, at the shortest possible notice, and on reasonable terms

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WI

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton Seed and "ax" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Linseed Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,
127 CARONDELET STREET
Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, and an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city.

☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten."

[feb31

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. Our the largest stocks of sheet Music, Music Books and Musical Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTEAU, Secretary.

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No. 3. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1867. Whole No.—53

Poetry.

The authorship of the following beautiful hymn of trust is unknown. It was found treasured up in an humble cottage in England:

In the mid silence of the voiceless night,
When chased by airy dreams the slumbers flee,
Whom, in the darkness, doth my spirit seek,
O God! but Thee.

And if there be a weight upon my breast,
Some vague impression of the day forgone,
Scarcely knowing what it is, I fly to Thee,
And lay it down.

Or if it be heaviness that comes
In token of anticipated ill,
My bosom takes no heed of what it is,
Since 'tis Thy will.

For Oh! in spite of past and present care,
Or anything besides, how joyfully,
Passes that most solitary hour,
My God with Thee!

More tranquil than the stillness of the night,
More peaceful than the stillness of that hour,
More blest than anything, my bosom lies
Beneath Thy power.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

A Sensible Letter.

The following letter will be read with great interest. It is from the pen of a Southern Union Man, and therefore, has the greater weight. It contains some wholesome truths, well put. Read it:

How long shall the war continue? There is in the breast of all men a strong desire for repentance and reformation. This is contrary to received opinion and to the teachings of most of the pulpits. It is, nevertheless true, and a sad truth it has been to the American people. This terrible war, with its destruction of life and property, was its legitimate fruit. But this desire for repentance and reformation has this peculiarity, viz: It is others whom we desire to repent and reform, and not we ourselves. The Abolitionists of the North saw the sins of the South in the holding of slaves, and having a strong desire to see the South repent and reform, agitated. The Secessionists of the South saw the sins of the North, in harboring the Abolitionists, and desiring to see Northern reformation—agitated; and by these mutual agitations in their efforts to repent and reform each other, kept up the excitement until war was the result. During four years the war went on upon bloody fields. It has ceased there, but alas! it has been transferred to other fields. In their mutual desire for the repentance and reformation of each other, the North accuses the South, and the South accuses the North. Now, shall this war continue? Shall we never have peace in this land? Peace is not so difficult of attainment as some suppose. All that is necessary is for each side to commence to repent and reform themselves. Self-repentance and self-reformation is a difficult matter. It is much easier to pull out the mote that is in our neighbor's eye, than to pull out the beam that is in our own eye. A quarrel usually consists of two parties; it is difficult for one man to quarrel alone. A fight is generally made up of two wrongs. If we want this war to stop, we must each stop fighting. It seems to me that we of the South should cease to find fault and abuse the North. Let the good work begin with us.

There has been a grand contest in the nation between slavery and secession on the one side and abolitionism and unionism on the other. For four long years we of the South fought the North with all the means and appliances of war—with 500,000 armed men; with millions of money, and with a territory half the size of Europe. But we were whipped and obliged to give up the field. And now, if we could not succeed with all these means of men, of money and of territory, will we be likely to succeed when we have no arms, no armies, little money, and no territory, save what we hold at the mercy of the victor? But, you say, we hear of no fighting; everybody "accepts the situation." No, they do not. The war is continued by the flying of red and white colors; by cursing the Yankees; by abusing the United States Government; by ostracising and persecuting Union men, and by hanging up, in conspicuous places, the portraits of men prominent in the rebellion. These men acted their part nobly and fought well; but to hang up their pictures in public places, and to be continually glorifying them, is carrying on the war.

The other day we had a Fair in this city, at which Confederate flags were displayed conspicuously; portraits of Confederate Generals were all over the walls, while no where was the picture of a Union General to be seen. The flag of the country was so draped as to show Confederate colors. These are small matters, but they represent principles. To fly a piece of red, white, blue, green or black bunting, is a small matter; but this very thing has cost the lives of millions. While the flag is flying the battle is going on; and so long as we show Confederate colors, talk Confederate talk, and act Confederate acts, the war will go on.

It is very easy to curse the Yankees, denounce the Government, steal the mules and burn the gin-houses of Northern abolitionists; to burn the churches and school-houses of the freedmen, and threaten the lives of the teachers, and to ostracise and abuse Union men because they differ from us in opinion, and upheld the Government when we tried to destroy it; but it don't pay to do these things. Such acts are known in the North; they retard our admission into the Union; prevent Northern emigration and Northern capital coming South to rebuild our waste places. Were it not for these acts and for our words and votes, our Representatives would have been admitted to Congress long ago, and the South would have been worth millions more than she is to-day. But these things show too clearly that we have not given up slavery and secession. When we had the opportunity to send men to Congress, or elect local officers, did we elect Union men? No, with very rare exceptions, we elected men whose great merit was that they had been prominent in the rebellion. We sent from this State, as United States Senator, a man who, when American nationality was in its greatest peril, registered himself an enemy to the Government. How could we expect to be admitted? We profess a desire to return to the Union, yet deny that profession by the character of the men we send to represent us. Congress refused them admission, and in so doing reasoned wisely—that Whigs will vote for Whigs—Democrats for Democrats, and traitors for traitors. "Prove your faith by your works" and you shall come in.

Mr. Editor, we have had a war, and slavery and secession are dead; nationality and freedom have triumphed, and the sooner and more heartily we accept the situation, the better for ourselves. We have but little choice in this matter. We may create opposition, and keep up a continual growling, but our endeavors, like the harmless efforts of the insect to sting, may get us crushed to death, but cannot change the inevitable result. *

THE OLD AND THE NEW PLANTING YEAR.

Cotton planters are just now in that interesting, but not always pleasant, state when the operations of the old year must be wound up, and preparations must be made for those of the new. The transition, in the best of times, was attended by more or less confusion and agitation, suspense and anxiety. In the present instance, such attendants are no doubt experienced in much more than an ordinary degree. Fortunate is the planter who can pass through the rub with a whole skin; and he who can not only do this, but can come out with a fair exhibit of net emoluments, may be accounted almost as happy as that Irish lord and fisherman of whom it was said or sung:

"So lucky was his fate
He always caught his fish and saved his bate."

The tenor of advices regarding the position of our cotton planters is such as to induce a doubt that many of them will be able to foot up their accounts and realize balances in their favor; and, indeed, it is believed by some who have had good opportunities for judging that a large majority of cotton planters in the South will be confronted by balances on the wrong side of their accounts. In a period different from the present, such a spectacle would be startling and portentous in the highest degree. But, at this peculiar juncture, while it is certainly a matter of grave concern, there are many circumstances which, when fairly weighed, would seem to mitigate its sinister significance.

To be able to explain an evil is sometimes almost equivalent to the ability to correct it. It is a great step towards a rational and discreet reinforcement of one's strength for him to know the full measure and the exact nature of his weakness. This knowledge and that explanation no intelligent cotton planter or cotton factor can fail to possess at the end of the year going out, and to turn to account in calculations and arrangements for the year coming in.

To a casual observer one of the foremost causes of the unfavorable outcome would, perhaps, appear to be the shortness of the crop, averaging, it is thought not more than the third of a full one according to former estimates. But, when it is considered that the price of one third of a crop is nearly two-thirds more than was formerly brought by a full crop, it is evident that the effect of this cause, viewed as an isolated fact, must be only slight. Much more powerful and decisive has been the influence of heavy and unprecedented expenses imposed by the high price of labor and the difficulties of procuring it, by the greatly increased cost of subsistance, of plantation stock and implements, and by a taxation which, onerous to all classes, is aggravated to cotton planters by a discriminating extortion of ten per cent. of the value of their crops.

Nothing but a high degree of energy, economy and practical skill could, against such expenses, place the planters on a firm footing at the end of the year, even were they free from indebtedness, contracted in establishing or reorganizing plantations; and this is an exemption which scarcely one in five hundred enjoys. For the most of them there was, in the opening of the year, no other option but to pledge their crops and their lands, or to abandon their plantations. And this fact is one of the chief sources of the weakness of the position in which both planters and factors stand in respect to the cotton market. Cotton buyers, all aware that planters are pressed to hurry their cotton forward by reason of the heavy advances for which it is pledged to factors, and that factors are pressed to make early sales by reason of corresponding loans which they have obtained from banks, do not hesitate to play upon the necessities of both classes by delaying their purchases in order to force a fall in prices. The way to be relieved from this disadvantage is more obvious than practicable. There is no relief, as regards planters, while they continue the system of discounting crops before they are made. From the moment when crops are thus discounted, they are virtually the property of factors, and it is for the pecuniary need or the commercial judgment of the latter to determine whether to sell at once or to retain in the hope of better prices. But there are very few planters who may not, in this and in other respects, profit in the coming year by the experience of the past. Those who, neglecting the requirements of personal economy and refusing to heed the dictates of a sound judgment, have lived extravagantly, and have contracted loans at heavy interest for the sake of maintaining large plantations and a proportionately number of laborers, cannot to soon adopt the only plan of extrication, and the only one by which they can hope to enjoy true ease and solid comfort. This is to moderate their ambition, to attempt only such a breadth of cultivation as they are sure of accomplishing with profit, and to practice, as a solemn duty to themselves, their families, their employees and dependents, and to their creditors, the most circumspect and unremitting economy.

In considering the prospect of cotton planters for the coming year, it should be remembered that much of the expenseswhich have forestalled the proceeds of their crops in the past year were of an extraordinary character, were peculiar to that year, and not necessarily to be incurred in another planting season. For example, it may be supposed that nearly all who have carried on plantations since the close of the war possess a supply of agricultural utensils and of working stock, together with the necessary fences, houses and other improvements, the cost of all which appurtenances constituted one of the largest items of the indebtednes which they have incurred.

As regards labor, planters in general must depend for a supply upon the freedmen population. In this relation, advices from the country indicate a more favorable condition than some had anticipated. Freedmen it is stated, manifest a disposition, in a great many instances, to remain on the plantations where they have been employed, and to renew their contracts for another year. It is said that they expend the balance of their year's wages almost as soon as received, for clothes, for hunting guns, for riding horses, and even buggies. Without provision for the future, without homes of their own, and attached to the places on which they are living, they naturally conclude, if they must work, to settle down and work where they are, rather than encounter the trouble and hazard, and undergo the exertion of seeking or establishing new homes. Hence planters may commence the year not only in a better position in respect to the material outfit of their plantations, but also in respect to the very important item of labor. It may be, to be sure, that the number of nominal laborers will be reduced. But a year's experience will have revealed to planters the available number of valuable and reliable laborers, and will have indicated the indolent, vicious and worthless; and thus they can undertake another crop with select hands, the results of whose labor may be safely made a matter of commercial calculation.

N. O. Crescent.

Sermon by Rev. Anthony Ross (Colored.)

PREACHED IN WESLEY CHAPEL, JAN. 5, 1867.

Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.—Matthew V: 8.

I want you for a few minutes to lend me your serious and prayerful attention, and to offer your earnest prayers to God for me. I don't promise to preach much to-day, because I am not well and my time is short. When God gets into my heart, I can preach. A good many men say they can preach; I don't say so. Don't reckon to make much apologies to you; don't expect a scientific word from me. You want the pure milk of the truth. Great many scientific preachers in these days; but I am not of them. I want God in the sermon, and the sinner alarmed.

"Blessed are the pure in heart;" I say, "blessed are the pure in heart." See God's own Son a preacher, standing on the earth, offering salvation to man. Hear the joyful news, He proclaims. "Never man spake like this man" These words fell from His lips, when journeying on these low grounds of sorrow. I say, we find Him in a small band of twelve in number. He was not a successful preacher. He only came to accomplish the work his Father gave him to do. While on his mission he was hunted by wicked-hearted men, like the wild beasts of the forest; still, for all, he was wearing out the plan whereby the human family obtained salvation. He went up into a high mountain; he pushed into the mountain. Watch him and hear him as he preaches to a great multitude, and tells them of the characters who are blessed. It concerns us to be interested, to be very happy in what he says. He came to bless mankind. Adam brought a curse on us all. Happy for us to know that while in that curse we may find durable blessings. Hence, therefore, God gave his son to die for us, as the second Adam. He said to his hearers that he did not come to destroy the law but to fulfil it. He came to teach us how to live and walk with God; taught them to pay due regard to the law, not merely an outward fashion but in the heart. Hear him, when on the mountain, that the angry man is guilty of murder, and the man that lusts is an adulterer. Not only so, he enforced to love your enemy, to pray for them that "prosecute" you.

"Blessed are the pure in heart;" hence we find him—Hence, I say, we find him in the midst of his hearers, announcing great and important doctrines—not only beneficial in those times, but for our day. He urged on them the Lord's Prayer, and we use it now—"Our Father who art in heaven." What a word is that, seasoned with so much power. It comforts us when the waters are deep, when the "prosecutions" are hot, and when the dead are around us. With that prayer you go into your closets, and shut the door, and the voice says, "I will supply your wants." "Blessed are the pure in heart." What do you mean by that? Pure in heart, not in form; no outward show, but genuine fire in the heart. It is to deal justly, walk straight, and have your speech seasoned with grace. "Blessed are the pure in heart." O what a people these are; a people who have passed from death to life. When in trouble, they go into the closet and touch the telegraph and tell Jesus all their sorrow; then Jesus wraps his arms around them. Hallelujah! (Great shouting.) "What is the matter? Why bless your soul and body, Jesus has give that saint a kiss." "Blessed are the pure in heart." O what a people these are. When the old world's on fire; thunders are rattling; lightning flashing; heaven shakes like a big fig tree, that casts its untimely figs, and hell in silence, then the pure in heart smile at a burning world. (Great sensation.) "Blessed are the pure in heart." This is the Savior's sweet admonition for his people. When sorrow-bound, when reproach burns the cheek, and the cup of gall is pressed to the lips, then he says, "I have been with you in six troubles, and will not forsake you when the seventh comes." The Christian has the key to heaven, and when the storm of death comes, he goes in, and is sheltered under his balmy wings.

In this sermon on the Mount, the Lord said: "My church is a candle set on a high hill." How meek and pretty to walk in this light. This light sets the world in its proper place. The world is now wrong, and you suffer from it; but the time is coming—it is just outside the door—when the Lord shall come. Devils may rage on every side, but we have a General who spoke to the seas and they obeyed; so he speaks to the troubled soul and all is peace. But you must be pure. Now, what we call pure, is pure; not like oil and water that won't mix. God must have all the heart. Don't be as the hypocrite, but have grace in the soul. What a Jesus, to teach us the truth. He did not tread our soil for nothing Oh! no! he did not raise the dead, cast out devils and heal the lame for a show; it was for us. We are the witnesses that Jesus has done much for man. When I was a rebel, fighting against God and nailing his Son again to the Cross, he called: "Repent! repent! repent! the axe is laid at the root of your tree; the judgment is coming." When I gave my heart to him, he snatched me from a burning hell, and said, go tell my people. Did I go? (Cries of yes.) Yes, I went and told the people that Jesus is a man of war, because he has broke my chains; and now "I am an heir of God and a jointed heir with his Son."

"Blessed are the pure in heart." It is a great thing to be pure. The Devil may set his trap for the pure, but can't catch them. See old Daniel in the lion's den; he stood on the principles of Jesus, and locked the lion's jaws. So, when we come to death; when ready to shake hands and depart; when we come down to the old Jordan, and shout to the angels on the other side: "Ho! ye angels, fetch over the smack:" then we get in and cry out—"Cut loose the boat! cut loose the boat; let her go;" and she gives way, and as we get to the other side we hear the bells of heaven; and as they ring they seem to say: "Ye everlasting doors give way and let in the pure in heart; these are they who came out of great tribulation and washed their robes and made them pure in the blood of the Lamb. (Great shouting.) "Blessed are the pure in heart." Blessed are ye when "prosecuted for my name's sake, for yours is a great reward in heaven." Our trials here make our crowns brighter there. The saint is a stranger and pilgrim here; sometimes he is weary. Ain't it so? (Yes, yes.) But the sweet comes at last, and it is sweeter than the honeycomb. Why, bless your soul and body, the Methodists shout because they have something to shout about. Their words are seasoned with grace. Some people talk all day about religion, and then fly into a passion when provoked, and jump out of the gears because the genuine fire is not in them; but the pure in heart suffer for Jesus' sake, and when smote on one cheek they turn the other. But some say, "I can't take the first lick; I'm bound to smack him again." But not so with the pure. Would you not let the sinner smite you first on the cheek? (Some sister cried "No." There was great commotion.) Ah! I got you this time; you told the truth; you said what was in your heart. And you forget that Jesus was smote for you, and he did not smite again. You are not a true saint; the true Christian will suffer all things for his Savior. Grace does all this; grace takes the sinner out of the gutter and stamps peace in the middle of his face. Oh! what a loving Jesus this is. No mother ever loved the darling of her breast so. He has gone to prepare a place for us, and he will come again; but the second will not be like the first coming. He will not come riding on the jack to Jerusalem; not to be spit upon; not to be crucified; but he is coming to raise his people on a cloud while the angels guide the cloud along. Look at the pure in heart then; see them coming and shouting as they come, when the world's on fire. But it will not be so with the ungodly man; stay, stop sinner in your mad career, or you will stand aghast then, and ask the rocks to hide you, but they will skip away from you like rams. O sinner, dont tempt God to damn your soul in this great day of his wrath. There will be a great separation of the pure and the impure on that day. The pure will hear—"come ye blessed of my father," but the impure will hear—"depart ye cursed sinners" and the ghost of hell will come from his winding sheet to lead you down. See that wife with her stary crown, standing on this glorious "flatform" saying, amen to the husband's damnation, and the husband saying, "farewell wife forever," to sink down never to rise. O sinner, hell is not fit for a stone to roll in; it was made for the devil and his angels. Soon the Lord will say, "Michael, take the trumpet, poke it through the air and blow and call the dead to judgment." Are you ready?

Now I must stop. Love one another, be a life-time saint, be born twice—once of a woman and once of the church, be a pretty saint, then the wonderful, the mighty, the counsellor, the king will come for you, and then the pure in heart will cry out:

Angels, assist our mighty joys;
Strike all your harps of gold,
But when you raise your highest notes,
His love can ne'er be told.

A Remarkable Scene.

There is a court in London called Chequer Alley, where, twenty-five years ago, not a solitary moral flower grew. It was thoroughly corrupt. God had not a worshiper among all its wretched inhabitants. Now there is a crowded preaching room, a Sunday school with over two hundred scholars, several classes of Church members, and hundreds who worship the Lord. A wonderful change, truly. How was it brought about?

Chiefly by the aid of a Christian woman, Miss Macarthy. She began the work when it was dangerous to venture within the filthy precincts of the Alley, by going into it as a distributer of tracts. Some received her kindly, but many rebuffed or insulted her. She persevered without one sign of encouragement for months. At last she began a Sunday school. Preaching was begun in a hired room. Still no one yielded to the truth.

After two years of such uncheered labor, Miss Macarthy proposed, one evening after preaching, to tell her Christian experience to the women present, if they would remain after the men left.

"You won't though," said two or three rough young fellows, rather tartly. "If you turn us out we'll take care that no body else shall hear, and we won't come to your meeting again."

"Very well," replied the great-hearted woman. "You know what we propose. Let as many of you remain as desire to do so."

The men sat down. Miss Macarthy and two of her associates told the simple story of their awakening and conversion, and exhorted their hearers to seek like precious blessings. They then joined in prayer. The place became unwontedly solemn. The Divine power rested with fearful weight upon the people. Presently a convulsive breathing was heard; then a single sob burst forth; next came an interjectory prayer; cries of distress followed. Twenty debauched, intemperate, violent sinners were powerfully convicted, and uttering that old Gospel cry of distress, "What must I do to be saved?" Christ was then lifted up to their gaze by the benevolent lady and her companions, and the glorious work of human regeneration by the Holy Ghost went on with power. Twenty reprobates became living epistles known and read of all men. Pentecost had come to Chequer Alley.

Thus, by a remarkable display of his grace, did God honor the toil of his servants, demonstrate the vitality of his truth, and encourage his disciples who labor in the dark cornors of the earth to continue their labors of love. Nor did the signs of his working cease with that wonderful night. From then till now new trophies have been won for Jesus from among the outcasts of Chequer Alley.

O, for such persistent zeal as that which fired the heart of the heroic maiden of Chequer Alley to fire the souls of all the followers of Jesus! Give us such zeal, and Chequer Alleys and all other barren spots will soon be subdued and cultivated. This great round world will become the garden of God. Reader, may God baptize you with such zeal!

☞The Crocket Sentinel says:

Undismayed by the very short crop of the present year, the people of this section are making their arrangements for a vigorous effort again next year. They are contracting with the freedmen at fair wages, generally, however, the latter refuse to contract for less than half the crop. This, of course, is not acceded to by the planter. The near approach to Christmas, will soon leave the freedmen without homes and convince them of the necessity of accepting the reasonable terms offered by our farmers. Since the demise of the Bureau for this county, the negroes have worked and behaved very well, and we are glad to say that Christmas will find the great majority of them well supplied with good clothing and blankets, and money besides to make the days pass merrily.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Orders left at 65 Poydras Street, or at our office, No. 7 Prytania Street, will receive full attention.

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simeus, 85 Baronne street.

TO OUR PATRONS.

☞ The second year of the "New Orleans Advocate" begins January 1867. Most heartily thanking our patrons for their support during the first and trying year of its publication, we now confidently solicit the continuance of their Subscriptions and Advertisements for the year to come. Words cannot express our gratitude to you. You responded to our call in the hour of need.

The Advocate has steadily increased in public favor, and our income has equalled our out-lay. It is read in no less than

FIFTEEN HUNDRED FAMILIES.

It circulates in every State in the Union. It is a light in the

HOMES OF THE FREEDMEN.

They read it with delight. It advocates their rights; it contributes to their elevation.

As in the Past, so in the Future, the Advocate is to be devoted to "Religion, Patriotism and Learning."

Each number will contain a Sermon by one of our Colored Preachers. Each issue will reflect

LIFE IN THE SOUTH.

Several gentlemen of ability, residing in different States, have consented to write "Letters" for our paper.

As the Advocate circulates both in the larger towns and in the interior of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, we hope our Advertising Patrons will continue their favors.

Dear Friends, we appeal to you to sustain this

CHRISTIAN, LOYAL JOURNAL IN THE SOUTH.

Our present Subscribers will please remit the amount of their subscription for the coming year, without delay.

To any person who will send us $16 we will mail him FIVE COPIES of the Advocate.

Send your remittances in Post Office Orders, and address the Editor by name.

PUBLISHER ADVOCATE.

Premiums! Premiums!

As an inducement to our Preachers to obtain subscribers for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867, we offer them the following premiums:

1. To any Preacher who shall obtain for us Forty New Subscribers for the year 1867, and send us the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the Bible, consisting of six large volumes.

2. For Thirty Subscribers and the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the New Testament, in two large volumes.

3. For twenty Subscribers and the money, we will give Watson's Theological Institutes, in two volumes.

4. For Ten Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Sermons, in two volumes.

5. For Five Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Notes on the New Testament.

Brethren will observe that these Subscribers are to be for the Whole Year. The money may be paid to the Presiding Elder of your District, quarterly, in advance; but, where it can be done, pay the $4, in advance.

Now, Brethren, for a Grand Rally! Go to work. The prize is before you. Who will be the first to obtain the Premiums?

Renew!

Have you renewed your subscription for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867? Send or call at our office, No. 7 Prytania street, and renew your subscription for 1867. Office hours from 12 M. to 3 P. M.

Bishop Simpson and son, sailed from this port on Saturday, January 12th, in the revenue cutter Hugh McCollouch for Havana, Cuba. Bishop Simpson will remain there until he can determine the effect of the climate on the health of his son; if unfavorable he will proceed with him North; but if favorable, he may remain several weeks longer. May heaven's blessings attend them.

Distinguished Arrivals.—Rev. Dr Robinson Scott and lady; Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, and Mrs. Rich, reached New Orleans January 18th. Dr. Scott is in this country representing the educational interests of Ireland.

We hope our citizens will be permitted to hear this eminent divine, preach during his sojourn with us.

Preaching in the large hall of the Mechanics' Institute, Sabbath morning at 11 o'clock.

REV. JOHN C. KEENER, D. D.

Ignorance is pitiable, errors are pardonable, but deliberate misrepresentation is false, mean, censurable. No man is in a more advantageous position to know whereof he affirms than Rev John C. Keener, yet, in a recent editorial of two columns in length, he has mis-stated facts and figures which are matters of public record. Passing in silent contempt the abusive personalities in which his soured spirit leads him to indulge, we shall give our attention to those more important facts which he denies.

I. It is not true, that "in this city they (we) hold on to three churches which are set down in the statistics of this Mission Conference at the value of $55,500." These churches were built years ago, by their present occupants, and by them paid for out of their hard earnings, while they were yet slaves; the societies worshiping therein have been regularly incorporated, and have elected trustees (of their own color) to hold in trust their property, according to the provisions of their charter; and said trustees are recognized by civil and military authority as the legal representatives of said property.

When the Methodist Churches of New Orleans were abandoned by their pastors, (who fled within the Confederate lines when the city was captured by the Federal forces,) they were seized by the Government, and when the Government restored the white churches, it reserved the colored churches to their present occupants, as will appear from the following order, approved by President Johnson:

Headquarters, Department of Louisiana, New Orleans, La., Feb. 7, 1866.

Special Orders, No. 32.

[extract]

* * * * * * * *

3. The members of the colored congregations in this Department are authorized to exercise complete and absolute control over the church property in their possession, and reserved for their use by Paragraph 7, of Special Orders, No. 119, from these Headquarters, November 18, 1865; and upon the election of trustees the management and control of all such property that may heretofore have been held, or is now held, by trustees appointed or elected by or in pursuance of any law of the State of Louisiana which forbids slaves to hold property, shall be turned over to such trustees; and the trustees now in possession shall transfer and vest in the trustees elected under the authority of the order above cited, or of this order, all the rights interests and privileges, direct or indirect, connected with the control and management of this property. It being the intent of this order, and of the order of November 18th, that the aforesaid colored congregations may remain independent of denominational control, and be free to attach themselves to any Christian denomination according to their judgment and discretion.

Anything in the laws of the State of Louisiana prohibiting the incorporation of societies of colored persons for scientific or religious purposes, is declared inoperative and void.

* * * * * * * *

By order of Major General E. R. S. Canby:
Wickham Hoffman,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Official:
Nathaniel Burbank,
1st Lieut., Acting Ass't Adj't Gen'l.

And the above order was issued not only in equity, and with the approval of the Executive, but in accordance with a letter addressed to Major General Canby by R. L. Robertson, Secretary of the Board of Trustees which had held the churches in trust, when the laws of Louisiana did not permit slaves to hold property. We quote from that letter the following emphatic language: "We would further state, that we have held these three colored churches merely for the use and benefit of the colored people, and if they, as churches, desire to connect themselves with any other organization, they will be free to do so, and we believe no objection would be made to their occupancy and possession of the churches." This is simple, straightforward language, which was fully comprehended by Major General Canby, and on it he based his report to the President, which was approved; and it is not the least significant fact, that in the arrangement with us and General Canby for the re-possession of his churches, Rev. John C. Keener did concede to the colored people the right to hold their churches. And they do hold them; they intend to hold them; and there is no just power in the land that will dispossess them. For a twelve-month they have respectfully requested of the old Board of Trustees (white) the formal transfer of their property, and these gentlemen would have consented a year ago had it not been for the interference of this man, Dr. John C. Keener. But his opposition is to us rather than to them. He has offered to secure the transfer, if they would establish an independent church—if they would unite with the African M. E. Church—if they would only leave the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has sought to excite their vanity by suggesting to their pastors that they could become Bishops; he has, with malice afore-thought, sought out some disaffected member—some old man or woman, to use as his instrument to divide the Church of God, that he might gratify his revenge on our Church, which nourished him when a youth. But his sinister efforts have failed; the colored people are firmly united, and they will never again place themselves under the power of a man who wrung from them their hard earnings, and who, minister though he is, maintained a cowardly silence while they endured all the barbarities of slavery.

Finding that he could neither work upon their vanity, nor create divisions among them, Mr. Keener is now laboring to have them unite with the African M. E. Church. This is the Church of his admiration; he flatters its ministers and lends his columns to exhibit its statistics; he makes a show of its wealth and parades its success. But be not deceived; for the duplicity of this man is only excelled by his vindictiveness and his love of churchly power. He has never been your friend, nor would he now wear the semblance of friendliness for you, were we not here. He will aid you to interrupt us, and, like Herod, he will strike hands with Pilate, that Christ may be crucified. We can but deplore the very great error which the African Methodist Church has committed in sueing for the patronage of such men. Were it not for this mistake, the success of that Church would be an hundred-fold greater in the South. But the freed people will not in any considerable numbers countenance a Church which is the ally of their ancient enemies. They have grown wise by bitter experience; they know their friends and prefer their communion.

II. It is not true, that "we have forced the negroes to our communion, and that since their membership with us, their numbers have not been increased." In the autumn of '64, a delegation composed of ministers and official members, waited upon us at our residence, and inquired the conditions of admission to our Church. They came uninvited by us; they came of their own "free will and choice." And being satisfied with the conditions stated, they invited us to their Churches severally, to receive them formally into our communion. In no instance, either in Louisiana or Texas, or in any other Southern State, have we entered a colored church uninvited. We have always demanded that they should first determine officially to return to the old Church, before we would appear in their midst. And under our fostering care, their numbers have steadily increased. In positive terms, Dr. Keener asserts that "their numbers are not increased." He will not question the correctness of the statistical tables as published in the minutes of the Louisiana Conference for 1860 and 1861. In the minutes of 1860 we find, on page 21, the membership (inclusive of probationers) of Wesley, Soule and Winan's Chapels to be 1,528, and for the year 1861, (see page 16,) to be 1,538; whereas the pastors of these chapels reported at the late session of our Conference, a total membership, including probationers, of 2,724—an increase since 1861 of 1,186. When we came to this city, in the spring of 1864, the estimated membership of these chapels was 1,500, but now, 2,724. "What hath God wrought?"

III. The insinuation that our preachers are in the South for mercenary purposes, comes with bad grace from such a man as Rev. John C. Keener. There is not a member of the M. M. Conference who has received a dollar from a colored Church for pastoral services. Amply supported by the generous Church that has sent them forth, they are not dependent on the congregations or districts they serve. But sacrificing somewhat by way of salary for their love of souls, they are doing for the blacks what others would not do. The freedmen are the recipients and not the donors. During the past year, not less than $41,000 were expended for colored churches in Louisiana and Mississippi; and over $6,000 were appropriated for the salaries of colored preachers; while $2,500 were expended for the education of colored young men for the Christian ministry. Can the Church South show such a record for any given year? Can Dr. Keener? Rather, is it not a notorious fact, that in large sections of the South, the slaves gave the best support to their white spiritual overseers? For the year 1860, did not John C. Keener receive $2,000 for salary as presiding elder of the New Orleans District? and in addition, did he not demand and receive $10 per week from the poor slaves of Wesley, Soule and Winans Chapels for preaching one sermon per month? (See Conference Minutes for 1860, and the Stewards' books of the above chapels.) This $10 per week for one sermon per month was demanded every Friday night, and when the Doctor was absent on his district, collecting the quarterly instalments of the $2,000, these honest slaves sent the $10 to his wife. Never were a people so thoroughly fleeced by priests as these poor Methodist slaves; and it is not the least sad feature of this Southern pastorate, that while there was a nominal white pastor, the colored local preachers were required to do most of the preaching, and that without compensation.

It is no marvel, therefore, that they remember their former oppression, and turn away from their old oppressors with bitterness of soul. Nor is it strange that they come in thousands and cling with delight to their new pastors, who have come to lift them up without pay; and who, as agents of their own honored church, build for the freed people houses of worship; pay their pastors; establish parochial schools; publish religious papers, and educate their youth for the Christian ministry, without the old and constant demand for money! money! money!

China.—We have increasing confidence in our China mission. There is a prosperous and growing future in store for it, provided it is re-enforced from time to time, as the work shall require. Rev Dr. Maclay, in a letter just received at the Mission Rooms, Nov. 28, and dated at Foochow, Sept. 22, says: 'By next mail I hope to forward to you our Annual Report. Meanwhile I may say in advance, that the year now closing is the most successful one we have ever had in this mission, as the forthcoming statistics will show." The General Missionary Committee, at its last session, authorized the board to send out two more mission families, or three single men, to re-enforce this mission. The bishops having charge (Bishops Baker and Thomson) are desirous of finding the men; young men of good education, good health, and unreservedly consecrated to the work for life. Who will respond to the Bishops, or to the corresponding secretary at New York, through their presiding elders and pastors severally? This will open the correspondence, and we trust God will direct to the right conclusions.

Corpus Christi.—The Advertiser of the 22th says Mr. J. C. Howell committed suicide at the Ziegler House, in that place, on the previous Thursday morning, by shooting himself in the head with a pistol. The deceased resided at or near Ingleside, across the bay, and leaves a family.

A Year of Growth.

One year ago last month, amid anxious consultations and fervent prayers, the Mississippi Mission Conference of the M. E. Church, was organized by Bishop Thomson, embracing within its boundaries the three great States of Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. In our own church some hailed the measure with joy, others looked on doubtingly, while a few seemed disposed to sharp criticism, if not direct opposition. At the organization, we had 2,216 members, 476 probationers, 9 Sunday-schools, 95 officers and teachers, and five churches, with a probable value of $47,000. A year of anxiety, labor and danger has passed, and we now have 6,568 members, 1,331 probationers, 29 Sunday-schools, 143 officers and teachers, 2,628 scholars, and 23 churches, worth $119,275. There were also reported 769 conversions and $26,222 65 raised for church purposes. If we include in this general estimate the State of Texas, which is this year set off as a separate Conference, we have 7,561 members, 1,822 probationers, 40 Sunday-schools, 3,123 scholars, and 28 churches, estimated at $121,125, showing a gain of 5,445 members, 1,346 probationers, 31 Sunday-schools, 1,737 scholars, and 23 churches, with an increase in value of church property of $77,125.

These gratifying statistics are worthy the careful study of the whole church, and present, in the most cogent manner, the value of our work and the wisdom of its organization. In the light of this wonderful success, all doubts must give way and indifference hereafter be unexcusable. Nor can this success be explained away by representing that it has been simply a transfer of members and property from other denominations to our own. We admit that some have left other churches and come to us, and this transfer of members is not in itself special cause for gratulation, only as it furnishes to them a communion more in harmony with their desires and with superior opportunities for a higher religious life. But many embraced in this large acquisition have not been thus obtained. They come as the immediate trophies of converting grace, and are the fruits of precious and powerful revivals of religion, enjoyed in various places. The accession of near two thousand probationers, the more than three thousand children gathered in the Sunday-schools, and the large increase in the number of churches, and in the value of church property, is so much clear gain for the church of Christ.

Well may we rejoice over such glorious results. Could our Missions in Foreign fields, such as India, China, Liberia, or South America, show one-fourth such returns for the outlay upon them, it would electrify the church, and the whole land would ring with joyous thanksgivings for this remarkable success. But why is not this a Mission field as fully as any Foreign land? and why should we not rejoice in the conversion of these sons and daughters of oppression, equally with those on a Foreign shore?

But there are circumstances which render our success particularly grateful. In our Foreign work we are content with small returns for a large outlay; for success, though small, serves as the base for other and greater efforts. So our work is not to be estimated by its actual growth, but by the greater results to which these preparatory labors lead. Gradually, but surely, our church is working to a position of power in the South, and these beginnings are opening the way to an enlarged evangelism, promising the greatest good to this portion of our land. A great and effectual door is opening among the freedmen; the conversion and moral elevation of whom is of itself a work of the utmost importance. Our efforts are also opening the way to the teeming millions of the white population. The great necessity of the times is for a homogeneous Christianity that shall bind together the various portions of our country. We are to be one people, with a common industry, enterprise, education and prosperity, and we need a common Christianity, which by its transcendant power, liberality and benevolent efforts, shall elevate our people to the highest type of Christian character.

Nor must we forget the bearing our success must have upon the cause of Protestantism on this continent. Rome is marshalling all her strength for a mighty effort. Already we feel the effect of her secret counsels in establishing schools and sending out her missionaries. The great struggle is inevitable, and every Protestant church owes it as a duty to the common cause, to awake to a quickened activity of religious effort, and prosecute the one great work of saving souls. The future religious condition of this continent is staked upon the fidelity of our Protestant churches. Let us devote ourselves with renewed zeal to the great work of building up the kingdom of Christ upon the earth, and let our only rivalry be, who shall be most successful in this blessed work.

Robbers Caught.—On the 5th of October last, Maj. Geo. E. Glenn, a paymaster in the U. S. Army in Oregon was robbed of his Treasury chest, containing about $100,000. We learn from his brother, Maj. J. W. Glenn, of our city, that the robbers have been caught and the money recovered, they not having had time to open the chest, until they were overhauled.

From Mississippi District—Prosperity in Aberdeen—A Great Revival.

From Columbus we proceeded to Aberdeen. It had rained all night and continued through the day. Reached Prairie Station five hours behind time, to find the hack gone and the stream so high it could not return. We proceeded to Egypt, but fared no better. Cedar Creek was impassable and still rising. We spent the day and night in Egypt. Next day no hack came, but we succeeded in hiring a farmer with his mules and wagon, to take us through to Aberdeen (twelve miles,) yet he did not get into Egypt until after dark, but the roads were bad and we could not travel in the dark, and so had to spend another night. Next morning we started. To avoid a portion of the Cedar Creek road which was still impassable, we had to make the first few miles of our route through corn and cotton fields which were so saturated with rain that mules and wagon sank deep into the soft, grassy, clayie soil. We could proceed but a few rods till the wheels would clog and become one solid revolving mass of mud, and the team would stall. Then we would all hands turn to and clear the wheels of grass and clay, and then roll on a few rods further and stall, and clean again. In two hours we had made just one mile and a half. At last we reached the main road, and at 2:30 o'clock P. M. reached Aberdeen, having been just six hours in making twelve miles. We had then lost three days of precious time, and the Sabbath we were to have spent in Yazoo City we were now compelled to pass in Aberdeen.

We found the people in their new house—the church worshipping in the basement, and the teachers and schools occupying the upper rooms. A great revival had followed our last visit. The meetings were kept up for eight weeks, and scores were converted. There were strange manifestations of divine power, such as the oldest people had never seen. In some instances persons were stricken down and would lie unconscious for two days and nights, others for a shorter time, and would then arise and go forth "walking and leaping and praising God." Citizens became interested in these peculiar cases, physicians called to examine them, and knew not what to make of them; but God was his own interpreter, and made it very plain to those who were so strangely "afflicted." He had redeemed them from destruction, he renewed them in Christ Jesus unto good works, and crowned them with loving kindness, and they gave him the glory.

The gracious work was not confined to time and place, but went on everywhere, night and day; people were converted not only at the altar and in the great congregations, but in prayer and class meetings, in day school and Sabbath school, in their families, at work and by the way-side. We were told of one case, in which a young man employed as dining-room servant at a hotel, was converted while waiting upon the table, and could not refrain from praising God aloud, then and there! But the event cost him his situation—he was turned away as one demented, or, as his employer expressed it, "possessed of a Yankee devil." He found employment elsewhere, and is living a blameless Christian life.

Saturday was our Quarterly Conference. Its minutes show 4 preaching-places, 6 local preachers (two of whom are recommended for admission into the traveling connection, and for deacon's orders), 14 exhorters, 12 class leaders, 50 conversions (this simply embraces the number who were converted and joined us, not those converted in the the church, or a large number who were converted and joined the Baptist Church), 175 Sunday-school scholars and 415 members—an increase of 40 conversions and 209 members since the last report.

Sunday morning we visited the Sunday School, and were pleased to see that dozens of Phillip Phillips' "Musical Leaves," and "Hallowed Songs" were distributed among the children, and with the manner and spirit in which they sang. These books have been introduced by Bro. Condol, Superintendent of the week-day and Sunday schools—he understands and teaches vocal music. Bro. C. is a colored man educated at Oberlin. (Hope Bro. Gilbert Haven will not get "excited," and write another three-columned article on cast when he sees that dreadful word, "colored," in this connection!) As we listened to those "Hallowed Songs" and looked upon the intelligent, happy countenances of the "little ones" thus sending up their morning sacrifice of praise to God, we could but think of their condition five years ago, and contrast then and now.

At 10:30 o'clock we dedicated their new place of worship, and baptized seven children and seventeen adults. At our Quarterly Conference, on Saturday, arrangements had been made to meet all claims against the trustees for the property, and it was dedicated free of debt. The property cost $2,500, but it could not now be bought for three times that sum. They have made improvements to the amount of a few hundred dollars, paying for it in their own money to the last dollar.

Snow in New Orleans.—Mobile has good cause to complain that she has been slighted. New Orleans has had a pretty little sprinkle of snow, while Mobile, so far as we know, hasn't been favored with a solitary flake.

At the 3. P. M. service we administered the sacraments, and hundreds kneeled together at the Lord's table,and 34 more adults were baptized—making 58 in all baptized, 17 of whom were immersed in the Tombigbee. A vast concourse of people, white and colored, (there it is again! Bro. Havens, you must excuse us,) were at the river to witness the immersion. Among the whites was Rev. Mr. Parker, of the M. E. Church South, (of whom we bought the church property, and who was the former pastor of the colored congregation in Aberdeen,) who pronounced the benediction at the close of the service. At night we preached again, and thus closed our fourth and last quarterly meeting for Aberdeen. The trustees named their new church "Union Chapel." We had no ordained minister to assist us, and the labors of the day were onerous; but labor was rest, for God was with us, and the day was bright and fair.

Monday morning early, we took our departure in a genuine December storm, our conveyance being an old worn-out hack, with curtains flapping in the wind, and so torn they could not be fastened. The very elements seemed to have conspired against us in our journeyings to and from Aberdeen. It was cold, wind high, rain pouring and soon our vehicle was leaking at the top, and rain driving in at the sides and front.—The curtains were now blown inside the hack, now wiping or catching the mud from the wheels and now shedding both water and mud upon us till we were both sprinkled and poured most copiously. So we rode the nine miles and reached Prairie Station in much the same plight in which we had come out of the Tombigbee the night before, only we were more muddy and worse chilled at the end of our ride than when we left the river, and without the advantage of a change of raiment, comfortable quarters, or even a cup of coffee while we waited for the cars.

We complained heavily of the proprietor of the hack-line for compelling us to ride on such a morning in such a conveyance; whereupon our Jehu, a pious freedman, (an ebony specimen of the Baptist persuasion) reminded us that "no doubt de ebber blessed Master had rode in de same way, many a time, and in worse storms dan dis, and wid no whar to put his head when he got troo"—that we "mus' not expec' to far' better than he—but mus' take up de cross and follow de Lamb whidder-somebber he go—'troo thick and thin, rain or shine, and widout mutterin', too." We received the mild reproof in all meekness, and went drippingly, shiveringly, thoughtfully on our way, rejoicing—not much!

At the depot learned that travel on the Southern Railroad was interrupted by the late rains, and that my only route to Jackson was via Corinth and Grand Junction, and so took that route, but missed connection at Grand Junction, and here we are, writing this and wearing through, and trying to be patient over the loss of another twenty-four hours. Already we have lost four days and nights on this trip, are now within nine days of Conference, having yet three quarterly meetings to hold, and nearly five hundred miles to travel. We fear we shall miss connection, on time, at the Crescent City.

The night we arrived in Egypt, there came to the hotel a young man (R. M. Johnson, of New York,) employed by a firm in Chicago to sell lithographs of Bible views and scenes, and the leading generals, North and South, of the late war. That morning, at Buena Vista, a violent rebel, viewing his collection, saw the picture of Gen. Grant and became enraged, had the young man arrested, his pictures "confiscated" and sent him to Okolona, (compelling him to walk all the way through the rain and mud) to be tried for treason against the South, or some other imaginary crime. While at Okolona the young man effected his escape and "fled into Egypt," having to swim two creeks in his way. He had walked twenty-six miles, was the sorriest looking traveler I ever saw, but considered himself fortunate in having escaped with his life.

The next morning there was reported to us the assassination by some one unknown, of a freedman three miles from Egypt, on the plantation of a Mr. McClellan. The freedman had been the former slave of McC., and was then in his employ as wood-chopper. He had finished his day's work, and was just starting home when some unknown person shot him. He reached the house, but died soon after.

So, almost incessantly fall the victims of hatred and revenge, but the tree of liberty watered with their blood will bear abundant fruit. But how long must these things continue?

B.

During the visit of Congressmen to New Orleans, three men sought an introduction to Ben. Wade, and stated to him that they were rebels, had been from the first, and intended to remain so. Senator Wade replied:

"Well, gentlemen, I am happy to meet you, as you are the first rebels I have seen since the war closed, the balance of the Southern people, claiming to be Union men. Now, tell me, if you please, how did you three men manage to carry through such a dreadful war against the Government, and keep it up for four long years by yourselves?"

Mississippi River Correspondence.

The 65th United States Colored Infantry was mustered out of service on the 8th of Jan., 1867, at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and is now en route for St. Louis, where it was organized in 1863 and 1864, for discharge and final payment. The Regiment has rendered the country good service and maintained a good reputation for efficiency and discipline. Not many organizations have shown the ability of the colored man to become a good soldier to better advantage than this has done.

With it closes our military service, which has been continuous since Aug. 1862, when, from the lakes and prairies, the men of the Northwest responded to the great call with marching tread, "We are coming Father Abraham, six hundred thousand more."

With mingled feelings of joy and sadness, we broke camp for the last time and took down our tents to never pitch them again. Camp had become a sort of home to us, and many pleasant memories are connected with it.

With deep gratitude would I acknowledge the goodness of God, who has protected me through so many dangers, and with kindest feelings bid adieu to comrades who have been true and faithful during our long service together. There are others, alas! how many? whom memory sadly recalls, who have shared our labors at some time, but who will not return with us. The funeral role of the drum was their last tattoo—their reveille will be the trumpet of the resurrection morning. Willingly they gave their service when it was sorely needed, and surrendered life and all its hopes without complaining. Green be their graves under sunny skies, and long may their memories live and peaceful be their rest in that land where wars are unknown.

We are now pleasantly steaming up the Great River. Its shores are monotonous, and ruin and desolation have placed their imprint on nearly every plantation. This will not always be. The rich bottom lands of Arkansas and Mississippi are an inexhaustible source of wealth, and when we have people enough, and they are leveed and cleared and drained, the luxuriant corn and snowy cotton will supplant the swamps and cane-breaks of to-day, and a commerce of which we have hardly dreamed, will float on the bosom of the Father of Waters, as he goes "unvexed to the sea."

The necessity of going to St. Louis for my discharge from the military service, will delay me somewhat in reaching the Mississippi District. This I regret, but could not avoid it. I must exhort the people and preachers up there to have patience, and Providence permitting, I will see them soon.

W. N. DARNELL.

Steamer Julia, Miss. River, Jan. 12, 1867.

Annual Meeting of the Orphan's Home Society.

This meeting was held at Wesley Chapel, Jan. 14th, 1867, at 7 o'clock P. M., Judge Howell, the President of the Society, being in the chair. It was opened with prayer by Rev. Anthony Ross. The President then stated that the principal object of the meeting was to elect officers of the Society for the ensuing year, and urged upon the members the importance of electing such persons as would act with wisdom and efficiency. He stated that there was a necessity for special activity at this time in the matter of raising funds—that a benevolent gentleman from France had deposited ten thousand dollars, to be employed in the purchase of land, and the erection of buildings for the use of this Society, provided twenty thousand dollars should within a short time be contributed for the purpose by other persons, but only half of the twenty thousand dollars had been obtained, and it would be necessary to raise the remaining ten thousand at an early period in order to secure the proffered gift of our French friend. After listening to further remarks on this subject, the Society proceeded to a consideration of the Amendment of the Constitution, and it was

Resolved, That Article 1st should be amended so as to read: "This Society shall be called 'The Orphans' Home Society.'"

That Article 9th be amended by adding the following words: "The Managers shall have power to provide for the indenturing of the orphans of the Society."

That Article 10th be amended so as correspond with the fourth Article of the Charter, by substituting the following words for the 1st Section of the present Article: "The annual meeting of this Society shall be held on the second Monday of January, at which meeting the officers of the Society for the ensuing year shall be elected."

That Article 11th shall be amended by the insertion of the words, "on recommendation of the Board of Managers," so that the whole article shall be expressed thus: "This Constitution may be amended on recommendation of the Board of Managers, and by a two-thirds majority vote of all the members present at any annual meeting."

The Society then proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the following persons were unanimously elected:

President.....Rev. J. P. Newman, D. D
1st Vice President.....R. K. Howell.
2d " .....Rev. A. Ross.
Treasurer .....W. B. Armstrong.
Cor. Secretary.....Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rec. Secretary.....Mrs. J. S. Walton.

MANAGERS.

Dr E. H. Harris, Mrs. L. M. Richardson,
J. S. Walton, Mrs. H. N. Poffe.
Joseph Johnson, Mrs. Louise De Mortie,
Mrs. J. P. Newman, Mrs. Henry Green,
Mrs. W. B. Armstrong.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Rev. J. P. Newman, D.D., Rev. N. L. Brakeman,
R. K. Howell, W. B. Armstrong,
Mrs. Louise De Mortie.

The Treasurer's report was read by Capt. Armstrong, and on motion, was accepted by the Society.

Dr. Newman made some interesting statements concerning the plans of the Society with respect to the instruction of the orphans, in various mechanical arts, and in Agriculture, and spoke of the peculiar claims of the Orphans' Home upon the interest and exertions of the colored people.

Before adjournment it was suggested that any person present who wished to contribute to this object should have an opportunity for doing so, and sixty-five dollars were then contributed.

MRS. J. S. WALTON, Sec.

Ladies' Department.

The Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER I.

As you are the youngest, dear Minnie, and have always been the pet, if not the idol, of the household, I commit to your loving heart the memories that have been hidden for many a year in my life's day-book. A twilight hour like this seems strangely invested with magical power to turn the pages of this mysterious volume, where I find so many pressed leaves and flowers, retaining all their freshness and fragrance; and watered by a gentle shower of tears, they take root and spring up in my heart and there bud and blossom again. Had I power to make them as fresh, green and fragrant in your memory as in my own, then the dear old Family Tree would once more be rich with the verdure of youth, and beneath the foliage of its out-spreading branches we might lovingly repose as of yore.

The twilight deepens as the full-orbed moon rolls upward in her silvery pathway, but somehow old time seems to roll backward in its flight to "make me a child again, just for to-night." The work of the day is done; the evening meal is finished; the crumbs are brushed aside from the neatly scoured floor, and the broom is placed in its accustomed corner. Hark! it is the music of the soul—calling around the hearth-stone a happy group, for evening prayer; at the ringing of the bell, brothers and sisters, old and young, hasten to take their accustomed places. See! our father and mother are seated in the dear old arm chairs; the full blaze of the fire-light falls upon their faces, redolent of sanctity and heaven; between them is the little round stand, and on it the precious family Bible; a polished brass candlestick holds a lighted taper, which illumines the hallowed page. I am not dreaming, dear Minnie, early days are around me; the past comes back again, and Pa is reading: "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most high shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty; I will say of the Lord, he is my refuge, my fortress, my God; in him will I trust. * * * * With long life will I satisfy him and show him my salvation." "Thus readeth the ninety-first psalm," and he closed the Bible. All unite in the vesper hymn, and I imagine the angels join in the chorus, for the last vibrations seem far off in the ether. We kneel to pray—I feel the silence—I cannot repeat—it is our father's voice in prayer—it is simple faith. I see the smoke ascend from the altar, I breathe the perfume from the censer, I catch the sweet accents of Ma's own voice in response; and now all lisp, "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, * * * * the power and the glory, forever and ever, amen." All that is written on the first pages of this day-book is beautifully embellished with memory's green leaves and flowers.

I turn, for a moment, to the moonlight, that falls gently upon me, and exclaim, "surely it is the shining of His face * * * from His most holy place." This world of ours so, beautiful in its early handwriting of my existence, is beautiful even now, if "Life is real! Life is earnest!"

A magic hand leads me from the moonlight of this beautiful evening, to repose again beneath the lovely shade of the dear old Family Tree. Can it be thine, dear Minnie? for yesterday scarcely seems nearer in the past than when I, who am four times nine, plus one, then not four years old, was standing beside a little cradle-bed, looking at you, Minnie, who had just opened your blue eyes to the light of this world. I thought—and really little children not four years old do have thoughts—what a strange mystery that from away off in the woods the good doctor should find me another baby sister. I had been a little lady for at least nearly two years, as the family called me, to inspire, or rather prevent, my acting out baby. Cora had just begun to walk, and was she not a baby yet, and allowed to cry, while I, the little lady, dare not pout the lip for fear of losing my yonthful ladyship? Old Aunt Jenny, a good neighbor, who had come in on this occasion to talk a little of all that must be done, informed me that sister Cora's nose was now broken; so I turned away from the cradle a moment to examine the break, but found it belonged to the mysteries of the fairy woodlands where only good doctors wander in the night time to find wee treasures, such as baby in the cradle. I remember just how piteously my little heart palpitated as I wished what I dare not say, that I could have been with the doctor in the woods to have chosen from out of that little nest up in the tree a brother baby. I wondered, too, if my four big brothers were ever babies, they were now so tall, and so much older than all of us five little girls—yes, there were five of us, and baby Minnie was the fifth.

That was an unique little old brown cradle you nestled in when I first looked at your bright little eyes. The itinerancy in those days made fearful destruction of household furniture, moving every two years and a new baby coming once in two years. No marvel that the tables and chairs became time-worn and wagon-worn, and the dear little cradle left behind, for the arms of the angel mother became the cradle for baby during the long journey in a wagon. Nevertheless, if the cradle perchance was left behind at times, the precious children never were, no matter how many the good itinerant was blessed with. Who ever dreams, now-a-days, of any family needing a cradle twelve times? But you sweet sister mine, was the twelfth, fair and square, and the cradle having been left behind, broken or lost on the last wagon journey, they borrowed this little brown, funny-looking one when you came to us, which, however, was soon replaced for a more regal one, and if I were to step for a moment from under the old Family Tree, I might discover one of your own wee treasures nestling in the same cradle, retained by you, the rightful owner, as an heir-loom, you being the Minnie it not the Benjamin of the tribe of twelve.

On still another page of this marvelous book I find sunny memories of my baby sister, in white robes, nestling, not in the cradle, but in the arms of, to me, the most beautiful being I ever saw—lovelier far than angel's dreams—for she was real, and the beauty of her fair face shone on our hearts like sunshine; her voice the sweetest in the world, no warbling bird, not even church music excelled it, and no matter how troubled the little sea of our existence became, to look at her calm sweet face made us feel at rest. Her hair had whitened a little on her fair brow, composing a coronet more beautiful than the pearls and diamonds that adorn the brow of earth's queens. Methinks her heart throbs while her mild blue eye melts in all the tenderness of love as a tear pearl glistens in it; looking down on the frail helpless form in her arms, she murmurs, "This, the child of my old age, and who will hush thy weeping when I leave thee without a mother's care?" not dreaming that the silken cord of her own existence would entwine around the womanhood of you, little Minnie. Heaven pardon my childish sin, for I did many a time envy baby that soft bosom, when sister Cora and I were put in that well-remembered little trundlebed, which was rolled under the large bed during the day to give more room for work and play; then mama would come every night, with you in her arms, to tuck the clothes in snugly and kiss us good night; when she left, I have cried until sleep with gentle fingers closed my eyelids, because I could not lie in her arms. I have often wondered if all children loved their mothers as we loved ours; or was our mother the sweetest, purest and best of earth. Yea, methinks, the heart of every devoted child exclaims, my mother!

Night is letting fall her dark curtain over the dear Family Tree, Minnie, and we must utter the fond "good night" to the loving group and retire; but darkness cannot break the spell that holds me, and when daylight shall again loop up these sombre curtains,

"Then the friendships of yore
Shall blossom once more,
'And we'll all meet again in the morning!'"

EVANGELINE.

The Austin Intelligencer says, W. G. Council, United States Deputy Marshal, was assassinated at Navasota because he was about to serve thirty writs for Judge Duvall's court.

A difficulty occurred below here, on Red River some time last week, between a Mr. Armistead and Mr. Carroll, which unfortunately, terminated in the death of the latter gentleman. A Dispute about the hiring of some freedmen was the cause of the trouble, when both drew their pistols and commenced firing with such fatal results. Both are said to be old and respectable citizens, and what makes the affair still more unfortunate, up to that time most excellent friends.—Caddo Gazette, Jan. 11.

SINGULAR ROBBERY.—Three peddlers, yesterday, drove up in a buggy to the house of Mr. Leerch, on Poplar street, near Brinkley avenue, and brought in their pack of goods for exhibition. They spread a shawl upon the floor strongly impregnated with chloroform. On Mr. Leerch and the two ladies in the house examining the goods, they fell under its influence. When thus oblivious, the peddlers robbed them of all their money, amounting to two hundred and forty dollars. The peddlers were well dressed and could talk only German.—Memphis Post.

Intelligence from our Mission Rooms.

FORTY-EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY.—It is now ascertained that among the speakers for the missionary anniversary we are to have Rev. A. L. Long, of Bulgaria; Major General Fisk; Rev. O. H. Tiffany, D. D., of Chicago; Rev. W. F. Mallalieu, of Boston; Rev. Bishop Thomson, and Rev. Dr. McClintock. Arrangements have been made with the several pastors, by which a sermon on the subject of Christian missions will be preached in each of the Methodist churches in this city on Sunday morning, Jan. 13, and a juvenile missionary meeting will be held in each church in the afternoon of the same day. There will be two services on Monday, Jan. 14, in Steinway Hall, near the Academy of Music, in Fourteenth street, just east of Fourth Avenue The morning service will commence at 10½ o'clock, and the evening service at 7½ o'clock precisely. The music will be under the supervision of Mr. Philip Phillips and Mr. Otto Fox, the accomplished organist of South Fifth street Church, Brooklyn.

CHINA.—The brethren toiling in our distant fields are exceedingly joyful by the coming among them of brethren and sisters from home, to take part with them in their ministry among the heathen. Brother Baldwin says of the brethren Wheeler and Hart: "We are much pleased with our new missionaries; they take hold with hearty good will, and I have no doubt they will prove valuable accessions."

JEALOUS FOR THE CAUSE.—There is a current of missionary feeling and money flowing in upon us from a friend somewhere in Michigan, and singularly enough he chooses to send it by way of a good minister in the East, very likely a former pastor. This good man hardly knows how to give himself rest from toil of some kind to keep the cause moving.

TRANSLATING AND PRINTING.—Our foreign missionaries have not heretofore been able to redeem the time to enter upon the work of translating the Scriptures into the language of the peoples among whom they have been preaching the word. They have been obliged to avail themselves as far as they could of other men's labors. They have, moreover, been too few to engage in the work of translating the Holy Scriptures or any other books to any considerable extent. A little has been attempted from an early day in China, and that little has been steadily augmenting; and now we read in a letter before us from Rev. S. L. Baldwin: "We are about commencing to print the much talked of dictionary. When finished it will be of inestimable value to all students of the Foochow dialect. Brother Maclay's translation of Job is going through the press. I have enjoyed my work of translating Proverbs very much."

THE NEW MISSION HOUSE—GOLD FROM THE EAST.—We are advised of the coming of one hundred dollars in gold from a convert in China. The Rev. S. L. Baldwin writes that his members astonished him by the gift of twenty five dollars as a centenary collection, the whole amount will be about eighty dollars in China, which will be worth one hundred dollars in New York. The native Chinese brethren desire this money to be appropriated to the Mission House, as a thank offering to the Missionary Society for its priceless benefactions to them.

REV. J. F. HURST, D. D.—We learn from a letter before us that the doctor commenced his course of instruction in the Mission Institute, Bremen, immediately upon his arrival. His family is comfortably settled and prospects are that all will be well pleased. It turns out that it is of some moment to an American citizen proposing to domicile himself in Bremen, that he should deposit with the city authorities the evidence of his citizenship, or in other words, his passport.

THE SAME SPIRITUAL BREAD.—Man did indeed "eat angel's food" in the olden time, and so, too, do all they in these times who "discern the Lord's body" in the breaking of bread at the sacramental board. How the heart is moved to read that at the late communion in our mission at Foochow, China, eighty "native christians partook of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord!" Ten new converts were baptized, and there are many inquirers.

MARRIED.

In St. Mary's, Ga., Dec. 18th, 1866, by Rev. J. C. Emerson, Mr. Zachariah Baker to Mrs. Charlotte Williams, both of New Orleans.

On Saturday, 12th inst., by Rev. Emperor Williams, at their mother's residence on Prieur street, Mr. Morgan Morganza to Miss Lucy Rutherford.

At the same time and place, Mr. Richard Rutherford to Miss Margaret Sentomon, all of this city.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Information is wanted by Lucinda Aits, of Donaldsonville, La., who desires information concerning her mother, Rosetta Aits, whom she left in Lynchburg, Va. Also, of Rebecca Aits, her sister, who came with her to this State, but with whom she parted in New Orleans.—Address as above, care of Rev. Thomas Kennedy.

Also, of the family of Robert Noel, who lived about six miles from Bedford Court House, in Virginia. He has not seen or heard of them for twenty-three years. He left them in 1844 His wife's name was Martha, and belonged to the Cobbs. His child was named Laura. He wants to hear about his father [named Kellis,] and his mother, Winny. Both belonged to Alfred A. Bell, in Liberty, Va.—Address Robert Noel, care of Rev. Thos. Kennedy, Donaldsonville, La.

Also, of Elizabeth Berryman, sometimes called Elizabeth Golliday. When last heard from was in Grenada, Miss. Any information concerning her may be sent to her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Berryman, New Orleans, in care of Ed. N. O Advocate.

Information is also wanted by Charlotte White of her children, Peter Fisher, Laura Fisher and Merinda Fisher, who formerly belonged to Dr. Meddock, of Henrico county Va. Also of a man named Peter Brown, who belonged to Pleasant Eagan, of Petersburg, Va Address Charlotte White, 218 Philip st., New Orleans, care of Col. M. J. Smith.

Also, of Julia Ann Missouri, daughter of Nettie Jones. She was formerly owned by Wm. Henry Elliott, of Montgomery, Tenn., who placed her in the care of Capt. Pegram, of the firm of Pegram & Bryan, by whom she was sold from New Orleans about fifteen years ago. Also of Thomas Jones, father of Nettie Jones, who was living when the war began, at Montgomery, Tenn. Any one knowing of either of the above persons, will please address Nettie Goodwin, care of Rev. John Goodwin, Franklin, La.

The Tribune for 1867.

The Tribune enters upon the year 1867 more prosperously in business than ever before.—The expediency of enlarging our pages—thus making The Tribune the largest and the cheapest newspaper in America—was doubted by many. We have found our account in it. The circulation of The Tribune is steadily increasing, and our advertising patronage has increased so much that it is more difficult to print our news than when we used a smaller sheet, and this difficulty we can only meet by frequently publishing supplementary pages.

The close of the war has imposed upon The Tribune the discussion of momentous and peculiar problems. We have met them as best we could, laboring with sincerity for Freedom, Social Progress, Political Equality, Impartial Suffrage—All Rights for All. A Republican President became the enemy of Republicanism and we have been called upon to denounce and expose the treacheries of a degraded Administration. It was not without pain, certainly not without much thinking, that we made an issue with President Johnson. The people approved our course by returning their Radical representatives to power. The elections of 1866—as important to the nation as Lee's surrender—make new duties. Reconstruction is now the duty of the country—political reconstruction—reconstruction in finances and tariffs. We are no longer pressed by war necessities, and we must amend our war experiments. The present condition of the currency is a grievous evil. Trade suffers; our manufacturing interests are in a precarious state. A dollar does not mean a dollar, but its fraction. It may be sixty cents, it may be ten. It is a sentiment, not a fact. When the laborer earns his dollar he does not know whether he has one loaf of bread or ten. All business is feverish and unsettled. We think this can only be remedied by a wise and intrepid policy at Washington—by reducing the currency to a specie basis. Upon his we shall insist.

The necessity of Protection to Labor again presses upon us. We regret that on this most important measure the Republican party is divided. An honest but mischievous minority in the West, particularly, are endeavoring to create a policy which can only result in the prostration of American industry—the degradation of Labor and the aggrandizement of English capitalists. During the many years of our work we have struggled against this interest. We believe protection more necessary now than ever before, and we shall insist upon the broadest and wisest legislation for the Rights of Labor.

In the perplexing question of Reconstruction we see no reason to amend the policy which we have asserted since the close of the war. It then seemed to us that Emancipation of the Black should be followed by Suffrage for the Black. We did not see the wisdom of a policy of promiscuous confiscation and hanging We had too much blood in war to ask for blood in peace—even to gratify angry vengeance. It seemed important that the South should concede Suffrage, and that the North should concede Amnesty. Some of our friends disapproved of this; but Congress has followed our advice. Amnesty has been approved by Congress—to a greater extent than we claimed in The Tribune. We have held that the men who starved captives in Rebel dungeons, who murdered surrendered prisoners, who violated the rules of war, and aided the assassination of Mr Lincoln, should be tried and punished.—Congress and the Administration have agreed that no punishment should be inflicted even upon men who are charged with these crimes, and the only measure looking like punishment is the amendment of disfranchisement from holding office, which is merely a sentimental, and not a practical penalty. On the other hand, the passage of the Civil Rights Bill, the Freedmen's Bureau Bill and the Bill for Suffrage in the District of Columbia, show that reconstruction will not be consummated without suffrage and protection for the Blacks. The policy of The Tribune has been practically adopted by those who differed with us during its discussion. We never quarrel with friends who are impatient with us. We do them the justice of believing they go their way to what is right, just as we trust they will do us the justice of believing we go our way to what is right. We work for the same object, but perhaps in different ways. We have no higher aim than to secure peace to this nation, and to all nations—liberty, progress, happiness, virtue, and the universal brotherhood of man. And for this we shall continue to toil in our best way.

We have reorganized and strengthened every department of The Tribune. We have correspondents in every part of this country and in every country of the world; resident correspondents in every capital and commercial center of Europe and South America; special correspondents who follow important movements in all parts of the earth. This establishment costs a great deal of money, and to organize it we have invested many thousands of dollars.—When we state that there are three hundred people directly or indirectly connected with the editorial department of The Tribune, charged, in a greater or lesser degree, with writing for its columns and giving it news, and that for every item of news we pay money, the vast expense for our publication may be imagined. We intend to enlarge these facilities, and not only to gather news from all parts of the world, but to ask the most gifted men of other countries to write for our columns. With many of them we have already entered into negotiations which will result in giving to the readers of The Tribune a series of essays that, both for their intrinsic value and the fame of their illustrious authors, will long be memorable in the history of journalism. We postpone for the present a more definite announcement.

Friends of Impartial Justice and Progress! We greet you on the bright prospects before us. Friends of The Tribune! We appeal to those who believe that an increased circulation of The Tribune would conduce to the political, intellectual and moral well-being of the Republic, to aid us in effecting such increase.

TERMS.

WEEKLY TRIBUNE.

Mail subscribers, single copy, 1 year—52 nos.	$2 00
Mail sub cribers, clubs of five	9 00
Ten copies or over, addressed to names of subscribers, each	1 70
Twenty copies addressed to names of subscribers	24 00
Ten copies, to one address	16 00
Twenty copies, to one address	30 00

An extra copy will be sent for each club of ten.

SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE.

Mail subscribers, 1 copy, 1 year—104 numbers	$4 00
do. 2 copies, do. do.	7 00
do. 5 copies, or over, for each copy	3 00

Persons remitting for 10 copies $30 will receive an extra copy for 6 months.

Persons remitting for 15 copies $45 will receive an extra copy one year.

For $100 we will send thirty-four copies and The Daily Tribune.

DAILY TRIBUNE.

Ten Dollars per Annum.

Terms, cash in advance.

Drafts on New York, or Postoffice orders, payable to the order of The Tribune, being safer, are preferable to any other mode of remittance. Subscribers who send money by Express must prepay Express charges. Address,

THE TRIBUNE, New York.

LOST.

On Wednesday, Jan 16 A PETITION drawn in behalf of Johanna Sullivan, of Washington county, Ala., and numerously signed. Any person finding the same will confer a great favor on the petitioner by leaving the paper at the Freedmen's Bureau. Jan19

SPECIAL NOTICES.

KELLOGGS' UNITED STATES MERCANTILE REGISTER,

FOR 1867.

We respectfully call your attention to the above-named work, which we have in preparation, and shall publish about the first of the year 1867, and annually thereafter. It will contain in

PART FIRST—The amended Tariff and Revenue Laws, Lists of Money-Order Post Offices and Telegraph Stations, Regulations of the Boards of Trade of the principal cities of the United States, Tables of Foreign and Domestic Weights and Measures, etc., etc., in short, a large amount of valuable information selected and compiled with a view to make this part of the work a "HAND-BOOK" of ready reference, especially adapted to the wants of business men. In

PART SECOND—A complete Business Directory of Wholesale and Manufacturing Houses, Insurance and Express Companies, Banks, and Bankers, etc., etc., of the leading Commercial Cities of the Union—Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco. Each city will appear separately, and the names of the firms will be arranged alphabetically and classified according to business, the whole constituting a complete list of first-hand places of business, which no buyer can afford to be without.

The register will be sold by subscription only, will contain from 600 to 900 octavo pages, as per specimen page within, and will be substantially bound in boards, with leather backs. Every exertion will be made to render it as complete and correct as possible.

Believing the business wants the Register is intended to supply to be general and widely felt, and inspired by the encouragement we have already received, we offer it confidently to the public at Three Dollars per copy, trusting to the just appreciation and liberal patronage of the business men of every section of this great country to sustain us in its publication at that price.

Subscribers will please fill out and remit inclosed subscription blank by return mail.

Kellogg, Johnston & Co.
116 Nassau St., New York.

or the Southern States—

Sullivan & Jordan,
3 St. Paul St., Baltimore.

A. J. JORDAN, Sup, for New Orleans,
Box 315. No. 187 Camp Street.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $215, $250, $300, $425, $540, $650, $800, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression,

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

"I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismund Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist.

Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room.—Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquste tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhan, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of syles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 596 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington Street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South.

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STREET,

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—ow1f

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S
LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B.T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER CENT. SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 12 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No 64 to 74 Washington Street, New York

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Advertiser says: "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion—Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened.
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM RUQUA,
Gen'l Agent for United States
r10-1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine al Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Baker & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philadelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12-3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the racing stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-45w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4 P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100.

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALS.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL.
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

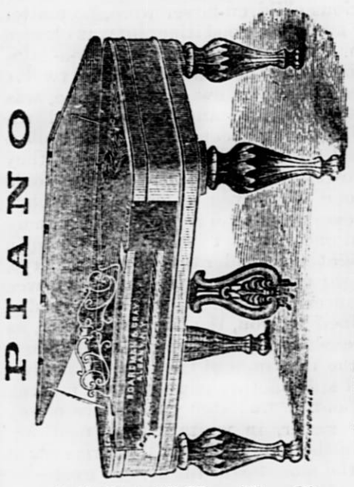
After a careful examination we can chee fully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal. The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies."

My19-1y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of



CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

PIANO FORTES.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable inside, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & Scho l Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans. Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London, Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to 200 cheaper than any first class piano forte.

1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway, N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co
E. L. Sanchez, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott, Messrs. Riggs & Co., Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Eistien.....Messrs. Eistein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited

a2-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,
MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS,
Street Rails,
STRAP RAILS.
OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S
SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have rarely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree" [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart," in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL

FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary
SAM'L L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS
No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circulars. aug 1 1ef

DOCTOR

L. Q. C. WISHART'S

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL!!

A GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE CURE OF

THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safe and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the Pine Tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system.

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs.

It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation.

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Blind and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, and Diptheria, etc., etc., etc.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

There is not a medicine discovered that has so much power to dissolve the thick mucus that stops up the wind passages of the lungs as the Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which subdues the fever and inflammation that destroy the power and vitality of the lungs, and consign the patient to the grave. We say to all whose lungs are affected, use Dr Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial with great confidence, as it has restored thousands of cases to health that were hopelessly give up to die.

COLDS AND COUGHS

are speedily cured by the use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it does its work at once, and the patient is cured before other medicines would have had time to have any beneficial effect.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR SCROFULA.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial will purify the blood and cleanse it, of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores internal and external. Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, and all Skin Diseases are especially cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it is good to be applied internally and externally in the above cases, as it has great power to heal where it comes in contact with the human flesh.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

is a great remedy for Chronic Croup and Diptheria, which is sending thousands and thousands of children to a premature grave. It can be cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

Out of ten thousand cases where it has been tried in the past two years, it has never missed a case where it was taken in time. All families should have it on hand, as it gives instant relief in Croup and Diptheria.

BLIND AND BLEEDING PILES.

Thousands of cures of this most painful and dangerous complaint are now enjoying the blessings of health by the use of the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Its great healing properties will stop the bleeding and pain immediately.

CONSTIPATION OF THE BOWELS.

Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is a great remedy for costiveness, as it acts upon the surface of the stomach, and causes a flow of gastric juice, enabling the stomach rapidly to digest the food, which gives health and vigor to the bowels, and causes regular evacuations. Let no one that is suffering from constipation of the bowels neglect to use the Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND GRAVEL

are speedily and permanently cured by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. It subdues the inflammation in the Kidneys, and in Gravel it dissolves and carries away the sediment which forms what is called stone in the bladder.

ASTHMA AND COUGH.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial gives instantaneous relief in cases of Asthma and Whooping Cough. It often cures whooping before it has run half its course; as it acts at once upon the phlegm and mucus, and expels them from the throat, and the sufferer is relieved. In cases of Asthma, DR. WISHART'S DYSPEPSIA PILLS WITH THE CORDIAL, as they have never been known to fail to cure that disease.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial acts with great power upon the Liver, and restores it to a speedy action, giving it a healthy secretion by its cooling and equalizing principle.

THE CAUSES OF CONSUMPTION IN THE LUNGS.

A sharp and poisonous corroding humor, either coming from other parts, or breeding in the lungs. From our own observation, we conclude that of ninety-six out of every hundred that die with consumption, their disease originated first from Dyspepsia—indigestion. The food fermenting, souring and rottening in the stomach, creating a poisonous catarrh, which is drawn by the brain to the head, passing through its different ramifications, creating inflamuation throughout its course. The brains, eyes, and all the organs of the head receiving its poisonous and corroding effect, uniting together, they struggle to relieve themselves from its grasp hence comes dizziness, dimness of vision, headache, and staggering in walking. This phlem and catarrh is discharged from the head to the throat, falling on the bronchial tubes filling up the air passages of the lungs, and if suffered to remain there, will chicken, corrode, and breed ulcers in the lungs; then comes on and consumption. We say to the sick, use with great perseverence, one bottle after another, until it has had power enough to dissolve the mucus and phlegm which stop up the air passages, and expectorate it from the lungs.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

☞ In all cases of Dyspepsia with Consumption use

DR. WISHART'S

Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

WITH THE

TAR CORDIAL.

L. Q. C. WISHART, M. D.,
Office and Store 10 North Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. of America.

WHOLESALE AGENTS:

BARNES, WARD & CO., 24 Magazine street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

☞ Sold by all Druggists. mh3 1y

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 262 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

THE ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL FOR MARCH.

Contains Cornelius Vanderbilt, Hon Ezra Cornell, Prof. Mapes, Frederika Bremer, Lavater, Las Casas, Sir John Franklin, Capt. Cook, Revs. John Wesley and Jonathan Edwards;—Talent and Genius;—Extraordinary prediction;—Ghosts;—origin of Coal;—Varieties of Sheep;—Iron, its uses;—Putting on a bad face;—Tribulation Trepid, and Mr. Hopeful;—The Jew;—Love and Lovers, the Philosophy of Engagements; an Excellent Number, only 20 cents or $2,00 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway New York.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
E. L. MONELLE, Secretary.

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES, plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops. Prices $75, 90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $ 60, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $4 5, $500, $55 , $600 and upwards. Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95..... .....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CHASE & MILLER'S

Book and Job Printing Office,

65 Poydras Street, Cor. Tchoupitoulas.

Are now prepared to execute all work in the line,

SUCH AS

BILL HEADS,
BILLS OF LADING,
DRAY RECEIPTS,
LAWYER'S BRIEFS,
PAMPHLETS,
BUSINESS CARDS, Etc

All orders neatly and promptly executed, at the shortest possible notice, and on reasonable terms

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton seed and "as" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Lime Flax and Pine Tow, 215 PEARL st., near Malden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb., 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

DR. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not forgotten.

[feb3]

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y.

mr10-1y

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1866, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the.

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost of postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my catalogue. Address

JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

feb19

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No. 4. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1867. Whole No.—54

Poetry.

Mary Magdalen.

[FROM "THE HYMNS OF THE AGES."]

To the hall of the feast came the sinful and fair;
She heard in the city that Jesus was there.
She mark'd not the splendor that blazed on their board,
But silently knelt at the feet of her Lord.

The hair from her forehead, so sad and so meek,
Hung dark o'er the blushes that burn'd on her cheek;
And so still and so lowly she bent in her shame
It seemed as her spirit had flown from its frame

The frown and the murmur went round through them all,
That one so unhallowed should tread in that hall,
And some said the poor would be objects more meet
For the wealth of the perfumes she shower'd at his feet.

She mark'd but her Savior, she spoke but in sighs,
She dared not look up to the heaven of his eyes;
And the hot tears gush'd forth at each heave of her breast,
As her lips to his sandals she throbbingly press'd.

On the cloud, after tempests, as shineth the bow,
In the glance of the sun-beam, as melteth the snow,
He look'd on that lost one—her sins were forgiven;
And Mary went forth in the beauty of heaven.

Theaters Viewed Morally and Mentally.

A correspondent of the Round Table, Jan. 6th—himself not a minister, nor specially friendly to ministers—writes as follows. The article may interest those who would not be interested in reading the words of a professedly religious writer on the subject. We specially commend it to such of the "liberal" clergy as think the theatre a great school of morals for the people:

Actors are not thinkers and originators. No man of high genius goes on the stage. Such a one could not be a great actor, for the latter is and can be only an imitator, and thus simply nothing more than a higher kind of monkey—a mere mold into which other men's thoughts are run. The mimetic power is not creative.

Men of mind do not seek the theater for instruction, for supply of thought, for intellectual elevation.

That great thinker, John Foster, says: "The persons who are intent on moral or intellectual improvement, will be found occupied in a very different manner, inspecting the works of the great historians, philosophers, moralists and divines, or holding rational conversation with their friends and families, or even—if they judge instruction really to be obtained from that source—reading the most celebrated dramatic works in their own or another language, and with a far more judicious and scrutinizing attention than any one exerts amid the thousand interfering and beguiling circumstances of the theatre."

Not by any means would we underrate the intellectual benefit of the great masters of dramatic literature. Sophocles, Æschylus, Schiller, Goethe and Shakespeare, all have their mission for the mind. But this is by study, rather than by representation; through thought, rather than sense. Who are, indeed, intellectually benefitted by them? Not those whose life, sensuous only, hurries them for excitement to the theatre; not that class who float on the surface of things and find no enjoyment but in the outer sense.

What a contemptible work, therefore, is that of those who, with very small mental calibre, fritter down and distort works of great genius to cater to a corrupt public taste! They are intellectual scavengers, who turn into garbage and rottenness the provisions of the great, wherewith they would feed the hungry herd that grunt and whine at their feet for mere animal enjoyment.—They are resurrectionists, who, with dim lanterns, grope at midnight among the treasure-houses of the past to rifle the honored dead of their buried ornaments and sell their corpses to the dissectors for mutilation.

The intellectual character of such harpies may generally be summed up in the following recipe for a play, as given by another. "Sixteen pounds of powdered brimstone for lightning; twenty-four peals of thunder; a dozen imps with tails; a dozen bloody daggers; a skull and cross bones; forty battle-axes; six terrific combats, three of them double-handed; a course of violations; eight murders; a pair of ensanguined shirts; one comic song; three hundred oaths, and sixty-four pages of blasphemy." This is what our city's Bowery masses and village loafers delight in. This suits the intellects of "Plug-Uglies" and "Dead Rabbits."

True, men of higher intellect ignore such extravagant representations. But those which they seek minister equally to their outer though more cultured taste, and equally check mental development. These becloud the reason, paralyze the judgment, and bewilder the imagination; they beget a distaste for study, a dislike of pure truth, and a shrinking from strong thought, depressing to the entire manhood.

What is the moral result? That is based on the intellectual. If mind be corrupted by a false training or evil influence, the morals must also be tainted. The moral life depends also on the social. Theatricals—such, at least, as are now most popular—of the French and Italian school, must and do create a disrelish for domestic life. They make home joys less attractive, and home duties more irksome. They blunt the natural sensibilities by a false excitement of them in view of imaginary suffering. The heart then becomes hardened toward actual woe. Whatever thus diverts the mind and perverts the heart from the true ends of social life must have an immoral influence.

The youth entranced by the syren power of the theatre becomes no worthier son or truer brother. The friends of home are not his links of life. The spell of a magician mightier than they is upon him. The thronged galleries, the brilliant stage, the tinseled actors, the stirring utterances, and the exciting applause come to him as from Calypso's isle. When all is over, what wonder, then, that the bar-room and the brothel, the debauch and the misery ensue! These are not necessarily or universally the concomitants of the theatre; but they are so much craved by many after the theatrical fever, fitful and ephemeral is over, that it is almost impossible to banish them from the precincts of the stage.

After a full and successful trial of the actor's life, Macready gave it up, unwilling that his daughters should mature under its perverting influence. Go behind the scenes. Looseness of manners, lowness of conversation and recklessness of morals prevail there. The theatrical life itself is socially wrong. Go to the homes of actors. In the "wee sma' hours" of the night they return thither, flushed with the excitement of applause or wine. They sleep heavily until near noontime, and rise languidly to rehearsals.

The very origin of theatres seems to have insured them an inheritance of evil. Invented among the Greeks to celebrate their abominable Bacchanalian mysteries, they engendered so much corruption that Solon, the wise lawgiver of Athens, prohibited them. They came into vogue again only as Greece became morally and socially more corrupt. In the twelfth century the priests of God's nominal church wrote dramas called "mysteries," founded on Scripture incidents, and enacted them on saints' days. These performances became so blasphemous and scandalous at last that they were suppressed.

We have, nowadays, so-called religious dramas—as for instance, Uncle Tom's Cabin—but these have everything in them save the religion, like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out.—Of course, in all such so-called religious plays, everything is sham, sheer deception—men of no religion uttering truths which they do not believe. Those truths are thus made false to men by a false representation. Everything here is factitious. These seeming realities leave the mind to its reaction, with the impression that nothing is true. Actual truth, then, fails to move those who have been made moral mummies by the frequent wrappings of theatrical sentimentalism. The whole tendency here is toward pretension and hypocrisy. Indeed, the very word hypocrite was the one originally used to designate an actor, a man who assumed a fictitious character, who enacts a part to which his heart and life bear no resemblance. What would men think of a preacher who thus belied in his character and life the truths he taught?

After all, whatever may be said of the theatre as a means of entertainment, and how much soever it may be stripped of immoral surroundings, it is yet a gigantic lie, a huge deception, a moral delusion, which no varnish of religious sentiment and no veneer of respectability can make an instrument of truth.

False ideas of love, a low standard of honor, and a superficial display of right and wrong antagonize true good. Murderers and villains, however vile and desperate, are made to appear as heroes through the fascinations of the stage. Thus Schiller's Robbers found imitators among the German youth, who took to the mountains for a brigand life. The representations of Jack Sheppard and Dick Turpin have begotten many a burglar and highwayman. In the play of Pizarro a priest kneels down and prays for a curse to come on the Spanish soldiery marching against the harmless Peruvians. One with any moral sense must be shocked at this. But seeing it again, it might not excite a shudder; at last it might even allow a smile.

We are told that theatres reform the wicked. Where they reform one they ruin thousands The Ticket-of-Leave-Man, lately so popular, once led—as the story goes—an absconding clerk to return to his employers £1,500 out of £2,500 which he had stolen. So the theatre taught him to ease his conscience by returning only a part, and retaining £1,000 of his plunder. Grand moral teaching that!

We know that good men and wise will differ with us in these views. They will tell us that the pure, the true and the cultured have patronized and participated in theatrical representations.—That may all be, but they were not made what they were by these; they remained what they were in spite of them.

Greece had her refinements and culture in her architecture, her sculpture, her poetry, and her philosophy; but her social life became corrupt coincidentally with her return and devotion to scenic exhibitions.

Other nations have thus degenerated. France, amid the sanguinary scenes of her first revolution, when the guillotine daily drank the blood of hundreds, crowded to her theatres. In Paris alone they then multiplied from six to twenty-five. Did the infidel and revengeful spirit of that day have no connection with such things?

Plato, Aristotle, Tacitus and Ovid severally declared that plays raise the passions and pervert their use, leading to corruption and debauchery. Even Rousseau, French infidel as he was, declaimed against establishing a theatre at Geneva. "How many generous citizens," he says, "will see with indignation this monument of luxury and effeminacy raise itself upon the ruins of our ancient simplicity! Where would be the imprudent mother who would dare to carry her daughter to this dangerous school?"

Such testimonies are rather damaging against theatres. However theoretically we may argue what they would do of good if they were only what they should be, yet practically their history proves, and witnesses declare that intellectually and morally they are exceptionable, if not positively injurious.—Perhaps some wiser and better age to come may show the error of the past and prove their evil to be good, or eliminate their good from their evil; but till then these views shall hold true.—W. C. Advocate.

A Sermon by Rev. Henry Green, (Colored.)

PREACHED IN FIRST ST. CHURCH, N. O., JAN. 20, 1867.

JOHN, XV: 7-8.—"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples."

Those words spake our Savior to his disciples. He first quoted to them how to live, and then tells them what will be the result. He tells them who he is "I am the vine, my father is the husbandman. Every branch that beareth not fruit he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." That is, when people get converted and are not useful, they are taken away. And when they bear fruit, they are purged or cleansed, that they may bear more. For when we are faithful to him, we get more knowledge, more light, more understanding. Also, if we get neglectful, God sends afflictions, and perhaps death, into our families, to bring us to trouble, and thus purges us to bring us closer to him. "Abide in me." He tells us we can not bear fruit unless we do. Now this is clear talk. As there must be a communication between the vine and the branch, so must there be a communication between God and us. To bring forth fruit we must be devoted to him. Sometimes we get together a multitude of mourners, but we cannot draw down the Spirit upon any of them, unless we abide in the vine. I tell you the crooked way and the contrary walk of some who profess to be Christians, does a heap of hurt. Backsliders prayers are like the old goods that's a rattlin' about in the yard. But if one lives near to God, the sap in the vine comes down out of heaven to them, and they and the mourner are both blessed.

"If ye abide in me, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done." You see how the blessings are to come. God is going to bless the world by those that abide in him. God is glorified in our bearing much fruit. The Lord is after fruit, and christians and the church are after fruit. If you want to glorify God, get up a good deal of fruit, get up a good deal of justice, get up a good deal of industry, get up a good deal of honesty.

We that are Christians all over the world are the true branches, and we should bear fruit for God. The same as when a man plats cowcumber seed, it brings forth fruit to the owner—so must we for God. "Ask, and it shall be done." Now does God ever tell stories? No. Suppose we ask him to send the sinner to hell, such ones as disturb our meetings—these "game chickens" that waylay a man as he is going home from church, at night, and beat him? Would'nt it be done? I tell you sinner, look out! But we won't pray for so wicked a thing as that, but we will pray that you may be saved from perdition. "Ask, and it shall be done." I remember years ago, of hiding in the weeds to pray. There was but one other praying man on the plantation. And I asked God to give me one sinner. I knew his promises, and I thought I'd ask him. And sure enough in three days I saw one brought down by affliction, and I went to her and told her this was of the Lord, and if she would repent all would be well. In a few days she was converted, and well. 'Twas the driver's wife; and then soon here come a man, and here come another one, inquiring the way to the Lord. O, what a sight it is to see a church bearing fruit—to see sinners converted. God comes into their hearts and tips over the tables, drives out the little foxes, and the sinner shouts the Savior's praise. They are so happy in their joy, one perhaps jumps backwards, another jumps forwards, another raps with his fingers. Why, they don't know how to manifest the joy they feel because God has forgiven their sins.

Those that abide in the vine used to ask of God, and he heard them. Don't you know, once when we used to be hungry, when they had the provisions locked up, and we could'nt get much; but we could pray, and a man came here—Mr. Butler was his name—and he gave us food; he gave us privileges; but most of all, he gave us FREEDOM.

But there are some that hate prayer. The Catholics hate to hear Protestants pray Why, the first lick I got in Louisiana was for praying. They struck me with a four foot board. A man in that early day, when most all the people here were Catholics, was in danger of getting a hundred licks, or being kept in the stocks all night, for praying.

I used to feel then that I wanted to preach to the people and hold meetings once in a while, but they would'nt let me. The Spanish overseer, named Aglaire, made master believe that all the poor crops, and all the animals and colored people that died on the plantation came through our praying. So I tried to think of some way by which I might hold meetings and tell the people about Jesus. At last I hit on a plan. The driver liked whisky mighty well, and would have it. So I made an offer to him, that if he would just let us hold a little meeting for prayer, I'd get him a bottle of whisky. Said he, "Harry, you may pray all night for that." So he watched while we prayed, and we did pray about all night. And I must say that whisky carried the day that time. Well we soon held another meeting by giving the driver another bottle of whisky, in the morning. And so we kept it up, holding meetings once in a while for several weeks, the driver watching for us and getting his bottle of whisky. That was thirty-seven years ago, and the plantation was only two or three miles from here, where Jefferson City now stands. But after a while our prayers were answered, and there came a change. We heard through one of the house servants, that mistress was up after master was to bed, and she sat to the open window listening to our singing. "Oh," said he to her husband, "just hear how pretty they sing; what makes you keep them from holding meetings?" "Why," said he, "I don't; it's the overseer. The next day we got word that we could hold meetings when we wanted to. That was good news to us. In a day or two the driver came around, and said he, "Don't you want to hold meeting to-night?" "Well," said I, "I guess we will, but you can't get your whisky for it, for master and mistress has done consented to let us hold meetings." He started away. But my heart smote me. I thought that it was a little too hard. So I said, "Yes, you shall have your whisky." So I gave him some then, and a bottle or two afterwards to taper him off.

Well, a great deal of good was done at those meetings, if we did have to hire the privilege with whisky. And I said, this is the same God that answers prayer here, that answered up where I used to live. O brethren, always pray, knowing that God always answers the prayer of faith.

Oh, sinners, all of you, seek to be christians! Religion will not hinder you in your worldly business. No, it will help you. It will make you more successful, more industrious, more earnest, more of a man.

My experience is that religion helps a man do more work. I remember before I was converted, I used to maul one hundred and fifty rails a day, but I had hard work to get out my task by night But the next day after I was converted as true as this is a house, and that is a lamp, and this is a bible, I mauled three hundred rails.

Master came out just before night to see how I was getting along. And seeing so many he said "who has been helping you?" no one I said. He never came to see how I was getting along mauling rails after that.

A man said to me a short time ago, "religion may be a good thing, but so many try to use it as a cloak to shirk and get rid of work, &c. Well said I, you can tell such persons that they've made a mistake, that they haven't got religion, and that they had better go and get it. I thought of them rails too, and told him about them; "well" said he, "I wish every body could get it then." I said: "I wish so too," and they can by prayer.

Years ago friends, prayers were sent up in the northern country, and ours went up from here, that God would set us free and destroy slavery. And now God has come and made sweepstakes of the matter, and swept the evil from the land. And now I think if any body ought to be good, we should, don't you?

We ought to be a sober and industrious people, a praying people a sincere people.

Oh, brethren let us be true branches and abide in the Vine, so shall we glorify God here by bringing forth much fruit; and glorifying him here, we shall enjoy him hereafter.

New Governments for the Southern States.

A Washington telegram says, the House committee, on the 13th, agreed to report a bill for new governments for Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina and Texas. It first declares void the old laws made by the governments in force in these States, and then proposes that all male persons above the age of twenty-one, who can take oath of loyalty, shall be allowed to vote for delegates to the convention. When the convention meets, if it decides to accept the terms proposed by Congress, it is proposed to select what is called a provisional committee of five citizens, distinguished for their loyalty to the Union. This committee is to act as one of public safety, until a constitution by the State convention is formed, which they are authorized to inaugurate.

The convention thus called can then elect provisional State officers, and form State constitutions irrevocable, without the consent of Congress. Universal suffrage, the prohibition of distinction on account of race or color in schools, the repudiation of the rebel debt, and the disfranchisement of all who aided the rebellion are to be provided for in the State constitution. If the State shall at any future time attempt to dissolve its relations with the federal government, its representation in Congress is to cease, and the latter is not to do anything inconsistent with the rules of civilized warfare, to protect loyal people. If Congress accepts the new constitution, the State is to be entitled to representation. The committee will urge the bill as a substitute for Mr. Steven's measure.

Ashley's substitute for Steven's bill abolishes the present Southern State governments and all laws made in pursuance thereof, and calls upon all male citizens over 21 years of age, who can swear they would not have aided the rebellion after the 4th of March, 1864, and would have complied with the President's proclamation of the 8th of December, 1863, if opportunity had offered them, and who can swear they never ill-used Union soldiers, and will henceforth bear true allegiance to the government, to organize constitutional governments in their respective States, and calls for conventions in the Southern States of delegates who can swear they never voluntarily aided the rebellion in any way.

These conventions shall determine if they will adopt terms proposed by Congress, and if so, appoint commissioners to provide for holding elections, adopting new constitutions, elect State officers, before admission into the Union. Each Constitution shall provide against slavery, and all laws be impartial regarding race and color. The rebel debt shall not be paid, nor loss from the emancipation of slaves. Free schools without the distinction of color or pupils shall be established. All persons who held civil, military, or naval offices in the Confederacy, shall not be allowed to hold any office except by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. In case of rebellion Congress shall in no light declare a cessation of its relations with the rebellious States until the State is thoroughly purged of its disloyalty. The Constitution must be ratified by a majority of the people of the States who can take oaths of loyalty of the ratification of the Constitution.

Senators and representatives shall be elected, but not admitted until Congress declares the State entitled to representation. Further provided that in case such States decline to accept these terms, they shall submit to Congress a plan of restoration, provided said plan recognizes the Constitution of the United States a supreme law of the land; that State Constitutions shall guarantee to all freedom and equality before the law; suffrage to be imparted without regard to race or color; the rebel war debt and compensation for slaves shall not be assumed by said States or claims be brought against the United States for them, all laws recognizing slavery or which excludes the testimony of persons of color, or deny the right of trial by jury, or make color a distinction, shall be null and void; also provisional governments may suspend the writ of habeas corpus, in case of resistance to authority, and call on the government for aid.

A proposition is made to divide Texas into two States before readmission into the Union.

Beecher to Brownlow.

TENNESSEE THE "REPRESENTATIVE" OF THE RADICAL "NEW NATION."

The following affectionate epistle appears in the Nashville Press and Times of the 14th:

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1867.

GOVERNOR BROWNLOW:

My Dear Sir—I have just been talking with a friend returned from Tennessee, and have learned a little more in detail than I before knew of our present state, and what you propose to do. Pray do not think me meddling with your business, when I express my anxiety for your success in the thorough and permanent enfranchisement of the negro, for Tennessee is, in some sense, a representative of the new nation.

What the whole people, above all things, need just now, is that one Southern State should, of its own will and by the vote of its own people, come up fully on the platform of equal rights and full citizenship for all men. Then there will be a model to work by—other States will have courage to believe that such things can be done. Suffrage for the whole people I deem a natural right. I should urge it as a matter of justice. Should you secure it, it will raise the conscience of the whole nation many degrees higher than it is.

But, in your case, it is also a matter of political safety. If some fear that such a measure will kill them, so I am sure the want of it will kill them. To die for a principle is to make sure a resurrection; while political death without, and even against a principle, is death perpetual and resurrectionless.

Should Tennessee remain firm and work out this great truth and duty of universal suffrage, (not forfeited by crime) I shall regard it as the turn of the night. The day-star will have arisen, and light will grow strong and darkness weaker every moment thereafter.

I hope that God will be gracious to you and invigorate your frame. He has made your life precious to those who wish well to the country. Into the struggle of the next campaign you will carry not only the fate of Tennessee, but of the whole South, and so of the nation. May God go with you and bless you and bring you out victorious; then if you wish to depart we will rejoice with you in the inheritance of that rest which remains for the people of God.

I am, dear sir, very truly yours,

H. W. BEECHER.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months..... 2 00
Three Months..... 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion.....$1 50
" each subsequent insertion... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Orders left at 65 Poydras Street, or at our office, No. 7 Prytania Street, will receive full attention.

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

TO OUR PATRONS.

☞ The second year of the "New Orleans Advocate" begins January 1867. Most heartily thanking our patrons for their support during the first and trying year of its publication, we now confidently solicit the continuance of their Subscriptions and Advertisements for the year to come. Words cannot express our gratitude to you. You responded to our call in the hour of need.

The Advocate has steadily increased in public favor, and our income has equalled our out-lay. It is read in no less than

FIFTEEN HUNDRED FAMILIES.

It circulates in every State in the Union. It is a light in the

HOMES OF THE FREEDMEN.

They read it with delight. It advocates their rights; it contributes to their elevation.

As in the Past, so in the Future, the Advocate is to be devoted to "Religion, Patriotism and Learning."

Each number will contain a Sermon by one of our Colored Preachers. Each issue will reflect

LIFE IN THE SOUTH.

Several gentlemen of ability, residing in different States, have consented to write "Letters" for our paper.

As the Advocate circulates both in the larger towns and in the interior of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, we hope our Advertising Patrons will continue their favors.

Dear Friends, we appeal to you to sustain this

CHRISTIAN, LOYAL JOURNAL IN THE SOUTH.

Our present Subscribers will please remit the amount of their subscription for the coming year, without delay.

To any person who will send us $16 we will mail him FIVE COPIES of the Advocate.

Send your remittances in Post Office Orders, and address the Editor by name.

PUBLISHER ADVOCATE.

Premiums! Premiums!

As an inducement to our Preachers to obtain subscribers for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867, we offer them the following premiums:

1. To any Preacher who shall obtain for us Forty New Subscribers for the year 1867, and send us the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the Bible, consisting of six large volumes.

2. For Thirty Subscribers and the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the New Testament, in two large volumes.

3. For twenty Subscribers and the money, we will give Watson's Theological Institutes, in two volumes.

4. For Ten Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Sermons, in two volumes.

5. For Five Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Notes on the New Testament.

Brethren will observe that these Subscribers are to be for the Whole Year. The money may be paid to the Presiding Elder of your District, quarterly, in advance; but, where it can be done, pay the $4, in advance.

Now, Brethren, for a Grand Rally! Go to work. The prize is before you. Who will be the first to obtain the Premiums!

The Minister in His Study.

Thought is born and character is formed mainly in retirement. The divinest influences are those which gather round the inner life. The noblest purposes are usually the fruit of silent meditation and secret prayer. The character of the minister is chiefly formed in his hours of retirement from public duties to engage in quiet, but telling, preparatory labors. Fidelity in these, guarantees him an honorable and efficient fulfilment of his public ministrations. The Lord of the Vineyard designs that all his ministers shall be "workmen that need not be ashamed;" that they shall be "able ministers of the New Testament," and "wise master builders" in his glorious temple. That they may attain this high honor and useful position, he has granted all necessary facilities. There is no minister, however arduous his work or limited his advantages, but may attain the rank intended by Christ for all his laborers.

There is no work to which God may call a created being which transcends in importance that of the minister of Christ. He is "the legate of the skies," and, as God's ambassador to man, he should fully understand and worthily execute his mission. He is the champion of the truth, the hero of reform, the herald of a glad evangel, and should understand the errors, vices, wrongs and miseries he seeks to remove, as well as the methods and efficacious remedies of the gospel intended to remove them. It is demanded of a minister of state, sent to represent a great people in a foreign court, that he will embody in some degree the wisdom and dignity of the government for which he acts. With him, trifling is a crime, and each act not in harmony with his high position, is an offense against his government. But the ambassador of the King of Kings, who fails to act worthy of his great dignity, grievously offends against God, and inflicts an irreparable wrong on man. The least such a man should do, would be to leave a position for which he is so utterly unfitted. If he cannot rise above a slovenly habit, or blundering style, or careless manner, let him not dare to venture into the sacred desk or aspire to partnership of labors with the immortal King.

An immense interest centers, then, in the private studies of the gospel minister. His pulpit character is moulded in his study. For him there is a place more sacred, even, than the public altars of his God; a place where his soul breathes inspiration, where his life receives directing power, where his plans are outlined, where he forges the thoughts that are to thunder to the consciences of his people, and from which he comes with his full quiver of gospel truths—if he attains the standard of a true Christian minister. What the closet is to the christian, so is his study to the minister. It is his place of preparatory effort which determines the efficacy of his public labors. Of his pulpit preparations, it may be truly said—"there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known." What he thus does in secret is heralded as on the house tops. Each succeeding sabbath he reveals to public gaze the fidelity or indolence that have marked the week. Each sabbath brings him before a judgment seat, in which his audience determines whether he who urges fidelity to God has been faithful to man. There is no escape from these weekly judgments. No splendor of genius, no extemporary powers, no sprightliness of fancy can conceal closet infidelity.

Would you be an instructive minister, bringing forth from a full treasury things new and old, enter your study, and there with industrious toil lay up large stores of mental wealth. Would you acquire the power of presenting a train of close, connected thought, so that your remembered sermons may be preaching through the coming years and may still be doing good when you are in your grave, then discipline your mind to logical precision, and by earnest, patient study, acquire this high gift. Would you move men; would you thrill, as a harp, their excited sensibilities; would you bow them before the power of your words as the forest bends before the wind; would you possess the "—Charm of delivery, the magical art,

"That thrills, like a kiss, from the lip to the heart,"

then go into your study, and look deep within your own spirit; meditate, think, read, pray, till the inspiration of power falls upon you, and your own soul is lit up with the live coal you would lay upon the hearts of others. Would you bring sinners to Christ; would you lead trembling ones to the cross; would you lead sorrowing ones to rich consolation, would you summon, as with a battle-cry, the christian soldier to glorious victory; would you encourage Zion's pilgrims on their journey; would you gather many sheaves to the rejoicings of the great harvest; in a word, would you have power over man, and honor from the Great Master, then be faithful in your private studies, your closet preparations. Seek from books, from observation, from close study, that furnishment of mind, that elevation of spirit, that enlarged and comprehensive knowledge which, taking in, as far as possible, all art, science and literature, will enable you to understand the great movements of the times, and trace the connection of your labors with the general advancement of society. Knowledge is power, and without it the minister may not hope to be efficient. He will save souls, build up the Church, lead in great movements for the elevation of humanity in exact proportion as he acquires and properly uses knowledge.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Renew!

Have you renewed your subscription for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867?

Send or call at our office, No. 7 Prytania street, and renew your subscription for 1867. Office hours from 12 M. to 3 P. M.

"The Watchman,"

Is no more. It had a brilliant but short existence. It is another instance in proof that the South cannot rely upon the Conservatives of the North for arms in war or money in peace. They are a broken reed, which will pierce the hand that leans upon them. "The Watchman" was an extreme Southern weekly journal, published in New York, in the interests of the South. Like our own, while it did not claim to be either exclusively religious or political, yet it had a good deal to say on all matters of church and State; but never failed to take a South-side view of such subjects. It was a warm supporter of Mr. Johnson's policy, and was bitter in its denunciations of those who differed from the President. It was a bold venture on the part of its editor, Dr. Deems, to go to the great metropolis of the North, and start such a paper; but in this he has evinced that he has learned nothing from the political experience of the past, and that he does not comprehend the nature of revolutions. For the future, let him and all others of his "kith and kin" remember two things: Northern Democrats are not to be trusted; revolutions never go backwards. We know that the Copperheads of New York encouraged him to go on, and that he himself was vain enough to believe that he could reverse in Gotham the decisions of the late war; but he will return to his "Sunny South" a wiser man.

Mr. J. Fletcher Emley, of the firm of Emley & Co. of this city, has been appointed, by Gov. Wells, one of the Commissioners to the Universal Exposition of Paris. In this, his Excellency has made a judicious selection. Mr. Emley is one of our young and rising merchants. Intelligent and urbane, he is known for his liberal views and sympathy with whatever tends to the advancement of mankind. We heartily wish him a pleasant time.

Incidentally we may remark, that it is now currently reported that Queen Victoria will visit Paris during the great fair, and that Napoleon is preparing for a congress of all the crowned heads of Europe to meet in Paris, about the same time.

Wesley Chapel.—The trustees of Wesley Chapel have just completed the purchase of three lots adjoining their church, and intend to erect thereon a large school-house. Success to these enterprising brethren!

Dr. Newman will preach in the large hall of the Mechanic's' Institute on Sabbath morning, at 11 o'clock.

Words of Cheer.

Carlisle, Ind., Jan. 14, 1867.

Dear Bro. Newman—As a sort of self-constituted agent, I send you herewith the sum of $8 00, for which please send the Advocate as below:

Miss Maggie Helms, Carlisle, Sullivan County, Indiana; Rev. John Tansy, Carlisle, Sullivan County, Ind.

God bless you in your noble work! You have the sympathy of every loyal Methodist in the North. Every morning and evening, prayers go up from thousands of altars to God for your happiness and the success of your enterprise. Go on, Doctor, you cannot but succeed!

Yours in Christ,
John Tansy.

Orphans' Home.

Contributions for the Orphans' Home Society:

Jan. 18th—Received of Mrs. J. S. Walton, Treasurer: From the Congregational Church, eighteen dollars and fifteen cents.....$18 15

Jan. 21.—From the officers of the Rost Colony of the Freedmen's Bureau, seventy-five dollars and twenty-five cents...$75 25

W. B. ARMSTRONG,
Treasurer Orphans' Home Society.

Dixon's Agency and Correspondence Bureau.—Rev. Breckon Dixon, the blind local preacher of Twenty-seventh Street Church, in this city, a man well and favorably known among the Methodists of New York, sends us his business circular. He says: "Having found it necessary to accept various agencies, he has often found it difficult to obtain such as he could conscientiously and profitably engage in." Having devoted much attention to the subject, he thinks he is now prepared to give to others, especially local and superannuated ministers, such information as will be for their benefit. He has accordingly established the above-named "Bureau," to which he invites the attention of those concerned. He may be addressed, he tells his friends, "on any subject in relation to which it would be for the advantage of these brethren to have a local correspondent in this city. His circular is endorsed with the very best testimonials. We receive many letters of inquiry, just such as Brother Dixon proposes to attend to, but we are quite unable to attend to them, and often they remain unanswered. To the writers of such letters, and all others having like inquiries to make, we recommend this agency. Address Rev. Breckon Dixon, 24 Bible House, New York.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

Rev. Dr. Butler, late of India, sent us the following note, to which we call the attention of our readers; and if they have the desired information, they will confer a great favor on the parties concerned if they will communicate the same:

Information Wanted of Mr. Wm. Hay, a working engineer, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland. When last heard from, in 1860, he was at Eufaula, Ala., en route to New Orleans. Any information about him will be thankfully received by Rev. Wm. Butler, Chelsea, Mass.

Shower of Ashes.

We have had several remarkable showers chronicled lately as having occurred in different parts of the State, a shower of snakes, another of salt, and so forth. We had a sparce shower of ashes in the city last week, which presented a curious appearance. The ashes were white, and, only for the warmth of the temperature prevailing, might readily enough have been taken for snow-flakes at a first glance. That idea being untenable, the next plausible one might have been that some good dames had allowed the down from their ducks, well plucked for dinner, to have been thrown to the gentle breeze from an upper story, to be wafted far and wide. An examination of the flakes as they lay after reaching the ground, immediately dispelled that notion. They were found to be, if anything, lighter than down, of the gauziest thinness, of the flimsiest texture, and falling into the most impalpable of powders beneath the gentlest handling; and yet there were lines as of the veins of leaves distinctly running through them, and suggesting their true character. They were doubtless the ashes of prairie vegetation calcined on the spot where it had grown and carried hither on the wings of the wind, although we have not yet heard of any such fires in the neighborhood as would account for the phenomenon.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organ. With your eyes shut, you cannot distinguish its sound from that of the pipe organ itself; and the advantages that commend it are: Its price—for it can be had for one, two, three, or four hundred dollars, according to the size you wish; it takes up very little room, and may stand in any part of the church; it is not affected by heat or cold, or any change of temperature; it remains for a long period in good tune; and lastly, it can be sent by express or otherwise, any distance with safety. It is admirably adapted to the performance of sacred music, psalm tunes, anthems, chants, etc., and any one who can play on the piano can readily master the Cabinet Organ. It is a grand accompaniment when the congregation sing, and it is just the instrument that ought to be used in all churches where the people all wish to have the privilege of bearing a part in the praise.—New York Observer.

We have been at some pains to ascertain what instrument of the many now soliciting the public favor combines the greatest amount of real excellence. We have prosecuted this inquiry entirely independently of aid or direction from interested parties. The opinions of some of the best musical critics, composers and performers have been obtained; reports of experiments made in the ordinary use of various instruments in churches, schools and families have been compared; all of which, with singular unanimity, concur in assigning the first place to the Cabinet Organ of Mason & Hamlin—a decision that corresponds with our previously formed convictions received from personal observations.—New York Christian Advocate.

From the Methodist.

Missionary Anniversary.

MEETING AT STEINWAY HALL NEW YORK.

The forty-eighth anniversary of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church was held in this city on Sunday and Monday, January 13th and 14th. Bishop Thomson occupied the pulpit of the Thirtieth-street church, Rev. Dr. Tiffany preached in St. Paul's, and the pastors of the respective churches throughout the city delivered missionary discourses. The anniverary properly was celebrated on Monday, when a public meeting was held at Steinway Hall, in Fourteenth-street, commencing at half past ten o'clock, the attendance being quite large. Nearly all the ministers of New York and Brooklyn, together with a number of distinguished laymen, occupied seats upon the platform.

Lieutenant-Governor Claffin, of Massachusetts, presided.

The meeting was opened by singing

"From all that dwell below the skies,
Let the Creator's praise arise."

Rev. D. D. Lore read the Sixty-second Psalm, and Rev. John A. Roche offered prayer.

Philip Phillips, "the sweet singer of Israel," then sang an appropriate solo.

ADDRESS OF BISHOP THOMSON.

Bishop Thomson followed by an address on the missionary labors in China, and said of the country that it was beautiful, healthful, and fertile, and the particular portion of it which he visited, Fokien, was a mountainous region, but so congenial to vegetation, that three crops could be gathered in a single year, and that even in January the rose and pink were in full flower. It contained 15,000,000 of people, and three first-class and sixty third-class cities. In many of the great enterprises the Chinese had anticipated Europeans. They had a common-school system long before the Christian era. They were also a literary people, and to their credit be it told, they were without a pauper peasantry or slavery of any kind in any portion of the empire. (Applause.) They always had scholars who could recite from memory all their classics and all their commentaries on them. (Laughter.) They were the Anglo-Saxons of the East.

Their examination hall annually invited ten thousand candidates for literary honors, which showed that they were not devoid of the arts and sciences. The written language contained from 30,000 to 70,000 characters, yet these were not necessarily used. Confucius employed only 5000 of them in writing the Classics, and 10,000 would translate the Holy Scriptures, and were sufficient to conduct a diplomatic correspondence, and open to the reader the chief literature of the language. To reach all other nations it was necessary to use 3063 languages, while to reach the Chinese only one language was required, for the whole world might be divided into two nations—the Chinese of 200,000,000, and all other nations. (Laughter.) There were two religions—that of Confucius and Buddhism, the former appealing to the reason and the latter to pretended inspiration. There were also Tauism and other systems, but all had deteriorated. Their ideas of religion, science, physiology, etc., were very peculiar. They believed man was like a candlestick, and divided him into the wick, tallow, etc., in explaining his physical structure. (Laughter.) Without regard to the effect of missionary labors in China, the Atlantic cables, microscopes, telescopes, telegraph and printing press would remove the tissue of falsity which existed in their moral and political condition. The carrying of the British and American mails up the rivers of the vast empire, the coming and going of ships from civilized countries to their ports, the marching of armies over their soil, and every evidence of a higher civilization were scrutinized by the Chinese with evident interest and profit.

They at one time believed that ignorance and darkness shrouded every nation but their own. Now they are beginning to respect European enterprise and intelligence. The march of the British and French to Pekin had much to do in working out this change. They took especial interest in America. Their eyes sparkled with delight when they were told of the United States and its advanced civilization, ramifying in every channel of human thought and action, and specially of wise and free government. When their emperor was complimented for refusing to permit rebel privateers during the war to enter their ports while the other nations gave them this privilege, they manifested unmistakable signs of being pleased. (Applause.) But their is now many a sunny vale in the regions of China awaiting, with earnest anxiety, the Lily of the Valley, and many a mountain slope looking for the coming of the Rose of Sharon. The legalized crimes of infanticide, oppression of women, the opium smoking, and theft and mendicancy still existed in many places, and indicated that the whole nation was below those which surrounded it possessing a measure of true civilization. They required a moral and political renovation.

The Christian religion was already domiciled in China, and we had now a force there of thirty-six missionaries, a missionary property worth $36,000, a membership of 154 or over, a mission press which printed over 2,000,000 pages a year, a hospital for foundlings, a school for boys, and a school for girls. Formed into procession, the 340,000,000 of Chinese which compose the empire would stretch seven times around the earth, over China, through Thibet, across the Atlantic, over the American Continent, and across the Pacific to the point of starting, again, and again, and again—seven times. In such a funeral procession, eighteen or twenty, in the nature of affairs, would fall on the land and on the sea every minute, and was it not the duty of the Christian to interest himself in the welfare of so many millions, in the eternal salvation of so many souls alike redeemed with ourselves and marching onward to the grave?

The above is but an imperfect sketch of Bishop Thomson's interesting and instructive address, to which constant allusion was made both in private and in public by all who were fortunate enough to hear it

The congregation then united in singing a hymn commencing,

"When shall the voice of singing Flow joyfully along?"

(Concluded next week.)

Opelousas District.

The first Quarterly Conference of this year for the Donaldsonville circuit, was held in the new church on the 12th and 13th instants. Official brethren were present from across the river and down the Bayou, and reports were received from all the appointments. The brethren are united in love to their preacher and to the Church, and the Conference year begins auspiciously. Much anxiety had existed about the slow progress of the church building, the poverty of our people making it difficult to collect funds necessary to carry on the work. The house is now enclosed, floored and roofed, so that the day school and church can hereafter be accommodated.

The sabbath was truly a high day. At early dawn a prayer meeting was held. At 9 o'clock, sabbath-school meeting. The children were addressed by the Elder, sang their hymns, repeated their lessons, elected officers, and a good start was made for a prosperous year. It is the only Sunday-school in the parish. At 10½ o'clock, the house was crowded; after the sermon four persons were baptized, and the Holy Sacrament administered. At 3 o'clock, the people gathered for Love Feast. It was a remarkable time; in front of the stand were seated about twenty-five converts, the fruits of the past year; they were of all ages, from the child of ten years to an old creole woman of past seventy, and it was truly a happy company. It is worthy of note that eighty-eight conversions were reported from this circuit. One old pilgrim said, "Mehaley has been serving God more than sixty years, and not tired yet." An aged Frenchman said, "I'm an old man, but I feel young to-day. This kind of work has never been seen in old Donaldson. Glory to God for it." Many present testified to the goodness of "the American religion," as they call it, religion which filled the heart with love to God and man.

We are slowly gathering on this circuit an intelligent, pious membership. Sixteen were at this meeting taken into full connection. The people were also liberally disposed, and during the day contributed over seventy dollars, to push forward the work on the church.

D.

—Speak kindly to others—they will thus learn to speak kindly of you.

A sermon in four words on the vanity of earthly possessions: "Shrouds have no pockets."

Local and Southern News.

The Bremen Ship "Mobile," having on board 2,350 bales of cotton was destroyed by fire in the lower part of Mobile Bay, on Thursday night, the 15th inst., about 12 o'clock.

The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

The steamer "Montgomery," with 600 bales of cotton on board, from Tuscaloosa to Mobile was destroyed by fire. Three negroes are said to have lost their lives by the fire.—Mobile Advertiser

The Kingston (S. C.) Star, announces the burning of the jail in that place, on the night of the 7th inst., about 9 o'clock, in which twenty-two negro prisoners were burned to death.

Farming Prospects.—So far as we are enabled to judge the farming prospects are much better than they were this time last year. The freedmen are very busy, making contracts for the year.

From present indications, with a favorable season, the crop of sugar for the State this year will reach one hundred and thirty thousand hogsheads.

From information derived from those who have the facilities of getting correct information, put down the crop of 1866 at forty-five thousand hogsheads.

Correspondent N. O. Times.

The Freedmen.—The Crocket Sentinel, Texas, says:

The freedmen in our county appear to be contracting for and anxious to obtain situations as laborers. Their future success depends on their cultivating and maintaining habits of industry and sobriety and honesty. They may yet render themselves useful to themselves and society in the capacity of laborers, but in no other, and when they get to be politicians and voters we expect to see them and what little yet remains of the government completely wrecked.

Coffee county in this State is being rapidly colonized from Pennsylvania. Some fifteen or twenty families from that State have purchased lands around Concord and Oak Hall, and are settling. They have already laid out $85,000 for lands, and "the cry is still they come." Glad to hear it.—Memphis Post.

Emigrants.—The Jefferson Jimplecute says:

Every steamer arriving here brings crowds of emigrants, coming to settle in Texas. They are from all the different States, and generally of the best families. We have room and plenty in Texas for them all.

Dueling.—Those who have been engaged in this gentlemen's game at murder, we are glad to notice, appear to be coming to grief in Vicksburg. The Herald says:

Several gentlemen who have been engaged lately in this innocent amusment have been indicted by the grand jury and bound over in the sum of one thousand dollars, to answer for the offense against the peace and dignity of the State of Mississippi.

The Goliad (Tex.) Intelligencer. F. Fauntleroy of the Goliad Intelligencer, in his salutatory, says:

Our efforts will be given to the toning up of the relaxed energies of the people —to reassuring the manhood, (which, we fear, is much degenerated,) of our fellows. We are opposed to Radical dictation, Radical everything.

We are ardently in favor of Southern commerce, manufactures, and other enterprises; Southern literature, Southern school-books, Southern teachers, Southern manners, habits, and characteristics; neuer for a moment caring whether such a course is pleasing to those who reside nort of Mason and Dixon's line.

We will support President Johnson as long as he stands out against the workers of iniquity.

There are now thirteen cotton factories in operation in Tennessee, representing nearly a million of dollars, and giving employment to over nine hundred operatives. There are also in the State several flourishing factories for the manufacture of steam engines, cotton presses, and agricultural implements.

The State debt of Pennsylvania is $35,622,052. Governor Curtin, in his last message, expresses the opinion that it may be paid off in fifteen years, if economy is observed in expenditures, and the revenues of the State are carefully husbanded.

The editor of the Louisville (Miss.) Bulletin, is the keeper of the jail, and lives and prints his journal within the walls of that establishment.

Seeing the Sights.—A countryman from Mississippi started out on Saturday night to see the mysteries of Memphis. Passing the Basket Saloon, and seeing "Free Concert" over the entrance, he concluded to drop in and take a drink with the attentive females who wait upon customers f that elegant (?) place of amusement. After treating the fascinating creatures to half a dozen bottles of wine and sundry cocktails, he became oblivious, and awoke next morning in the station-house; and upon examination of his pockets found himself poorer by $370, a gold watch and a diamond pin, than when he first fell into the hands of the "beer-jerkers." Moral: countrymen should beware of wine and women, and keep out of the Basket — Memphis Post.

A correspondent of the Rome (Ga.) Courier, writing from Crockett, Texas, says a large number of emigrants from Georgia are arriving in that portion of the State. He says that the lands on the Brazos, Colorado and Trinity are the most productive in the South, and will average a bale of five hundred pounds to the acre. The best will yield one and a half or two bales, and corn in proportion. The uplands will produce a bale to the acre. The health of the country is good, and with the general use of cistern water, would be almost perfect There are hardly any two cities in any Southern State that rival Galveston and Houston in business. Notwithstanding the war, there has been probably as much money in Texas this year, as before the war, and the people are disposed to spend it. The moral tone of the people is good and improving.

The late rebel Secretary of the Navy, Stephen R. Mallory, exhorts the young men of Florida to "pay particular attention to military studies, as that was a matter of much more importance to the South than literature."

Alex. Stephens, of Georgia, is in Washington trying to find out on what terms the late Confederates will be received back into the Union.

A convention is to be held in St. Louis on the second Tuesday in February next, for the purpose of considering measures for the improvement of the Upper Mississippi River, and bringing the matter before Congress. The Committee on Finance estimate the expense of the convention at $40,000, and propose to raise the sum from the St. Louis City Council, County Court and Chamber of Commerce.

A communication from the Bureau of Immigration states that in three-fourths of the past year, 296,496 persons arrived in the United States from foreign countries. The destination of 209,000 of these was New York, and 30,000 Michigan.

Cotton.—The total estimates are now completed, showing a total product of 1,750,000 bales of 400 pounds each.—As the actual bales are now nearly 500 pounds each, this is equivalent to a million and a half of such bales. The estimates are made up as follows: North Carolina, 91,000 bales; South Carolina, 102,000; Georgia, 205,000; Florida, 36,000; Alabama, 220,000; Mississippi, 270,000; Louisiana, 109,000; Texas, 300,000; Arkansas, 182,000; Tennessee, 148,000; other States, 87,000 bales.

The New York Times of the 15th says: The "Eastern question" grows more serious. As reported in our Atlantic cable dispatches of yesterday morning, Turkey has called an army of 150,000 men into service, for the purpose of suppressing the revolt of her Greek subjects. Our dispatches of this morning state that a ministerial crisis has taken place at Constantinople, and that the Porte has recalled his ambassador from Athens. It is reported that Garibaldi has gone to Candia, and also that a revolt is imminent in Bosnia.

Athens, Jan. 22.—The chief of the insurgents in Candia has written a long letter to the U. S. Consul here, thanking the American people through him for the sympathy extended to the Cretans. He also petitions the Consul for American ships of war to convey the women and children.

Mr. Litchfield, a merchant of Illinois, left ten thousand dollars in a carpet-bag in a railroad car at East St. Louis. Five minutes afterward he returned, and found the money—gone.

The Impeachment.—The House Committee on the Judiciary, which carries on the impeachment inquisition under the resolution of Mr. Ashley, of Ohio, is composed of the following members: James F. Wilson, of Iowa, chairman; George S. Boutwell, of Mass.; Francis Thomas, of Maryland; Thomas Williams, of Penn.; Frederick E. Woodbridge, of Vermont; Daniel Morris, of New York; Andrew J. Rodgers, of New Jersey; Wm. Lawrence, of Ohio; Burton C. Cook, of Illinois—all Republicans, except Mr. Rodgers. Six of the Committee are said to be resolved on the impeachment.

A disastrous conflagration occurred at Janesville, Wis., recently. The Hyatt House, one of the largest hotels in Wisconsin, together with a church, express offices, etc., were consumed, and loss of life involved. Loss is over $1,200,000; insurance $25,000.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The special committee on the New Orleans riots are still taking testimony, but will conclude on Monday.

Mobile, Jan. 14—The steamer Sunny South, running between Montgomery and New Orleans, was entirely destroyed by fire at Portland Landing, on the Alabama River, Friday night. The boat is insured in New Orleans for $10,000. Larger part of the cargo was destined for Mobile, with full insurance. Two passengers are missing. Passengers lost everything.

Murder.—We give the following statement, just as it was sent to us by Captain Wm. F. White, of the Freedmen's Bureau of this District:

"On the 14th of December, Morris Blanchard, colored, came to my office and complained that he had worked with James Blanchard, Esq., of Columbia County, and that he had brought his cotton and stored it with Mr. R. A. Fleming. I notified Mr. Fleming that he would hold the cotton subject to a settlement. The same day I notified James Blanchard to that effect.

On the night of the 27th instant some one went to the house of Morris Blanchard and shot him in his own door; afterwards rode rapidly away. At noon Saturday, a colored man came and asked what he should do with the body. I told him to have an inquest held; he said he dared not as they would kill him. I told him to go to a justice who would attend to it."

This is the third murder committed in Columbia County, within the last three months, notice of which, we have given. We have also notified our readers that the murderers go unpunished.

We have from time to time given true accounts of murders committed in other counties of Georgia, and in South Carolina. But we do not publish one-tenth of the reports that reach us from the interior of the State. We only publish those which we know of our own knowledge to be true Our heart sickens at the reports from colored people, who come to us daily, clothed in rags, broken in spirit, with their stories of robbery, oppression and murders committed upon their people in the interior of Georgia and South Carolina.—Loyal Georgian.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided, on last Monday, that the test oath required of preachers and teachers by the Constitution of the State of Missouri is unconstitutional. It has also decided against the constitutionality of the test oath required of attorneys by Congress. These decisions greatly delight the rebels, and are a heavy blow to loyal men and the loyal cause in the South.

Emigration to Brazil.—Rev. Ballard S. Dunn, who has written a work on Brazil, invites those who are still "true to themselves," and who wish to form a society where they can "conserve honor, chivalry and purity," to join him in planting a colony in Brazil. But he wants only true men, devoid of the love of gain, and devotedly attached to the "lost cause." In his address he says:

"We have no bounties to offer, and no desire to welcome any who do not leave this country from higher, purer motives than mere love of gain. To all those who predict for the South such a brilliant and prosperous career, or believe it, when politicians and land owners predict it, I wish to say, in language that may not be mistaken—you had better remain to see it. But to all of those who feel that the South has been dishonored, and is rapidly becoming dishonorable; who scorn the cowardly, craven, temporizing spirit that has taken possession of so many souls that were once honorable and chivalrous; who see in the future no brighter prospect for the little boy who is now the pride of his father, and the joy of his mother, than the position of a menial hireling, under a Northern capitalist; who tremble for the future of those little angels of purity, that now nestle on our bosoms, or cling about our necks, silently and unconsciously imploring us to protect them from the "factory" and the "public library," where those hordes of disreputable women that throng the large cities of the North and West, receive the training that fits them for their life of shame, I wish to say, come with us."

The Amendment.—The daily papers have a telegraphic sensation once or twice a week, based upon the arrival of some "distinguished Southerner" at Washington, with the news that his State is just about to ratify the constitutional amendment swindle; and thereupon there is a flurry of agitation among those who read and believe the telegraph. The stories are generally sheer humbugs. The Legislature of every Southern State, save Tennessee, to which the amendment swindle has been submitted, has almost unanimously repudiated it; and those gentlemen who thunder about Washington to astonish newspaper correspondents with their wondrous tales, have no more authority to speak for the Southern people than a Choctaw Indian or a Negro Bureau underling. The bogus amendment is not only dead, but the odor of its carcass offends the nostrils of the Southern people as it does the nostrils of those in the North not yet demented with the negro infatuation.—[Crisis.

Ames' M. E. Church Sunday-School.

The members of this Sunday School, and their friends, held a meeting at the residence of Capt. W. B. Armstrong on Thursday evening, the 17th inst., for the purpose of re-organizing the school, which was organized as a Mission Sunday School some three years since, and forming a Sunday School Society, in connection with the Sunday School Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Rev. J. P. Newman, D. D., having been called to the chair, a Society was formed under the title of "The Sunday School Society of the Ames M. E. Church of New Orleans, La.," and a constitution adopted in accordance with the Discipline of the M. E. Church.

The Society then proceeded to the election of officers and visitors for the year 1867, with the following results:

Superintendent	Rev. W. M. Henry.
Ass't Supt	A. B. Westrop.
Secretary	Charles W. Banks.
Treasurer	J. F. Emley.
Librarian	John W. Mass.

VISITORS.

Mrs. L. B. Whitmore, Mrs. W. B. Armstrong,
Mrs. J. P. Newman Mrs. E. Bussy,
Miss L. Jackson.

On motion of Mr. A. B. Westrop, the following persons were appointed a Book Committee, to purchase books for the Sunday School:

Mrs. L. M. Richardson, Rev. A. C. McDonald and Mr. John W. Mass.

On the motion of Mr. John W. Mass, Mr. W. T. Pratt was requested to act as Chorister for the Society during the present year.

The meeting then adjourned.

Ladies' Department.

The Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER II.

The morn is up again—the dewy Morn,
With breath all incense, and with cheek all bloom,
Laughing the clouds away with playful Scorn,
And living as if Earth contain'd no tomb—
And glowing into day.

How many there are who never listen to the melodies of early morning, particularly those living in large cities; and how much of health and vigor is lost by not catching the first fresh breeze that is wafted when "Mighty nature bounds as from her birth." I can never express even my childish delight in beholding this daily new creation calling for all that had life and breath to praise and adore the God of the morning.

What sound is this that falls first upon my ear as I awake from pleasant dreams? Is it the lark's matin notes, or the drowsy chirp of the little birds mingling with the low of kine and the bleat of sheep, all blending with the general hum of early awakening life? No! it is none of these—it is the dear, familiar voice of our honored Father, singing that majestic hymn—

"Lord, in the morning thou shalt hear
My voice ascending high."

And lo! the wings of the morning begin to stir amid the green leaves, as the day-light and sunlight come streaming through the branches of the dear old Family Tree we left last night, Minnie. But who can number the varied scenes that dawn on Earth's pilgrimage with every morning's light! The golden chain that has for so many years bound the loving group together is now to be broken by, perchance, many long days and years of absence—the eldest of the household is going far away.

Minnie, dear, you and sister Cora were the two youngest—sisters Miriam and Edith, the two eldest—and next came our four brothers, followed by four more sisters, making just twelve in all, you know.

I think we younger children, some how, always seemed to look up to Miriam very much as the little children in Germany gaze on the picture of St. Catherine. We imagined her, if not quite a saint, a sort of queen; no doubt because we only remembered her and Edith as grown women—like our Mother; as for Miriam, I could not believe she was ever a little girl as we were, for she appeared dignified, and seldom caressed any of us. We knew very well that whatever she said was law, next to the edict of Father or Mother—not that she compelled us to obey her, or that we loved to do so, but more because there was something in her presence demanding it. Her abilities also impressed us somewhat, as her knowledge of books had raised her to the position of teacher at one time. She also possessed pencils and a box of water-colors; these we were never allowed to handle, not even to touch them with one of our fingers. Minnie, you well remember we learned the ten commandments so soon as we could lisp our little evening prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep!"—still I trust I have been forgiven my childish covetousness, for I did break the tenth many a time when I saw those paints and brushes. But we had the pleasure of looking at the pictures she drew and painted, and I am quite sure les petits enfans in Rome never imagined Raphael, the Divine, a greater artist than we considered our sister Miriam.

At times she sat and sewed, and talked with our Mother while she made or mended our clothes, both seeming happy in each other's society. Our Father, too, appeared to love Miriam very much—I suppose because she was their first-born, and had grown to be a lady, and a companion for them. She must have been almost as familiar with the Itineracy as the wind, having moved over twenty times, and seen nearly all the world they had—journeying over nearly as many weary miles. No marvel if they did love her, for was not her being thus interwoven with theirs?

Still the world Miriam lived in seemed to be far away from the one little girls lived in, and so it was that I never got very near to her, only to half admire and half fear her, just as I have since, at times, stood at a distance and gazed at a statue, and wondered if it was real.

It was not thus with Edith; she seemed, indeed, a part of our very existence, living and breathing in the same atmosphere, and if a saint, more like St. Elizabeth, of whom it is related in German legends, that she clothed and gave bread to many poor and destitute children who came to the door of her castle on the Rhine. During the live long day she listened to our childish troubles, and who can deny that little children do not have sore trials, to them just as formidable as the great mountains that in after years rise up in our life's pathway?—and blessed be the loving one who, with gentle hand or a kind word, says to the little troubled sea, "Peace, be still!" When learning to sew or knit, she would thread our needles, take up the stitches, and turn all the difficult corners in our knitting work. When the night came, and the Mother had other cares, Edith washed us for bed—untying the knots in our apron strings, and the double and twisted hard knots in our little shoe strings. And kneeling with each, listened to our evening prayer. Then tucking us snugly in our little beds, kissed us so tenderly "Good-night!"—we learned to think we could not live without our sweet sister Edith. But remember, dear Minnie, many years afterward drew us thus closely to her heart, and the morning that Miriam was leaving the old Family Tree, you was a wee thing, still in our angel Mother's arms, and I not quite four years old. Seeing tears in Mama's eyes, and trying with my little hand to wipe them away, she told me Miriam was going to leave us. Our Father, too, wept as we knelt around the Family Altar, praying earnestly that God's blessing might rest upon her as she left her home to go far away; the Mother, Edith, and brothers wept, and tears were in all our little eyes. For the first time I felt she was my own dear sister, and that she held a place some where very near my heart, for I recalled how it had swelled with emotion the previous evening when Papa had said, "Miriam, my daughter, sing to me once more 'The Bower of Prayer,'" and the tears glistened in his eyes as he added, "it may be for the last time!" Then she so sweetly warbled

"Dear Bower, I must leave you, and bid you adieu,
And pay my devotions in parts that are new."

Among some stray leaves of my Life's book, I find a few faint memories, even before I first saw you lying in the cradle, my baby sister. Recollections of a wedding at our house, of which I comprehended no more the mystery than I did of the good Doctor's finding you in the woods. I recollect a young man, much smaller in statue than our brothers, dark complexioned, with a sort of Roman nose, looking and acting just as unlike our Father or brothers, as light is from darkness. He came one evening when the spare room was warmed and lighted, and a few friends had gathered with the family, when Miriam came in, dressed in white, leaning on the arm of this young man, and remained standing. Our Father arose, as dignified as if in church, and preached what I imagined, a short sermon to them, closing by "I pronounce you husband and wife."

Some one now informed me that he was my brother-in-law. But my youthful intellect could by no means solve the mystery involved in the law. I think however, the vagaries of my mind concentrated on the idea that it was law attached to brother that gave to him the right to take from us our sister—thus I was very little inclined to love law brothers.

The morning prayers before the departure concluded amid many tears; the breakfast bell rang, and the chairs were placed one by one around the table. I hear, dear Minnie, our Mother's voice of love and prophecy, as it comes from the echoless past—trembling with emotion, while our Father is taking his place at the head of the table, and she standing in her accustomed place with you in her arms. "Listen!—a moment of breathless silence follows. Not one must be absent as we gather around the board this morning, for who can tell if we all ever enjoy this privilege again?" Then placing Cora and I in the high seat, and glancing over the group until every member of the family was seated, according to their ages at the long table —when twenty-eight hands clasped in gratitude, as our Father solemnly invoked the blessing.

I almost feel an icy hand, like Death, grasp me now, as I remember the dark-winged angel that afterward hovered over our household, bearing away our Edith, ere we all gathered again around the breakfast table.

Evangeline.

From the Paris Correspondent of the New York World.

Official Etiquette at the Tuileries.

To-morrow the last series of guests will leave Compeigne, and on the 20th the Emperor and Empress will return to the Tuileries. There is much less of the burden of etiquette in the Emperor's style of reception than in the days of "divine right" in France; but there is a certain degree of ceremony, marking the difference between the welcome of the sovereign, and that of ordinary mortals. Invitations are usually issued for six days. They are printed on rose colored cards in the following style:

[Translation.]

By order of the Emperor, the grand chamberlain has the honor of informing M. ——— that he is invited to pass six days at the palace of Compeigne. An answer is expected.

(Signed) duc de bassano.

There is a special train provided for the favored parties, and upon the arrival at Campeigne, carriages called char a bancs, with four horses, coachmen, and valets in the imperial livery, are in waiting to convey them to the chateau. In the reception hall, in which are stationed like statues, cent gardes, the emperor's especial guard de parade, in their brilliant uniforms of light blue and red, a regiment of servitors receive the guests. Princes are conducted to their apartments by a marshal of the palace; official personages, by a hussier, wearing a dress coat of dark maroon, with sword and cocked hat; ordinary visitors have each a valet de pied at his service. On the door of each room is inscribed the name of the guest who is expected to occupy it.

At seven o'clock the whole company assembles in a grand saloon called the Galerie des Cartes, from the large maps with which the walls are hung; the gentlemen in blue or black dress coats, white or black waistcoats, white cravats, tight pantaloons, and silk stockings; the ladies in full ball dress. A little before the arrival of the Emperor the company alls into line, the ladies on one side, the gentlemen on the other, near the entrance door. The Emperor enters, accompanied by the grand chamberlain and frequently holding the prince imperial by the hand. He passes in front of the gentlemen, speaking to each one in turn, while the Empress, who enters immediately after, is welcoming the ladies. When this ceremony is over, the Empress takes the arm of the Emperor, and, preceded by the grand chamberlain, leads the way to the dinner table, which is set in a room opposite to the Galerie des Cartes.

The gentlemen keep their hats until about to be seated, when they are taken by a valet, who places them on a table until dinner is over. A hundred persons are usually present at the dinner, which is all, except the dessert, served on gold and silver dishes and plates. The dessert service is of the finest Sevres porcelain, each plate being a work of art of great value. The Emperor and Empress are served by private valets. The hussiers and other valets serve the other guests—generally one valet for two persons. The band of the imperial guard plays in an adjoining gallery during the dinner, but not so loudly as to interrupt the conversations.

After the dinner, the Emperor and Empress, followed by the guests, return to the Galerie des Cartes, where coffee is served, after which the Empress gives permission to the gentlemen to go to the smoking-room, and then passes with the ladies to the Salon de Famille. The smokers return to the ladies about ten o'clock, when dancing is begun to the piano—a mechanical instrument, which is turned like an organ, and which is excellent for dancing.

At eleven o'clock tea is handed, and about midnight the Empress courtesies to the company and retires. The Emperor last year remained later than the empress. This year he frequently retires in the early part of the evening. The guests remain in the salons as late as they please.

In the morning tea or chocolate is served in the private apartments. At twelve o'clock the guests assemble in one of the salons, where breakfast is served on small tables. Special favorites are invited to breakfast with the Empress in her salon. After breakfast, the hunt and out-door amusements, in fine weather; conversation, billiards, charades, when it rains, fill up the hours until the time to dress for dinner. Ladies are not expected to appear twice in the same toilet, so that at least twelve elegant dresses are required for the visit.

Slanders issuing from beautiful lips are like spiders crawling from the blushing heart of a rose.

PROSPECTUS OF DIXON'S AGENCY
AND
CORRESPONDENCE BUREAU,

For the benefit of Local and Superannuated Preachers of the M. E. Church.

Room 24, Bible House,
New York, Sept. 5, 1866.

The undersigned, a "local preacher," connected with the 27th Street M. E. Church, in this city, has, through the loss of sight and other causes, found it necessary to accept of various agencies for the purpose of obtaining a livelihood. I have also found it difficult to secure agencies, which, in consideration of the character of the persons or companies engaged in the publication or manufacture of works or articles to be sold; the adaptation of these things to the moral, intellectual or physical welfare of my customers, or the profits arising from sales to enable me conscientiously and profitably to sell the same. Knowing that many other brethren, local, or superannuated preachers, have experienced the same difficulties, I have established an "Agency and Correspondence Bureau," for the benefit of other local and superannuated preachers of the M. E. Church, in the United States and elsewhere.

Correspondence with any of these or any other brethren wishing respectable or profitable agencies, is hereby cordially invited.

The Bureau may also be addressed at this room on any other subject in relation to which it would be for the advantage of these brethren to have a local Correspondent in this city.

Stamps for return answer; and the full address, including the State, plainly written, will be necessary in all cases.

BRECKON DIXON.

New York, September, 1866.

Our knowledge of the wants set forth in this circular, and our confidence in brother Dixon s such, that we hereby cordially endorse the enterprise herein described.

G. L. Thompson, Pastor 27th St. M. E. Ch.
G. W. Woodruff, Pastor 7th St. M. E. Ch.
(See. N. Y. East Conference.)

Rev. B. Dixon has dealt largely with us in the book business, for several years, and we have always found him honorable and correct in all his business matters.

Carlton & Porter, 200 Mulberry St., N. Y.
Concurred in by Rev. H. W. Dikeman,
Pres. of late Nat'l Con. of Local Preachers.

To planters and other persons Employing Freedmen.—Headquarters, Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen and Abandoned Lands, State of Louisiana—New Orleans, La., Jan. 12, 1867.—To correct a false impression which seems to exist as to the matter of obtaining transportation for freedmen, when it is desired to procure labor from other States, under the provisions of a late order of Gen. Howard, Commissioner, etc., Washington, D. C. the public interested are hereby notified that any party can make the necessary application in person, and by complying with the regulations governing the subject, can secure for themselves all the priviliges granted in the order alluded to: No person or persons have any appointment which gives them the sole right to transact this business in this state.

By order of
Bt. Maj. Gen'l. J. A. MOWER, U. S. A.,
Assistant commissioner, etc.
WM. H. STERLING,
Captain 1st. U. S. Infantry,
A. A. A. General.

Ja16 8t

SPECIAL NOTICES.

KELLOGGS' UNITED STATES MERCANTILE REGISTER,

FOR 1867.

We respectfully call your attention to the above-named work, which we have in preparation, and shall publish about the first of the year 1867, and annually thereafter. It will contain in

PART FIRST—The amended Tariff and Revenue Laws, Lists of Money-Order Post Offices and Telegraph Stations, Regulations of the Boards of Trade of the principal Cities of the United States, Tables of Foreign and Domestic Weights and Measures, etc., etc., in short, a large amount of valuable information selected and compiled with a view to make this part of the work a "HAND-BOOK" of ready reference, especially adapted to the wants of business men in

PART SECOND—A complete Business Directory of Wholesale and Manufacturing Houses, Insurance and Express Companies, Banks, and Bankers, etc., etc., of the leading Commercial Cities of the Union—Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco. Each city will appear separately, and the names of the firms will be arranged alphabetically and classified according to business, the whole constituting a complete list of first-hand places of business, which no buyer can afford to be without.

The register will be sold by subscription only, will contain from 600 to 900 octavo pages, as per specimen page within, and will be substantially bound in boards, with leather backs. Every exertion will be made to render it as complete and correct as possible.

Believing the business wants the Register is intended to supply to be general and widely felt, and inspired by the encouragement we have already received, we offer it confidently to the public at Three Dollars per copy, trusting to the just appreciation and liberal patronage of the business men of every section of this great country to sustain us in its publication at that price.

Subscribers will please fill out and remit inclosed subscription blank by return mail.

Kellogg, Johnston & Co.

116 Nassau St., New York.

Of the Southern States—

Sullivan & Jordan,

3 St. Paul St., Baltimore.

A. J. JORDAN, Sup. for New Orleans,

Box 315. No. 187 Camp Street.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan, the eminent Organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzek, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhan, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, cannot be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations sytes and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington sect, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South.

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STREET,

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington Street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Advertiser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion—Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened.
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Haggard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bilious humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor, No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good merchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,

Gen'l Agent for United States.

r10–1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicinal Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12–3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heeting, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,

Agent for locating Homesteads,

Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.

Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4 P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100.

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.

feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,

Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior

PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans. Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.

Corner of Gold street.

FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London, Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Naucher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co., Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowltaon & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.]

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87–1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,

Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,

BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS, ADDRESS,

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart,' in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,

Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.
Interest payable in January and July, in each year.
All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 313C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used 'Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation.)

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and

WILL PAY $1,000

to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY

—AND—

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitters is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum or Whisky, and cannot make Drunkards, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

* * * * * * * * * *

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous system. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,

W. S. SEIGFRIED,

No. 254 Shackamaxon St.

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptis Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMTH,

966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. H. KENNARD,

Eighth, below Coates street.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berns county, Pa, was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D, Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J, formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory,

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

JONES & EVANS,

(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)

Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States ma10 ew

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,

West Troy, N. Y.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.

feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

THE ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL FOR MARCH. Contains Cornelius Vanderbilt, Hon Ezra Cornell, Prof. Mapes, Frederika Bremer, Lavater, Las Casas, Sir John Franklin, Capt. Cook, Revs. John Wesley and Jonathan Edwards;—Talent and Genius;—Extraordinary prediction;—Ghosts;—Origin of Coal;—Varieties of Sheep;—Iron, its uses;—Putting on a bad face;—Tribulation Trepid, and Mr. Hopeful;—The Jew;—Love and Lovers, the Philosophy of Engagements; an Excellent Number, only 20 cents or $2,00 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway New York.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.

J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES; plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops Prices $75, $90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full part ulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,

NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95..... .....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan26

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $5000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton seed and "aa" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Linseed Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—ofte life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city ☞ Consultation free—stamps not forgotten."

[feb3]

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10–1y

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN O

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No. 5. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1867. Whole No.—55

Poetry.

BABY LOOKING OUT FOR ME.

Two little busy hands patting on the window,
Two laughing bright eyes looking out at me;
Two rosy-red cheeks dented with a dimple;
Mother-bird is coming; baby, do you see?

Down by the lilac-bush, something white and azure
Saw I in the window as I passed the tree;
Well I knew the apron and shoulder knots of ribbon,
All belonged to baby looking out for me.

Talking low and tenderly
To myself as mothers will,
Spake I softly: "God in Heaven
Keep my darling free from ill.
Wordly gear and wordly honors
Ask I not for her from Thee;
But from want and sin and sorrow
Keep her ever pure and free."

* * * * * * *

Two little waxen hands,
Folded soft and silently;
Two little curtained eyes
Looking out no more for me;
Two little snowy cheeks,
Dimple-dented nevermore;
Two little trodden shoes,
That will never touch the floor.
Shoulder-ribbon softly twisted,
Apron folded, clean and white;
These are left me—and these only—
Of the childish presence bright.

Thus He sent an answer to my earnest praying,
Thus He keeps my darling free from earthly stain,
Thus He folds the pet lamb safe from earthly straying,
But I miss her sadly by the window pane,
Till I look above it; then, with purer vision,
Sad, I weep no longer the lilac-bush to pass,
For I see her Angel, pure and white and sinless,
Walking with the harpers, by the Sea of Glass.

Two little snowy wings
Softly flutter to and fro,
Two tiny childish hands
Beckon still to me below;
Two tender angel eyes
Watch me ever earnestly
Through the loop-holes of the stars:
Baby's looking out for me.

For the New Orleans Advocate

GENOA.

Genoa is among the most ancient cities of Northern Italy, and has a thrilling military and commercial history. It is located at the head of the Gulf of the same name, and the ground on which it stands is not unlike a crescent—the lengthened horns of which extend far into the sea. The hills on which the city is built rise gradually from the shore to the height of several hundred feet, and to one approaching it from the sea, the town is seen to best advantage, and appears exceedingly picturesque. Genoa is compactly built; the streets are narrow, and the buildings high. The people are apparently thrifty and industrious. The Genoese ladies have more than ordinary beauty, and the elegant pezzotte, which is a thin gauze veil worn upon the head, adds to their gay appearance. But the beggars and Capuchin monks are hateful looking objects, and with the latter, especially, filth seemed a virtue. The square fronting the Exchange was crowded with men of every description, both as to dress and intellect, busily engaged in animated conversations on stocks, commerce and politics.

After winding for an hour through long, narrow lanes, stopping occasionally to examine some pretty specimens of filigree work and other curiosities, we came to the Cathedral of St. Lorenzo, founded in the eleventh century. It is a noble old structure, containing many objects of interest; but its chief attraction is the Chapel of St. John, the Baptist, into which females are allowed to enter only once a year. This exclusion is a penalty imposed on the gentler sex by Pope Innocent VIII., in revenge of the daughter of Herodias. According to the same philosophy, I suppose, the priests do not marry, to revenge themselves on dear old mother Eve. In other parts of Catholic Italy similar disabilities are imposod upon women, which is inconsistent with the recently promulgated doctrine, exalting Mary to the throne of her son. I wonder if the Pope would allow her to enter this Chapel were she to revisit our earth? Among the relics here preserved is the chain which bound St. John, and through the iron railing which encloses the chapel I saw representations in relief of Adam and Eve, which are not particularly flattering to our first parents, especially that of Eve, whose face resembles Queen Victoria's. In a side chapel, next to the Choir, I saw a grand painting of the Crucifixion, but the colors of the garments of the Marys and of St. John are too bright for a scene so mournful. But of all the churches in Genoa, that of the Annunciation is the most remarkable, both for its wealth and the splendor of its decorations. The floors are of marble, and also the fourteen immense columns which support the roof. The ceilings of the nave, aisles, transept and choir are literally covered with gildings and paintings. I counted in all 284 pictures on the walls and ceilings, representing Scriptural scenes after the Popish notion; and the interior of the beautiful dome, surmounting the transept, is one splendid picture gallery. This elegant church is said to be a monument of private munificence.

Next to the churches in Genoa in richness and magnificence, are the ducal palaces, containing many objects of real interest. They are of marble, and are adorned with lovely courts. In the Pallazzo Baignole is a wonderful picture of Thomas, touching the Savior's wounds. The expression of condescension on the part of Christ, and of curious inquiry in the face of Thomas, is excellent. In looking upon it, you almost fancy you are a spectator of the scene. But the Royal Palace afforded me the greatest pleasure. It is the town residence of King Victor Emanuel, whose name and deeds have attracted the attention of the world. The furniture of this palace is superb. The walls of the throne room are lined with rich red velvet; the ceiling is handsomely painted; the door handles are of heavy gilt, and over the throne is a magnificent canopy of velvet, trimmed with gold. It was in this palace I saw the first and only picture of Columbus, in Genoa. He is represented as on the eve of departure to discover a new world, and committing his son to the care of some Capuchin monks, who are standing on the shore. Here also is the bed on which Napoleon III. slept in 1859. The quilt is of white satin, fringed with gold. Was sleep sweeter for that? Among the celebrated pictures in this kingly residence are two worthy of notice. One is a representation of Mary washing the Savior's feet, and the other is a Crucifixion scene, by Vandyke, in which that great artist has displayed all his wonderful genius. In the latter the countenance of the Redeemer is the image of agony, and the muscles of His limbs are strained in the most painful manner.

Adjoining the Queen's toilet room is a curious machine, called Macchina, in which the royal family descend and ascend through a hatchway, from the several stories of the palace. It is a square box, prettily lined with silk cushions, to which is attached two chains, which are thrown over an immense wheel situated in the attic, and turned by hand power. It is a labor saving machine, conferring its greatest benefits upon woman, whose health is too often impaired by the necessity of climbing up long flights of stairs—an objectionable feature of modern architecture. From the marble terrace of the palace, facing the sea, is obtained a noble view of the Bay of Genoa and of the surrounding hills, dotted with splendid mansions. Returning to our hotel, we passed a small shop crowded with men, women and children. Over the door was the sign "Baneo del Lotto;" a Lottery Office, in which those poor creatures were staking their money for a prize which few, if any, ever win. The numbers that day to be drawn were "65, 33, 38, 13 and 85," and there were four chances to one of losing. Lotteries here are a government monopoly, from which a large revenue to the state is derived. But their corrupting influences more than counterbalence the amount gained. In the afternoon we strolled down to the harbor, which is neither capacious nor commodious, but which has a sanctity from its association with the embarkation of Columbus. In view of the dangers of the Bay, the Genoese have constructed a noble lighthouse, formed of white marble and rising 385 feet above the level of the sea. Owing to the height, and the narrowness of the steps, the ascent was exceedingly fatiguing, but the view from the top and the explanation of the working of the machinery well repaid the toil. Around a small oil lamp are placed large circular cylinders of rock crystal, with mirrors at the bottom and top to reflect the light.

(Concluded next week.)

From the Methodist.

Missionary Anniversary.

(Concluded.)

SPEECH OF DR. M'CLINTOCK.

Rev. Dr. McClintock was introduced and said:

MR. CHAIRMAN—I really think that I ought to ask to have my speech postponed to some future occasion, and I believe if you will take a vote of the audience that they will say "yes" to this proposition. For, in the first place, it is now a quarter to one o'clock [cries of "Go on, go on, go on"], and although the speeches that we have just heard have somewhat fired us up, it is very cold here. It may be warm down below there, but really, to make a speech on the subject which has been assigned to me would be a very difficult task. Besides, two thirds of my audience are ladies, and I am to talk about the duties of Christian young men in regard to their devotion to the work of missions. (Laughter.) But then the young men will not go to any place without the young ladies, and, perhaps, a speech made under these circumstances would tell if there was any chance for it.

That vast procession that Bishop Thomson spoke of, that marched before us in the grandeur of a length which in our imagination seems interminable, overwhelmed me for a moment. I could not get it out of my mind; it seemed to oppress me as a nightmare does in some bad dreams. Nineteen hundred years one should have to stand and wait to see the tremendous march go by! Not that they in nineteen hundred years crossed over, but it would occupy at least nineteen hundred years for them to move around the earth. I began to think of a conversation I had with Dr. Durbin. We were talking together (and I do not suppose if any one talks with him for an hour that he can avoid touching upon the subject of missions) upon the subject of missions; and I think I suggested this text: "This man when he had made one sacrifice for sin, for ever sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high," there waiting "until his enemies be made his footstool," which also does away with all that fearful Romish power which Mr. Long was talking about. That one text is its doom, for that is an inspired word, and inspired words never fail of their accomplishment. The triumph lies in those words, and more than that, this was the comfort.

What does that mean? It means that he who died for the sins of the whole world waits, waits, and is willing to wait, not merely year after year, but decade after decade and century after century, waiting until his enemies be made his footstool. Now his enemies are to be made his footstool; and I triumph in that, when the foe seems so tremenduous. Then that terrific procession which Bishop Thomson described has lost its terror, when I think of the promise given thirty-three hundred years ago: "As I live, saith the Lord, all nations shall be filled with the glory of God." I rest on it this day, exultingly and triumphantly, in the face of the foe. But along with that is that other thought, the eternal waiting, the serene, the sublime, the infinite patience of the Savior of the world, as he sits waiting until his triumph shall come—waiting until the travail of his soul shall be satisfied. And, sir, what is he waiting for? He is waiting until you, and I, and these men here, and all these Christians, and all the creatures of all the earth shall once again conceive of what is the travail of the Redeemer's soul, and will learn to sympathize with it. I feel it in me to-day that the triumph is coming along which the Savior has waited in his infinite patience. We hear the sound of it from all the ends of the earth. Our Bishop has brought it to us to-day from China. Our brother Long has brought it from that old region of civilization, that magnificent home of a grand literature ages before our American soil was known to Europe, that birthplace of reform before the Reformation, that grand old soil from which sprang up the noble figures that he painted for us.

Why, Mr. President, the fulness of time was eighteen hundred years ago; and yet, according to the Bishop, mankind upon the earth are to be divided into two classes—the Chinese, and the rest of the world. (Laughter and applause.) I felt much pleased with that point of his. It had never struck me before—namely: that when the Chinese language is mastered, you have an avenue to five hundred millions, for that I think the figure ought to be; but to get at the rest of the races a whole Babel of tongues must be mastered. There is great hope in that. I declare to you, Mr. President and Bishop, after that speech, if I were only twenty years of age, I would begin to study the Chinese at once, and it would not be long before I would go out there. Are there any young men of such spirit here, or any young ladies who have their eyes on any young men who are not here, and who will go home and tell them of that? I had intended to make an argument in the speech which was set down for me. It would have been a twofold argument, if there had been a chance.

Voices—"Go on with it."

Dr. McClintock—But I am determined not to make an argument. I will say, however, that all who are called to the ministry are open to missionary labors. I mean that they have got to come to this point, that when a man considers he is called to the work of the ministry, he should understand that the ministry includes missions. (Applause.)

That is what I intended to demonstrate this morning. The Church of God, what is it? It is the Kingdom of Christ. It is his organ on earth, as well as his earthly dwelling place. And did Christ die only for the civilized people? Should we, then, only think of the civilized lands that lie about us? The young men that I have talked with speak pretty much in this strain: "I want to stay at home and share in the great movements of the times (these young men I especially mean who have come up within the last fifteen or twenty years), where we have heard so much of pantheism, and liberal theology, and the philosophy of the age;" just as if the philosophy of every age had not its day and power, and had not passed away; just as if it had not been so from the beginning, and would not be so to the end. Young men say: "I want to stay home in the Church. I am studying up those great elements, and I want to do my share with Romanism, with superstition on the one hand, and rationalism and the higher development of pantheism on the other hand." But it does seem to me that if I were a young man, I should know that the very home and birthplace, the original cradle of this pantheism which terrifies so many people now, and which is not so terrible after all—the very birth-place of it has been in these Eastern countries; and though Emerson and others make it loom up so largely upon our little American horizon, these are still the old ideas. And these men are doing nothing after all but bringing out of that past old forms, and clothing them in modern garb to terrify the boys and girls of the nineteenth century. (Applause.) You will find sufficient there to occupy you, both in your thoughts, in your learning, and in your argument. As for rationalists, the Bishop tells you China is full of them, and if we had a man here from India, he would tell you that India is full of rationalists, and that is one step back farther from pantheism. But they are really on the ascending track from the depths of darkness up toward the eternal sources of life, and it is our work to help them upward.

Youth, again, I need not say, is the period of enterprise and ambition. Young men feel their oats almost always (laughter), and the blood stirs in them. Often they do not know what it means. The blood stirs in them rapidly. "I want to do this, and I want to do that." It is a grand and noble thing, and God has ordained it that there shall be young men for action. In consequence of that decree, it has come to pass that if our missionary work is to be done at all, it is to be done by young men. Is not that so, Dr. Durbin?

Rev. Dr. Durbin—Yes.

Dr. McClintock.—Then my speech is accomplished.

What is needed more than anything else in young men is "pluck"—enterprise. All the world has been standing still lately, till about the tenth day of January, or did stand still, at least for a little while, to come down to moderate phrases, just to look at three little yachts, specks upon the ocean, threading their way across the sea. And when they got into those old classic waters, guns were fired, flags were unfurled, balls were opened, a queen came down to the beach to see, and houses of the nobility and gentry threw their portals wide open to let those Yankee boys go in. (Applause.) Why is it, sir, What is it all about? Why, sir, it was the springing up of the old Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Norman blood, the old Norse blood, the blood of the decendants of the Vikings, who always rise up and open their nostrils as they snuff the brine; the blood that has made Britain and America masters of the sea, in order that being masters of the sea we shall do our Master's work upon it, and go to the ends of the earth to glorify his name. (Applause.) What was it, sir? Admiration of the spirit of enterprise in these young men and "pluck." One of the masters was in one of these yachts, and everybody in England and everybody in America will know that man's name, and think there is a good deal in him. (Applause.)

Are you a Christian, young man, and have you any "pluck," (laughter,) the missionary field is open to you. If you would rather stay at home and await your chance for my old appointment at St. Paul's, I hope you will get it. I hope you will study to make men of yourselves; I hope the bishops will send you to the best places; but I tell you that if you have any "pluck" (and it don't require much "pluck" to go to St. Paul's, I think, for I have tried it twice myself)—(laughter]—I would advise you to turn your attention to those countries we have heard mentioned. I was riding in the cars the other day when a one-armed man handed me a newspaper, The Soldier's Friend. I bought it, as I always do, and on reading it found the names of various young men who had fought in the war of 1812 and in the recent conflict, and who had perished in the cause of freedom. All I desire is for young men to display the same earnestness and the same zeal in the cause of Christ, and the glad tidings will soon prevail in the furthest confines of the earth. "When the Eternal King shall come," says John Milton in one passage of that immortal prose of his, which is better than another man's verse—"When the Eternal King shall come to judge the earth and to distribute just rewards to those that have served him here, then shall they, who by their service to mankind, to their country, and to Christ, have reason to rejoice in the best fruits of a labor for God—then shall they receive above the beatific titles that shall be given to all in their glorious names of princedoms, powers, dignities and principalities, and to all eternity shall clasp inseparable hands with joy and bliss for ever." I think that John Milton wrote that with reference to missionaries. After singing the audience was dismissed with the benediction by Bishop Janes.

"From Greenland's icy mountain,"

A Sermon by Rev. Evans Green, (Colored.)

DELIVERED IN GREATMAN ST. CHURCH, JAN. 27, 1867.

Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land;

But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.—ISAIAH 1. 18-20.

My friends, these words were spoken by the mouth of the prophet Isaiah. He prophesied 760 years before Christ, in those olden times when God "spake in divers manners unto the fathers by the prophets," but now speaks unto us by his Son. The people in that day engaged in rebellion against God, and had gone astray. Though God had nourished and brought them up, still they sinned and rebelled against him. Isaiah invites them to come and reason. Though you have sinned and gone astray, yet come back and reason, count the cost, turn it over in your hearts. You have been rebels but now he is ready to forgive. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." Come, then, and let us reason, for if you will listen you shall receive pardon, and "shall eat the fruit of the land" But if you "refuse and rebel, you shall be devoured with the sword; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

This portion has direct reference to you that are out of the ark of safety. I call upon you to-day to come and reason. See how God has delivered your fathers, see how he has always led his people, and yet you have rebelled. He has taken care of you, and still you have sinned against him. Do you not wish to reason? To-day if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts. The Spirit strives with you; the Savior has died for you, and promises pardon. Come now; to-morrow you may be in eternity. Yes, to-morrow we may be called to sing, "Hark, from the tombs a doleful sound" around your grave. Oh, who won't reason about their sins this evening. This may be your last opportunity to reason with God. Sinner, for 40, or 50, or 60 years, perhaps, you have never reasoned about your soul, you have never inquired for a way of escape.

Think how much the Lord has done for you. He has given you a Savior. Isaiah prophesied, "unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Come to this Counsellor, this Mighty God, and reason about your soul's salvation.

O, how precious are the promises of God, and what he has said is true—his word never fails. When he promises, he will perform; when he threatens, he will surely punish. In olden times he spake in dreams and visions, in clouds and darkness and fire; but now he speaks by his Son. Jesus calls you; He who died for you asks you to come to Him. It is a good thing to reason anyhow.

But how shall I reason? You have a great deal to reason about. You must reason about your soul. You want to save it, and you have to learn to deny yourself, to break off from your sins, stop lying, quit your bad habits, lay aside everything like sin, give up your persecutions, not bear false witness, nor get drunk, nor gamble. You can't come to God with your sins. You must leave them all off, and then come to him just as you are, and beg for pardon.

Every man that lives has a conscience, and this tells him that he ought to yield. The prophet lived in a dark age of the world. Shall we who live in this enlightened day refuse to repent? Everything has been done for us—Jesus has come to earth. He was born in a manger; he visited the poor; he wept over his enemies; he sweat great drops of blood in the garden; he hung three dreadful hours in pain. We are told that when he groaned all nature shook, that every star was darkened, that the moon turned black, and the sun refused to shine. He was made a little lower than the angels, that he might taste death for every man. Sinner, he died for you, and rose again, and the gospel is brought to every man. We have no excuse. Churches have been erected, ministers have been appointed. You have no excuse, and if you will go down to hell, you will have no reason to give for being there. O, listen to the Savior. He speaks to you now. Through an organ of clay, he speaks to you. Jesus speaks to his ministers, and they speak to you.

I sometimes see gentlemen and ladies that look respectable rushing along to destruction like the unthoughted horse into the battle. It is an awful thing, yet God is willing to reason with you. He is ready to forgive your sins. To-day he will forgive if you will come. Man would have had no patience with you, but Jesus is meek and lowly in heart. God is kind and long-suffering. No matter how bad you are, he calls you to come to him. All are redeemed, every man may come. Then why will you die? To the ungodly I would say, will you not come? I am so glad that I reasoned and came to God when I was young. Do you say, how shall I come? Ask these christians. Ah, you remember when your heart was heavy; when it was night, you wished it was day, and when it was day you wished it was night. But you said, I will find him or die trying. At last your own house turned against you. I remember when I went out to make the last prayer, I had done all I could, I gave up all, and it was all that I could do. And when all hope fled, and I let go all and thought I was lost, Jesus snatched my soul, and I said, Glory, honor and power to God. When my eyes flew open, I beheld such a light, and I sang a new song; I sang redeeming grace and dying love. When you do turn, you will be sorry that you did not come years before. Is it not strange that men require so much persuading?

"If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat of the fruit of the land. But if ye refuse and rebel ye shall be devoured with the sword." This is God's word, and he will keep it. If they had been willing to reason, the sword would have been turned away. He warned them and tried to pursuade them to stop before they were destroyed. This is the reason why I try to preach to you this afternoon You will not be devoured with the sword, but will lose your souls, It is a serious thing to lose your souls. After God has lifted your chains, made the impossible possible, yet, you will not serve him. If there is any people that ought to serve God it is we Eth-opians; we that have had hard-task masters. We ought certainly to serve him. Four millions have marched out of bondage to liberty and we ought to be thankful. Remember the ancient Israel of God how they rebelled. Three men rose up and led off the people saying "we are as much preachers as Moses or Aaron." God sent fiery serpents among them; take care he dont send them among us. Why, see how they are bitten, they cry to Moses and he made a brazen serpent; when that went up, a great many eyes went up with it. Some would not look and they died. They would not believe. Jesus is raised up before you. Look unto him and be saved. Oh, may you come, I am so sorry to see people sitting on their steps and staying away from church. If we don't mend up God will send something to fly among us. We hope our friends will tell their friends to come to church. We don't want to go to heaven alone. Don't you want stars in your crown? Don't you want to be known when you come to the portals by the stars in your crown? Each soul that you bring to Christ will be a star in your crown. May you have many such, and may the Lord bless these words to your good.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Dossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year.....$4 00
Six Months.....2 00
Three Months.....1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion.....$1 50
" each subsequent insertion.... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Orders left at 65 Poydras Street, or at our office, No. 7 Prytania Street, will receive full attention.

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

Premiums! Premiums!

As an inducement to our Preachers to obtain subscribers for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867, we offer them the following premiums:

1. To any Preacher who shall obtain for us Forty New Subscribers for the year 1867, and send us the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the Bible, consisting of six large volumes.

2. For Thirty Subscribers and the money, we will give Clark's Commentary on the New Testament, in two large volumes.

3. For twenty Subscribers and the money, we will give Watson's Theological Institutes, in two volumes.

4. For Ten Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Sermons, in two volumes.

5. For Five Subscribers and the money, we will give Wesley's Notes on the New Testament.

Brethren will observe that these Subscribers are to be for the Whole Year. The money may be paid to the Presiding Elder of your District, quarterly, in advance; but, where it can be done, pay the $4, in advance.

Now, Brethren, for a Grand Rally! Go to work. The prize is before you. Who will be the first to obtain the Premiums?

Renew!

Have you renewed your subscription for the New Orleans Advocate for 1867?

Send or call at our office, No. 7 Prytania street, and renew your subscription for 1867. Office hours from 12 M. to 3 P. M.

FUNERAL HONORS.

ALBERT SIDNEY JOHNSTON.

The people of New Orleans are not forgetful of their heroes. Their respect for the men who were their leaders in the late rebellion amounts to hero-worship. Their military reverses have strengthened, rather than diminished their admiration for their great chieftains. They refer to them in terms of profound regard, and never fail to designate them by the military titles they bore during the war. The spirit of the South is unconquered. Whenever an opportunity is offered, that spirit is manifested in the most emphatic manner, and such public demonstrations are made as our military authorities permit; and were it not for the restraint of such authority, Southern enthusiasm for the heroes of the "Lost Cause" would know no bounds. Within a week we have had evidence of this state of facts.

Albert Sidney Johnston fell in the early part of the rebellion, and about a month prior to the arrival of General Butler in this city was interred in the St. Louis Cemetery, in Mayor Monroe's tomb. In compliance with the last wish of the deceased, to be buried in Texas, a committee from that State arrived here last week, and the dead was disinterred. At the tomb, the burial service of the Episcopal Church was read by Dr. Beckwith and Dr. Leacock—the former a Chaplain in Lee's army, and the latter sent from this city by order of General Butler. Among the pall-bearers were Beauregard, Bragg, Hood, Longstreet, Buckner and Dick Taylor. The hearse was made of black cypress, richly mounted with silver, and had never before been used—and was drawn by black horses. More than a thousand persons formed into procession and escorted the body to the levee, whence it was carried across the river to the Opelousas Depot, en route for Texas. In the long cortege there were but six carriages, occupied by the clergy and a few intimate friends. As a mark of greater respect, even the ladies were on foot, and walked through the mud and mire in the middle of the street. Not a few of them were of advanced years, while all of them belonged to the "first families of New Orleans." Their sympathy with the principles of the dead was unmistakable, as their admiration for his character was most manifest.

The honors paid to the dead soldier in this city were purely civic, but at Galveston, something more was attempted, and the programme would have been carried out had it not been for military interference. It was part of the plan to close the stores, drape the buildings, toll the church bells, and to have the cortege march to the strains of martial music. But General Griffin, who is in command at Galveston, issued a prohibitory order, a part of which is the following:

"If the body can be taken quietly, without any ringing of bells, public or popular demonstration from the point of its arrival, direct to the point of its departure from the city, no objection will be made."

This of course excited the indignation of the "reconstructed," and the Mayor of Galveston telegraphed to Maj. Gen. Sheridan to suspend Griffin's order, and permit the funeral programme to he carried out; but Gen. Sheridan gave the following prompt and appropriate reply:

Mr. Chas. A. Leonard, Mayor of Galveston, Texas:

Sir—I respectfully decline to grant your request.

I have too much regard for the memory of the brave men who died to preserve our Government, to authorize Confederate demonstrations over the remains of any one who attempted to destroy it.

(Signed) P. H. Sheridan,
Major General U. S. A.

This little episode has excited the wrath of our city dailies. On Saturday last the Times called on General Sheridan to suspend the offending Griffin, and felt confident in Sheridan's "well known magnanimity," but on Sunday the Times was compelled to publish the General's dispatch. The Crescent was more sensible, and sought to soothe the public mind by paying the most extraordinary compliments to the dead, and closed its eulogy in the following bombastic strain:

"In life, he possessed a serenity of soul which could have viewed with composure the dissolution of the world and a revolution in the universe."

HENRY WATKINS ALLEN.

Dead were exchanged for dead. On the same day on which the remains of A. S. Johnston were taken from our city, the corpse of Henry Watkins Allen arrived in New Orleans from Vera Cruz. As former Governor of Louisiana, and as one of the officers of the Confederate army, who died from the effects of a wound received in battle, Mr. Allen was popular in this city, and especially as he had fallen in defense of the "Lost Cause." His final funeral obsequies took place on Sunday last. The coffin was placed before the altar in Christ Church, and the Rev. Bishop Wilmer read the service for the dead. The church was more than crowded with ladies, and every mark of respect was paid to the departed. After the church service, more than 5000 citizens formed in procession, including 600 ladies, who marched on foot in the middle of the street, to the Washington Cemeterey more than a mile distant. Silently the, cortege moved to the house of the dead, illustrating thereby an admiration for the defender of the "Lost Cause," which was too emphatic to be misunderstood. Around the tomb a multitude of people had gathered, and ere the coffin was placed in the vault, the ladies approached to touch the coffin and take therefrom some flowers which had been gathered in honor of the dead.

Such solemn demonstrations in the very presence of Death must convince mankind that the people of the South are unchanged in their political sentiments, and that they are neither ashamed of their "Lost Cause," nor afraid to honor those who died in its defense. The object of this observation is not made in condemnation of the respectful interment of the unconscious dead, but to remind our national legislators of the animus of the people, for the government of whom they are to make laws.

MRS. MARTHA G. TEMPLE.

She was a Union woman, the daughter of a loyal Tennessean. At the close of the war she married Captain C. H. Temple, who has been in the U. S. Army for fifteen years.

In one of the first engagements of the war he was dangerously wounded by receiving a ball in his right lung, a fracture of the skull, and the carrying away of a part of one foot by a shell. After recovering from these wounds, he re-entered the service in a regiment of Illinois cavalry, and rendered distinguished service in East Tennesse, as a scout, when he was again wounded. The close of the war found him in service with his regiment in Arkansas, near Pine Bluff, where he married the daughter of a Union man from Tennessee.

Moving from thence to the upper Red River country, he engaged in planting in partnership with some citizens of Sevier county, Arkansas, where in consequence of the great influence which he exercised over the freedmen, he was permitted for some time to labor unmolested. His untiring energy produced him a very considerable crop of cotton, although once overflowed by the freshet of the river—when most other planters failed to secure any crop whatever. About the time his cotton had began to mature, his fancied security was soon withdrawn, and a series of persecutions substituted. His life was threatened on every side, and attempted on several occasions, during one of which he was again wounded. About two months since, finding his situation so precarious, without the protection either of civil or military authority, the life of himself, family and freedmen, as well as his property in constant peril, he came to this city for the purpose of securing the assistance of the military in getting his family and property out of that country, as he could not have done so otherwise. He was granted an escort of twenty men by General Sheridan; all that could be spared at that time. Upon his return home with the detachment mentioned, under command of Brevet Major Granger, he found his house vacant, his young wife and infant driven to take refuge among the freedmen, some miles into the interior of Arkansas, and a young man in his employ, named Davidson, who had also served in the Union army, compelled to fly to the woods to escape being murdered. His horses and cotton were seized by his partner in the planting business, and the former taken away into the interior of the country. The force sent for his protection proved wholly inadequate, and were in great danger of being massacred by the infuriated reconstructed Johnsonians, who assembled in numbers upward of three hundred strong, fully armed, at Boston, Bowie county, Texas, Linden, Texas, and Richmond, Arkannas, the three towns adjacent to where he, Temple, had lived. It was found necessary for the officer commanding the detachment to avoid Boston and Richmond, but being compelled to pass through Linden, in hopes of securing the interference of the United States troops; but to bring on a conflict, a gang of freedmen shackled and chained were paraded and marched through the streets in the presence of Capt. Granger and his troops. All means of transportation, either for Capt. Temple and family, or the troops, were denied, and the sale of subsistence refused, and the party was compelled to travel upwards of one hundred miles, most of the way on foot. The wife of Capt. Temple rode the distance in an ox-cart, exposed during the time to the inclemency of the weather, and for several nights without shelter, until the party arrived at Jefferson.

The conclusion of this barbarous treatment has been that Captain Temple, wife and child, arrived in this city on Monday evening, in a destitute condition, and prostrated from hardships and exposures. Mrs. Temple was with great difficulty carried from the stateroom on the steamer Alabama, to the rooms of Maj. Carroll, where she remained in a sinking condition until Thursday night, when she expired.

On Saturday last this amiable but unfortunate lady was quietly interred. A few friends of her afflicted husband were present to honor the worthy dead. Had her husband served with Johnston and Allen in the rebel army, thousands would have followed her to the grave. But among those who attended the funeral were Brevet Major General Mower, commanding the District of Louisiana, Brevet Maj. Gen. Hatch, commanding the post of New Orleans, Judge Warmoth, H. C. Dibble, and a few others. She will yet be honored!

CHURCH CASTE.

Or, The Southern Presbyterian Church versus Jesus Christ.

One of the most flagrant violations of a great doctrine by those who hold it in theory, has been lately practiced by the Southern Presbyterian Church. The Presbyterian body has always laid great stress on the supreme headship of Jesus Christ in the Church, against the usurpations of the Church of Rome, which consist mainly in exalting the Pope to be Pontifex Maximus, the infallible head, the ultimate authority in doctrine and ecclesiastical polity. The church which glories in John Knox as one of its brightest lights, has stoutly denied to the Pope that exalted place, declaring that Jesus Christ alone is High Priest and King in Zion.

It has been reserved for the Southern branch of that great body which has done such valiant service for God, to exalt the church above Christ, the body above the head. This is but a form of popery, which is Churchianity versus Christianity, the Pope being the embodiment of the church. Thus the Southern Presbyterian Church has apostatised from the faith, and has joined hands with anti-Christ. It has, as we shall show, even gone beyond the Church of Rome in at least one vital point—in its practical denial of the supreme headship of the Redeemer. Having allied itself to slavery, which is at least anti-Christian, it has proceeded further in its course of apostacy, to become anti-Christ itself. It has put itself face to face with Christ, boldly confronted him in the exercise of his Kingly office, and trampled upon his Sovereign decrees.

We use bold language, but our proof is at hand, and it is such as to make good Presbyterians of other latitudes stand aghast.

Let us now turn to that Scripture which so clearly declares one great prerogative of Jesus Christ:

"One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all. But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Wherefore, he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men .... And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ."

"Pastors and teachers" are here declared to be the gifts of Christ to the churches. It is to Him they are to pray for ministers, and it is from Him they are to receive them. A preacher who is not sent or given by Jesus Christ is not a minister of Christ. This used to be good Presbyterian doctrine, even at the South. But what saith the Southern Presbyterian church of to-day, in the following Resolutions, adopted by the General Assembly, at Memphis, on the 25th of November, 1866?

"Third. That in the judgment of the Assembly, it is highly inexpedient that there should be an ecclesiastical separation of the white and colored men..... Should they decline the fellowship of ordinances, and desire a separate organization, then our Sessions are authorized to organize them into branch congregations. In such cases the Assembly recommends that such congregations shall be allowed, under the sanction of the Sessions, to elect from among themselves every year, such number of Superintendents, or Watchmen, as the Sessions may advise, who shall be charged with the oversight of such congregations.

Fourth. Whenever Presbyteries may find it necessary to organize separate colored organizations, they shall appoint a commission of Elders [laymen!], who shall discharge the functions committed to the Sessions in the preceding resolution.

Fifth. That nothing in our Standard or in the Word of God [!] prohibits the introduction into the gospel ministry of duly qualified persons of any race, yet difficulties arise in the general structure of society [!], and from providential [oh, shame!] causes, which may and should restrain the application in the church of this abstract principle [!]. Holding this in view, the Assembly recommend that whenever a Session or Presbytery shall find a colored person who possesses suitable qualifications, they are authorized to license [not ordain] him to labor as an exhorter among the colored people, under the supervision of the body appointing him."

If this is not setting Jesus Christ summarily aside, and putting a company of men called a Session or Presbytery in his place, we do not understand language. The shame of it is, that the very men who pass such decrees forbidding ordination, i. e. a full recognition of pastoral authority, to a colored man, do not deny that Jesus Christ may call even colored persons into the gospel ministry. This they concede in the premises, and then deliberately proceed to deny in their inferences. A colored man may be given to a church by its divine head, as its pastor or teacher. He is the man of their choice, the answer to their prayers. But the Southern Presbyterian Church steps in with its prohibition of the acceptance of that gift of Christ. It says to that Church, "You shall not have this gift in full, according to the intent of the ascended Giver. You may have him as an exhorter, but he shall not be known as a pastor and teacher, no, not though he be Christ's gift to you as such. He shall not stand on an ecclesiastical equality with our white ministers. True, they and he were alike given by Christ as pastors and teachers, but—"difficulties arise in the general structure of society, and from providential causes, which may and should restrain" the recognition of both as entitled to the same office. Let the white gift be a pastor, and the black gift an exhorter. Go, and be content, ye gifts of a darker hue, to take a subordinate position!"

In order to give any logical consistency to this action, it is declared that the "general structure of society" as it exists in the Southern States, is a "providential" difficulty in the way of ordaining a black man to the gospel ministry. The Providence of God is the screen which is to cover up that pride of man which refuses to acknowledge the full manhood of the colored minister. But be not deceived. God is not mocked. The so-called church which thus despises and degrades the "gifts" of Christ, must receive his frown. No wonder the New York Observer, heretofore an earnest defender of Southern Presbyterianism, says, "This Assembly has established in the House of God a system of caste such as, we believe, has never been officially recognized by the church before. We regard the position taken by this Assembly as one of the gravest mistakes (to call it by no harsher name) ever made by a body of Christian ministers convened as a court of Jesus Christ and acting in his name." Another religious cotemporary says, "Such a decision is revolting to an enlightened christianity."

It outdoes anti-Christian Rome, for Rome has never denied ordination to men because of color.

Among Protestant Churches, the Southern Presbyterian stands unenviably alone in this matter of clerical caste. The Episcopalians, through Bishop Smith of Kentucky, lately admitted a colored man to "holy orders" in the office of deacon; the gentleman thus advanced, being a graduate of the Divinity School in Philadelphia, and reputed to be a "good scholar in general literature and sacred philosophy." We learn that a colored bishop is to be consecrated for the Liberian diocese. Methodists and Baptists have always recognized black men as elegible to the ministry.

What then must we think of the claim to be called a church of Christ preferred by an Ecclesiastical Body, which in its highest court of judicature, after protracted discussion, deliberately records its judgment that the black man must be held ecclesiastically inferior to the white man, and that too, when itself concedes that the Divine Head of the church may call black men to the office of pastor and teacher!

In the name of our common Christianity, we proclaim the fundamental doctrine of "equal rights before the law" of Jesus Christ, for black and white, and declare the denial of that equality to be an evidence of apostacy, a denial of the Supreme Headship of Jesus Christ.

We are glad to add that the doctrines of the foregoing resolutions were opposed by a few members of the Assembly, particularly by the Rev. Dr. Atkinson, Pres. of Hampden Sydney College. But such men were overborne by the large majority, and the Southern Presbyterian Church took its stand versus Jesus Christ.

Good Cheer!

Our highly esteemed friends—C. P. Easton, of Albany, N. Y., Isaac Kid, Jr., of Peekshill, N. Y., and Rev. Wm. Holmes of Aberdeen, Miss., have sent us cheering words and a goodly number of subscribers.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Information wanted by Christiana Butcher, of Glouster County, Va., who desires information concerning her Father, Robin Butcher, a Baptist Preacher, of Glouster County, Va., and a brother, named Robin Butcher, who did belong to a gentleman by the name of Emanuel Jones, of Essex County, Va., and a Sister, named, Emily Butcher.

Also, Sallie Butcher; the last account of her she was in Richmond, Va., and Elenoro Butcher, of Taladigo County, Ala. She was sold by John F. Tomkeys, to a man named Roberts. The last account of her, she was living near Greensboro, Ala.

C. Butcher.

The Best Musical Instrument for the Family.—"The Piano-forte," says the American Baptist, "extensively as it is used, is not so well adapted to all the purposes of sacred and secular music as another instrument which is now justly claiming a large share of public attention, and which has already been extensively introduced into the schools, churches, and families, and received the indorsement of the chief organists, musicians, and artists of America—we mean Mason & Hamlin's Organ."

GOV. WELLS' MESSAGE.

We regret that we have not space to give more than a synopsis of the Message of Governor Wells to the Legislature of Louisiana. This document was transmitted to the General Assembly last Monday, and considering the political complexion of that body, its tone is somewhat remarkable. It will be remembered that was first elected Lieutenant Governor of this State on the ticket with Hon. M. Hahn, in 1864. Though in that election there was an opposing candidate for Governor, the Hon. B. F. Flanders, yet Mr. Wells was the choice of both parties, for Lieutenant Governor. His claims to favor were based upon the fact that he had been driven from his home, hunted like a wild beast through the swamps, until he reached the federal lines, for his Unionism.

Governor Wells

In 1865 Gov. Wells succeeded Mr. Hahn, who was chosen U. S. Senator. The Rebellion collapsed, Mr. Johnson succeeded to the Presidency upon the murder of Mr. Lincoln, inaugurated his scheme of conciliation, and he, Gov. Wells, became an apostle of that policy. This called down upon his head the just indignation of Southern loyalists, who were thus placed at the mercy of men whose hatred for themselves was not less bitter than during the years of conflict. The Governor stood in this attitude until the Spring of 1866, when seeing his mistake, he endeavored to retrace his steps. His affilliation with Union men was renewed, and finally cemented by the tragedy of July 30th. A few days succeeding that event he issued an "Address to the Loyal People of Louisiana," in which he reviewed the political aspect of the State since the close of the war. His policy had been conciliation and forgetfulness, but he had been met with "numerous and repeated evidences of the continuance of an intolerant and rebellious spirit, and the manifestation of the proscription of all who did not adhere to the fortunes of the Confederacy to the last." "In view of all this array of strong, stubborn facts," he says, further on, "I frankly own that my views of the conciliatory policy, in winning back to their allegiance those who have been engaged in a war to destroy the Union, have undergone a change." It is but fair to give Governor Wells the benefit of his own explanation. Though we lament the course which he took, yet we can understand how he could be led into just such a course. But passing this over, we must now commend him for the stand which he has taken—firmly for the honor of loyalty and the rights of man.

The Message.

First reviews the agricultural and industrial interests of the State, and shows a condition of affairs gloomy enough. The crops have failed, owing to the excessive rains, overflow and worms. Gloomy as these prospects may appear, the Governor thinks, however, that the people have no cause to despair. The lands are the richest upon the globe; one good yield of crops would repair all loss.

We give in fall the Governor's reference to the political relations:

"In political matters, the past year has been charged with great events, particularly to the people of the late rebel States. General elections have been held in all the States not engaged in the rebellion, for members to compose the Fortieth Congress of the United States. The questions at issue and decided in that contest, were of the gravest and most important character. On full and deliberate consideration, the people have pronounced in favor of the power of Congress to reconstruct these States. They have gone further and declared their purpose that these States shall not be restored to their former participation in the government until suitable constitutional guarantees are provided againt present disloyalty and future rebellion. One of these guarantees, adopted by the present Congress at its last session, is embodied in the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States. I have received, through the Secretary of State, a certified copy of said amendment, with the request that the same be submitted to you for ratification, and it is transmitted herewith accordingly. In view of the diverse opinions well known to exist between the members of the General Assembly and myself on all matters connected with the reconstruction of the State, I shall not take up your time by entering into an extended discussion of the features of the proposed amendment. I believe your minds to be made up how you shall vote on it, and nothing that I could say would have any weight with you, for or against. That I may not be misunderstood, however, before the country, in my views on so important a measure, I desire to say, that I consider the amendment as just and proper, adjusting and settling, as it does, the rights of citizenship to all persons, without reference to race or color; recognizes the validity of the public debt; repudiates the payment or assumption of any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; and imposes disfranchisement from holding office under the United States and State governments to a certan class of persons who have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the Government of the United States. These provisions meet my full approval, but I am not willing to accept the amendment as a finality for the admission and restoration of the late rebel States.

I consider it to be within the province and to be the duty of Congress to require of these States, as additional guarantees, that they shall, by constitutional enactments, recognize and establish equal political rights in the privilege of the ballot, to all men. I believe such to be the fixed will and intention of Congress, and I do not consider your ratification of the amendment would exercise any influence in changing or altering that determination. The idea and hope of readmission as a State on any other terms, I regard as illusory, and the sooner the honest, well-meaning mass of the people realize the fact, and make up their minds to submit and act accordingly, will they assist in adjusting and settling our political relations with the Federal Government on a peaceful and permanent basis."

These are brave words, and all we could ask from any leader.

Following this, the Governor refers to the riots of July. His words are few but pointed, and speak for themselves:

The Riots or Massacre in New Orleans, though confined to a certain locality, is an event which may be said to concern the people of the whole State, as well as the United States, and for me to pass over it in silence in this document, would probably be attributed to motives of fear, in view of the fact that an attempt has been made to hold me responsible for their origin, in giving my sanction to the meeting of the Convention. So far as my official acts and private conduct in that matter is concerned, I do not fear to court any investigation the General Assembly may think proper to institute. I have and shall continue to denounce the killing and outrages committed on that occasion as an unprovoked massacre of loyal citizens, headed by the police and assisted by a mob, to gratify their hatred of every man who remained true to the Government during the rebellion, or abandoned its cause.

Finances.

The finances of the State are then reviewed at some length. The indebtedness is quite large, $2,000,000, represented by State currency and Levee bonds. The Governor deprecates the fact that the Legislature did not follow the advice which he gave in his last message, to borrow money at any sacrifice to keep the faith of the State, rather than the method followed, of funding in new bonds. The financial aspect is not very cheering.

Passing over the review of the condition of the levees, showing how much has not been done, and the subject of Immigration, wherein is shown the possibility of what might be done, we come to the subject of Education, so interesting and so important. After considering the cause of education in the State at large, advocating a liberal free school system, he urges the rights of the freedmen to be educated from the School fund. This plea will find an echo in every heart true to the instincts of humanity. He says:

"I trust it will not be deemed out of place that I remind you of the claims of the freedman and his family to an equal participation in the benefits to be derived from this benificent system. He contributes to its fund by taxation on his property, and every motive of interest and humanity demands of us that we should elevate his condition by extending to him the blessings of education. Impressed with this truth, I regard it as the most important recommendation I can make to you, that an appropriation be made from the school fund for the establishment of colored schools in all the parishes under the general law."

The concluding portion of the Message is taken up in considering the subjects of Internal Improvements, Charitable Institutions, Penitentiary, overflowed lands, the Paris Exhibition, and the City of New Orleans.

These are matters of local interest, and have doubtless been read by our subscribers in this State.

This message of Governor Wells marks him among the van-guard in the onward march of the friends and advocates of liberal ideas and free institutions.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

MONDAY.

Both branches of the General Assembly of Louisiana were organized at noon on Monday, January 28th. In the Senate, the Governor's Message was read, which was received with great disrelish, especially those portions referring to national politics and the July riots.

In the House, the Governor's Message was read with similar effect.

TUESDAY.

Senate: the following resolution was the chief feature of the session:

Mr. Duvigneaud offered a resolution that a committee of seven, one from each district of New Orleans and three from the rural parishes, be appointed to investigate the corporation affairs of the city of New Orleans, financially and otherwise, with full powers, and to make a full report thereon, with such suggestions as they may deem advisable; and that the committee have power to appoint such persons as may be necessary to assist them.

Laid over under the rule.

House.—The hour of one having arrived, the speaker announced the order of the day, Mr. McConnell's resolution, which was published in the proceedings of yesterday, when it was submitted, but now is reproduced as the text of an interesting debate and the subject of an important vote:

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed by the chair, with instruction to prepare and submit to this House for its consideration, an act to provide for calling a convention to amend the Constitution of the State, in which act provision shall be made for the submission of the question of the propriety of calling such convention to the people of the State.

Mr. McConnell addressed the House in regard to his resolution. He referred to the the proceedings and discussions at the last session on the subject. He desired to say nothing to challenge disputation in regard thereto. His object was to present now a simple proposition, adapted, as he thought, to the existing state of affairs.

Mr. Scanlan opposed the proposition to call a convention at the last session. He thought the object was, then, to get rid of certain State officials. Those of ficials had not then sinned sufficiently, in his estimation, to justify a measure of such importance. He had since changed his views. The officers then sought to be deposed, who had, in his estimation, committed no offence, had since conspired to destroy the constitution and laws they had sworn to support. He had expected that the highest officer in the State government would be subjected to impeachment for his treason to the people; but a different course had been determined upon, and he was willing to accept the convention idea to get rid of a traitor.

At the conclusion of Mr. Scanlan's remarks there was a demonstration of applause outside the bar of the house, which was immediately checked by the speaker.

Mr. Kent moved to lay Mr. McConnell's resolution on the table subject to call.

Mr. Stille seconded the motion.

Mr. Jonas called for the yeas and nays.

The motion to lay on the table was lost, yeas 20, nays 65.

Mr. McConnell rose and remarked that in face of the vote just given he would refrain from replying to the argument of the gentleman from St. Bernard, (Mr. Walker.)

The motion to commit Mr. McConnell's resolution was withdrawn, and the resolution was adopted without a division.

WEDNESDAY.

Senate.—The bill Mr. Duvigneaud had offered on Tuesday last, providing that a committee of seven—one from each district of New Orleans, and three from the rural parishes—be appointed to investigate the affairs of the corporation of the city of Oew Orleans, financially and otherwise, with full powers to make a full report thereon, with such suggestions as they might deem proper; and that the committee have full power to appoint such persons as they may deem necessary to assist them—now came up in regular order. Mr. Duvigneaud, in support of his bill, stated that the present state of public mind demanded such a bill. A rather disultory discussion here ensued.

Mr. Mohan had no objection to the proposed investigation, but moved that the matter be reached by joint resolution.

Mr. Palfrey wished Mr. Duvigneaud to explain why he offered such a resolution for the consideration of the Senate.

Mr. Duvigneaud explained the object of the resolution. He remarked that the Senate must have observed that Gov. Wells, in his message, has thrown a slur upon the honor of New Orleans, and it was due to its honor and dignity that the charges made against its government should be strictly investigated, and if the Legislature can effect that object, let them do it. Not only was the government of the city under Federal rule to be investigated, but also its government up to this very day. The chief executive officer of the city now stands charged in the First District Court, and it is rumored and insinuated in newspapers that there is something wrong about the Girod fund. These things should not be, and it is due to the citizens of New Orleans that everything should be investigated.

Mr. Palfrey was glad to hear the explanation, and approved the object of the bill, and would vote for it out and out.

Mr. Mohan here withdrew his proposed amendment, and alluded to the charges made against Mayor Monroe, and declared them false. In severe language he animadverted on the object of the mover of the resolution, and declared that the city itself had investigated and reported on its affairs. He eloquently defended the Mayor in his official capacity.

Mr. Duvigneaud replied, and observed that it was not proper to make a personal matter of any subject before the House and denied emphatically that he had attacked the Mayor. It was in his interest that he had spoken.

Mr. Duvigneaud explained that the charge of embezzlement was embodied in the contested mayoral election case now pending in the Fifth District Court, it having been stated by Mr. Moore, who was the opposing candidate of Mr. Monroe in the last Mayor's election, that the present Mayor was not fit to be Mayor, as he had embezzled some $15,000 of the Girod fund.

The question being called, the resolution was put and carried.

Messrs. Duvigneaud, Egan, Brusle, Foute and Kenner were appointed on the committee.

House.—Members voted to pay themselves and then passed the following:

Mr. Eldridge, of Desoto, moved that a committee of——members be appointed to investigate the cause of the riots of the 30th of July last, and also to report the loss incurred by the State in consequence of said riot.

Local and Southern News.

FOREIGN NEWS.

BERLIN, January 29— Noon.—Count Bismarck has been nominated for the German Parliament, to represent the city of Berlin.

LONDON, January 29.—Despatches have been received which state that the Cretan war has been renewed. The terms of the Sublime Porte for peace have been scornfully rejected by the Cretans. A battle has since been fought, but the result is not stated.

LIVERPOOL, January 29.—The Great Eastern, on the 19th, was safely placed upon the gridiron at Birkenhead, opposite this city, by Captain Sir James Anderson. The examination shows her to be in good condition, and she will positively sail for America on the 20th of March.

FLORENCE, January 29.—Admiral Persano has been acquitted of the charge of cowardice.

VIENNA, January 29.—The American breech-loading rifles have been given to a portion of the Austrian army.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF MURDERS IN OBION COUNTY.—We learn from a friend just in from Obion County that it was a common threat all over the country, among the haters of the Federal Government, and of Union men and Yankees, that Dr. Case should not live; but some thought that the murder of his son had, in a measure, satisfied their thirst for blood, and loyal men, though careful, were not sufficiently on their guard. Those fiendish outlaws were given credit for a humanity which they did not possess. Early on the same day Senator Case was murdered.

It is said that cabbages weighing upwards of eleven pounds—cabbages with solid white heads, thirty inches in circumference, culled under the open sky, during the midst of January—are made presents of to editors of country papers in Louisiana.

ST. JAMES.—The Louisianaise gives a very suggestive idea of the tightness of the times in the country parishes. Sugar plantations in St. James are not sold now, strictly—they are almost given away. This is due to the absence of capital, but chiefly to the unreliability of labor and the haze which envelopes the political horizon.

The same thing may be said of other possessions than real estate, for a full and well-preserved set of scientific and literary works, (an original folio edition at that,) in twenty-nine volumes, embracing the essays of Voltaire, d'Alembert, Diderot, and the French encyclopedists, was sold the other day for the trifling sum of two dollars and fifty cents.

Pork is selling in Goliad, Texas, at four cents a pound, corn one dollar a bushel, horses, for stock, at fifteen dollars a head—all in gold.

The Houston Telegraph calls attention to the fact that the number of outrages committed by burglars, highwaymen, garroters and other scoundrels, upon the streets of that city, is unprecedented in the annals of Texas.

Mr. Moore, of this place, was attacked a few days since by an enraged negro, who with an ax in hand charged on him, and but for the timely intervention of other negroes, he would, no doubt, have been chopped to pieces.

The Freedmen of this county, as a general thing, have entered into contracts for the present year, yet there are still a great many who have not made engagements, and are rambling about in idleness. The terms in most cases were for a portion of the crop.—Brenham Inquirer.

In his report upon the condition of South Carolina, Gen. Sickles relates that in one case, where a freedman was murdered, the two men who killed him sat upon the coroner's jury, and united in a verdict that "the deceased came to his death from causes unknown."

The Montgomery Mail (rebel) thus pictures the Johnson editors in the South:

"They are in favor of 'the Constitution, the Union and the enforcement of the laws,' (except those relating to treason.")

The exception is well taken.

Roland Green, another Union man, was shot and killed at Newbern, on the same day.

Considerable numbers of our Union men have taken to the lake for safety. We trust our State Government and Legislature will take prompt and decisive measures to rid Obion county of these outlaws.—Memphis Post.

OUTRAGES.—We are informed that an old gray-headed negro, who got off the train at Collierville, day before yesterday, and who protested against being charged extra for his baggage, was struck over the head with a brick-bat and badly gashed.

A Sabbath or two ago, some drunken rowdies, seven or eight miles south of Collierville, attempted to drive their horses upon an old colored man and woman. The latter got out of the road to save themselves, but one of the party still drove after the woman. Upon her being in imminent danger of being driven over, the old man seized the bit of the horse, whereupon the whole party jumped upon him and beat him unmercifully. He is well known as one of the most quiet and inoffensive negroes in that country, A white lady afterwards remonstrated with them and was grossly insulted. No arrests were made.

We are informed that the house of the Postmaster at Panola, Miss., was entered lately, in the evening, by a set of ruffians with blackened faces and armed to the teeth. He was ordered out and bid not to turn his face to the right or left, at the peril of his life. when about thirty feet distant they commenced discharging their pistols at him. He ran and saved his life. He was formerly a member of the 15th Pennsylvania Cavalry, and had lost heavily in planting during the year. He had secured the postmastership at the request and for the accommodation of the citizens. He left for the North the day following the outrage.—Memphis Post.

ANOTHER UNION MAN MURDERED IN OBION.—We have already recorded the brutal murder of three Union men in the Johnson county of Obion, a State Senator and two deputy sheriffs. We now add a fouth victim. A few days since a respectable colored man, who had given offence to a rebel outlaw by testifying against him, was shot dead while coming out of his corn-crib. He had been warned by the assassin that if he testified against the latter he would be killed. The bloody threat was executed. What is the law establishing colored testimony worth in Obion county?—Nashville Press and Times, Jan. 21.

Ladies' Department.

The Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER III.

Again, dear Minnie, I find myself sketching life-pictures from memory under the shade of the old Family Tree. Miriam has left us, and far away to the westward is no doubt singing "Do they miss me at home, do they miss me?" The family group send out after her the fond echo, "we miss thee." Edith is, as ever, the same loving, devoted sister. Our four brothers, Olin, Wilberforce, Addison and Fisk, indicate by their actions that the blood is growing manly in their veins, and that ere long they will go forth to act their part in life's great drama. To me they were noble specimens of rapidly developing manhood, obedient to our father, respectful to our mother, loving and indulgent to us their younger sisters, who regarded them a quartette of the "lords of creation," to whom we were bound to submit the homage of our sisterly love, which was by no means a task, for we did love them, with pure hearts fervently.

I imagined Olin the best, because the eldest, and loved him more no doubt as the anniversary of our birthdays were identical, in my estimation an honor, as he was a man grown and I only a little girl.

In reciting our Bible questions, when asked who was the handsomest man, I always felt like saying Wilberforce, for I was very sure Absolam was not half so handsome as our brother.

We had one apartment in our house called the school-room. Here one winter Addison taught the family school. And faithfully did he explain to us the difficult sums in arithmetic, and the rules in grammar, together with the art of reading and writing, which called out for him our warmest love and gratitude.

I can never forget Fisk's unselfish nature, so unmindful of himself to make others happy. Many a time he received money for extra labor, which he was sure to expend in little gifts for each of us. Thus we considered him our benefactor.

Our four brothers were all members of the church. This inspired somewhat of reverence, for I really supposed at some time they would all become ministers and preach, as our father did. We were disappointed in this dear Minnie, for none of them chose this sacred calling, and years afterwards the inheritance fell to the daughters, as in the story of Zelophehad, in Bible history, who, when he died, had no sons to claim his heritage, so the priests gave it to his daughters.

Our mother often said it was her greatest joy to know that her children were Christians, but then I did not know what it meant to be a christian more than simply to be good, and upon this record I considered all our household Christians.

Our father, while he was all that was true-hearted and noble, and more even, for he was loving, still from our infancy we looked up to him, and I imagine the mother did the same, with a kind of reverence akin to awe. This arose, no doubt, from the fact that he was one of God's messengers of truth, and on the Sabbath we saw him in the pulpit, which to us was the holy of the holies. Thus, intuitively, we looked right up from the minister to God, and loving and revering our father, we learned to love and adore God from childhood.

When I was five and Florence ten years old, I went one day to our mother's room, where I had not unfrequently found her kneeling by the bedside, when I would creep out carefully, learning early that these hours were sacred to herself alone. At this time mama was ill and was lying on the bed, and Florence was kneeling beside her, with the Bible in her hand and weeping bitterly, as if her heart would break. I begged to know the cause, when ma replied, in a sweet composed tone of voice, "Florence has been praying God to make her a Christian." I can never forget the look of despair that was on Florence's face as she looked up and said, "O I am so wicked; my heart is so bad!" My youthful faith was fearfully shocked at such a confession, for really I imagined the angels in heaven were no better than sister Florence always had been, and if she was not already a Christian, how could she ever hope to be. But some time afterward, when she came from the little bedroom, her tears had all disappeared, and I thought God must have kissed her face with his sunshine, for it appeared radiant with holy smiles, and she glided around the house like a happy saint. We all prayed every evening when we retired, and when we arose in the morning, but after this I often found Florence praying during the day, as I had seen our mother in her room and Edith in hers.

Florence, Agnes, myself and Cora were all rosy-cheeked, fat and healthy, but you, sweet Minnie, looked just like a white lily that the morning dew might exhale, your petite figure appeared so unlike mine, which was then almost equal in width and length; so rounded was I that they gave me the name of Aunty Rowland, a dear, chubby old lady who visited us occasionally.

I have said there were twelve of us. We were taught to number the group thus, but the seventh did not walk the earth with us. God's good angels came and took little sister Beatrice when she was only five years old, before either Cora, myself or you, Minnie, were born. She was two years older than Florence, and two years younger than Fisk. So it was I never saw her except in sweet dreams when her white wings hovered over me. We talked of her as one of our number, although invisible to us, and at times, when tempted to do some little naughty act, I have been refrained, thinking her pure spirit might be looking at me.

One day our father brought home a small marble slab with her name engraven on it, and told us that he was going to mark the spot where Beatrice was sleeping. In an instant an idea flashed into my youthful mind. O what an intense desire had possessed me at times to look at her face just as I saw my other sisters, for in my dreams she seemed so etherial and always vanished into light when I awoke. In those days we did not have the art of transferring the likeness of loved ones on little cards that we now anjoy. I said to papa, earnestly, do let me go with you when you place the tablet at the head of her bed, and as you said she was sleeping, we can remove the green sod and look at her, and I know the good angels who took her and laid her there will awake her, and with what delight I will tell her how much we have talked of her and loved her. It will be so beautiful to ask her all about God and the angels, and if she says heaven is a brighter and happier place than this world she can fall asleep again, and we will cover her little bed with green grass and flowers, and place this white stone with her name on it to mark her mossy bed. Papa took the arm chair, and, placing me on his knee, looked into my eyes just as though he remembered he was once a child, and said, my little daughter Evangeline, did you not know that the form of little Beatrice has long ere this crumbled into dust and will never awake again until the last great day? I remember how my little heart almost ceased to pulsate while he endeavored to convey to my young mind some idea of the resurrection and the judgment day, when the dead, small and great, should come forth from their earth-beds and stand before God's throne. He said the great eye of God, that saw every thing, was watching over the dust of our sister Beatrice until that day when all the righteous, whether living or in their graves, should be caught up to be forever with the Lord.

EVANGELINE.

Fashionable Mourning.

A writer in Once a Week gives the following capital article on "fashionable mourning:"

The writer is supposed to live in London, and to receive a commission from a relative in the country asking him to obtain the proper articles needed by the widow of a friend, just died, for the approaching funeral, designating the articles. He immediately proceeded to a shop where the sable garments were on sale, or intended to be so considered, and found in it the sad habilaments of mourning. "No vulgar colors glared from the shop windows. No gilt annoyed with its festive glare"—the name of the firm was scarcely readable in letters of gray on a black ground—here and there heads of white set off the general gloom like the crape piping of a widow's cap.

On pushing the plate glass door, it gave way with a hushed and muffled sound, and I was met by a gentleman of sad expression, who, in the most sympathetic tone of voice, inquired the nature of my want, and, on my reply, directed me to the inconsolable grief department. The inside of the establishment I found to answer exactly to the appearance without. The long passage I traveled was in white and black borderings, like so many mourning cards placed on end; and I was becoming impressed with the deep solemnity of the place, when I caught sight of a little figure rolling up some ribbon, and on inquiring if I had arrived at the inconsolable grief department, she replied in a gentle voice slightly shaded with gayety. that that was the half-mourning counter, and that I must proceed until I had passed the repository for widow's silk. Following her directions, I at last reached my destination, a room draped with black, with a hushed atmosphere about it, as though a body was invisibly lying there in state.

An attendant in sable habilaments, picked but with the inevitable white tie, and with an undertakerish eye and manner, awaited my commands. I accordingly produced my list. Scanning it critically, he said:

"Permit me to enquire, sir, if it is a deceased partner?"

I nodded assent.

"We take the liberty of asking this distressing question," he replied, "as we are extremely anxious to keep the character of this establishment by matching at once the exact shade of affliction. Our paramattas and crapes in this department give satisfaction to the deepest woe. Permit me to show you a new texture, which we term the inconsolable."

With that he placed a pasteboard box before me full of mourning fabrics.

"Is this it?" I enquired, lifting a lugubrious piece of drapery.

"Oh no!" he replied; "the one you have in your hand was manufactured for last year's afflictions and was termed 'the stunning blow serde;' it makes up well, however, with our sudden bereavement silk—a leading article—and our distraction trimmings."

"I am afraid," I said, "my commission says nothing about these novelties."

"Ladies in the county," he blandly replied, "are possibly not aware of the perfection to which the art of mourning genteely is now brought. But I will see that your commission is attended to, to the letter." Giving another glance over my list, "Oh! a widow's cap is mentioned, I see. I must trouble you, sir, to proceed to the weeds department for that article—the first turning to the left."

Proceeding as I was directed, I came to a recess fitted up with a solid phalanx of widow's caps. I perceived, at a glance, that they exhausted the whole gamut of grief, from its deepest shade to that tone which is expressive of a pleasing melancholy. The foremost row confronted me with all the severity of crape folds, in the midst of which my mind's eye could see the set features of many a Mrs. Clennan, whilst those behind gradually faded off into the most jaunty tarlatan; and one or two of the outsiders even breaking out into worldly feathers and the most flaunty weepers.

Forgetting the proprieties of the moment, I enquired of the grave attendant if any of the latter would be suitable?

"Oh, no, sir," she replied, with a slight shade of severity in her voice; "you may gradually work up to it in a year or two; but any of these," pointing to the front row of weeds, "are indispensable for the first burst of grief."

Acquiescing in the propriety of this sliding scale of sorrow, I selected some weeds expressive of the deepest dejection I could find; and, having completed my commission, I enquired whether I could procure for myself some lavendar gloves.

"Oh, sir, for those things," she said, in the voice of Tragedy speaking to Comedy, "you must turn to your right, and you will come to the Complimentary Mourning counter," I replied, "for some gloves, but I fear I'm wrong."

"You are quite right sir," she said, "this is it."

She saw my eye glance at the cheerful silks, and with the instinctive tact of a woman, guessed my thoughts in a moment.

"Maure, sir, is very appropriate for the lighter sorrows."

"But absolute red," I retorted, pointing to some velvet of that color.

"Is quite admissable when you mourn the departure of some distant relative; but may I show you some gloves?" and suiting the action to the word, she lifted the cover from the glove box and displayed a perfect picture of the delicate half-tones, indicative of a struggle between the cheerful and the sad.

"There is a pleasing melancholy in the shade of gray," she said, indenting slightly each outer knuckle with the elastic, as she measured my hand.

"Can you find a lavendar?"

"Oh, yes; the sorrow tint is very slight in that it wears admirably."

Thus, by degrees, growing beautifully less, the grief of the establishment died out in the tenderest lavendar, and I left, profoundly impressed with the charming improvements which Parisian taste has made in the old original style of mourning.

To planters and other persons Employing Freedmen.—Headquarters, Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen and Abandoned Lands, tate of Louisiana—New Orleans, La., Jan. 12, 1867.—To correct a false impression which seems to exist as to the matter of obtaining transportation for freedmen, when it is desired to procure labor from other States, under the provisions of a late order of Gen. Howard, Commissioner, etc., Washington, D. C. the public interested are hereby notified that any party can make the necessary application in person, and by complying with the regulations governing the subject, can secure for themselves all the priviliges granted in the order alluded to. No person or persons have any appointment which gives them the sole right to transact this business in this state.

By order of

Bt. Maj. Gen'l. J. A. MOWER, U. S. A.,
Assistant commissioner, etc.
WM. H. STERLING,
Captain 1st. U. S. Infantry,
A. A. A. General.

Ja15 3t

SPECIAL NOTICES.

KELLOGGS' UNITED STATES MERCANTILE REGISTER, FOR 1867.

We respectfully call your attention to the above-named work, which we have in preparation, and shall publish about the first of the year 1867, and annually thereafter. It will contain in

PART FIRST—The amended Tariff and Revenue Laws, Lists of Money-Order Post Offices and Telegraph Stations, Regulations of the Boards of Trade of the principal Cities of the United States, Tables of Foreign and Domestic Weights and Measures, etc., etc., in short, a large amount of valuable information selected and compiled with a view to make this part of the work a "HAND-BOOK" of ready reference, especially adapted to the wants of business men in

PART SECOND—A complete Business Directory of Wholesale and Manufacturing Houses, Insurance and Express Companies, Banks, and Bankers, etc., etc., of the leading Commercial Cities of the Union—Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco. Each city will appear separately, and the names of the firms will be arranged alphabetically and classified according to business, the whole constituting a complete list of first-hand places of business, which no buyer can afford to be without.

The register will be sold by subscription only, will contain from 600 to 900 octavo pages, as per specimen pages within, and will be substantially bound in boards, with leather backs. Every exertion will be made to render it as complete and correct as possible.

Believing the business wants the Register is intended to supply to be general and widely felt, and inspired by the encouragement we have already received, we offer it confidently to the public at Three Dollars per copy, trusting to the just appreciation and liberal patronage of the business men of every section of this great country to sustain us in its publication at that price.

Subscribers will please fill out and remit inclosed subscription blank by return mail.

Kellogg, Johnston & Co.
116 Nassau St., New York.

or the Southern States—

Sullivan & Jordan,
3 St. Paul St., Baltimore.

A. J. JORDAN, Sup, for New Orleans,
Box 815. No. 187 Camp Street.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $650, $600 and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c, they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington Street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 JOHN STREET,

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise,

The Boston Bulletin says; "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Advertiser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bile, foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,
Gen'l Agent for United States,
No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.
r10—1y

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicinal Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12—3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4 P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

ROBERT PATON,
Manufacturer of
CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.
24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S
Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores through out the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that NO Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London, Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co... Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Hoos & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowltaon & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.
J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.
87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,
MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.
Street Rails,
STRAP RAILS.
OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,
ROLLS,
ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY
Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off-cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S
SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"
PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS
—OF THE—
MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM'L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS
No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.
Interest payable in January and July, in each year.
All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.
All the profits belong to the depositors.
Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.
Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

DOCTOR
L. Q. C. WISHART'S
PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL!!

A GREAT REMEDY
FOR THE CURE OF
THROAT AND LUNG DISEAES.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safe and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the Pine Tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system.

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs.

It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Blind and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, and Diptheria, etc., etc., etc.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

There is not a medicine discovered that has so much power to dissolve the thick mucus that stops up the wind passages of the lungs as the Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which subdues the fever and inflammation that destroy the power and vitality of the lungs, and consign the patient to the grave. We say to all whose lungs are affected, use Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial with great confidence, as it has restored thousands of cases to health that were hopelessly give up to die.

COLDS AND COUGHS

are speedily cured by the use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it does its work at once, and the patient is cured before other medicines would have had time to have any beneficial effect.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR SCROFULA.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial will purify the blood and cleanse it, of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores internal and external, Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, and all Skin Diseases are especially cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it is good to be applied internally and externally in the above cases, as it has great power to heal where it comes in contact with the human flesh.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

is a great remedy for Chronic Croup and Diptheria, which is sending thousands and thousands of children to a premature grave. It can be cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

Out of ten thousand cases where it has been tried in the past two years, it has never missed a case where it was taken in time. All families should have it on hand, as it gives instant relief in Croup and Diptheria.

BLIND AND BLEEDING PILES.

Thousands of cures of this most painful and dangerous complaint are now enjoying the blessings of health by the use of the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Its great healing properties will stop the bleeding and pain immediately.

CONSTIPATION OF THE BOWELS.

Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is a great remedy for costiveness, as it acts upon the surface of the stomach, and causes a flow of gastric juice, enabling the stomach rapidly to digest the food, which gives health and vigor to the bowels, and causes regular evacuations. Let no one that is suffering from constipation of the bowels neglect to use the Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND GRAVEL

are speedily and permanently cured by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. It subdues the inflammation in the Kidneys, and in Gravel it dissolves and carries away the sediment which forms what is called stone in the bladder.

ASTHMA AND COUGH.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial gives instantaneous relief in cases of Asthma and Whooping Cough. It often cures whooping before it has run half its course; as it acts at once upon the phlegm and mucus, and expels them from the throat, and the sufferer is relieved. In cases of Asthma DR. WISHART'S DYSPEPSIA PILLS WITH THE CORDIAL, as they have never been known to fail to cure that disease.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial acts with great power upon the Liver, and restores it to a speedy action, giving it a healthy secretion by its cooling and equalizing principle.

THE CAUSES OF CONSUMPTION IN THE LUNGS.

A sharp and poisonous corroding humor, either coming from other parts, or breeding in the lungs. From our own observation, we conclude that of ninety-six out of every hundred that die with consumption, their disease originated first from Dyspepsia—indigestion. The food fermenting, souring and rottening in the stomach, creating a poisonous catarrh, which is drawn by the brain to the head, passing through its different ramifications, creating inflammation throughout its course. The brains, eyes, and all the organs of the head receiving its poisonous and corroding effect, uniting together, they struggle to relieve themselves from its grasp hence comes dizziness, dimness of vision, headache, and staggering in walking. This phlegm and catarrh is discharged from the head to the throat, falling on the bronchial tubes filling up the air passages of the lungs, and if suffered to remain there, will chicken, corrode, and breed ulcers in the lungs; then come ugh and consumption. We say to the sick, use with great perseverence, one bottle after another, until it has had power enough to dissolve the mucus and phlegms which stop up the air passages, and expectorate it from the lungs.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

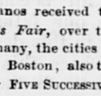
☞ In all cases of Dyspepsia with Consumption use

DR. WISHART'S



Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

WITH THE

TAR CORDIAL.

L. Q. C. WISHART, M. D.,
Office and Store 10 North Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa.,
U. S. of America.
WHOLESALE AGENTS:
BARNES, WARD & CO., 24 Magazine street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.
☞ Sold by all Druggists. mh3 1y

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy
Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

THE ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL FOR MARCH. Contains Cornelius Vanderbilt, Hon Ezra Cornell, Prof. Mapes, Frederika Bremer, Lavater, Las Casas, Sir John Franklin, Capt. Cook, Revs. John Wesley and Jonathan Edwards;—Talent and Genius;—Extraordinary prediction;—Ghosts;—Origin of Coal;—Varieties of Sheep;—Iron, its uses;—Putting on a bad face;—Tribulation Trepid, and Mr. Hopeful;—The Jew;—Love and Lovers, the Philosophy of Engagements; an Excellent Number, only 20 cents or $2,00 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway New York.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M. W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES, plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops. Prices $75, 90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $650, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton Seed and "aa" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Linseed Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,
127 CARONDELET STREET,
Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not forgotten."
jfeb3l

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y.
mr10—1y

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the.

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 6 NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9 1867. Whole No.—56

Poetry.

THE NEW YEAR.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

Silent and white,
Thro' the dim night,
Fell the soft snow,
Now fast, now slow,
Making the posts
Like sheeted ghosts,
Robing the woods
In finer goods,
Than ever was spun by mortal skill,
And bleached on the sunny side of the hill,
Where fringes are woven by weavers, where the warp is mist, and the woof is air;
The world is dressed like a bride, in white,
Although the poor Old Year died last night.

Drop not a tear
On the cold bier
Of the brave year
Whose corse is here.
His work is done,
His battles won,
And he will be Named with the free
Thro' future time
For deeds sublime.
We welcome here
The new-born year.
The snow that falls
From the gray walls
Of the thick clouds,
Is not for shrouds
For the days fled;
'Tis the white fleece,
Emblem of peace
Sent down to cheer
The soft young year.
May no red vein
Make a red stain
On the robe of white
Wove last night.
So ring the soft
Sweet bells aloft,
Ring the true chime
Of the good time,
Ring loud and clear
For this New Year, Give sixty-seven
the tone of Heaven.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

Home of Columbus.

(Continued from last week.)

The birth-place of Christopher Columbus has long been a question of dispute. At Cogaletto, a few miles from Genoa, there is a house, which the village monks claim to be the place where the great discoverer was born in 1441. Over the door is a rude picture of the dove leaving the ark, and beneath it is an inscription to the effect that as the dove went out of the ark in search of dry land, so Columbus left his native city to discover a new world. The simile is as beautiful as it is appropriate, and is a noble tribute to the great mariner. But on my way to Cogaletto, I met an Italian monk of much intelligence, who informed me that the picture and inscription were not in honor of the great discoverer, but of a celebrated monk named Columbus, whose monastic order, out of respect to his memory, had placed the tablet over his door, to represent that he went forth to do good as the dove had gone forth on an errand of mercy. And the good priest also informed me that recently, in the Parish church of St. Stephen, the baptismal record had been found, fixing the birthplace of Columbus in Genoa, and giving the date of his baptism. And now, after the neglect of centuries, the Genoese have evinced their appreciation of his genius and the value of his discoveries; and to perpetuate his memory, they have erected a monument to his honor. Standing in a small square, near the railway station, it consists of a granite base, surmounted with a white marble circular splinth; on the sides of the latter are the bows of a ship in basso relievo, and on the top of the column is a noble statue of the great Columbus. The design is beautiful and may the monument long stand as a well-deserved tribute to the genius' sufferings and fame of one of the noblest and most virtuous of mankind.

LEGHORN.

I had arranged to leave the old city of Genoa on October 1st, to meet some friends in Florence, and having paid my bill, I was about to leave the hotel, when I heard voices in the dining saloon, and stepped to the door to see who were there, when to my joyous surprise, I found my friends had arrived. What a happy moment! How joyful such coincidents! Surely God had appointed the unexpected meeting, and it seemed to me that the angels were there to share our joys. Is this all fancy? Why should not angels seek out blissful scenes in human life over which to rejoice?

To serve as their guide in Genoa, I remained a day longer, and the next day at evening, we all took a small French steamer for Leghorn. It was a charming night. The full-orbed moon shone in all her Italian beauty, just above a thick, black cloud, fringing it with silver. It was a magnificent scene, and increased the delight of the sail on the Mediterranean. But at 10 P. M., a land breeze sprung up; the sea became rough and the little steamer rolled like a cask in the water. All on board were sea-sick and by the violent motion of the vessel the ladies were thrown from their berths.

The next morning at day-break we were anchored in the bay of Leghorn. As the Italian cities on the Mediterranean have no piers, passengers are compelled to go ashore in small boats. This was expensive, as we were not only required to pay the boatman, but also to pay a self-constituted porter for handling our baggage, and on entering the carriage to pay another for putting our trunks on the driver's seat. Leghorn has few attractions. The Cathedral is large but destitute of ornament. In the Piazzo du Duc Principi, is the statue of the grand Duke Ferdinand and also an unoccupied pedestal for one of his successors.

Like in most of the Italian cities, the streets here are narrow and irregular, buildings high and gloomy, and the inhabitants filthy. The population of the city is 80,000, one fourth of whom are Jews. Religious liberty is enjoyed without restriction, and Protestants Greeks, and Jews have several places of worship. Of late years the baths of the city have been visited by large numbers of persons of wealth and fashion, giving a refined tone to society. Leghorn would be tolerable to the stranger were it not for the beggars, and even this were endurable were they not the most shockingly deformed human beings on the earth. It is a relief to the giver to give, to have them out of sight.

Spending an hour in the Protestant Cemetery, where repose the dust of Smollette and Francis Horner, we drove to the railway station to take the train for Pisa. But the train had gone, and we were compelled to make the journey in a carriage, a distance of 14 miles.

PISA.

A visit to this ancient town seemed like the realization of a dream. For who in schooldays has not read of the Leaning Tower of Pisa? and who does not remember the rude pictures of it in our geographies? It is one of the wonders of the world, and is one of the few things which never disappoints the traveler. A single glance was sufficient to confirm the impression made upon our minds by the stories and pictures of childhood. According to history it was commenced in the twelfth century, and finished in the fourteenth, and Bonanno and Inusbruck share the fame of having been the architects. The tower is round, having a diameter of 53 feet, and is 170 feet high. It consists of eight stories of columns, supporting semi-circular arches, and forming as many galleries The ascent to the top is by 295 steps, and on the summit are seven bells, the largest one weighing 12,000 lbs. The view from the top is exceedingly grand, embracing in the delightful prospect the Mediterranean, the harbor of Leghorn, the Island of Cersica, and the Alpine Hills. But its greatest wonder is its inclination, overhanging its base 13 feet. Many suppose it was built so originally, as an experiment, but this is not true, as the columns on one side are higher than those on the other, and viewing it from a distance, I observed that the top leaned in the opposite direction, showing that an effort had been made by the architect who completed it, to bring it back to a nautical position. The walls are strengthened by large iron bars, to prevent the several courses of stone from sliding upon one another, thus keeping the centre of gravity within its base. This is the simple reason why the Leaning Tower of Pisa does not fall. It has stood for 500 years, enduring the shocks of earthquakes, and bids fair to endure the roll of many centuries to come. Pisa is a large and flourishing town, and was once the rival of Florence. It has a population of 23,000 and contains some elegant churches. But among the churches, the Cathedral and Baptistry are among its chief attractions. The Baptistry is cylinderical in form, is 99 feet in diameter, with walls 8 feet thick; it is surmounted by a beautiful cupola. It contains an elegant pulpit, resting upon crouchant lions, and is held in high esteem by the Pisans. On the walls are some extraordinary base reliefs in marble; the one representing the last Judgment is superior. From the peculiar constitution of this building our guide produced one of the softest and longest echoes I have ever heard. It was like a whisper from the spirit land.

Henry Ward Beecher in the South.

Mr. Beecher's conciliation policy has failed as signally in the South as in the North. The Southern people do not thank him for his efforts to relieve their wants. They curse him rather than praise. On last Sunday morning the N. O. Crescent had the following complimentary editorial on "Mr. Beecher's Demon:"

It is related that one morning Moliere was visited by two literary acquaintances who spoke in high praise of a tragedy by Corneille, played the night before, whereupon Moliere said: "So you believe that Corneille is the author of what you have heard? Learn that there is a little fellow who has conceived a friendship for him, and who has the wit of a demon. When he sees Corneille seating himself at his desk to bite his nails and try to make verses, he approaches and dictates four, eight, ten, sometimes twenty verses, which are superior to anything that a mere man can make. Then the little demon withdraws some paces, saying: "Let us see how the rogue will get on without help.' Corneille then makes the ten, twenty, thirty following verses, none that are above ordinary, and some that are very bad. The next day this game is repeated, and so the whole piece is composed. Beware, gentlemen, of confounding the two authors." If there are demons addicted to such pranks as here described, there can be no doubt that Henry Ward Beecher is served by one. In fact, if other evidence were wanting Beecher's example would furnish strong intrinsic probability of the presence on earth of infernal spirits to inspire persons adapted by their organizations to receive diabolical influences, and to afflict mankind with irrepressible displays of sinister genius. Beecher's demon, however, is not like Cornielle's, an occasional visitant, and a frolicsome but not malicious dictator of his words. He has firm possession of Beecher all the time, and doubtless he holds him by a fee simple title which is duly recorded, in red letters written with fire, in the archives of Pandemonium. Only that our eyes are not yet perfected so as to see the invisible, we could perceive Beecher's demon bestriding his back as firmly and immovably as the old man of the sea bestrode the back of Sinbad the sailor. In short, Beecher is always under demoniac influence. Hence, his prayers are an insult to Providence; his theology is the degradation of the Almighty to an identity with Pharisaical self-righteousness, dogmatism, pragmaticism, arrogance and intolerence; his philanthropy is an aspersion on divine goodness and mercy, and a buffoon's burlesque of human charity. His vulgar and blasphemous Pharisaism was never displayed with more unctuous eloquence than in his recent speech before the Southern relief meeting in New York city. The reasons which he assigns for assistance from his Northern countrymen to the unfortunates of the South, all resolve themselves into selfishness, self-glorification and self-assurance. There runs through his whole speech a taunting exultation over the calamities of the South, and an odious and cruel comparison between that ravaged and desolated country and the North. With a facetiousness remarkable as usual, for its bad taste, he argues that the time is come for the North—or, rather, for New England—to change its mode of revenge from the work of carnage and devastation to that of cooking up the victim into a dish of moral reconstruction, garnished with cheap professions and spare sprinkings of charity, and seasoned with a nauseous compound of stale slanders, complacent reproof, insulting pity and gratuitous advice.

The N. O. Times of the same date joins its contempory as follows:

Some of our contempories have seen fit to comment on the result of two meetings recently held in New York; one for the purpose of raising a fund to be expended in alms upon the impoverished portion of the Southern people, and the other to assist the Cretans to carry on their present revolutionary struggle. The relief meeting proved a decided failure; the revolutionary one a complete success. Thereupon, Gotham is arraigned as an offender against the laws of humanity. To home charities she gives, it is said, with but a niggardly hand; but to Cretan rebels her largess is unstinted.

Now, all this, we think, is wrong. Gotham has a perfect right to dispose of her extra funds in such a way as to satisfy herself. Indeed, we take it upon ourselves to say that the South, though poor, is no Lazarus, begging for the crumbs which fall from the rich men's tables at the North; she neither asks New York, nor Boston, nor Philadelphia to make contributions on her behalf She needs means to develope her resources, but is able and is willing to give ample security for any advances made. When she lost her wealth, she did not completely make shipwreck of her self-esteem and that spirit of independence, which is the very essence of true manhood.

A Missionary Sermon by Rev. James Hayward. (Colored)

PREACHED IN WESLEY CHAPEL, SUNDAY, DEC. 20, 1866.

TEXT—MATT. x, 7.—As ye go, preach, saying, the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

It has fallen to my lot to stand before you to-night, and by the help of your prayers, I am sure that God, who is all sufficient, will give me a message for the people. The words of my text were spoken by our Jesus, when sending out his apostles, giving them power over unclean spirits, to do all miracles and to preach salvation. He said, go heal the sick, raise the dead. They were not to go forth with carnal weapons, nor as men of the world go, to take advantage of others, nor to fight any except the Evil One. And he charged them not to go into the way of the Gentiles, or of the Samaritans, but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel; not to seek the righteous, but call sinners to repentance, and not such as have found God in the pardon of their sins. In Ezekiel we read, "My people have been driven about as a scattered flock" So it has pleased God to shod us with the gospel of peace, and send us as missionaries to preach and hunt for lost sheep, the poor wanderers, the scattered and degraded of our own race and color. This is our great business; we are not to turn away from it. To preach Jesus to those whose way has so long been hedged up, who have had around them a high wall to keep them in darkness, to shut out this glorious light It has pleased God to break over the wall, and some of us he has even called to preach the gospel of this kingdom. Like old Jericho, no one could go in until the time. Joshua appointed the men to be marched around seven days, then to sound the ram's horns, and when the time came that God had set apart for the wall to fall down, then the ram's horns sounded and the walls fell. You remember the time, brethren, when Sabbath came, and we were shut up; none dared to cross the line. Some of us were down in the cane-field. Oh, then his prayer went up. Oh, Lord, when will the time come! Well it came. God opened the prison doors; he buried the bull-whip; he took away the patarolers; those who said, "If you call upon your American God, you shall be tied up, and get twenty-five lashes." Yes, you well remember, and you are glad the day long prayed for is come. John was sent out, and he preached faithfully. Repent, the kingdom of heaven is at hand; he was one example for us; he said, "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world." And Jesus, another example for us to be faithful, after being led into the wilderness by the Spirit, to be tempted by the Devil, then he came forth preaching to them who were in the region of darkness and the shadow of death, and to them a great light sprang up.

Sinner man, who stands to-day outside the ark of safety, come in; there's room enough. What keeps you away? Soon we shall close our Bibles, the Watchman will be taken away, and you will have to stand before the bar of Jehovah. What will you say?

Brethren, we find in this Bible many words, commanding us to go and preach, and many terrible warnings for all of us to be faithful; but many are disobedient, careless, lovers of ease. When Jesus met us with Peter, and called him to this ministry, Peter said, "We have left all to follow thee;" but when he came up with the rich young men, and said, "follow me," leave all, sell all thou hast, leave the world, business, pleasures,—one was willing, one was not. Are there not some here who have been called to Jesus, some who have been told to leave all and go preach the gospel? and who have not obeyed? Let me tell you little Jim's determination I expect to go out from home and old friends, and to preach the gospel. He calls one, put up your tools; another, get off your dray; another, leave your farm, and best of all, Jesus says, "I go with you, I am with you to the end of the world." Young preachers, old preachers, remember though the waters almost go over you, He is with you, in the ship or walking on the waves. Some of you have come out of the North, some from the South. In the last day Jesus will say, "You have been faithful over few things, enter into my joy." When we get there, first we will see Jesus, then we will look around and see our brothers from the North. Then we will see our own color, yes, and crowns of glory they will wear. Ah, I hope to be there. * * I have been a boy with you many years. I have been here, and you all know little Jim. Once, before I said farewell, "Where are you going Jim?" "Going to the army, to stand with those who fight for our people and country. Again I bid you farewell, to go and fight for Jesus, to preach the gospel. Then it was like John, to prepare the way; open the door, now I am to call the wandering ones to the glorious liberty of Christ. They are scattered, but Jesus says there is room in his fold for all. I take my bible in my hand, and if you hear that Jim has fallen, you may know he has gone to Jesus. We look at the Missionary cause and think what a glorious one it is, how it is blessing the world, what great things it is doing for our race. Awhile ago we prayed, and like as God sent Peter to the Roman soldier, He sent men to us to tell us what to do. And what kind of men would we be if when what we prayed for comes, we are not ready and willing to obey the message. Don't let us hesitate. What, going away? Yes, but only up the river, but if God says, "Jim, go to the end of the world," I'll go. Why? because I asked him for this time; and now he says 'It is come,' shall we hold back? Let us pray that God may stir up those who are not willing to obey orders. We don't go as some do, for any advantage or profit for ourselves; we do not fight with any body, we do not go to steal. When I sat in our conference and heard my brethren tell about their trials and labors on their circuit, the perils they went through, and the souls they had saved, then I thought of Paul, what he said to his son Timothy. He did not discourage him, but though he had suffered so much, he said, "Be thou faithful, take God for the man of your counsel." Oh, how this should make us bold and faithful. Says the poet:

"Stand to your arms, the foe is nigh."
The powers of hell surround."

Let us leave these sheep that are in the fold, and go out. If we can't see our old brothers and sisters around us, we may sit down with our pen, and tell them that some poor soul has been brought to Jesus. I am to bid you farewell, but why should I fear? When I went from here a boy, and for nine years toiled up on a sugar farm, He kept me safe. When later I went out into the army to wear the blue and the stripes, I did not know that ever I would return, but he kept me from all danger, and brought me back, and I have no right to know anything about it; all will be well. God will take care of little Jim, so give me your prayers and let us all meet in glory.

The congregation here burst forth with the hymn

"I'll see you again,
I'll see you again
In that day."

MUSIC.—Every woman who has an aptitude for music or for singing, should bless God for the gift, and cultivate it with diligence; not that she may dazzle strangers, or win applause from a crowd, but that she may bring gladness to her own fireside. The influence of music in stengthening the affections is far from being perceived by many of its admirers: a sweet melody binds all hearts together, as it were with a golden cord; it makes the pulses beat in unison, and the heart thrill with sympathy. But the music of the fireside must be simple and unpretenting; it does not require brilliancy of execution, but tenderness of feeling – a merry tune for the young —a more subdued strain for the aged, but none of the noisy clap-trap which is so popular in public. It is a mistake to suppose that to enjoy music, requires great cultivation; the degree of enjoyment will, of course, vary with our power of appreciation, but like all other great influences, it is able to attract even the ignorant; and this is what the poets taught, when they made Orpheus and his brethren the civilizers of the earth

The most common error of men and women is that of looking for happiness somewhere outside of useful work. It has never yet been found and never will be while the world stands. Of all the miserable human beings it has been our fortune to know, they were the most wretched who had retired from useful employments, in order to enjoy themselves.

It is as easy to improve five talents as one.

Gems of Thought.

Men's lives should be like the day, more beautiful in the evening; or, like the summer, aglow with promise, and the autumn, rich with the golden sheaves, where good work and deeds have ripened on the field.

The woman that has not touched the heart of man before he leads her to the alta, has scarcely a time to charm it when possession and security turn their powerful arms against her.

A more glorious victory cannot be gained over another man than this: That when the injury began on his part, the kindness should begin on ours. If both the ways were equally in our power, yet it is a much more desirable conquest to overcome evil with good, than with evil. By this we can only conquer our enemy, and may perhaps fail in that; but by the other we certainly conquer ourselves, and perhaps our enemy too; overcoming him in the noblest manner, and leading him gently till he be cool, and without force effectually subduing him to be our friend.

One is much less sensible of cold on a bright day than on a cloudy one: thus the sunshine of cheerfulness and hope will lighthen every trouble.

The misery of human life is made up of large masses, each separate from the other by certain intervals—one year, the death of a child; year after, failure in trade; after another longer or shorter interval, a daughter may have married unhappily. In all but the singularly unfortunate, the integral parts that count the sum to all the unhappiness of a man's life are easily counted and distinctly remembered. The happiness of life, on the contrary, is made up of minute fractions—the little, soon-forgotten charities of a kiss, a smile, a kind look a heartfelt compliment in the disguise of playful raillery, and the countless other infinitessimals of pleasurable thought and genial feeling.

"WHAT I HAVE SEEN."—A writer in the Presbyter says:

"I have seen a woman professing to love Christ more than the world, clad in a silk dress costing $75, making up and trimmings of same, $40; bonnet, (or apology for one,) $35; velvet mantle, $150; diamond ring, $500; watch, chain, pin and other trappings, $300; total, $1000—all hung upon one frail dying worm. I have seen her at a meeting in behalf of homeless wanderers in New York, wipe her eyes upon an expensive embroidered handkerchief at the story of their sufferings, and when the contribution box came round, take from a well filled porte-monie, of costly workmanship, 25 cents, to aid the society formed to promote their welfare."

CHILDREN.—When a child is hurt, never hush it. It is inexcusable barbarity; it is repressing its instinct; and for this reason if physical punishment is inflicted upon a child it is perfect brutality. A thousand times better is it to soothe by kind words and acts, divert the mind by telling stories, by explaining pictures, or by providing it with new toys. We have many a time in our professional experience as to sick children, found more benefit to be derived from a beautiful or interesting toy than from a dose of physic. The greatest humanity a mother can exhibit to her sick child is to divert it, divert it in all pleasing ways possible, as we ourselves who are large children feel some imes sick, when a cheerful face and much beloved friend has come in, and before we knew it we have forgotten what was the matter with us.

HOW THE BIBLE HAS BEEN GUARDED.—Rev. Adolph Saphir expressed the following striking thought at the last anniversary of the British and Foreign Bible-Society:

"Marvellous is the very existence of this book. One portion of it was preserved by the Jews, who have been the most careful and scrupulous custodians of a historical record which faithfully and severally delineates their guilt and obstinacy—they have been the guardians of predictions which fully and clearly describe the person and work of a Messiah, whom they reject; while the other portion of the Bible has been transcribed and transmitted by a church, the errors of whose apostacy are anticipated and condemned in the very pages which they have so diligently preserved.—Strange indeed, the synagogue guarding the Old, the Church of Rome guarding the New Testament."

Whately has beautifully described children as "the to-morrow of society.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING;

One Square, first insertion.....$1 50
" each subsequent insertion... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Orders left at 65 Poydras Street, or at our office, No. 7 Prytania Street, will receive full attention.

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

Hon. D. W. Voorhees in New Orleans.

The speech of Mr. Voorhees, of Indiana, delivered on last Tuesday night in the hall of the House of Representatives, before the members of the General Assembly and the leading men of the city and State, was an event of some political significance. It was the first public overture made on the stump from the Northern Democracy to rebels in the South to renew the political affiliations which had been interrupted by the war. The medium selected for this delicate mission was well fitted for his task. Of fine personal appearance, of a ready utterance, gifted with considerable eloquence, and the acknowledged champion of Copperheadism in his State during the war, he had claims beyond most Northern men for an attentive hearing from a rebel audience. The address itself, considered as an oratorical effort, was not entirely unworthy the high encomiums pronounced upon it, and the reports published in the morning dailies, in the main, correctly outline the general course of his remarks, though they fail of reproducing some of the most telling of his passages.

Appreciative of the importance of securing the good will of his auditors, profoundly conscious that the securing of rebel votes was the last fading hope left to the sinking Democracy, the orator at once advanced his bold affirmative that the Conservatives of the North and the people of the South formed a majority of at least 500,000 voters in this nation. We shall not now controvert a statement that, for the time, made the light of hope sparkle in the eyes of his auditors, nor pause to show the liability of political leaders to mistake in their estimates of party strength, but allowing his statement to rest on an apparent basis of fact, what is the inference which every loyal man should draw? Does it not speak trumpet tongued for the instant and secure investment of the great right of manhood-suffrage on each one of those other 600,000 men who, though true as steel, have not yet been allowed to vote in our government? And will not the party now in power invite and insure defeat by refusing to invest them with the "imperial purple" of sovereign voters, just as surely as our nation invited and met defeat until, despite the protest of Voorhees and his crew, it consented to arm the negro?

Secure in the good will and sympathy of his audience, the speaker proceeded to his main argument that "The States of the Union are equal in their rights, and that the States of the South stand unshorn of a single right or privilege by the events of the late war." He held that Louisiana was the peer in every respect of his own State of Indiana, and the "unquestioned peer, likewise, of every other State between the sunrise of the Atlantic and sunset of the Pacific." Amid the thunders of applause which greeted the enunciation of this sentiment, the eloquent speaker did not pause to define whether he meant by "States" the rebel organizations as they had existed during the war, or the States as reconstructed by returned rebels, or the "loyal people," of whom Johnson once said "they alone constituted the States." If he meant the last, he is for once grandly right, and his argument rests on solid rock.—If he meant the first, he flies full in the face of the President's proclamation, which asserts that the State governments were "destroyed by the rebellion." But if he meant, as his argument requires, that the States as reconstructed by rebels possess any unquestioned rights, he not only denies the declaration of President Johnson that their validity depended on their recognition by Congress, but asserts a principle which, if adopted, would send a thrill of horror through every loyalist of the South and set aside all past precedents of human government. If the Confederacy was truly a de facto government, as the Southern Courts now decide, then all its citizens were, and still are, aliens in every respect, from the government of the United States, and must so remain till naturalized as citizens after a five years residence. If the States, with their hostile governments and rebellious citizens, were still in the Union during the fearful conflict at arms, then every rebel is a traitor, liable to be hung, with every right of citizenship gone. If you say that the President's pardon has restored to forfeited State citizenship, we reply, such an attempt on his part would be usurpation. Who gave to the President power to determine the terms of citizenship for a sovereign State? When the rebellion was overthrown the only remaining citizens in the States which attempted secession were those who had not withdrawn their allegiance from the United States. They, and they alone had the right to reorganize their respective States, and prescribe the terms of admission to State citizenship. The action of the National Executive in wresting all power from the hands of Union men and throwing them and their State governments into the hands of rebels, was an alarming assumption of power. But if these arbitrary creations of perverted power are to defy the clearly expressed will of the American people and mock the agony of the only real citizens of these States, then, who can tell "into what Dead Sea of gloomy, sullen, centralized despotism we are all to be swallowed up."

But the chief import of Mr. Voorhees' speech did not inhere in its logic. Its power to harm was in the spirit which it evoked, and in the "hidden hand' which, under cover of these utterances, was extended to clasp and hold in loving embrace the rebellious masses of the South. His treatment of the Constitutional Amendment was an appeal to passion. He pronounced the proviso that deprives leading traitors from holding office "cruel as the fierce proscriptions that followed the wars of Marius and Sully; more barbarous even, for death was preferable to dishonor." He said, "I and my friends during the war regarded you as a brave, chivalrous and high-minded people." He did not believe men of such valor would now proscribe their leaders for doing what they wanted them to do. Were he a Southern man, he would die first. Knowing full well the effect which his partial statements would produce on his heated audience, he stigmatized the "New England clergy," sneered at "strong minded women and weak-minded men," and dwelling on the privileges and wages accorded to freedmen in Louisiana, uttered, amid the applause of his audience, the blistering slander, that Northern working men had no cause to commiserate freedmen; fixing, as he knew, in the minds of that audience an indelible stigma on the laboring men of his own State.

Mr. Voorhees is no doubt in great ignorance of the real status of freedmen, as also of all loyalists in the South. His superficial eye has never yet looked beneath the gilded externals that cover the abominations of Southern society. He might have known that beneath that beautiful exterior had been enacted deeds of darkness that pen cannot describe nor tongue portray. He might have known that the murders of freedmen in Louisiana during the year 1866 were numerous as the days in the year. He could have known that an honored citizen of his own State, a graduate of the same university, a member of the same church to which the speaker had belonged in his better days, and his peer in intellect, had been shot and beaten in that same hall for being a spectator of proceedings at least as legitimate as those now enacted there. This, and more, he might have known of arson, murder, robbery and wrong; but what cared he for these terrible truths? He was using whatever of ability and eloquence he possessed to have these loyal, persecuted people left helpless and hopeless under the cruel power of the vindictive rebels he was then addressing. His mission was to strike hands with men who had essayed to lay the nation in its grave. He was sustaining them in the wrongs of the past and encouraging to new ones in the future; he was laboring to resurrect a party which had once well nigh wrought the ruin of the Republic; he was assisting to throw fresh fetters around the form of liberty; he was adding to an agony already well-nigh insupportable, and by all these was he allying himself to the enemies of Southern progress. The South will yet arise; but it will be by better counsellors than the effete Copperheads of the North, and her reliance will be on something more secure than a powerless executive and the "unexpected assistance of the Supreme Court."

Wind--Fire--Death.

On Friday night Feb. 1st a terrible storm swept over Jackson Miss., entirely destroying the large house of worship lately built by the M. E. Church. A private letter from the Pastors of our church there says:

"We hasten to let you know that a terrible storm swept over us last night. It lasted but a few minutes, but in that short time most of the dwellings on the hill were blown down. Our new church was laid flat to the ground! * * * A number of persons were badly injured by the falling buildings, during the tempest, but strange to say, no lives were lost. There certainly was a Providence in this, and we truly have cause of gratitude to our Heavenly Father that our lives were preserved."

This is sad news, and is a hard blow to our Society in Jackson. They will need and must have help to rebuild the Church. In the letter from which the above extract is taken they call loudly for help. Their enemies rejoice over them, and glory in their misfortune. But they hope soon to rebuild. May God bless and sustain them in this trying hour!

Since writing the above we have received still sadder intelligence from Columbus Miss. The large two-story building there occupied both as a schoolhouse and a church was burned on Sunday morning, January 27th, and Joseph Mitchel, the Sexton, sleeping in one of the upper rooms, perished in the flames! We had seen in the Columbus (Miss.) corresspondence of a Mobile paper, the following:

"The negro schoolhouse here was burned last Saturday night,. through the neglect of the freedmen, or by accident it is thought. The citizens have snbscribed liberally to build another, which shows the feeling here towards the negroes."

Which shows how Southern correspondents can lie when occasion calls for it. The fire by which the M. E. Church loses its bell, seats and furniture; the teachers, their building, and a good man is burned alive, was the work of an incendiary, and the result of hatred to the negroes and the teachers and the M. E. Church. We have received two letters from Columbus giving facts and details, and would gladly publish them in full, and give the names of the writers, but dare not lest it endanger the lives of our correspondents. One of the letters states that on Sunday morning, while it was yet dark, they (the teachers) were aroused and on looking out saw at the East end of the building, on the lower floor, a fire, rapidly spreading. The young men ran to the building hoping to reach the office in time to save the rolls and books. But they were too late—the fire outran them—it spread almost with the rapidity of lightning, and in less than five minutes the flames were bursting from the windows of the lower story.

Turpentine had been plentifully poured upon the steps and clear through the long hall. This explains the unparalled rapidity with which the flames spread. Those who first reached the fire saw distinctly the blue blaze as it marked the trail of turpentine upon the steps and along the floor. If any doubt had existed as to the use of the inflammable fluid, it was cleared away by the fact that a quantity had been spilled on the ground at one end of the steps and when at a later period the fire had reached the spot, the blue flame was seen running along the bare ground!

Speaking of Mr. Mitchel, who perished in the flames the letter says: "Poor man! we think he must have been nearly if not quite suffocated before the flames reached him, for his body fell down (thro' the burning floor—he was in the second story,) right where he had been lying. You cannot imagine our feelings as we looked upon his charred remains!" "The citizens seem determined to make it appear that the fire was 'accidental' tho' there had been no fire in the building for 24 hours when the Aid Society had met, as usual, in an upper room in the West end of the building. whereas the fire was first seen in the East end of the building and on the lower floor! No light whatever was seen above till after the whole lower story was in flames"—this shows how vain the attempt to make it appear accidental burning, or "thro' the neglect of the freedmen."

The letter closes: On Monday morning, I went to the telegraph office to send a dispatch to our commission, expecting an immediate reply. Four days passed and we have no reply. The operator here does not give us much satisfaction, and we fear it has not been sent. We have written and send our letters to another office, believing it not safe at the present time to trust letters in this office. We are troubled on every side yet not distressed; perplexed, but not in despair, persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be manifest in us. For we which live are delivered unto death for Jesus' sake that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body."

How worse than contemptible is it in the correspondent of the Mobile papers to state that "the citizens (of Columbus,) have subscribed liberally to build another house" etc., when so far from doing anything of the kind, they refuse to even rent, at any price a decent house for the the teachers to live in; if they, the teachers, could rent another building for the family, they would use their present residence for the schools; but this is impossible, and "some of the schools will have to be taught in the open air, in fair weather!" so says one of these letters.

To show the real feeling of the citizens of Columbus toward the colored people it is only necessrry to refer to facts: we here reproduce a letter written to Mr. Wilson by the citizens of Columbus, and published in this paper last June [See No. 23.]

"Mr. Wilson—We the undersigned have determined that you shall not stay in this country and teach a nigger school; and if you do not leave we will hang you and your whole crowd. Leave or not just as you please, but we are determined upon this thing: you shall not stay if we can procure a rope that will hold you. Leave immediately,

Your Many Enemies."

That is brief, to the point, forcible, conclusive. We need only call up the case recorded in No. 29 Vol. 1. of this paper, in which in this same city [or near it] an unoffending freedman was emasculated, and then had both his ears cut off close to his head. The writer of this has seen the man and knows whereof he affirms. This last wanton sacrifice of property and life speaks for itself. If any thing were needed to complete the fiendish character of such a horrid crime we find it in the fact that the sacred Sabbath was seleeted as the fitting day for their hellish work.

And why all this violence and outrage! One of the above letters says: "The only crime charged against us is—we are 'nigger teachers'. And that is still the "unpardonable sin" in the reconstructed South.

The mystery which had hung around the murder of Miss Hendricks in this city, was cleared up to our minds, when we were told she had been a teacher in a freedmen's school. The Times says of her murder: the blood of this poor inoffensive girl, so suddenly and mysteriously slain, will remain a serious stain upon the reputation of our community unless some more energetic measures than have yet been adopted shall be taken in the affair." But who ever heard of "energetic measures" being taken in the South to find out the murders of niggers, nigger officers, or nigger teachers.

Recently a southern lady of intelligence and irreproachable character, but who had taught colored children, joined the M. E. Church South in Baton Rouge and when it became known that she was a "nigger teacher," she was obliged to withdraw from the church under censure. This we have from other members of that same church in Baton Rouge. Thus do we find the churches of the South cherishing the blind prejudice and barbarous spirit which maims, murders and burns alive the poor freedmen and their teachers and friends.—"How long, O Lord! How long?"

We make one more extract from our Columbus correspondence: "The Mayor is investigating the matter. Yesterday our men folks were called to give evidence; also the freedmen who were first at the fire. One of the latter (the most important witness of all,) was questioned and cross-questioned for more than an hour trying to make him contradict himself; but he told a straight story and testified to the same thing everytime no matter how they quizzed him." Think of the meanness that would try to thus shift the responsibility of burning alive a fellow-man! But most Southern Mayors are better at instigating murders than investigating them. O! for a just Mayor! A just judge—an avenger of innocent blood! Joseph Mitchel sleeps a martyr and his spirit has joined the company of groaning souls beneath the altar, and the day of their deliverance draweth nigh.

We had hoped that the worst was over in Mississippi, but it seems that we are not yet sufficiently tried in that State. But our people stand firm, and the teachers know no such words as fear or failure. One of them says: "I have not heard one of our number express any desire to run from the enemy, though they (our enemies) fully expected we would. All these things should bring us who are friends more closely together, and make us more devoted and faithful in the service of God.—Pray for us."

"——— marvel not
Ye righteous, if His dispensations here
Unequal seem. What though disorders reign?
God still presides, and with unerring hand
Directs the vast machine. His wisdom can
From discord harmony produce, and make E'en vice subservient to his ends."

Divine Service.

The House of Representatives have kindly granted the use of their Hall to the congregation of the M. E. Church, for divine service during the erection of their Church edifice.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach there tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Sunday school at 9½ A.M. All are invited to attend.

State Legislature.—The Legislature of Louisiana has unanimously rejected the Constitutional Amendment. The chief reason for this action, was the disfranchising clause.

The Senators and Representatives met in joint session, Feb. 6th, and balloted twice for U. S. Senator, to succeed Judge Boyce, but failed to elect a successor.

The Legislature has authorized an election for members of a State Constitutional Convention.

To Our Preachers.

We desire to inform our preachers that they are under no obligations to accede to the demands of Bishop Wilmer or his agents in the formation of schools and churches

The Bishop has no authoity to command you, and do you not yield to his demands. Attend to your own business and maintain your own schools and churches.

He has no authority from the government over you.

Rebel Church Suits.—The rebels have signally failed in suits for the Methodist churches in Athens and in Knoxville, Ten., having been defeated in both cases.

The Texas Advocate of Jan. 10th, states that two-thirds of those who have joined our church in Galveston, had withdrawn from us and joined the A. M. E. Church. Of the exact number who have left us we are not now prepared to state; but we are prepared to prove that the minister of the A. M. E. Church and the members of M. E. Church South, in that city, united to persuade our members to leave us and join the former church, but failing in this, they then threatened to take their church property from them Friendless and weak, and satisfied of their inability to obtain protection either from the civil courts of Texas or President Johnson's military, a majority were induced to join the A. M. E. Church, to save their property. But some sixty of the original members of their church remains with us, and for the present occupy the building conjointly with the African church; the former in the morning, and the latter in the evening. These are the facts as they have come to our knowledge.

We intend to present in our next issue the relations of the A. M. E. church to the M. E. church in the South. The time has come to ventilate this subject

Rev. Scott Chinn.

This faithful minister of the Cross, is now convalescent after a long and dangerous illness. He was present yesterday in his church, and in opening the Love Feast, spoke as follows:

The Lord has given us the victory thus far, and if you love one another your triumph will be complete. The design of the grand enemy of all souls is to create division in the church of God—love makes the devil mad, and love affects the devil powerfully.

The Love Feast is a great place. It shuts out the world, and the heathen world is impressed. They cant get in, the dividing mark is drawn and they look as hard as adamantine But this does good, for many are converted. The husband sees his wife go into Love Feast, but cant go in himself. So shall it be in the judgment day; the pious wife will go into heaven, but the ungodly husband will be shut out.

"Love works no ill to his neighbor' You can trust a man that has love; you can lock him up in your house and leave him there and he will take nothing. Let us love one another, and to-day I want you to speak of your christian love. Don't tell a long yarn, but fire a short gun. It has been a long time since we had a Love Feast, and you have cried out "deep waters, deep waters." Have fought many battles since and the old ship has struck on many quick-sands, but to-day all is well.

Speak of your conversion. This is the great theme. "I have gone a hundred times to old Kentucky to feel for the place where I was converted. Now I want eternity to tell on this hour, I have been forty years on the way and must get there for myself.

Self-Raising Flour.

We advise our lady friends to use Pierce & Dwight's Self-Raising Flour. It can be had at any of our grocers or at their own store, 99 Magazine Street. We give this advice from personal knowledge of the real excellence and convenience of this flour. The bread made thereof is white, light and delicious to the taste. The chemical ingredients, which are substituted for the Cream of Tartar in common use, are not only harmless, but decidedly healthy, and are so approved by the best chemists in the land. We feel that we are conferring a favor upon our lady friends by this commendatory notice.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs—Within these few years such material progress has been made by the well known manufacturers, Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, of Boston, as to place the instruments made by them on a higher level, and to decide the question that the piano-forte is no longer to hold the only prominent place as a household instrument. These manufacturers have worked out the secret of producing tones of the best quality—tones of surpassing purity, and richness,—from reeds, and have otherwise brought the instruments, for which they have adopted the appropriate name, "Cabinet Organs," to such a degree of excellence, that they are exciting much interest in musical circles, and are already becoming the fashion with those who are on the alert for musical novelties of real merit. Without doubt, in these Cabinet Organs, we have the long-sought instrument of sustained notes, which is hereafter to divide with the piano-forte the musical honors of the drawing-room.—N. Y. Home Journal.

Local and Southern News.

A blacksmith by the name of Watkins, living on Melpomene Street, shot himself through the heart, last Sunday evening, while under the influence of liquor.

The M. E. (colored) Church at Jackson Miss., together with several other buildings were blown down a few days since, during a severe gale.

The freedmen's school house at Columbus, Miss., was burnt a few nights since.

Twaddle.—Northern society, so far from extoling itself and drawing invidious contrasts between its condition and that of society in the South, should humble itself in dust and ashes. That it became terribly demoralized during the temporary withdrawal of these refining Southern influences, which always kept it in check before the war, is apparent to every one who is in the habit of reading the published records of the Northern courts.

A Colored Lawyer not allowed to Practice in Georgia.—In the Superior Court of Chatham county, Ga., on the 17th of January, Aaron A. Bradley, a person of color, made application to be admitted to practice law in the State of Georgia. The petitioner is a member of the bar in the State of Maine. Judge W. B. Fleming made the following indorsement on the petition:

"The laws of Georgia do not authorize or contemplate the admission of persons of color to the bar, and as this is a matter entirely of internal police and municipal regulation, over which the State has absolute jurisdiction, it is my deliberate judgment that this court has no power to grant the within petition, the petitioner being a person of color."

Rev. Dr. Joseph Cross is willing to remove to Texas, to serve some Episcopal parish.—Lavaca (Texas) Commercial.

Murder.—A negro man of respectability was murdered a week or two since, six miles from Cold Springs, by two men, named Bradley Dear and Harry Dilliard. It is supposed that they murdered him for his money. They said he had only $15 and a watch. The watch they did not take. His horse they tried to sell in Cold Springs. They were arrested, but escaped. We are informed that the families of the young men stand high in the estimation of the people. We are unable to procure further particulars at present.—Livingston Argus, Jan. 16.

Distressing Casualty.—On Sunday last, Christie O. Hardin, son of Col. Frank Hardin, of this place was accidentally shot and killed by a freedman. The ball entered in the back and passed nearly through the body, causing death in a few hours. We do not know when it has been our lot to record so sad a calamity. It has cast a gloom over our whole community; and we cannot but express our deep sympathies with the distressed parents and relatives of the deceased.—Liberty Gazette. Jan. 16.

The Columbia (S.C.) Phœnix, rejoicing over the rejection of the Amendment by the Southern States, says:

We think the attitude of the Southern people in relation to Federal politics at the present time presents one of the grandest moral spectacles that any crushed people ever exhibited. The intimating measures of the radicals have utterly failed to have any influence upon the decision of the Southern people and their Legislatures. The party finds the South calm and acquiescent, not clamoring for admission to Congress, as they expected; not turbulent nor committing outrages on account of its oppressive policy. They threaten disfranchisement of Southern men; they may destroy their State Governments, and substitute military rule over an already burdened and oppressed people; they may determine that these States shall never again be restored to the Union; they may do all this, and more, but they will never coerce the people of the South into voluntarily acceptance of a measure that they believe unjust and iniquitous. Such is the "verdict" of the Southern people, in opposition to the so-called verdict of the North. Intimidation has utterly failed.

General News.

MEXICO.—The progress of the Liberals has been sudden and rapid. The storming of Jalappa, garrisoned by 1200 men, by a force of 2500 Republicans, badly armed and without a single piece of artillery, is regarded as the most gallant episode of the war.

The capture of the city of Oajaca, defended by Austrians, French and native Imperialists, was another creditable affair.

The boldness of the Liberals seems to increase, and their advanced pickets are within three miles of the City of Mexico. The news of the abandonment of San Luis has been quickly followed by that of the cities of Guadalajara, Zacatecas and Guanajuato. All left to the Archduke Maximilian, is the capital and a narrow belt from thence to Vera Cruz. On both sides of this line the Republicans are advancing, and from all points of the interior a steady tide is flowing towards the common centre, the capital.

The differences between President Juarez and Ortega have been suddenly terminated by the arrest of the latter, which may be regarded as the death-blow to his party.

LONDON, Feb. 2—Garibaldi has written a letter discouraging the rising in Rome.

Russia protests against the gathering of Poles in Galicia.

PARIS, Feb. 1—The Imperial army camps this year at Paris instead of Chalons.

ATHENS, Feb. 1—It is impossible for the Government to restrain the departure of volunteers for Crete. Fifteen hundred have just departed.

PARIS, Feb. 2—La Presse thinks the presence of an American fleet in the Mediterranean complicates the Eastern question.

LONDON, Feb. 2—The continental opinion is that Maximilian will remain in Mexico if the approaching Congress is favorable.

PARIS, Feb. 3—Erlanger's funds to aid the Cretans is a great success.

LONDON, Feb. 1—A very destructive earthquake has been felt on the west coast of Africa.

PORTUGAL—Portuguese Senatorial action favors the abolition of slavery in their colonies.

The Presbyterian service held in a hired house at Rome has been suppressed at the personal instance of the Pope. The minister, the Rev. James Lewis, is under sentence of banishment. It is also stated that there is an intention to suppress the American service now conducted in a hired room separate from the Legation. Cardinal Antonelli has expressed his personal regret that this policy should be pursued.

A European correspondent of the New York Tribune asserts that a son of Marco Bozzaris, the Creek patriot, on whom Halleck wrote one of the finest poems in the English language, is to be sent as the Grecian Minister to the United States.

SOUTH AMERICA.—Letters received from emigrants from this country to Brazil, represent that they are sorry they left the United States and would give everything to be back. They do not like the Brazilians, and the Brazilians do not like them.

Brazil continues its war preparations against Paraguay.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—The Grand Jury has regularly indicted John H. Surratt for murder.

Gen. Howard has issued a circular stating that transportation will be only given to relieve the Government from supporting the indigent, and enable those in extreme want to reach the place of their employment. Hereafter no orders for transportation will be issued except from his office, and the application must clearly set forth the circumstances, certified by an assistant commissioner.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Star says Governor Orr, of South Carolina, Judge Sharkey and others have gone home to carry out the plan agreed upon. It requires $250 or ability to read as a suffrage qualification. The Star adds that the different Legislatures now in session have been telegraphed not to adjourn till the matter is laid before them. The scheme is said to have originated with Southern men, without formal consultation with either party.

The executive committee of the Southern Relief Commission met this afternoon. They have received additional information of the destitution of the South, and taken measures to make the working and organization of the Commission complete and effective. Treasurer James M. Brown reported the receipt of about $14,000 within three days, $10,000 of which was in two equal subscriptions from A. T. Stewart and Brown, Bros. & Co.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The impeachment feeling seems gaining ground. The Chronicle has a double-leaded leader urging it.

A bill guaranteeing a republican form of government to the lately rebellious States, by J. M. Ashley, was referred to the Committee on Reconstruction. Ashley stated that the bill was drawn up by the Southern Association, of which Durant is President.

A bill providing for the relief of loyal citizens of the lately insurrectionary States was introduced by Maynard, and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

A joint resolution to establish a civil government, and providing for the resumption of the former relations of the unrepresented States, was referred to the Reconstruction Committee.

Letter from Mississippi.

Tuesday night, Jan. 15th, we left the Crescent City for Jackson and some other points in Miss., for the purpose of attending to business connected with the transfer of District Headquarters to New Orleans, and according to promise will furnish the readers of the ADVOCATE with somes notes of the trip.

We traveled via the N. O. J. & G. W. Railroad. On the cars we "fell in" with a company who were off for Brazil via Cincinnati, Baltimore and New York, where they were to embark for South America. They were mostly young men; two of them were Texans. We think they must have belonged to Rev. Ballord S. Dunn's "Colony." They certainly met the conditions he required of those who join him: they were "true men, true to themselves, devoid of the love of gain, devotedly attached to the 'lost cause,' and desirous of conserving their (damaged) honor, chivalry and purity." They evidently belonged to that "upper crust" of Southern society, who, to use Mr. Dunn's language, "feel that the South has been dishonored, and is rapidly becoming dishonorable; who scorn the cowardly, craven, temporizing spirit that has taken possession of so many souls that were once honorable and chivalrous; who see in the future no brighter prospect for the little boy who is now the pride of his father, and the joy of his mother, than the position of a menial hireling, under a Northern capitalist; who tremble for the future of those little angels of purity, that now nestle on our bosoms, or cling about our necks, silently and unconsciously imploring us to protect them from the "factory" and the "public library," where those hordes of disreputable women that throng the large cities of the North and West, receive the training that fits them for their life of shame" They had consoled their deep grief at parting with loved ones, with something more than "a we drap of the crather," which Paddy was so fond of taking for his "awful infarmity," and their mourning was changed into gladness, and they were very communicative. It really excited our commiseration to see how their chivalrous souls longed and pined to reach a land where they would once more "find the nigger in his normal condition," and revel unrestrained in the (to them) paradisical delight of the "peculiar institution." To them and all such, Brazil is now the "Land of Promise," and Rev. Ballord S. Dunn is their "Moses." We hope they will not have to wander forty years in the wilderness.

At Jackson we found Brothers Proctor and Anderson at their posts, and doing excellent service. They had obtained 21 subscribers for the N. O. ADVOCATE, and expect to get as many more. "Aunt Betsy" had arranged to furnish the church with stoves. The teachers from the North had returned, with their old Superintendent, Mr. Watson, who has erected a "Teacher's Home" near the church, (the three school-houses having been previously moved to the same locality,) and the causes of education and religion are progressing finely. The new conference year opens encouragingly. On arriving in J., (our old P. O. Address,) we found recent letters from most of the appointments in the Miss. District, and they bring good reports of the work generally.

From Meridian, Brother Moses Adams, preacher in charge, sends ten subscribers to the Advocate and says: "I will send some more next week." He began a protracted meeting soon as he returned from Conference and it has been a success. He says: "We began a protracted meeting, January 13, and still it goes on in power, and the Lord is with us It is a great meeting for Meridian. Many have been converted, and the shout of new-born souls is heard in the camp. The Lord is getting to himself a great name in Meridian. I want you to send me fifty hymn books, and as many Bibles, right away." At Columbus, while the preachers were at conference a wolf in sheeps clothing stole in among the flock and scattered them somewhat. He has since been arrested by the civil authorities for obtaining money under false pretences and the people's eyes have been opened, and the evil has mainly corrected itself Brother Wilson, Superintendent of our schools there, writes: "Brother Ryan is making a good start here. He and the official board were with us last night rearranging their classes and leaders and I wrote for them to a late hour; they then sang and prayed and the Lord was with us and we parted in brotherly love and good feeling. Brother Ryan is a worker and I think will succeed in uniting the people again in the bonds of the Gospel. The people see their folly in giving countenance to Bowler and it has taught them a good lesson." Bro. Ryan, writes:

"I hear much complaint on the part of freedmen here about not getting their pay, and there is cause to complain. Many who have worked hard all the year can get nothing for it Some have taken contracts for another year and have gone to the country to live, but a great many more have gone to Tennessee where the planters give them better terms than they can get in Mississippi. In consequence of this, many plantations here are going to lie idle this year for want of hands. We lose some of our good members by this emigration, but I shall try to gather more to fill their places."

Bro. Jones, who was sent to Macon, Mississippi, but finding some obstacles in the way, and fearing violence fled the field—the only instance of the kind in the whole conference—his place however will soon be filled by another and the good work will go on. Brother Elihu Hollingsworth, Superintendent of the schools at Macon, writes us about the matter and says: "The people are dissatisfied with his (Jones) leaving and desire him to come back, or another man sent in his place." All is right at Aberdeen—we never expect to hear of anything going wrong at that point. At Corinth, also, all is well. Brother A. Williams, preacher-in-charge, says: "Our church here is continually increasing. I am not now (Jan. 21st,) holding protracted meeting, nor are we having a regular revival, yet, some ones either probationers or members, join us every time I open the doors of the church."

By a letter from Rev. L. Hawkins of Memphis, we have sad intelligence from Brother Patton, who was employed to supply the work at Holly Springs. Bro. Patton's children were in Memphis and he went there to remove them nearer his appointment, but upon reaching Memphis was set upon by a pack of thieves who robbed him of all his money—he had just received his first quarter's salary. It seems that the violence he received at the hands of the highwaymen and the mental anxiety for himself and children at being thus left among strangers, threw him into a violent fever and he is dangerously ill. Brother Hawkins says: "He, Bro. Patton, is now laboring under a severe attack of pneumonia, and is very sick. We are doing all we can for him, but he is very low, and it is doubtful if he recovers." Let our brethren at Holly Springs make a note of this and write to Rev. L. Hawkins, Memphis Tennessee, and learn how he is. Meanwhile let Bro. Windson Butler, who had charge of Holly Springs last year, continue in charge and go forward with the work till Brother Patton or Bro. Dasnell, their presiding Elder, shall have reached there. God will take care of them and prosper the work.

We have other items to chronicle, but must leave them for another letter, in which we shall have some things about Vicksburg, and our prosperity in those places. Let all the brethren in Mississippi stand firmly to their posts, and be diligent in their work. Look to God, and he will protect and prosper you in every difficulty and danger.

N. L. BRAKEMAN.

Miss., Jan. 25, 1867.

Les Pensees.

BY M. ANNESLEY.

Praise, like blame, the more silently passed over, the better.

Almost all professors of religion have more light than they follow, therefore, are living under condemnation.

It is very unpleasant to hear people make a flourish in prayer, as a pastor thanking God lately for the visions of his faith, said, "we almost see the burnished spires of the upper kingdom."

Immediately it came to mind, "I saw no temple therein." Neither is it pleasant to hear allegories in prayer. When the Holy Spirit, on remembrance, brings a scriptural illustration to mind we may use it with good effect.

There is power in purity, for the vessel is continually fit for use. The pure in heart hears the gentlest whispers to obedience, and power is increased by constant faithfulness.

When our zeal is noisy and bustling, it disturbs our peace, and we cannot say it is the pure zeal of God.

Faith is constant, and undisturbed, when fixed within the vail, through the blood of Jesus.

If we do not cherish some secret sin, we can rest upon the promise of God. "Be sure your sin will find you out."

How sad the condition is of those who are incessantly conscious that they are not what they ought to be, in spiritual things, yet they know that Christ is all, in all to his people, so they need not lack any good thing.

This lukewarmness is just what God hates, and of such he says he will spew them out of his mouth. They would not rest over night if their temporal condition was in as disastrous a state.

But people sleep undisturbed on the very brink of hell, for should "the morn awake" them in the other world, they would then regret their great mistake and indifference with respect to their precious souls.

The life of faith, is a very pleasant and happy life, it looks within the vail, and sees that which far outshines all earthly glory, bright as it may be, for everything heavenly is enduring, and beyond all present realities.

—Nothing can occur beyond the strength of faith to sustain, or transcending the resources of religion to sustain.—Binney.

Ladies' Department.

The Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER IV.

Ours was a happy household, but happiness pure and unalloyed is not a plant of earthly growth; her gardens are in the skies; and thrice happy shall we be if permitted by and by to drink from the gushing fountains that unceasingly send up their silvery spray in the pure sunlight of Heaven

Inspired with a holy ambition, emanating from the fullness of the promise that they who turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever, in their youth our Father and Mother united their destinies cheerfully, surrendering all of worldly plans to the toils and privations incident to the Itineracy. With a rapidly increasing household, they were transferred from one Parsonage-home to another, for at least a score of times. Too frequent exposure to wintery winds and storm produced hemorrhage of the lungs; thus in the prime of life our Father, by ill-health, was compelled reluctantly to retire to what is known in the M. E. C. as a supernumerary relation; but sad for the weary and worn Itinerant, this relation makes no provision for a home. Unable to toil, and without the support of the pastorate, the "lights" of the itineracy that had hitherto fallen upon his pathway now began to vanish into gloomy "shades." The fruitful bough by his side, and the olive plants around his table were clinging to him for nourishment, just as the modest vine clings to the proud, noble oak. Alas! the rough winds of winter had smitten the parent tree—but will the All-seeing Father who hath said, "Lo, I am with you alway," permit the branches to fall or the tender vine to trail on the ground? No! a handwriting in letters of gold is seen traced on the outlines of the dark cloud: "I have been young, and now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, or his seed begging bread."

Poverty is an evil from which we naturally fly—but to meet it and contend nobly "with a heart for any fate" as did our Father and Mother, tends to strengthen character, adding patience to endurence, and faith to virtue. Providence was not long in unfolding its "bright design"—for God gave us a humble home. And strange as it may seem, dear Minnie, right here, on one page of this marvelous book of memory I find an engraving of the dear old home and its surroundings, and reposing in the pleasant shade of the Family Tree I can trace all its outlines clearly. A long lane or avenue, shaded with cherry trees on one side, and apple trees on the other side led to the house, which at first was brown but afterwards painted red. The architecture was no doubt of the eighteenth century The barn and out-buildings were on one side, and adjoining these the ample garden with its currant bushes, peach trees, flower beds and vegetables. The yard in front of the house was filled with cherry trees, lilac bushes and May roses. A group of lilies in the centre, and a few flowers peeping up their bright heads among the clean green grass around the doorway made it appear a little Eden- The apple trees in the orchard extended from the house to the public road, and thus our home was enclosed by Nature's drapery.

The farming grounds, composed of hill and dale and rough woodlands which surrounded our quiet home, yielded to the toil and industry of the laborer, supplying us with wood for fuel, and giving us bread to eat—thus, heaven be praised, the cold never pinched us—nor did hunger mock at us—if our garments were worn and at times threadbare, and handed down from the highest to the lowest altitude in the family, and turned and worked over in every possible way until not a relic remained for future generations. Providence wisely understood how best a healthy and intelligent womanhood could be developed, and how to impart manly character and strength of muscle to our tall brothers. But God only will ever know the anxiety and the unceasing prayers of our devoted parents during these years of their extremity.

Winter's icy clasp has been broken. Springtime has woven her crown of verdure. Summer has come with her fruit and flowers, and waving fields of grain. Night dropped her curtain to lift it again when morning dawned. At an early hour our Father was out in the yard preparing the scythes and cradles and giving instructions to our elder brothers. The grindstone having performed its necessary revolutions. Olin and Wilberforce, erect and full of manly vigor, swing the scythe or cradle over their shoulder, whistle a merry air as they go to the field; anon the tall grass in the meadow, still wet with the morning dew, or the yellow grain is falling beneath the strength of their arms. Addison goes into the garden to hoe among the early potatoes, the cucumbers and beans. Fisk bounds over the green hills driving the cows to pasture and closing the bars after them, commences to fill his pail or basket with the ripe berries growing along the fences.

Our Mother and Edith, besides preparing the breakfast, care for the straining and skimming of the milk, churning the cream, setting the cheese, and a variety of other household items in which each of us girls had some allotted task—for we were taught that there was truth as well as poetry in the lines that "Satan has some mischief still, for idle hands to do." When the horn blew, the boys hastened from the field, as fresh and ruddy as the morning itself. Our Father's motto was, "Order is heaven's first law." Thus it was, at the ringing of the prayer-bell, we all took our Bibles and when quietly seated turned to the chapter marked by the reading on the previous evening. Pa and Ma read first, followed by each member of the family reading two verses. At the conclusion of this pleasant exercise, generally enlivened by singing, we all bowed in humble prayer. The table having been arranged, the food from the stove was then placed on it, and the bell again rang for all to take their places at the long table—not an extension table such as used nowadays, to be enlarged only when company comes, but permanently extended, to accommodate at every meal at least a dozen. Our Father's eye never failed to glance along its length to know that every one of the dozen was present before he asked the blessing. Not a mouthful was allowed to be tasted until all were waited on—no rattling of dishes was heard—no loud talking was permitted at any time—no reaching of little arms across the table. We were taught that the fork was intended to convey the food to the mouth, and not the knife, long before this form of table etiquette was discussed by professedly genteel people. According to Wesleyan family rule, we were not allowed to drink tea or coffee until we were eight years old—then we might decide ourselves, if we desired to enjoy this luxury. A cheerful conversation was indulged in during the meal time, but no one could retire from the table until thanks to God for our food was returned by our father. Then we all arose at once and placed our chairs tastefully around the room. After this happy round of morning duties, the labors of the day were again resumed and perfect system maintained—thus if labor was not rest, toil in a degree was sweet.

I almost imagine, dear Minnie, that on this bright morning I am running down that green slope to the spring and dipping from its inexhaustible fountain water as pure and crystaline as ever was sipped by mortal. With a pail in one hand and a basket in the other, the latter filled with warm ginger cake, bread and cheese, we wended our way to the hay-field. Now don't you see Papa and brothers reclining ala Turque on the green meadow, devouring the contents of pail and basket? When the boys were at their work again, dear Papa would take his knife from his pocket and cut from the wood near by slender fish-poles, and attach to each a line and a hook manufactured from a pin, then placing on it a bit of angle-worm, we would sit for hours on the edge of the gurgling stream that meandered through the meadow, watching with intense interest every jerk of the line, and feeling a perfect thrill of delight when we brought up the little shiners. I can never forget one time when I threw over my head an eel nearly two feet long, and left it whapping on the grass as I ran terrified to Papa, supposing I had caught a venom us serpent, but delightfully surprised to learn that it was an eel, and belonged to the finny tribe, and enjoyed a savory bit of it for breakfast next morning.

The dinner hour was at twelve o'clock precisely. In the afternoon if the skies betokened showers or otherwise, we were sometimes allowed to take a run into the field to "make hay while the sun shines" Who will say that there is not majesty in a fine load of hay with a yoke of broad-backed, long-horned oxen before it; and does it detract from the picture if the background is relieved by boys in their shirt-sleeves, and merry, laughing girls in their sun-bonnets?

The evening twilight of these long summer days was most enchanting. The toil of the busy housewife completed for the day home presents a picture of neatness. Will you just take a peep into the supper room, where the table is spread with a cloth of exquisite whiteness—a plate of fresh, digestable bread—another plate of golden butter, and a dish of ripe strawberries all smothered in cream, waiting for the last load of hay to be stored away in the barn.—Who are lords and nobles, if the yeomanry are not?

The sun is sinking just as "The lowing herds wind slowly o'er the lea;" but Minnie, do you remember your first lesson at milking? I imagined it a wonderful event when I was allowed for the first time to take a pail and milk old Brindle—she was a staid old cow, so we all chose her for our first effort—but the romance, if there was any connected with it, vanished suddenly, when after being nicely seated at a young frisky cow, and the pail nearly filled with the foaming milk, to have her ladyship toss her head coquettishly, followed by a malicious kick, upsetting the contents of the pail over you from cap-a-pe, and fortunate if you did not turn a not very graceful summersault on the not very clean ground of the barn-yard—but quick as thought you spring to your feet—Hi! keep your temper, if not the three-legged stool will go flying through the air at poor Mully's head, who, by the time it chances to reach her, will be standing several feet from you, chewing her cud as demurely as if nothing had happened.

As the twilight begins to deepen, the chickens fly to their twig on the tree, hiding their little heads under their wings; the house cat coils herself in the corner; the faithful watch-dog takes his place as sentinel for the night—still wilight lingers until all nature falls asleep to the nightingale warbling her whip-poor-will. The family group that gathered around the doorway when the work of the day was done to sit in the twilight and watch the sinking sun, now as the hour grows calm and holy they retire into the house for evening worship, and close the day singing

"Thus far the Lord has led me on.
Thus far His power prolongs my days,
And every evening shall make known
Some fresh memorial of His grace."

For the N. O Advocate.

THE NEGRO.

BY J. WILLIS MENARD, (COLORED.)

For him there is no peace—no sweet repose—
No welcome voices greet him where he goes—

No pomp or glory—no triumphant arch
Proclaims his martial glory in his march!

Such is his lot—his earthly fare is hard,
Nor is his worth e'er sung by muse or bard.

He comes afar through the dark mist of years,
Burdened with woes unnumbered, and with tears;

As if exiled by dark, eternal Fates,
To sigh through life on these terrestrial states.

Declare, O, Muse! from what unknown decree
Came all the woes which cloud his destiny?

If he was sent by Jove, the heav'nly Sire,
To brave the taunts of a proud people's ire?

It never could have been! for God is just!
He made the king and peasant from ONE dust.

The poor, the rich, the varied insects share
The equal gifts and blessings of His care.

Though scorned and hated he will soon arise,
And men will learn no longer to despise

His dusky face, nor his just rights ignore,
For God has now proclaimed his bondage o'er?

PREPARING FROGS IN ITALY.—An Italian correspondent of the London Times, says: "From my observations, I am disposed to think the Italians greater frog-eaters than the French of the present day. The preparation of the amphibious article of food is a sight, and not a very pleasant one, any morning in the Milan market. The process is as follows: A number of old women sit upon low stools, having before them a basket nearly covered with a coarse, wet cloth, and on their left hand a sack. The sacks contain green frogs, middle sized animals, with long legs and speckled bodies. The left hand dives into the sack and fishes out a frog, which is forthwith decapitated by means of a knife or a pair of small shears, in form like those of a shepherd. The next thing is to get rid of the skin.

The frog evidently does'nt belong to the family of tight-skinned animals, for by a single dexterous twitch the green coat is reversed and stripped off to the very tips of the basket. This, one might suppose, would be the close of froggy's struggle upon earth; but, horrible to relate, the tenacious vitality of these amphibis—muscular, let us hope, but not sensitive—survives both skinning and beheading. In the basket the frog corpses, mingle in a semi-tran-parent, geletinous mass, quiver and wriggle, and occasionally seem to be wrestling with each other, while from time to time an individual of tough vitality and active habits actually hops headless from the torture basket, and perching his ghastly little frame on the edge of the damp canvass which partly covers the receptacle, grins horribly at his executioner out of his open throat.

TO THE MINISTRY OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—One of the greatest endowments which the Creator has bestowed on mankind is the power of Singing; and that this gift should be devoted to the service of God in his sanctuary, is a truth plainly taught by precept and example in his Holy Word, and recognized by his Church in all ages.

In the services of our own Church the singing has always held an important place and exerted a powerful influence. That we are in danger of being led away from the plain, simple, earnest singing which characterized our former history is evident to every observer: and that, in proportion as we depart from our original practice in this respect, we lose an element of power in our worship, which must be acknowledged by every intelligent Christian. There are two distinct styles of music in use among Christian people—artistic and devotional. Artistic music is that which elevates the standard of taste and execution to a point that requires a long period of study, toil and criticism to reach, and which thereby necessarily cuts off a large proportion of the people from participating in it Devotional music we recognize as that which is more simple, more readily understood and acquired, which is easily available to the people, and therefore reaches the popular heart and lifts it in adoration to the great Author of our being. Impressed with the importance of adopting a system of Congregational Singing, by which the masses of our people can be reached, a new Hymn and Tune Book has just been issued, under the immediate auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and published by our Book Concern. It is arranged with special reference to the introduction of Congregational Singing into all our Churches. It is exceedingly desirable that this book should be universally adopted, and thereby uniformity, in both music and hymns, be introduced in all our churches. We believe the selection of music and the adaptation of hymns, surpass anything heretofore issued, and that the book is exactly adapted to our wants as a Church. CARLTON & PORTER, N. Y.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR.

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER,

SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in COLD water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

To planters and other persons Employing Freedmen.—Headquarters, Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen and Abandoned Lands, tate of Louisiana—New Orleans, La., Jan. 12, 1867.—To correct a false impression which seems to exist as to the matter of obtaining transportation for freedmen, when it is desired to procure labor from other States, under the provisions of a late order of Gen. Howard, Commissioner, etc., Washington, D. C. the public interested are hereby notified that any party can make the necessary application in person, and by complying with the regulations governing the subject, can secure for themselves all the priviliges granted in the order alluded to. No person or persons have any appointment which gives them the sole right to transact this business in this state.

By order of

Bt. Maj. Gen'l. J. A. MOWER, U. S. A.,
Assistant commissioner, etc
WM. H. TERLING,
Captain 1st. U. S. Infantry,
A. A. A. General.

Ja15 3t

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great imprement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression, and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room.—Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max aretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhan, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, cannot be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 596 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington eet, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory, READE 154 WILLIAM STS.

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

---

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington street, New York

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co, Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Advertiser says; "The testimony is their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bilious humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,
Gen'l Agent for United States
r10-1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine of Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark- & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philadelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12-3 m

---

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

---

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & Scholl Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that NO Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London' Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Naucher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co... Wall st. and Wnshington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph. Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.]

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

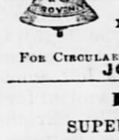
STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.



Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Ba-sini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree" [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart,' in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL

FREEDMEN'S SAVING

AND

TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 313C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

---

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation,)

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and

WILL PAY $1,000

to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of

CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY

—AND—

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitters is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum or Whisky, and cannot make Drunkards, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous System. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,
W. S. SEIGFRIED,
No. 254 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

"I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMTH,
966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,
J. H. KENNARD,
Eighth, below Coates street.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown Berns county, Pa, was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D, Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J, formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

JONES & EVANS,
(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)
Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States mal0 ew

---

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

THE ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL FOR MARCH. Contains Cornelius Vanderbilt, Hon Ezra Cornell, Prof. Mapes, Frederika Bremer, Lavater, Las Casas, Sir John Franklin, Capt. Cook, Revs. John Wesley and Jonathan Edwards;—Talent and Genius;—Extraordinary prediction;—Ghosts;—Origin of Coal;—Varieties of Sheep:—Iron, its uses;—Putting on a bad face;—Tribulation Trepid, and Mr. Hopeful;—The Jew:—Love and Lovers, the Philosophy of Engagements; an Excellent Number, only 20 cents or $2.00 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway New York.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES; plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops Prices $75, 90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95..... .....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Physchology, etc.—at club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $1 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton-seed and "aa" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Lime Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not forgotten."

[feb31

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1y

---

VICK'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

OF

HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the.

*Single and Double Tulip and

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No. 7. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1867. Whole No.—57.

Poetry.

From Zion's Herald.

ONE MOMENT.

Out of the Past the shadows come,
Into the Past the Present flies;
The Future sitteth silent and dumb,
Still and silent with close-sealed eyes.

The Past was ours, but we hold no more
Its good or evil within our hands;
We can right no wrong, not a line ignore
Of the mingled record that on it stands.

We may weep for the good that we have not done,
We may mourn that we cannot undo the wrong;
There is naught can avail us under the sun,
Though we strive with our might, and our grief be long.

We turn to the Future with questioning eyes,
But she sitteth silent, nor heeds our call:
Under the dim and dusky skies,
From the stony lips no secrets fall.

Oh, for a wisdom to garner well
The golden sheaves of the priceless Now!
Oh, for a wisdom to rightly tell
The moments as wave by wave they flow!

We are powerless to stay with our human hands
The ebb or flow of the viewless tide;
Still over and over the restless sands
Move the silent waters with ceaseless stride.

Let us gather with gladness, and hold with fear
These treasures that come to us day by day;
Doing our work for the Master here,
The good seed sowing while yet we may.

Only a moment we have at most,
The Past and Future are not our own;
We hold this moment in solemn trust,
For its use we must answer to God alone.

Chelsea, Mass. EFFIE.

From Harper's Weekly.

IS SLAVERY DEAD?

Dead! is it dead?
Bury it deep! bury it deep!
Lest it should waken and raise its head
Out of sleep.

Dead! is it dead?
Ring the bells, that men may know
It goeth down to its burial bed.
And let it go.

Dead! is it dead?
Over its grave a tablet set,
And write: "By all that rule in dread
This doom be met."

Dead! is it dead?
Proclaim it to the universe.
"The storm is passed from overhead,
And gone the curse."

Dead! is it dead?
Roll the rock above its tomb,
And plant a new growth overhead,
To rise and blossom.

Ring! the old tyrant's dead,
The fair estate is free;
Ring for the brave new heir instead!
Come, Liberty!

For the N. O. Advocate.

From the Mississippi.

We staid at St. Louis nearly long enough to cure us of our partiality for that great city. It has grown since we left it three years ago, but has not improved much in cleanliness. The coal smoke there seems to stick more closely than friends usually do. Sharp, cold winds, a two days snow storm, snow falling from five story houses on sidewalks, a hard freeze, and ice enough to make walking dangerous, are the most vivid memories we brought away with us. The snow-covered prairies of Illinois, and the extemporized sleighs which we saw in every village, reminded us of more Northern scenes. We were not sorry that work had been assigned us in a milder climate. Even at Cairo the river was so full of ice as to render navigation difficult. We had another snow storm which lasted all day, after we left there, but that night we got beyond it, and the sun shone clearly on the snowless land.

At Memphis, a day's delay to take on freight, gave time to look about that city. Various new houses indicate growth and improvement. Colored children on their way to school show that the violence which once disgraced that place did not succeed in its fiendish efforts. Other school houses have risen in place of those burned by the mob, and teachers and scholars are now peacefully pursuing their good work. One of the most pleasant things we saw about Memphis was its park. The old national trees are standing, and many others have been planted. There are a number of squirrels so tame they will come to you if you hold your hand down to them, and take food from your fingers. They will congregate about any one who stands still.

We had an accession of passengers here. Among them a Kentucky family of parents and children. When they got fairly settled on board, the Madam consoled herself with a long stemmed pipe, perfuming the ladies cabin with the smoke, and talking in a loud and whining tone of her own affairs, and saying something about "Abe Lincoln" and the "nigger." I concluded she had yet been thoroughly reconstructed.

While I write, she is walking the long saloon, now and then an interested spectator of a game of "poker," or something else, in which some of her boys are engaged, little dreaming what a stranger is saying about her. A quiet, gray haired man, dressed in homespun, is en route from East Tennessee to seek a new home in Texas. Told me he was disfranchised in his own State, and thought he would leave it. He spoke of affairs without any show of bitterness; so far I have heard very little said about politics. If the disposition to give more attention to private affairs and less to political questions continues to prevail, we may hope for better feelings, and more peaceful times.

D.

Steamer Lady Gay, Feb. 1, 1867.

The Pope.

THE EVACUATION OF ROME—SCENES AT THE CAPITAL.

(Rome (Dec. 8) Correspondence London Times.)

The talk of the day is the farewell audience with which the Pope honored Gen. Montebello and his officers on Thursday last, and of what occurred there. The commander-in-chief of the departing French corps of occupation felt himself justified in assuring his holiness, by way of fiche de consolation, a consolatory sop at parting, that he would always have the moral support of his master. Pius IX. did not take this assurance so kindly as might have been desired. He needed no moral support, he replied, either from the French emperor, or from any other earthly power; the support he looked for would come to him from on high. And so speaking, the pontiff raised his arms towards Heaven, and remained for the space, it is said, of a minute, with hands and eyes exalted, in an ecstacy of devout supplication, while his military visitors stood around him awe-stricken, silent and pale.

That a party of French officers, not usually considered the most devout and impressionable of men, should have been thus powerfully moved may seem strange, but of the fact there appears to be no doubt. The tones and gesture of the enthusiastic pontiff in his hour of great need, and in his bitterness of heart, were impressive and striking enough to stir the old catholic spirit in the breasts of men little wont to be thus effected. After that solemn pause, the pope again addressed himself to Gen. Montebello and his scared subordinates. He had heard, he said, that the emperor had political embarrassments, and he knew that his health was not good; as a priest and as a christian he prayed for him, both physically and morally. He prayed for France, for the imperial prince, and for the empress. "When you came here," continued his Holiness, "seventeen years ago, it was with the approbation of all honest men. I believe that all honest men will blame your departure."

When St. Augustine found himself in grievous trouble and suffering, he prayed God to release him by death. Like him, the pope said, he could but pray that death might put an end to his troubles. This was the substance of the principle passages of the little speech he made to the French officers. It is understood that Cardinal Antonelli and other persons of the pope's entourage regret that he said so much as he did, and that he should have made a sort of scene. The pith of the speech, as really delivered, will probably have been sent to French papers, but you may expect to see a diluted version of it in the sem-official Patrie—the government sieve through which unpleasaut tidings are habitually strained. The head and front of the pope's offending is the signification given to the words relating to the emperor, when he said that he prayed for his health, both physical and moral. The sense attached to his expressions by some who heard them, and could therefore appreciate their exact value, is that they pointed to a mental malady. This interpretation seems generally received as correct, and cannot but cause grave displeasure in French official quarters.

The irritation of the pope as manifested by his discourse, is explicable by ths fact that he is in the first fervor of hit affliction. No doubt seems possible tha he was incredulous of the intended departure of the French until a very few days before their general went to bid him adieu. The final order for departure was long delayed; it came only a week ago, on Saturday last. General Montebello, who knew that he was to go, began to complain that he should not have sufficient time to get his men off. They are going now fast enough. Tho seventy-first regiment left this place yesterday for Cevita Vecchia, at which port several French ships had arrived to take them on board. General Montebello will leave on the 12th. The papal zouaves have had allotted to them the part of the city about the Vatican, the Castle of St. Angelo, and the quarter of the capitol. The Antiles legion takes the railway and neighborhood of the Quirinal. The total strength of the papal army does not exceed 10,000 men. Will these suffice to garrison Rome and Cevita Vecchia, and also to afford garrisons for Viterbo and the other provincial towns?

And will not these latter, even if garrisons (which can be but very weak ones) be left in them, make an attempt, and probably a successful one, to throw off the papal rule, establish provisional governments and vote annexation to Italy? The probability of this is admitted here as at Florence. In general I find in Rome what I left in Florence—a feeling of perfect uncertainty and anxious doubts as to what is going to take place after the departure of the French. The 11th of December is, as you know, the last day of the term allowed by the convention for the complete evacuation. There is a rumor here of an intended joyful demonstration on the 12th; but, as a general rule in Rome, such demonstrations never take place on the day announced beforehand. I hear that the national committee will hold a meeting to-night to decide on something or other. The two committees still exist, and the minor and most subversive of the two, commonly known as Mazzinian, is said to have money and even arms. Notwithstanding many alarming rumors, some relating to Mazzinian designs and others to the probability of disturbances being gotten up by the ultra-papal party, the pevalent impression is that things will go on quietly for the present. There seems a disposition on the part of most persons to adjourn trouble to the spring.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

PRAYER.

BY M. ANNESLEY.

"Behold he Prayeth."

It has been a long time sounding in our ears, "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual." Yet the corruptions and perversions which crept over the early church made controversy, which is often a mixture of earthly and heavenly wisdom, necessary, and many good men did faithful service in this way. But such labor has ceased and we can lay our hands upon the best thoughts against all kinds of errors, and schisms to meet any case. The Holy Bible has so out-lived all errors, for there is nothing new in evil, that it sweeps its own way through the world, and we only need the power, the efficiency of prayer to attend its reading and teachings.

Then prayer is the greatest weapon of the present and coming age of the church—this is truly a spiritual weapon, and through it we can do wonders.

The great revivals in the church in the last fifty years have demonstrated the power of prayer, and every increase in spiritual life puts its seal upon the virtue and necessity of prayer, and the command of the living Head of the church, is "watch and pray." Jesus also said, "ask and receive, that your joy may be full," thus the enjoyments and felicities of the highest state of grace depends upon prayer. Through prayer we drain water out of the wells of Salvation, for the more we pray, the more easily we believe. Prayer is weakness and strength in union—God and man in fellowship, through Christ. What can withstand this power?

The Bible is daily coming up to its own place in the estimation of the church, and we search and read it, with an avidity and delight, we yield no other book. One here and there, used to be noted for their love of the Bible, but now, thousands turn from beggarly elements to its divinity.

Then, of course, the spirit of prayer is more prevailing in our hearts.

We now wonder how others, as well as ourselves, stumbled over its plain and simple teachings and had to learn through trials and temptations to believe implicitly the written word of God.

The hindrance to prayer is sin, and just as soon as we begin to pray, we hate sin, and in the same measure that we increase in love to God, we become fervent and frequent in prayer. A praying christian, becomes a consistent one, for we see deficiencies in the closet, we cannot see through any other light than that which shines in secret. Prayer expands the soul in love to our fellow members of the body of Christ, for the very same trial that we are enduring and the same conflict we are passing through, others are enduring and contending with, and we almost naturally turn from our own sorrow, or trouble to theirs, and plead that they may not faint and sink beneath their burden, and this fellowship of suffering brings in its train a fellowship of joy, when we hear how our brethren have come off more than conquerors, fought and won the spoil of increased grace and faith. And we may not know of all these answers to prayer until we enter the church triumphant.

Every one is not called to personal, public service in the church, but every sincere penitent heart can fill a nich in the great necessary labor of prayer. Success encourages us in any duty, and the answers to "ten thousand prayers" we have received, come up to our remembrance to increase our faith and utterance at the mercy seat.

It is said of Mathew Henry, in his last days that God had so answered his prayers that he regretted he had not prayed more. May the reader be saved from an estranged closet.

You Must be in Earnest.

It is related of Hon. Tom Corwin, of Ohio, that he dropped into a meeting one evening in Lebanon to see what the "brethren" were doing. It was a meeting of the Bible Society, and the business was done in a very lifeless, humdrum way. The secretary disclosed in his report the fact that two hundred families in the country were destitute of the Bible, and some brother deplored in suitable phrase the mournful fact, when Mr. Corwin rose and said: "Mr. President, may I be allowed to say something on this subject?"

Certainly, Mr. Corwin—we shall be glad to hear you."

"Well, sir, I want to say that you are not in earnest. Your report said there were two hundred families in this county without the Bible! This could not be if you were in earnest. In the great contest for the election of Harrison, we Whig members of Congress gave our whole salary to carry that election. We were in earnest. We thought the salvation of the country depended upon it. If you want to carry on this work, and really mean that every man shall have the Bible, you must be in earnest. You must go to work and give every man the Bible."

The meeting was electrified. Some one immediately rose, and moved to make Thomas Corwin President of the Warren County Bible Socity. It was unanimously carried, and Mr. Corwin rose again:

"Sir, if I accept the presidency of this society, it is on one condition, that you go to work, and no such report as that is made again. When this society meets three months from to-day, the report must be, that no family in Warren county is without the Bible."

The work was done, and every family supplied. Mr. Corwin judged the Bible Society, and judged the whole church precisely as all intelligent men do judge it in their hearts Motives they cannot know; degrees of faith they cannot measure; but they can see what is done, and they imply the motives and the faith from the character and measure of the action. In this world there is no other standard.

A RELIGIOUS DEPARTMENT AT THE PARIS EXPOSITION.—One of the most interesting and important departments of the great exposition to be held at Paris the coming year, will be one devoted to the exhibition of the results of Protestant Christian benevolent enterprise. The very choicest part of the grounds devoted to the fair have been set apart by the French emperor for this purpose, and it will furnish the grandest opportunity Protestant Christianity has ever had for the display of its works and results.

It certainly could hardly have been expected that a Catholic emperor of a Catholic country would have taken much interest in such a matter, but buildings are to be erected aud every possible facility afforded for the exposition of the results of the modern missionary and charitable efforts of Protestant Christians. It is the intention of the emperor and those concerned in the exposition to have it a perfect illustration of the life of the world, and permission was cheerfully given to some English Christians when they broached the matter of having a place assigned to Protestant missions.

Partial preparations have already been made to render this permission of the emperor of practical value to the cause of Protestant christianity; but much more remains to be done in order to make full and proper use of so grand an opportunity for aggressive religious effort. A Protestant chapel will be erected on one end of the "Holy Ground"—as it will be appropriatetly called—and a committee of evangelical ministers has already been raised in Paris, who are to make arrangements for daily religious services, under the direction of able preachers, in all the languages that shall be repesented there.

The Gospel will thus be publicly and freely preached in English, French, German, Italian and other tongues, and all may hear the truth in language that they can understand. Another building will be devoted to the display of the results of Christian enterprise in the preparation of the Bible and other religious works for the use of heathen nations; another building will be devoted to the gratuitous distribution of religious books and tracts, and the printing press will at once attest to the skill of invention and the thoughtful foresight of Christian benevolence. Several English gentlemen of great wealth and Christian liberality have taken especial interest in this work, and are pushing it along with all the energy possible.

ECCENTRIC PRAYER.—In a work entitled "English Eccentricities," recently published in London, may be found the following extempore prayer attributed to a certain Mr. Ward:

"Lord, thou knowest that I possess nine houses in the city of London, and that I have recently bought an estate in the county of Essex. Preserve, therefore, I pray Thee, the two counties of Middlesex and Essex from fires and earthquakes; and as I have an hypothecated estate in Hertfordshire, look also in compassion upon that county; as to the other portions of the country, do as thou wilt. Lord, consolidate the Royal Bank that it may honor its notes. Let all my debtors be or become honest men. Give a prosperous and speedy passage to the sloop Mermaid, for the insurance of which I am responsible.—Preserve me from robbers and brigands. Make all my servants faithful and devoted, that they may watch over my interests and relax not their diligence by day or by night."

A HAPPY REJOINDER.—At Oxford, some twenty years ago, a tutor of one of the colleges limped in his walk. Stopping one day last summer at a railway station, he was accosted by a well-known politician, who recognized him, and asked if he was not the chaplain of the college at such a time, naming the year. The doctor replied that he was. "I was there," said his interrogator, "and knew you by your limp." "Well," said the doctor, "it seems my limping made a deeper impression on you than my preaching." "Ah, doctor," was the reply with ready wit, "it is the highest compliment we can pay a minister to say that he is known by his walk rather than by his conversation."

A SERMON.

PREACHED IN NEW ORLEANS BY REV. HENRY GREEN. (COLORED.)

The subject of my discourse this evening may be found in the third chapter of Matthew. In the eleventh verse, and part of the twelfth, you may find the words which I shall strive to impress upon your minds this evening; and if you will give me your prayers, I will try not to weary your patience, and be short.

"I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance; but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire."

St. Matthew was one of the beloved disciples of our Lord; one of his followers; he saw him, was with him, walked with him, talked with him, prayed with him, sung with him, and must have understood him. And John the Baptist also saw him, and talked with him, and knew all about him. John was the forerunner of our Savior; sent from God; raised up and qualified for that very purpose; and when the people saw him they understood that this John was sent to bear witness of God. And he went in the wilderness of Judea, preaching and baptising the people. The people about Jerusalem had heard of him, and went out to see him. "And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins, and his meat was locusts and wild honey." "But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come."

It does not seem with that word like some people have it; they seem to think these people were Christians; but that is a mistake. If they had been Christians, I don't think John would have called them a generation of vipers Why, I am sure I would not think of calling my church members, vipers! No; John says to them, "I indeed baptize you with water, but that's not all; look-a-here, He that cometh after me is mightier than I, he will baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Does that look like John could do the principal work? No, indeed. Something more than water baptism is necessary. "He is mightier than I;" John was not worthy to untie his Savior's shoes—"He will baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." This fire seems to take a mighty close place among the Christians of this world. If John's baptism would have done, why did he point them to the Savior? We believe a man's sins are so well tied to him, that water cannot wash them away; he must be baptized with the Holy Ghost and with fire. "I baptize you with water—that's as far as I can go." John had no power to save them, but points them to the Lamb of God that takes away the sin of the world.

They were baptized in Jordan, confessing their sins; but confessing sins is not possessing religion. He tells them to bring forth fruits meet for repentance; that is to say, "If you are Christians, go to work and show it; do the works of the Lord, and behave yourselves as Christians ought to behave." After he baptized them he talked to them just in the same fashion as we Methodists talk. If you repent, and forsake your sins, He is a just God, ready to forgive you, and you shall soon know what it is to be baptized with the Holy Ghost and with fire.

As soon as they get sorry for sin, the Lord Jesus, who has the power, who has the right and the light, intercedes for them, and says, "Father, forgive them, for I have died;" and the Father cannot refuse the prayer of his Beloved Son. Jesus came into the world to destroy the work of the Devil, and I really believe he will do it. When Jesus purifies the heart, the sinner can sing a new song, even praise to the Most High.

Some say that we Methodists don't like to go down in the water, that we are too proud, and are afraid of getting wet; but that's not it; we prefer the baptism of the Holy Ghost, because it can save the soul. Water cannot save.

O, that poor mourner's prayer! With eyes melted in tears, and knees trembling like Belshazzar's when he saw the handwriting on the wall, he cries, "Lord, be merciful to me a sinner."

Jesus hears his prayer and sends the blessing down. I remember how it was with me when God converted my soul. It was a long time ago, but I remember it as if it were but yesterday. I had an old mistress, and sometimes she used me pretty tough. One day in the old Pine Church, conviction seized hold of me. The next morning I was taken with a great ager. I really thought I was going to die; they all thought I was going to die, and they laid me out on the floor before the fire; and I groaned and trembled, and it seemed as if I were sinking right down to hell, when I cried, "Lord, save me." I flung my heart right open to the Lord, and quick as lightning he snatched me from the yawning pit. I ran to my old mistress; I wasn't afraid of her now; I caught hold of her and told her to praise the Lord. I walked around and looked about me, and every thing seemed bran new, and I wanted to tell everybody what the Lord had done for my soul. I do believe it was the work of the Holy Ghost. It seemed to be a kind of fire; water couldn't do it. It seemed to clean me out so! The corruption of sin run out of my heart, just like the dross out of an old spoon, and left nothing but the pure gold!

If you want this fire in your heart, you need not go to the woods to chop wood to kindle the fire with, but just get down on your knees and pray to Him who always has fire a plenty, and he will send it down from Heaven into your soul.

But John was beheaded; and if our dependence were in him, we would be in a bad fix; but Jesus is our trust, and he is able to save.

Some say the Methodists have a kind of garment with one sleeve in and the other out. But that is not so. We believe in water baptism, but we want more than that; we want the baptism of the Holy Ghost. We believe in putting on the whole armor of God, and clothing ourselves with the garment of salvation. You have stood by the death bed of Methodist fathers and mothers, and having heard them say, "All is well, I am going home; meet me in Heaven." A religion that can make the soul happy in the hour of death, and carry it in triumph to Heaven, will do for me. May the Lord bless you, children, and give you the baptism of the Holy Ghost, for Christ's sake. Amen.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months..... 2 00
Three Months..... 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion.....$1 50
" each subsequent insertion... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Orders left at 65 Poydras Street, or at our office, No. 7 Prytania Street, will receive full attention.

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

Dr. Curry and the Southern Press.

Dr. Curry's remarkable editorial of Jan. 24, on "The Church and the Free Negro," is received with evident delight by the religious press of the South.—Our Southern cotemporaries quote his article as from one "having authority," and rejoice over it, like those who have found "hidden treasures." They regard it as the end of the argument and as conclusive proof that the North is ins incere in its efforts for the freedmen of the South. With more than ordinary confidence, they appeal to their former slaves to abandon their new friends and return to their old ones. All this is not surprising. It is perfectly natural.—And were we as ignorant of the facts as they seem to be, and in all other respects in their place, we also would rejoice.

We read Dr. Curry's article with surprise and grief; surprise at the errors it contains; grief at the injury it does to the church of God. In no gentle manner the Doctor rebukes our church for its neglect of "half a million of Northern blacks." He declares that so great is this neglect that they are "like dogs in Eastern cities, cast out to care for themselves;" they are like the man who went down to Jericho and "fell among thieves," and in a word, they are religiously the most destitute class in the North. All of the above facts we deny. The number of people of color in the North is over-stated by more than one-half. There are not to-day in all the North, States and territories included, a quarter of a million of blacks. According to the census of 1860, the whole number is but 216,918. New York has 49,005; New Jersey, 25,336; Massachusetts, 9,602; Connecticut, 8,623; Illinois, 7,628; Indiana, 11,428; California, 4,086; Iowa, 1,069; Maine, 1,327; Michigan, 6,799; Minnesota, 259; New Hampshire, 494; Ohio, 36,673; Oregon, 128; Pennsylvania, 56,949; Rhode Island, 3,952; Vermont, 709; Wisconsin, 1,171; and in all the territories, 302—making in grand total, 216,918. Where then is the half million of Northern blacks over whom he weeps, and for the neglect of whom he holds up his church to the contempt of her enemies?

Nor is it true that the people of color in the North are religiously neglected. To illustrate: In New York City there are 12,472 blacks, and for their exclusive accommodation, there are eleven churches—one Baptist, one Congregational, three Presbyterian, three Episcopalian, and three Methodist. Most of these churches will accommodate one thousand persons each; and therefore, after deducting for the children and those who can't attend, there will be more church accommodations than there are blacks to be accommodated. There is no class of persons in the North more amply provided for religiously than those under consideration. It is not Africa, but it is Caucasia, who is "stretching out her hands to God." The whites—Germans, Irish, Welsh, French, —are the "Greeks who are famishing for the bread of life." What are three hundred and three churches in New York for the accommodation of the 800,000 white citizens in that great metropolis? And what is true of New York is true of all the larger towns in the great free North.

And it is a magnificent fact, that of all the Northern churches, none has a brighter record for sympathy with the men of color than the Methodist Episcopal Church. When aid was needed aid was extended. At the seat of our annual conferences, where there is a colored church, our preachers joyfully fill the pulpit; at our last General Conference, a delegation of black men were received with all the courtesy accorded to white men; and more recently, an African was ordained a bishop in St. Paul's church, N. Y., the wealthiest of all our churches. While in our whole connection, there is not a church paper that is not the advocate for the rights of the man of color. Instead, therefore, of "stripping him of his raiment," it is the pious ambition of the Church to clothe him with all the rights of manhood. He is not a "dog cast out," but a brother beloved. It is, therefore, with joy that we vindicate our beloved Church against the indiscreet attacks of one of her sons, whose spleen had gained the mastery of his better judgment.

How they Affiliate.

The Christian Recorder of Feb. 2, in referring to the Report on the Religious Condition of the South, adopted at our last Conference, pronounces the statement that the African Methodists were seeking to unite with the Church South to oppose the M. E. Church, a "mischievous falsehood." It then calls on us "to prove it, or take it back," and in default of this, threatens to take us in hand and expose our "misrepresentation."—We think it is fully time that the public should understand the strange movements of the A. M. E. Church, and the unexpected course it has seen fit to pursue in regard to our work here. We affirm the following facts:

1. The A. M. E. Church bitterly opposes the M. E. Church in her work among the colored people. Its determined purpose to do this was announced last April to the General Conference of the M. E. Church South, by three ministers appointed as delegates to that body. In their communication made to the General Conference they argue: "It is not natural that the colored Christians South should desire to unite themselves with the Church North, the main body of which is in the Northern States, while they themselves were born and raised in the South, and especially so when the Northern Church seeks them only to increase their own numbers and to add to their financial interests."—How the gratuitous gift of thousands annually by our church to the Southern work can turn to her financial benefit, or why colored Christians should turn from a church which, comes to them from the same quarter from whence liberty had come, we do not see; and the statement that our Church is here for other than legitimate objects of christian effort, is unwarranted by facts, and utterly unworthy of professed ministers of Christ.

After giving such reasons for uniting the two churches, each of which is intensely Southern, and equally destitute of "financial interests," to oppose the M. E. Church, the committee indulge in the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That we do most cordially reciprocate the feelings expressed to us by the Bishops and brethren of the M. E. Church South.

2. Resolved, That it shall ever be our most earnest endeavor to perpetuate that reciprocity of Christian and fraternal feeling here begun.

3. Resolved, That we believe it is the manifest design of the agents of the M. E. Church North to absorb the A. M. E. Church in the United States of America, the colored churches under the jurisdiction of the M. E. Church South, and ultimately to annihilate the M. E. Church South as to its distinctive organization.

4. Resolved, That it is vitally important that we unite in an unbroken phalanx to oppose, by all prudent and Christian means, the aggressions now being made upon us both by the accredited agents of the M. E. Church North.

This offer of alliance, and the pitiable crouching before a slave-driving Southern church did not, after all, secure the financial interests so earnestly sought.—Never were men more cruelly snubbed or more fairly kicked out of doors than these same African ministers. Their temerity in proposing a "transfer o deeds" from the Church South to trustees of those congregations that had joined the A. M. E Church was witheringly rebuked, and they were denounced as "intruders" into the South, as "disorganizers" of churches, until even they had manhood enough left to retire from the galleries in which they sat as delegates.

But it seems that even this rude repulse did not change their determination to "unite in unbroken phalanx to oppose the M. E. Church." A sort of compromise was ultimately effected, and at the close of the General Conference the chairman of the delegation went to Natchez, Miss., where, in a public address following one delivered by Dr. Wadkins, he is said to have equaled, if he did not exceed, the denunciations of that fiery divine in his tirade against the Church North." How well the "unbroken phalanx" has been maintained let Galveston, New Orleans, Thibodeaux, Baton Rouge, Natchez, Vicksburg and Yazoo City be witnesses. There is a history connected with these points, which if pressed we may yet give. At Yazoo City the African minister surreptitiously obtained and tried to hold the deed of a church built by funds appropriated direct from the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church and superintended in its erection by Bro. Brakeman at the peril of his life. In other places they have made persistent efforts to dislodge our societies from churches which they occupy and had built with their own money. The "phalanx" has remained so far "unbroken," and thus it is seen that the A. M. E. Church does unite with the M. E. Church South to oppose the M. E. Church.

2. Such opposition has been unprovoked on the part of the M. E. Church. Two years ago, in advance of the trouble which has since occurred, we called on Bishop Campbell and proposed that as our work among the colored people was similar, we should be united. He replied that whenever he could come into the M. E. Church in his official character, as the peer, in all respects, of Bishop Ames, he would then entertain the proposition. Knowing that the General Conference alone had the appointing of our bishops, and not knowing whether that august body would judge that the "gifts, grace and usefulness" of Bishop Campbell would entitle him "in all respects" to be the peer of Bishop Ames, we could give the ambitious Bishop no assurances that he would be thus received. Here was the rub. The Bishop and his equally aspiring brethren who afterward formed the "delegation of three," seemed to regard their ecclesiastical dignity of far more importance than the peace of the Church, and fearing the growing power of the M. E. Church, immediately laid their plans to strike hands with a church leprous with treason to oppose one which has done more for human liberty than any other on the continent. In the last session of the conference of the A. M. E. Church, held in this city, their speeches, resolutions, and even pulpit ministrations abounded within denunciations of the Church North, for such they uniformly style the M. E. Church, while the kindest feeling and gratitude even, was uniformly expressed for the M. E. Church South. And it was seriously attempted by Bishop Campbell, assisted by Dr. Keener, to withdraw our three largest colored societies, with an aggregate membership of over 2,000 souls, from their allegiance to the M. E. Church.

3. These efforts, openly made and the determination publicly expressed, to "unite in unbroken phalanx," has not as yet been authoritatively disavowed either through the press or by the bishops of that church. The Church South publicly asserts that the A. M. E. Church is its faithful ally. The Texas Christian Advocate of Jan. 10, in welcoming Bishop Campbell, says: "The fraternal relations established at the late General Conference, between the Church South and this excellent body of Christians remains undisturbed." The Southern Christian Advocate of a later date, says: "Since the alliance between it (the A. M. E. Church) and the M. E. Church South, the Northern Methodists have found out its worth, and they are now coquetting with it." These public declarations must be held as authoritative till properly denied.

4. We have no inimical feelings to the African Methodists. Our first proposition to them was one of conciliation.—And though they, unwisely as we think, rejected the overture and formed a most unnatural alliance, we still regard them after all, as much "sinned against as sinning." The truth is, they have fallen into the hands of unscrupulous adepts in ecclesiastical strategy, who are using them for most unworthy ends. If the A. M. E. Church in the North does not awake it will find that its representatives in the South have irreversibly linked its destiny with the fate of "churches that have been false to civil and religious liberty."

Editorial Items.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach in the Representatives' Hall, Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Several important articles are omitted this week; but will appear in our next issue.

We publish this week a synopsis of the Majority Report of the Congressional Committee on the New Orleans riots, together with a copy of Mr. Elliott's bill, which the House passed by a vote of 113 to 43.

Correction.

If it is not a thing too small to notice, we take pleasure in informing our worthy cotemporary of the Christian Recorder, that Bishop Simpson and the Editor of this paper were in full accord in the action of the M. M. Conference touching the A. M. E. Church. He should be wary how "we learn."

nformation Wanted.

Andrew Greene, of Donaldsonville La., wishes to gain information concerning relatives Gracie and Charity Ashe, whom he left in the District of Columbia, twenty-seven years ago.

Also, Margaret Knox, of New Orleans, wishes to gain information of her sisters, Evalind and Maria. Their mother's name was Clarissa, and lived in Brunswick county, Va.

Freedmen's Savings and Trust Company.

(Principal office 87 Cedar street, New York.)

STATEMENT FOR THE MONTH OF OCTOBER, 1866.

Alexandria, Va	$	60 00
Augusta, Ga		1,563 43
Baltimore, Md		3,017 75
Beaufort, S. C		17,507 82
Charleston, S. C		10,818 00
Houston, Texas		1,872 85
Huntsville, Ala		150 00
Jacksonville, Fla		1,216 30
Louisville, Ky		1,032 05
Memphis, Tenn		188 00
Mobile, Ala		6,328 00
Nashville, Tenn		3,049 37
Newbern, N. C
New Orleans, La		6,425 02
New York City		4,548 00
Norfolk, Va		661 55
Richmond, Va		153 45
Savannah, Ga		1,224 40
Tallahassee, Fla		170 82
Vicksburg, Miss		42 00
Washington, D. C		751 99
Wilmington, N. C		703 28
Total		$61,484 08
Total amount of deposits rec'd		$831,774 85
" drafts paid		553,053 95
Balance due depositors		$278,720 90

STATEMENT FOR THE MONTH OF NOVEMBER, 1866.

Alexandria, Va	$	57 00
Augusta, Ga		1,257 88
Baltimore, Md		37,330 51
Beaufort, S. C		20,698 36
Charleston, S. C		9,803 02
Houston, Texas		496 00
Huntsville, Ala		87 00
Jacksonville, Fla		1,753 32
Louisville, Ky		8,865 85
Memphis, Tenn		10 00
Mobile, Ala		8,025 92
Nashville, Tenn		4,835 24
Newbern, N. C		249 00
New Orleans, La		8,012 16
New York City		2,591 25
Norfolk, Va		3,009 56
Richmond, Va		253 13
Savannah, Ga		2,465 13
Tallahassee, Fla		944 81
Vicksburg, Miss		25 00
Washington, D. C		2,103 97
Wilmington, N. C		900 00
Total		$113,774 05

The above reports are for the five weeks ending Dec. 1, except Alexandria, Baltimore, Houston, Norfolk and Wilmington, which are to Nov. 24

Balance due depositors, as per last reports		$268,289 22

STATEMENT FOR THE MONTH OF DECEMBER, 1866.

Augusta, Ga	$	1,759 80
Baltimore, Md		12,309 24
Beaufort, S. C		18,334 30
Charleston, S. C		6,470 71
Houston, Texas		435 00
Jacksonville, Fla		4,635 99
Louisville, Ky		23,110 06
Memphis, Tenn		698 65
Mobile, Ala		9,103 32
Nashville, Tenn		3,593 92
Newbern, N. C
New Orleans, La		5,089 06
New York City		2,084 00
Norfolk, Va		17,881 19
Richmond, Va		7,759 35
Savannah, Ga		1,732 48
Tallahassee, Fla		368 23
Vicksburg, Miss		19 00
Washington, D. C		3,840 71
Wilmington, N. C		26 00
Total		$119,251 01
Total drafts for the month		100,808 01
Excess of deposits over drafts		18,443 00
Balance due depositors as per last reports		$304,437 57

Local and Southern News.

U. S. Senator.

Hon. George Williamson, has been elected United States Senator for Louisiana.

Col. Williamson served with distinction, during the war, on the staff of Gen. Polk, and afterwards with Gen. Smith in the Trans-Mississippi department. On the return of peace, he resumed the practice of the law in Shreveport, and now represents the parish of Caddo in the legislature.

As a lawyer, he is noted for his clearness of argument and precision of statement; and as a politician, for an integrity and consistency which, combined with his native modesty, have gained for him the esteem of a large circle of friends and admirers.—N. O. Crescent.

There was a light fall of snow in the parish of St. James on Wednesday night last.

A negro who killed another in Memphis a few weeks ago, and fled to this city, has returned to Memphis and surrendered himself to the authorities. He was released on $2000 bail, which was furnished by two responsible individuals of his own color.

Lafourche.—An iron bridge is about to be built over Bayou Lafourche at Thibodeaux, at a cost of $12,000.

Baton Rouge.—The U. S. Colored Artillery, (heavy,) will at once be mustered out of service at Baton Rouge, as an entire organization, its services being no longer required.

We learn from the Gazette that the ladies of Liberty, (Tex.) were to give a festival on the night of the 30th, at the court house, for the benefit of the family of Jefferson Davis.

Criminal Court.—Judge Love, presiding.—The State vs. Austin Barns, a negro. Indictment theft of chickens from Gen. Jno. W. Harris. Verdict guilty. Fined $100 and fifteen days imprisonment.

The State vs. J. Peter Langley. Indictment theft of coal from Messrs. Wolston, Wells & Vidor. No verdict in this case given, the jury not agreeing. Galveston News.

Shameful.—Two men called at the house of Mr. J. Chambard, who lives some five or six miles down the Island and made inquiries concerning the residents in the neighborhood. Without saying anything more they turned upon the lady of the house, her husband and a hired man, and beat them in a most shameful manner. We, as well as the abused parties, are at a loss to conjecture the cause of the villainous attack. As yet the rascals have not been apprehended.—Ibid.

Freedmen.—The Trinity (Tex) News gives the following as the state of the case about Palestine:

We are pleased to notice, on the part of this portion of our population, a disposition to work, and we are glad to be able to chronicle the fact, that the most of them have contracted with white men, for the present year, to do farm labor. They seem to recognize the fact that they must "eat bread by the sweat of their brow," and have gone to work in earnest. Let them be treated humanely, and if there is good in them, give them a chance to show it by their labor.

Extraordinary Arrivals.—The Pensacola Observer of the 9th inst. says:

We have during the year arrivals of foreign vessels from almost every known port, and frequently vessels that have colored crews, but the schooner Fleede, which arrived here this week from Havana and Cuba with a cargo of West India fruit, presents an anomaly in having a colored captain and crew, who own the vessel. The schooner had been abandoned at sea, and by their exertions they saved her and fitted her up. She is now in good sailing condition.—This is an instance of enterprise on the part of Sambo that is rarely met with.

A Memorial Church.—Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, Mrs. Frank P. Blair, Mrs. N. B. Forrest, Mrs. L. M. Keitt, Mrs. Andrew Johnson, Mrs. A. Longstreet, Miss Augusta Evans, and others are on the list of honorary members of the association of ladies formed in Memphis for the purpose of raising funds to erect a magnificent church edifice to the memory of the Confederate dead. The mural tablets are to be inscribed with the names of such which may be furnished by societies throughout the Southern States.—Exchange.

Cotton.—The highest estimate of the cotton crop of 1866 is 1,400,000 bales of 500 pounds per bale, giving a gross weight of 700,000,000 pounds. The tax law of 1866 allows four per centum tare for baling, rope, etc., which leaves a net weight of 672,000,000 pounds. This crop, at 34 cents per pound, will bring nearly $229,000,000—very nearly as much as was brought by the large crop of 1860. The government tax upon it, at 3 cents per pound, will amount to over $20,000,000. A Georgian says his State contributes 164,000 bales to the crop, and will get almost as much for this amount as she received for 701,840 bales in 1860. The government reaps from these 164,000 bales a revenue of nearly two and two-fifths millions of dollars. This will give a fair idea of the taxation of Texas in the same direction.—Exchange.

The San Antonio Herald gives the particulars of the killing of Mr. Kennedy by Mr. Wm. Edgar, on the El Paso road a short time since. The case seems to have been one of self-defence. From Kennedy's statements it appears that he came from Enterprise, Miss. He was buried at camp, and his effects, consisting of $356 mostly in American gold, a pistol, pair of saddle-bags, etc., were taken charge of by Judge W. P. Bacon, of Franklin, Texas.

The Henderson Times says, laborers are very scarce in that region. It hears a great many farms will be but partially cultivated this year.

Work for White Men.—We copy the following sensible remarks from the Meridian Messenger:

A great many people are greatly exercised about the negroes working. The way the negro works (or don't work) is the topic of conversation everywhere, where two or three are gathered together. The disposition of the negro to labor (or not to labor) is watched with intense interest, by those who seem to take no special interest in anything else. We are sick and disgusted with this everlasting talk about the shortcomings of the colored population. In God's name, can't our people elevate their thoughts above the negro, or bestow them upon worthier objects? We claim to feel as kindly towards the negro as he deserves of us, and when we see him about to be engulphed and lost in idleness and vice, we feel, we hope, a rational concern. But, at the same time, we honestly confess to the instincts which give our own race the preference in all our thoughts. If we are concerned about the disposition of the negro, to do or not to do, yet our concern sinks into indifference compared with the concern we feel for the conduct of the white. While some are fretting and fuming about the lazy negroes they see in the towns and villages, who refuse to contract and engage in regular employment, we are immeasurably more distressed at the sight of lazy white men and women. If the negro, as a free man, do all the work and earn all the wages, he will prove himself the better man of the two. We are anxious for the white man to assert his superiority in all things by his work, and therefore our anxiety for the white man to go to work.

SYNOPSIS

OF THE

Report of the Investigation Committee of the New Orleans Massacre.

Washington, Feb. 11.

The following is a synopsis of the report of Messrs. Eliot and Shellabarger. They were appointed on the 10th of December, and commenced the following day examing citizens of Louisiana here. They commenced their examination in New Orleans on the 22d day of December, and closed on the 3d of January. They resumed here on the 15th and closed their examination on the 2d of February.

They examined 179 witnesses, 47 of whom were examined at request in New Orleans. Our history shows no riot so destitute of justifiable cause, resulting in a massacre so inhuman and fiend like.

The direct cause of the riot was the reassembling of the convention of '64, pursuant to a call by Hon. R. K. Howell, acting president.

The committee gives the history of the convention and riot. Some policemen acted to save, and not destroy life. Several members, including Fish, were saved by being arrested.

Gov. Hahn was protected in passing from the hall to the prison, though he received many blows from other policemen before falling into the hands that saved him. There were some other instances of kindliness by the police. These were exceptional cases. The police and mob, in bloody emulation, continued their butchery until nearly two hundred were killed and wounded.

Ten policemen were wounded, none seriously, none were killed. If the conventionists had been armed, or the colored people had been called in advance to protect the convention, this would not have been the case. The riot was not an accident, it was the determined purpose of the Mayor to disperse the convention. The committee proceeds to discuss the question, quoting a telegram from the President to Lieut. Governor Voorhies, which they say assured Voorhies of Presidential support in the proposed action.

The President is censured for overlooking the Governor, whom he knew to be loyal, in addressing the Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General, known not to be in sympathy with the Governor, and giving directions, which, if carried out as the Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General understood them, would have placed the military with the Mayor in arresting the members of the Convention.

The President knew the condition of affairs in July, knew that the rebel thugs were disloyal men who controlled Monroe's election, knew such men chiefly composed the police, knew Mayor Monroe, an unpardoned rebel, was suspended by the military. He had subsequently pardoned him, and must have known Voorhies and Herron's rebel antecedents, knew a riot and bloodshed were apprehended, knew that military orders were in force, yet without the knowledge of the Secretary of War or General of the army, gave orders by telegraph to compel the soldiers to aid rebels against men loyal during the war. The committee discussed at length the right of Congress to legislate to place Louisiana within the control of loyal men. The military must control until the people of Louisiana adopt a constitution assuring safety to the republic, and receiving the sanction of Congress. These results follow successful war.

These results would not follow had it been insurrection instead of civil war. Until a loyal State of Louisiana exists in full accord with the United States, and a republican form of Government is guaranteed, the object of the war is unattained. The accomplishment of this requires a temporary provisional government. The loyal people of Louisiana must form such a constitution. Meantime their safety requires a provisional government. In the discharge of their duty the committee submits the following :

Be it enacted,etc., That the President nominate and the Senate confirm a Governor of Louisiana, who will hold one year, unless sooner removed by the President, with the consent of the Senate, unless sooner relieved by a successor elected under the provisions of this act ; the Governor to be a citizen of Louisiana, and must, at all times, have borne true allegiance to the United States, and shall take the oath of July 2d, 1862 ; in addition that, he has done no act which would work disqualification under the provisions of this act.

Second—The President shall nominate and the Senate confirm a provisional council of nine persons, qualified like the Governor and taking the same oath, to continue in office unless sooner removed by the President, the Senate consenting, until a legislature is duly elected under the provisions of this bill; the council, with the Governor,are vested with legislative power. In no case shall a Governor or councilor enter office until confirmed by the Senate. The council remains in perpetual session with power to adjourn not longer than thirty days. A majority constitutes a quorum.

Third—It is the duty of the Governor to see to the execution of the federal and State laws. He shall nominate,and with the consent of the council, commission officers now existing or hereafter created to hold, unless removed by the Governor, the council consenting, until the successors are elected and qualified as herein provided. They must be able to take the oath prescribed.

Fourth—Electors are qualified by this act, unless Congress orders otherwise, the first Tuesday in June, 1867, shall elect a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, a Senate, House of Representative, and other officers herein provided. Senators and Representatives to be the same number, and from the same districts as now, all officers to hold one year or until their successors are duly qualified, unless sooner relieved as herein provided, with powers, duties, fees and compensations as now, unless inconsistent with this act.

Fifth—The following, and none others shall vote : Male citizens of the United States, twenty-five years old—regardless of race or color—who has resided one year in the State, and never bore arms against the country since he has been a citizen, and can duly take the oath of July 2, 1862 ; Provided,that any other person otherwise qualified as an elector, who never voluntarily gave aid and comfort to the rebellion nor government inimical to the United States, in any other manner, capacity or rank, than as a private soldier in open and civilized warfare, may be admitted to the rights of an elector by order of a federal court of record, by establishing the fact on the testimony of persons who have always been loyal, and estrblishing as aforesaid that after the fourth of March, 1864, he never gave voluntary aid and comfort to the rebellion or government inimical to the United States. Upon establishing the above facts and subscribing to an oath that the things are true which bring him within the provision, and that he will bear true allegiance to the Government of the United States and the perpetual union of the States thereunder, he shall receive a certificate entitling him to electoral rights.

Sixth—The Secretary of War is authorized to make and publish rules for the just and true registration of electors prior to any election herein ordered, the time for holding election not ordered in this act, the place and manner of conducting elections, appointment and compensation of officers of election, and every other thing necessary to holding a free election ; but all persons so appointed shall be electors under the provisions of this act, and shall take the oath of July 2d, and to faithfully discharge their duties.

Seventh—On the third Tuesday of October, unless otherwise ordered by Congress, persons qualified shall vote for members of a convention to adopt a Constitution and frame a government for the State of Louisiana. The qualification of twenty-five years old, and all others, are required in the case of Governor. Under this act, the number of delegates and districts are the same as now for the House. None are entitled to seats unless they take the oath of July 2d, 1862. The Constitution shall not permit distinction on account of race or color ; shall recognize the power and duty of the government to enforce perpetual nnity of the States ; shall provide that no debt contracted in support of the rebellion be assumed or paid, no pension, compensation, gift or gratuity to be bestowed or paid by the State to any person by reason of anything done or suffered in support of the rebellion. The Constitution is to be submitted to electors qualified by this act, the election to be held under the rules prescribed by the Secretary of War, and if approved by a majority, it is to be submitted to Congress.

Eighth—It is the duty of the President to designate forthwith an officer of the army, not under a Brigadier, to be stationed in Louisiana, to be military commander within the State. It is further the duty of the President to place there under the command of such a general a requisite force to execute the duties prescribed whenever the civil authorities refuse, neglect or omit the speedy enforcement of the laws for the punishment and prevention of crime against the rights of any person whatever. The General shall arrest and hold such offender until the civil authorities prosecute. The General shall assist the civil authorities in enforcing the laws regulating elections, and insure the enforcement of the laws without regard to race or color.

Ninth.—The laws of the council or provisional legislature shall be certified to the Secretary of the Senate for congressional approval. Should Congress disapprove, the facts shall be certified to the Chief Justice of Louisiana, and such disapproved laws shall be void after date of the receipts by the Chief Justice.

Tenth—Until admitted to representation as a loyal State, Louisiana is allowed one delegate in Congress, chosen at the first election ordered herein. He must have the same qualifications as the Governor : shall have the rights and powers of territorial representatives now in the House.

Eleventh—All the laws now in force in Louisiana consistent with this act and the laws of the United States, shall remain in force until repealed or modified, provided that no person shall be competent to act as a juror who is not an elector. Under this act all expenses incident to the administration of a provisional government herein provided, be collected and paid as now done for the support of the present government.—N. O. Crescent.

[The above Bill has passed the House.—Editor.]

For the New Orleans Advocate.

Opelousas District.

BAYOU LAFOURCHE—CREVASSES—A TRAVELER.

An early start and a railway ride of about forty miles brought me to the Bayou, which, tapping the Mississippi at Donaldsonville, passes through one of the richest sugar regions of Louisiana, a hundred miles or so, to the Gulf of Mexico. Before the war, no pains or expense were spared to keep up the Levees, improve the roads and span the stream with splendid bridges. Until very lately all but the first have been neglected, and at times these were in so poor a condition that the water broke through and desolated the country. At Lafourche Crossing, a fine draw bridge has just been completed by the railroad company, and the bridge at Thibodeaux having been taken down, steamboats now pass up and down the Bayou unobstructed ; and a great convenience they are, for the boats very considerately stop at every man's door for a passenger, or a package, at times running close in to throw ashore a letter or newspaper. Complaints, however, are made that the swell of the water and careless landing against the levees, weaken them, and invite crevasses. Indeed, it has been seriously argued that the Bayou should be closed. The State Engineer has just had his attention called to a threatened overflow near Lockport, and in time of high water the utmost vigilance is required, at all points, to prevent inundation.

Passing down the Bayou, we met with a young man who had traveled on foot from New Orleans. He was seeking a good location for a school, and manifested a commendable independence and perseverance. Coming forth from a Christian home, prepared for commercial pursuits, he had met with disappointments in the city, and though his feet, unused to such journeys, had swollen so as to make it necessary to cut open his boots, the brave boy was in cheerful spirits, and we are glad to say had good prospects of a reward for his perseverance.

FIFTEEN MILES TO SCHOOL—FRENCH PROTESTANTS—THE BIBLE.

A few miles from the crossing brought us to the hospitable dwelling of Bro. Bibolet, who faithfully keeps up "the church in his house." Many of the neighbor Creole Romans attend, the services being in French and English. Here I talked with a planter who said his father built the first sugar house in Louisiana, and he had seen the first steamboat enter the Bayou. Just below here a friend offers a lot of ground for a church and school-house. If help could be obtained from the Missionary Society and the Bureau, with what the people could do, we would soon have a house here. The nearest colored school or church is over fifteen miles from this populous locality.

I was taken by my friend to visit a French family, late from Egypt. The man and his wife were pious, humble people. He had been in large business in Marseilles, France, and was trying, in a small way, planting on the Lafourche. My interview with these Christian friends was made blessed to me. They reported that in Marseilles the defection from Popery was wonderful. The people are flying by thousands from the Pope to Christ. May we not hope for a like result from our labors among the Creole papists? I deposited for sale and grant a few low-priced bibles, at small stores in this vicinity as well as farther up the Bayou. May Heaven's dew fall upon the seed and make it fruitful.

THIBODEAUX—SCHOOLS—BISHOP WILMER.

At this place I found our church somewhat encouraged. The colored people are uniting. The recent attempt to turn them all over to the Episcopal Church and their "former owners" is doing us good. Much indignation is felt because it was said to be by order of the Freedmen's Bureau, and under cover of loyalty. A gentleman was riding about the village to-day, obtaining signatures to a paper denying any political animus to Mr. McCoy's labors, and pleading for his restoration as Superintendent of Schools for the Bureau. The late agent will not deny that he urged that confederate widows should be appointed teachers of colored schools, on the plea that Southerners knew the colored people best, and were their best friends. His plan was tried at a place where our teacher is the widow of a "Federal lieutenant," as was sneered by the village paper. Rev. Mr. Trader, Episcopalian, of Thibodeaux, will not deny his statement to me, that though Mr. McCoy was the Bureau agent, the whole matter was in Bishop Wilmer's hands,and that that Prelate had directed him (?) to attend to the matter of schools and churches for the colored people in his Parish. We bid him God speed him with his churches, for those who desire to go with him, but we do not mean to be bagged in such a manner, or turned over en masse, even by the Bureau, which, we are glad to see, has laid aside Mr. McCoy. The worthy Bishop may have the best intentions, but he has not yet cast his net upon the right side of the ship.

1ST QUARTERLY CONFERENCE OF THIBODEAUX AND HOUMA CIRCUIT—N. O. ADVOCATE.

The Circuit was well represented in Conference. Brethren came from distant parts of Terrebonne and Lafourche, Houma, Napoleon, Raceland, and other points, were represented. We have upwards of thirty official members on this large circuit. A careful examination was made. Disciplinary rules and Conference resolutions were read. The subject of our Orphan Asylum and the Biblical Institute were presented, and attracted much interest. On Sabbath services were held in the new Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, at Thibodeaux. At the Sunday-school meeting the faithful Superintendent, Mr. Parks, was present, and assisted the Elder and Pastor in examining the scholars in their Bible studies. Much care has been taken with their singing. During the preaching services, at every opportunity offered, the altar was crowded with mourners. The church was revived, and 18 persons joined class. Not the least item of interest was, that 19 new subscribers to the N. O. Advocate were obtained, and the money paid for nearly all.

COLORED PLANTER WRONGED—BENEVOLENT SOCIETY—FATHER MENARD—OUR DEAD HEROES.

One of the worthiest local preachers, Rev. Wm. Jones, was absent, owing to illness. This enterprising colored man last year took a plantation, worked it well and for the season, and made a good crop. We are told he is in danger of losing the fruits of his labors and of being ruined, having incautiously put his crop in the hands of men who now claim that nothing is due him. The matter, we learn, is being investigated by the Bureau. The people of color here who 'can't take care of themselves' have just organized a benevolent society, to help their poor, sick, widowed and orphaned, and to bury the dead. They are getting it incorporated, and already have a considerable sum in their Treasury. I do not know that a single white man knew of the enterprise until it was in operation.

Tuesday, 5th, was a high day with the Roman Catholics of Thibodeaux ; bells were rung, stores closed, and imposing services held in the church. The occasion was the 25th anniversary of Father Menard's ministry. He is said to be very popular among his people. The church was crowded, and addresses made in both French and English. In the cemetery of this church are buried many of our heroic Union dead, and I am glad to say their graves are tenderly cared for by gentle, loyal hands of ladies of the church. How unlike another church, not far distant, whose minister is reported to have said in regard to repair of the fence and grave yard, it was not to be done because so many Yankees had been buried there.

Itinerant.

The colored people throughout the country are manifesting a commendable disposition to take care of their own poor. Societies are being formed in many of the parishes, and others are about to be organized. We call attention to the following constitution, which may serve as a model. It was recently adopted in a neighboring Parish, and seems to be well calculated to secure the objects in view :

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNION BENEVOLENT SOCIERY.

Article I.—This Society shall be called The Union Benevolent Society of ——.

Art. II.—The domicile of this Society shall be in ——.

OBJECTS.

Art. III.—The objects of this Society shall be to relieve the sick, to bury the dead,to alleviate the distress of the widow and succor the orphans of its members, to educate their children and attend to other benevolent duties.

OFFICERS.

Art. IV.—The officers of this society shall be a President, two Vice Preaidents, a Treasurer, a Corresponding Secretary, Recording Secretary, six Marshals and a Board of Managers, consisting of five gentlemen and four ladies. The President shall be ex officio Chairman of the Board of Managers, and all the officers shall be ex officio members of the same.

DUES.

Art. V.—Any person of good moral character may become a member of this Society. Adults by paying annually one dollar and monthly twenty-five cents. Persons under age, by paying fifty cents annually and ten cents monthly.

PRESIDENT.

Art. VI.—It shall be the duty of the President to preside at all meetings of the Society ; and in his absense, one of the Vice Presidents shall preside. In their absence, the Society shall elect a President pro tem. The presiding officer shall take the chair punctually, and open the meeting by reading the Scriptures and prayer, announce all business in its proper order, maintain decorum in debate, decide questions of order, as who has the floor, put all motions when made and seconded, unless withdrawn, and give the casting vote when there is a tie.

TREASURER.

Art. VII.—It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all monies of the Society, to make such disposition of them as the Board of Managers may direct, to pay all bills and grants approved by the Board and endorsed by the Secretary. He shall keep his books so as to be ready at all times to give a true account of monies disbursed and on hand, and he shall give such security as the Board of Managers may require.

SECRETARY.

Art. VIII.—It shall be the duty of the Corresponding Secretary to conduct the correspondence of the Society. The duty of the Recording Secretary to keep a proper record of the proceedings of the Society, and to take care of its records, to read all papers handed to him for that purpose by the presiding officer, to endorse all bills and grants ordered to be paid, to prepare a roll of the members, and to make out all bills due to the Society.

MANAGERS.

Art. IX.—It shall be the duty of the Board of Managers to adopt such measures as are necessary to carry out the objects of the Society, to prepare business and reports for the Society's meetings, and with the aid and approval of the President, examine and grant applications for relief, examine and order payment of accounts and other disbursements by the Treasurer.

MARSHALS.

Art. X.—It shall be the duty of the Marshals to preserve order at the meetings and elsewhere, to arrange the funeral and other processions, under direction of the President, to wait on the sick or see that it is done, to report cases of suffering and death to the Board.

MEETINGS.

Art. XI.—On the first Monday of the year the annual meeting and celebration shall take place, at which time the officers of the Society for the year ensuing shall be elected by ballot. The Society shall meet on the first Monday evening of every month, to collect dues, take in members, hear reports from the Board of Managers, and transact other business, and the Board of Managers shall have a meeting every other week.

Art. XII.—This Constitution may be altered or amended by a two-thirds majority of all the members present at any monthly meeting.

Regalia, as banner, badges, mottoes, may be selected suitable to the taste and means of the Society.

Ladies' Department.

The Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER V.

One bright Autumn day,Miriam came back to us with a little baby, Fannie, in her arms, and gracefully indeed did our angel Mother accept the grand Mama for the first time—her beautiful white hair now so becoming this new relation—but how could we little girls ever endure the weight of dignity accompanying the title of Aunt ? but it was soon forgotten in our caressing of the little fondling. The good neighbors came in to see the mother and the wonderful baby, as we entitled it ; but some remarked that Miriam looked a little worn,and that motherly care had left its impress on her face. Her visit would have been a joyful event had she not insisted on taking sister Agnes on her return, making the parting doubly painful.

Autumn, in the country, has its thousand charms and rich inheritance of fruits. Longfellow says,

"Thou standest, like imperial Charlemagne,
Upon thy bridge of gold : thy royal hand
Outstretched with benedictions o'er the land,
Blessing the farms through all thy vast domain !"

The abundant storing of potatoes, turnips, and all kinds of vegetables, into the cellar, and then banking around the house with earth and straw to exclude "Jack Frost," relieved the mind of any idea of want during winter's cold reign. It never failed to produce a thrill of gratitude in approaching an orchard, to see the ripe fruit lying thickly under the trees—and right jolly, while gathering the apples, to have one of our brothers spring nimbly into the tree and commence shaking the branches,and the first intimation we had was a pelting and thumping on our head, shoulders and back, which, in the gay hilarity of the frolic, appeared like mere love-taps. The large, fair apples, were selected first, and placed in baskets to be transferred to the cellar ; the others were gathered into large heaps and afterwards carried to the cider press ; then what a luxury awaited us if the straws were ready when the barrels came home! for we could drink sweet cider and not violate the Temperance Pledge which we had all signed very early in life. To prove our fidelity to temperance principles, we never tasted of it after it became hard, nor was it touched again until pronounced vinegar and used only as such. In temperance lectures I had heard of "Whisky hot that makes the sot,

And brandy red that turns the head
And the sin of drinking gin,
Hard cider, too, will never do,
Nor brewer's beer our hearts to cheer."

But upon my word, until I was a young lady and left home, aside from the command "Touch not, taste not, handle not," I had never seen any spirituous liquor, except alcohol, which you well remember, dear Minnie, was kept in our house for making peppermint, which was used in alternation with paregoric as a soother of infantile ailments; also for making camphor to always have on hand in case of accidents or fainting; and last but by no means least, to make pikery ; and I confess right here that I have some scruples of conscience in even alluding to that odd, ugly looking bottle and its yellow contents, for I have never found an adjective that half conveyed an idea of its superlative bitterness ; still it would have been a reproach to any well ordered family to have intimated that it was not indispensable to the health of the children, if not the entire household ; that is, if the children's noses did have to be held, sometimes, and the mouth pryed open to force a dose down. This expedient, however, was never resorted to in our family : a lump of sugar cut from a large loaf in cone shape, seldom indulged in as a luxury,induced us to swallow it quickly,and receive the sweet reward —surely the blessing of little children, which maketh rich and addeth no sorrow thereto, must rest upon the good homeopathist and his sugar pillets, that have almost, if not entirely, consigned to oblivion this sovereign remedy.

Spring, Summer and Autumn have fled ; Winter comes with his hoary head and white mantling, and brings in his train of snow and ice many attractions.

"Chill airs and wintery winds! my ear
Has grown familiar with your song."

I listened to its hoarse music with delight, and enjoyed its pleasures. Skating, riding down hill to walk up again, and even a brisk snow balling, all brought the rose of health to the cheek.

I can never forget the joyous sport of going to school one winter, a distance of about a mile, in an ox sleigh, with Buck and Golden before it ; and how we used to stop at every house on the way and gather in the merry boys and girls until a jollier turn out was never seen —unless it be a wagon load of the peasantry of Italy, which, when I saw a few years ago, I imagined nearly equalled our sleigh load in winter. Even the good oxen which our brothers had trained since they first came into the yoke, and which I really loved much more than some persons I have since known, appeared to enjoy the pelting of snow balls they received from the gay boys, and the wild halloing of "Whoa, haw, gee," the only whip used to urge them forward. On arriving at the school house, what an unloading of dozens, I was going to say, of boys, who had been clinging to all sides of the sleigh, and next came the unpacking of the girls, big and little, that were so snugly nestled into the straw and warm blankets ; when all this was properly adjusted, the faithful oxen were turned homeward, and soberly they retraced their steps without a driver, turning out respectfully to the right whenever they met another team. On one occasion, a good natured dame of the Emerald Isle, knowing somewhat of their training and gentleness, wished to go to a neighbor's not far distant,and as they jogged along on their return, she jumped on the sleigh, and on reaching the place where she wished to stop, called out to them, "Thrush te ! thrush te !" but the innocent oxen not understanding the Irish language, became frightened at the strange voice, and instead of stopping as she intended having them, they increased their speed until, with a column of steam issuing from their frosty nostrils, they halted at our gateway, when the indignant old lady tumbled head over heels out into the snow, and was compelled to pick herself up and trudge back, a distance much farther than she would have had to walk had she not stolen the ride. When school was out at four o'clock, if the oxen failed to be sent after us,the frolic of going home on foot was no less joyous, for snow balls were sent flying thickly through the air all the way, and many a figure, both large and small, were often lost sight of in the huge snow-drifts. I was too young to withstand such rough combat, and thus dear brother Fisk, in his unselfishness, denied himself the sport and carried me on his back.

Going to school in the country was but a small part of the joyousness of winter ; the long evenings were made up of social gatherings all over the neighborhood, and cheerful sleigh rides by moonlight. I think the pleasantest recollections I retain of those long winter evenings,aside from the hearthstone gatherings, is attending protracted meetings in that dear old country church, full two miles from our home. The ride was often a cold one, but the heart was warm. The pastors from the adjoining circuits united, and for several weeks preached at one place every evening. After the sermon, which was a direct appeal to the heart and life, sinners were invited and urged to come around the altar, and sometimes they came by scores, weeping over their sins. Then the prayers of the church ascended for their pardon,and I have really imagined that heaven and earth came together as prayer and praise blended so sweetly in one ; sorrow under such hallowed influences endured but for an hour, when it was exchanged for the purest type of holy joy ; and all went on their way rejoicing as did the Shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem.

Agnes had returned to us after an absence of two years, which appeared much longer, we were so lonely without her. We were interested for days and weeks listening to her story of travels backward and forward, and her stay with Miriam, who had now a little boy baby we had never seen ; neither had any of us ever traveled half that distance—making her quite a heroine for a time in our little circle. Wilberforce had left us to become a builder instead of a farmer. Olin married and brought his dear little wife, Mary, to our home, where they lived awhile, then moved to the village near by—having a home of their own. Addison left to attend school, but returned again—as did Wilberforce—for Providence had prospered us, adding to our lands, and now we were to have a new house, Wilberforce to be the builder. It seems so much like a dream, or a castle built in the air, when I recall my delight in seeing this house assume its fair proportions. At length it was completed and painted white, and a row of maple trees set all around the ample yard, extending to the road, with a carriage drive on one side. During the joyous holidays we were busy moving from the old red house into the new one, only a few rods apart, and on New Year's day it was dedicated to social and domestic happiness, while we all united in prayer for God's benediction upon our new home, and thanking him for blessings new every morning and fresh every evening.

Evangeline.

The Light of Nature.—The celebrated Mr. Hume wrote an essay on the sufficiency of nature; and the no less celebrated Dr. Robertson, on the necessity of Revelation, and the insufficiency of the light of nature. Hume came one evening to visit Robertson, and the evening was spent on the subject. The friends of both were present, and it is said that Robertson reasoned with accustomed clearness and power. Whether Hume was convinced by his reasoning or not, we cannot tell; but at any rate he did not acknowledge his conviction. Hume was very much of a gentleman, and, as he rose to depart, bowed politely to those in the room, while, as he retired through the door, Robertson took the light to show him the way.—"O, sir," he continued, "I find the light of nature always sufficient," as he bowed on. The street door was open, and presently, as he bowed along the entry, he stumbled over something concealed, and pitched down stairs into the street. Robertson ran after him with a candle, and as he held it over him, whispered softly and cunningly, "You had better have a little light from above, friend Hume," and raising him up, he bade him good night and returned to his friends.

Mississippi Items.

Vicksburg is rapidly recovering from the effects of the late fire. New buildings are in process of erection all over the burnt district. Lumber is worth from $45 to $80 per thousand, and mechanics are receiving from five to seven dollars a day. Rents are enormous,and property is held at high rates.

Freedmen.—There is a lively competition for the services of the freedmen, and good wages are offered. Notwithstanding the unfavorable results of last year's planting, there appears to be an increasing desire among Southern men to secure their labor this year.

Educational.—The schools for the colored children at Vicksburg are in a prosperous condition. The United Presbyterian Mission has a very fine school, with over 400 in attendance,and would have more could they accommodate them. There are schools in the M. E. and A. M. E. Churches, and in some old Barracks. The Episcopal and Catholic Churches also sustain schools. In all, over a thousand pupils are receiving instruction.

Revivals.—The M. E. Church at Vicksburg has enjoyed an interesting revival during the past month. Fifteen were baptized on Sunday, 3d inst. About forty in all united with the Church. D.

[For the New Orleans Advocate.]

DIED.

In Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 28, 1867, of pneumonia, Rev. Matthew Patton, of Corinth, Miss.

Bro. Patton was licensed to preach by the Corinth Quarterly Conference of the M. E. Church, Rev. N. L. Brakeman, P. E., on the 6th of November, 1866. At the close of the late session of the M. M. Conference, he was appointed by the present P. E., Bro. Darnell, to supply Holly Springs, Miss. He came to this city on business, on his way to his new field of labor. While in Memphis he fell into the hands of a gang of robbers, who robbed him of all his money, and came near taking his life. He called on me to assist him in raising some money with which to get to Holly Springs. This was on Sabbath, the 20th inst. I promised to see that he should have the money, but Monday, before it was time for him to leave the city, he was taken sick with a violent attack of pneumonia. We did what we could for him, but it was of no avail. We thought, Friday morning, he would recover, but toward night he began to fail, and continued to do so till Monday morning about three o'clock, when his spirit left for the other world.

His sickness was so sudden and violent I could learn but little in reference to his family or business affairs. It is to be hoped by the means of this notice his family, his Presiding Elder, and the church to which he was appointed may learn of the sad affliction.

L. Hawkins,
Pastor Centenary M. E. Church.
Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 30, 1867.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR.

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER,

SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in COLD water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

To planters and other persons Employing Freedmen.—Headquarters, Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen and Abandoned Lands, State of Louisiana—New Orleans, La., Jan. 12, 1867.—To correct a false impression which seems to exist as to the matter of obtaining transportation for freedmen, when it is desired to procure labor from other States, under the provisions of a late order of Gen. Howard, Commissioner, etc., Washington, D. C. the public interested are hereby notified that any party can make the necessary application in person, and by complying with the regulations governing the subject, can secure for themselves all the privileges granted in the order alluded to. No person or persons have any appointment which gives them the sole right to transact this business in this state.

By order of

Bt. Maj. Gen'l. J. A. MOWER, U. S. A.,
Assistant commissioner, etc
WM. H. STERLING,
Captain 1st. U. S. Infantry,
Ja15 2t A. A. A. General.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them, Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any o ther. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington st, after November 1st, 1866 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STREET

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

---

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co, Webster & Co, and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adveriser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bile, foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,

Gen'l Agent for United States,
rl0—1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicinal Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark- & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12—3 m

---

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism,

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

---

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

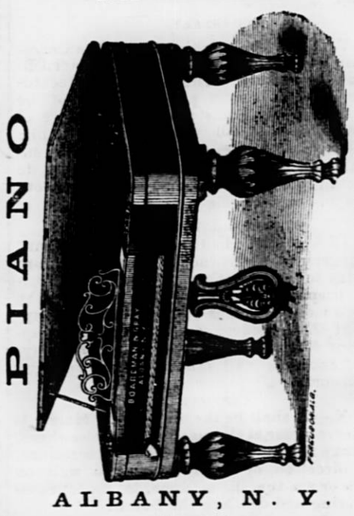
CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL

FURNITURE.



24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

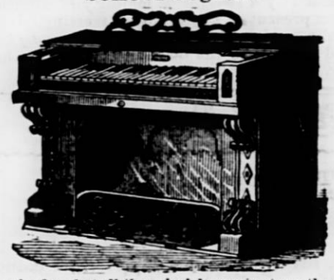
Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

PIANO FORTES.

ALBANY, N. Y.



Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other muscal instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London' Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the surervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knwoltaon & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87—1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,
MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.
Street Rails,
STRAP RAILS.
OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,
ROLLS,
ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY
Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off-cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES.

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the 'Convent of the Sacred Heart,' in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL.

FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

---

DOCTOR

L. Q. C. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL!!

A GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE CURE OF

THROAT AND LUNG DISEAES.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safe and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the Pine Tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system.

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs.

It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Blind and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, and Diptheria, etc., etc., etc.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

There is not a medicine discovered that has so much power to dissolve the thick mucus that stops up the wind passages of the lungs as the Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which subdues the fever and inflammation that destroy the power and vitality of the lungs, and consign the patient to the grave. We say to all whose lungs are affected, use Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial with great confidence, as it has restored thousands of cases to health that were hopelessly give up to die.

COLDS AND COUGHS

are speedily cured by the use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it does its work at once, and the patient is cured before other medicines would have had time to have any beneficial effect.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR SCROFULA.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial will purify the blood and cleanse it, of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores internal and external, Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, and all Skin Diseases are especially cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it is good to be applied internally and externally in the above cases, as it has great power to heal where it comes in contact with the human flesh.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

is a great remedy for Chronic Croup and Diptheria, which is sending thousands and thousands of children to a premature grave. It can be cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

Out of ten thousand cases where it has been tried in the past two years, it has never missed a case where it was taken in time. All families should have it on hand, as it gives instant relief in Croup and Diptheria.

BLIND AND BLEEDING PILES.

Thousands of cures of this most painful and dangerous complaint are now enjoying the blessings of health by the use of the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Its great healing properties will stop the bleeding and pain immediately.

CONSTIPATION OF THE BOWELS.

Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is a great remedy for costiveness, as it acts upon the surface of the stomach, and causes a flow of gastric juice, enabling the stomach rapidly to digest the food, which give health and vigor to the bowels, and causes regular evacuations. Let no one that is suffering from constipation of the bowels neglect to use the Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND GRAVEL

are speedily and permanently cured by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. It subdues the inflammation in the Kidneys, and in Gravel it dissolves and carries away the sediment which forms what is called stone in the bladder.

ASTHMA AND COUGH.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial gives instantaneous relief in cases of Asthma and Whooping Cough. It often cures whooping before it has run half its course; as it acts at once upon the phlegm and mucus, and expels them from the throat, and the sufferer is relieved. In cases of Asth-

DR. WISHART'S DYSPEPSIA PILLS WITH THE CORDIAL,

as they have never been known to fail to cure that dis-

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial acts with great power upon the Liver, and restores it to a speedy action, giving it a healthy secretion by its cooling and equalizing principle.

THE CAUSES OF CONSUMPTION IN THE LUNGS.

A sharp and poisonous corroding humor, either coming from other parts, or breeding in the lungs. From our own observation, we conclude that of ninety-six out of every hundred that die with consumption, their disease originated first from Dyspepsia—indigestion. The food fermenting, souring and rottening in the stomach, creating a poisonous catarrh, which is drawn by the brain to the head, passing through its different ramifications, creating inflammation throughout its course. The brains, eyes, and all the organs of the head receiving its poisonous and corroding effect, uniting together, they struggle to relieve themselves from its grasp, hence comes dizziness, dimness of vision, headache, and staggering in walking. This phlem and catarrh is discharged from the head to the throat, falling on the bronchial tubes filling up the air passages of the lungs, and if suffered to remain there, will chicken, corrode, and breed ulcers in the lungs; then come ugh and consumption. We say to the sick, use with great perseverence, one bottle after another, until it has had power enough to dissolve the mucus and phlegm which stop up the air passages, and expectorate it from the lungs.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

In all cases of Dyspepsia with Consumption use

DR. WISHART'S

Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

WITH THE

TAR CORDIAL.

L. Q. C. WISHART, M. D.,
Office and Store 10 North Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. of America.

WHOLESALE AGENTS:

BARNES, WARD & CO., 24 Magazine street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sold by all Druggists. mh3 1y

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

THE ILLUSTRATED PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL FOR MARCH. Contains Cornelius Vanderbilt, Hon. Ezra Cornell, Prof. Mapes, Frederika Bremer, Lavater, Las Casas, Sir John Franklin, Capt. Cook, Revs. John Wesley and Jonathan Edwards;—Talent and Genius;—Extraordinary prediction;—Ghosts;—Origin of Coal;—Varieties of Sheep:—Iron, its uses;—Putting on a bad face;—Tribulation Trepid, and Mr. Hopeful;—The Jew;—Love and Lovers, the Philosophy of Engagements; an Excellent Number, only 20 cents or $2,00 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway New York.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES; plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops. Prices $75, $90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS.

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a good house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply Address lock box No. 160, N. O, P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton Seed and Sperm Oil & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Linseed Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute.

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten." [feb31

'THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $50 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music, Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10—1y

---

VICK'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

OF

HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the.

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost of postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my catalogue. Address

JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

Jan18

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No. 8. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1867. Whole No.—58.

Poetry.

The Jackdaw.

Vincent Bourne, who wrote the following lines in Latin more than a hundred years ago, was an usher in the Westminister School. Cowper, the poet, was a pupil under him, and subsequently gave an English version to the poems of his former master. Towards the close of his life Daniel Webster repeated these lines, expressing his belief that poetry and wisdom had rarely been more happily blended:

There is a bird who, by his coat,
And by the hoarseness of his note,
Might be supposed a crow;
A great frequenter of the church,
Where, Bishop-like, he finds a perch
And dormitory too.

Above the steeple shines a plate,
That turns and turns, to indicate
From what point blows the weather.
Look up—your brains begin to swim,
'Tis in the clouds—that pleases him,
He chooses it the rather.

Fond of the speculative hight,
Thither he wings his airy flight,
And thence securely sees
The bustle and the raree-show
That occupy mankind below,
Secure and at his ease.

You think, no doubt, he sits and muses
On future broken bones and bruises,
If he should chance to fall,
No! not a single thought like that Employs his philosophic pate,
Or troubles it at all.

He sees that this great roundabout,
The world, with all its motley rout,
Church, army, physic, law,
Its customs and its businesss,
Is no concern at all of his,
And says—What says he? Caw!

Thrice, happy bird! I, too, have seen
Much of the vanities of men;
And, sick of having seen 'em,
Would cheerfully these limbs resign
For such a pair of wings as thine,
And such a head between 'em.

CRETE (Candia.)

Crete is nearly equidistant from Europe, Asia and Africa, but it has always been reckoned as a part of Europe. Its length from E. to W. is about 160 miles; its breadth is very unequal, being in the widest part nearly 40 miles, and in the narrowest only 6 miles. The whole island may be considered a prolongation of that mountain claim which breasts the waters at Cape Malea, with the island of Cythera interposed. The geological formation resembles that of the Hellenic peninsula; a continuous mass of high-land runs through the whole length, about the middle of which Mount Ida, terminating in three lofty peaks, rises to the height of 7674 feet; to the W. it was connected with the ridge called the White Mountains (Λευχὰ Ὄρη, or in Romaic Ἀσπζα Βουνά,) whose snow-clad summits and bold and beautiful outlines are visible in clear weather from the southern shores of the Peloponnesus. The rivers of Crete are numerous, but are little more than mountain torrents, and are for the most part dry in summer.

Gordon (book I. Chap. 6) has given a description of Crete at the outbreak of the Greek Revolution:—"Crete is indeed the garden of Greece, and were it thoroughly civilized and cultivated, would produce in vast abundance corn, wine, oil, silk, wool, honey, and wax. In the state, however, to which this superb island was reduced, grain, silk and cotton were imported from other provinces, and its exports consisted only in a large quantity of oil (the staple commodity,) wine of fair quality, excellent soap, and cheese of Sphakia, much esteemed in the Levant. The land is stocked with game, the sea with fine fish; fruit is plentiful and of a delicious flavor; its valleys are adorned with a variety of flowers and aromatic shrubs, and with groves of myrtle, orange, lemon, pomegranite, and almond trees, as well as interminable forests of olives. The southern coast is destitute of ports, and has scarcely any safe roadsteads; but on the northern side are several excellent and capacious harbors. There is something peculiar in the appearance and disposition of its inhabitants; they are taller than the other natives of Greece, strong, active, and especially remarkable for agility and swiftness; daring, vindictive, venal, rapacious, and unwilling to submit to the restraints of law and order; they retain, in short, those distinctive characteristics of the old Cretans, which caused their mercenary troops to be so much esteemed, and their names to be so deeply detested throughout Greece and Asia. They likewise differ from their neighbors in respect of dress and arms; instead of the shaggy mantle, camise, and classic buskin of Albania, or the cumbrous garments of the Ottomans, they wear short jerkins and drawers of light texture, their white cloaks, and boots (generally red) reaching to the knee, but extremely pliable; and in place of the ill-poised Albanian musket which has hardly any stock, or the ponderous Turkish carabines, they use long and light guns mounted like European fowling pieces. In handling these weapons they display as much skill as their ancestors did in shooting with the bow; they are reckoned the best marksmen in the East, but their warfare is entirely one of ambuscade and bush-fighting, resembling that of the North-American Indians, where it is considered the chief excellence of a soldier to take aim at the foe without suffering himself to be seen." Before the Revolution the whole population was rated by a high authority at 250,000; it had sunk by war and exile, in 1834, to 150,000, and is now—1867—estimated at about 200,000, of whom not quite one-fourth are Mahommedans, and the remainder Christians.* But those Cretans who profess the faith of Islam must be looked upon as Mussulman Greeks rather than Turks, their origin being mainly derived from apostasy, and the custom of intermarrying with Greek women. So much alike are the Christians and Moslems in speech and semblance, that in action they found it difficult to discriminate friends from enemies, and the Greeks adopted a practice of fighting bareheaded, in order that their own party might recognize them by their flowing locks. It would perhaps be natural to suppose that this similarity, relationship, and continual intercourse, ought to have modified the rigor of the Ottoman yoke; on the contrary, however, no Rayahs were so harshly treated as those of Crete, and nowhere did the ruling caste exercise so inhuman a degree of tyranny. "It was this abominable system," continues General Gordon, "that pushed so many Christians to apostasy; but many, though outwardly Mahommedans, retained in secret, from generation to generation, the religion of their forefathers, and had their children privately baptised.† Such were the two brothers Kurmulis, who not only resumed at the outbreak of the Revolution, an undisguised profession of Christianity, but after spending an ample fortune in its defence, died before Athens, for the cause of Grecian liberty, in the campaign of 1827."

Crete is at the present day governed by a Pasha, and is divided into the three provinces of Khania, Rhithymnos and Megalo-Kastron, so named from their respective capitals—the three chief towns of the Island. These provinces are subdivided into 20 districts (ἐπαρχίαι), of which the first has 5, the second 4, and the third 11. In each province there is a local council of government, nominated by the Pasha, but composed of Christians as well as of Mahommedans. The annual revenue of Crete is supposed to be about 90,000*l*. The Rayahs pay the poll-tax, as elsewhere in the Turkish empire; and various duties and customs are levied. The peasants are generally proprietors of the lands which they farm; otherwise they cultivate the property of the Agas on a kind of métayer system. Agriculture is still at a low ebb, though it is now improving, and recovering from the devastating effects of the war from 1821 to 1830, when so many of the olive plantations and vineyards were destroyed and villages burnt down. The average consumption of British manufactures does not exceed 2000*l*. annually. Oil, soap, and fruits of various kinds are the principal exports. The regular garrison does not exceed 4500 men, chiefly Arabs and Albanians; but every Mussulman is armed. The chief towns are fortified, and there are several fortresses in various parts of the Island.

It has been already observed that the mass of the population of Crete belongs to the Greek church, only one-fourth being now Mahommedans. There are a few Jews and Latins in the towns. Crete is subject to the patriarch of Constantinople, and is divided into 8 bishoprics, the Metropolitan See being at Megalo-Kastron. There are 30 large and many small monasteries in the Island; all endowed with lands like the Mosques. The priesthood are generally very ignorant. There are a few schools in the large towns.

*The population of Crete in ancient times is estimated by Mr. Pashley, (vol. ii. p. 326) at not less than a million, which amount would not people it so densely as Malta is peopled at the present day.

†We may compare with this fact the assertion of Mr. Borrow, in his 'Bible in Spain,' that many of the descendants of the Spanish Moors and Jews still secretly cherish the faith of their forefathers, though openly professing Christianity, and even, in some instances, holding high dignities in the Christian Church. For a full account of the family of the Kurmulides see 'Pashley's Crete,' chap. vii.

The Princess de Metternich recently asked M. Alex. Dumas: "Pray tell me how comes it the Jews are so ugly, and the Jewesses are so beautiful?" "Because the men crucified our Lord, and the women wept for him."

The Impeachment Project.

HOW IT IS REGARDED IN ENGLAND—COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

THE ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "We have reason to believe that the articles of impeachment to be laid before the Senate by the managers who shall be appointed by the House of Representatives to prosecute the President will be substantially as follows:

"1. That he has violated and set aside the Constitution and laws of the United States which he had sworn, as executive, to support. The chief specification as to violation of the Constitution is that he has appointed to office men whom the Senate had refused to confirm immediately after such refusal, the Constitution declaring that all appointments of the executive shall be made by, and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The chief specification with regard to the violation of the laws will be that he has appointed to office, and is now paying out of the contingent fund of the war department, men who have not, and who are notoriously unable to take the oath of loyalty, thus violating and setting aside a law of Congress passed July 2, 1862, and yet unrepealed, providing that no man shall hold any office, military, naval or civil, unless he has first taken the oath that he has never given support, countenance or encouragement to the enemies of the country in armed rebellion. Another specification under this head will be that he has refused to sustain the civil rights bill since the same was passed by Congress over his veto, or to instruct his agents in the South to respect and enforce its provisions, through which neglect various instances of flagrant denial of rights and perpetuation of wrongs meant to be prevented by the said bill have ensued. These alleged instances will probably be mentioned in detail and the testimony of military men will be adduced.

"2. That he is guilty of 'high crimes' against many American citizens whose lives have been cruelly sacrificed by him in his illegal pursuit of a partisan purpose. The first specification will be that by sustaining the mayor of New Orleans and his police—all of whom were ex-rebels—in suppressing a legal assemblage of Unionists in New Orleans, he was the real cause of the slaughter in that city of three hundred and seventy-eight unarmed men, amongst whom were the most eminent and devoted patriots of Louisiana. Another specification will refer to the similar massacre of Memphis.

"3. That he has been guilty of gross and serious 'misdemeanors,' in language and behavior, to an extent injurious to the peace and order of the country and degrading to the office he holds. The specifications here will be mainly these: 1, denouncing the servants of the people in Congress as 'satraps,' as 'a body hanging on the verge of the government,' as 'equally guilty with the traitors of the South,' and as 'guilty of the New Orleans massacre;' 2, declaring publicly that he could with safety have made himself 'dictator' if he had wished; 3, giving pardons indiscriminately to rebels against the government, at the solicitations of a woman of loose character, and others who made it a business to obtain and sell them, and other abuses of the pardoning power; 4, giving to the country as the regular report of General Sheridan on the New Orleans massacre a garbled copy of the same, with the intent of concealing a statement very damaging to himself in the same; 5, habitual drunkenness to the extent of interfering with his duties as President, and, also, of bringing dishonor on the country by wild and incoherent harangues, made whilst in a manifest state of intoxication. In support of this allegation the speeches made at his inauguration and at Niagara and the various other places visited during the President's recent western tour will be adduced."

The Gazette, commenting upon the event, remarks that in England impeachment "is one of the most curious branches of the criminal law, and marks, so to speak, the limit at which law in the proper sense of the word borders upon and almost merges into legislation." It adds:

"If we were to guess about the management of the trial, we should be inclined to fear that in the excited state of party feeling which at present prevails in the United States, and which indeed is the inevitable result of such a struggle as the civil war, the Senate would be in great danger of neglecting far too much the judicial view of the case, and of allowing more importance than it really deserves to the necessary vagueness of the law which they have to administer. This, however, is only a guess, and by no means excludes a strong hope that the Senate will give the world one more example of the fact which is so often overlooked and obscured, that the passionate external violence of the American character and manners overlays and conceals a solid foundation of good sense, moderation, and regard for law which makes itself felt in the long run and on great occasions."

Mr. Peabody's Donation.

From the National Intelligencer, Feb, 9.

In the execution of a favorite scheme of public benefaction, Mr. George Peabody, whose riches have been lavishly but judiciously bestowed in numerous acts of real charity, two days ago, addressed the following letter to the gentlemen named:

To Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, of Massachusetts; Hon. Hamilton Fish, of New York; Right Rev. Charles P. McIlvaine, of Ohio; General U. S. Grant, of the United States army; Hon. William C. Rives, of Virginia; Hon. John H. Clifford, of Massachusetts; Hon. William Aiken, of South Carolina; William M. Evarts, Esq., of New York; Hon. William A. Graham, of North Carolina; Charles Macalester, of Pennsylvania; George W. Riggs, Esq., of Washington; Samuel Wetmore, Esq., of New York; Edward A. Bradford, Esq., of Louisiana; George N. Eaton, Esq., of Maryland; and George Peabody Russell, Esq., of Massachusetts.

Gentlemen—I beg to address you on a subject which occupied my mind long before I left England, and in regard to which one, at least, of you (the Hon. Mr. Winthrop, the distinguishd and valued friend to whom I am so much indebted for cordial sympathy, careful consideration and wise counsel in this matter) will remember that I consulted him immediately upon my arrival in May last

I refer to the educational needs of those portions of our beloved and common country which have suffered from the destructive ravages, and the not less disastrous consequences of civil war.

With my advancing years my attachment to my native land has but become more devoted. My hope and faith in its successful and glorious future have grown brighter and stronger, and now, looking forward beyond my stay on earth, as may be permitted to one who has passed the limit of threescore and ten years, I see our country united and prosperous, emerging from the clouds which still surround her, taking a higher rank among the nations, and becoming richer and more powerful than ever before.

But to make her prosperity more than superficial, her moral and intellectual development should keep pace with her material growth, and in those portions of our nation to which I have referred, the urgent and pressing physical needs of an almost impoverished people must for some years preclude them from making, by unaided effort, such advances in education and such progress in the diffusion of knowledge among all classes as every lover of his country must earnestly desire.

I feel most deeply, therefore, that it is the duty and privilege of the more favored and wealthy portions of our nation to assist those who are less fortunate, and, with the wish to discharge so far as I may be able my own responsibility in this matter, as well as to gratify my desire to aid those to whom I am bound by so many ties of attachment and regard, I give you, gentlemen, most of whom have been my personal and especial friends, the sum of one million of dollars, to be by you and your successors held in trust, and the income thereof used and applied in your discretion for the promotion and encouragement of intellectual, moral or industrial education among the young of the more destitute portions of the Southern and Southwestern States of our Union; my purpose being that the benefits intended shall be distributed among the entire population, without other distinction than their needs and the opportunities of usefulness to them.

Besides the income thus derived, I give to you permission to use from the principal sum, within the next two years, an amount not exceeding forty per cent.

In addition to this gift I place in your hands bonds of the State of Mississippi, issued to the Planters' Bank, and commonly known as Planters' Bank bonds, amounting with interest, to about eleven hundred thousand dollars, the amount realized by you, from which is to be added to and used for the purposes of this trust.

These bonds were originally issued in payment for stock in that bank held by the State, and amounted in all to only two millions of dollars. For many years the State received large dividends from that bank over and above the interest on these bonds. The State paid the interest without interruption till 1840, since which no interest has been paid, except a payment of about one hundred thousand dollars, which was found in the treasury applicable to the payment of the coupons, and paid by mandamus of the Supreme Court. The validity of these bonds has never been questioned, and they must not be confounded with another issue of bonds made by the State to the Union Bank, the recognition of which has been a subject of controversy with a portion of the population of Mississippi.

Various acts of the legislature, viz: of February 28, 1842; February 23, 1844; February 16, 1846; February 28, 1846; March 4, 1848, and the highest judicial tribunal of the State have confirmed their validity, and I have no doubt that at an early day such legislation will be had as to make these bonds available in increasing the usefulness of the present trust.

Mississippi, though now depressed, is rich in agricultural resources, and cannot long disregard the moral obligation resting upon her to make provision for their payment. In confirmation of what I have said in regard to the legislative and judicial action concerning the State bonds issued to the Planters' Bank, I herewith place in your hands the documents marked A.

The details and organization of the trust I leave with you, only requesting that Mr. Winthrop may be chairman, and Governor Fish and Bishop McIlvaine vice chairmen of your body. And I give to you power to make all necessay bylaws and regulations to obtain an act of incorporation if any shall be found expedient, to provide for the expenses of the trustees and of any agents appointed by them, and generally to do all such acts as may be necessary for carrying out the previsions of this trust.

All vacancies occurring in your number, by death, resignation, or otherwise, shall be filled by your election, as soon as conveniently may be, and having in view an equality of representation so far as regards the Northern and Southern States.

I furthermore give to you the power, in case two-thirds of the trustees shall at any time after the lapse of thirty years deem it expedient, to close this trust, and of the funds which at that time shall be in the hands of yourselves and your successors, to distribute not less than two-thirds among such educational purposes, as you and they may determine in the states for whose benefit the income is now appointed to be used. The remainder may be distributed by the trustees for educational or literary purposes wherever they may deem it expedient.

In making this gift, I am aware that the fund derived from it can but aid the States which I wish to benefit in their own exertions to defuse the blessings of education and morality. But if this endowment shall encourage those now anxious for the light of knowledge, and stimulate to new efforts the many good and noble men who cherish the high purposes of placing our great country foremost, not only in power, but in the intelligence and virtue of her citizens, it will have accomplished all that I can hope.

With reverent recognition of the need of the blessing of Almighty God upon this gift, and with the fervent prayer that under his guidance your counsels may be directed for the highest good of present and future generations in our beloved country, I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your humble servant,

GEORGE PEABODY.

Washington, Feb. 7, 1867.

☞Every first of January that we arrive at is an imaginary milestone on the turnpike track of human life; at once a resting-place for thought and meditation, and a starting point for fresh exertion in the performance of our journey. The man who does not, at the least, propose to himself to be better this year than he was last, must be either very good or very bad, indeed! And only to propose to be better, is something: if nothing else, it is an acknowledgement of our need to be so, which is the first step towards amendment. But, in fact, to propose to oneself to do well, is in some sort to do well, positively: for there is no such thing as a stationary point in human endeavors; he who is not worse to-day than he was yesterday, is better: and he who is not better is worse.

The road to ruin is always kept in good repair, and the traveler pays the expenses of it.

It is from the remembrance of joys we have lost that the arrows of affliction are pointed.—[Mackenzie.

Sermon by Rev. E. Jackson, (Colored,) of Opelousas.

Matt. VI. 12. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

Before I speak strictly to these words I shall take notice, 1st, That in this prayer there is but one petition for the body—"Give us our daily bread," but there are two petitions for the soul—"Forgive us our trespasses;" "lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Hence, observe, that we are to be more careful for our souls than for our bodies, more careful for grace than for daily bread, more desirous to have our souls saved than our bodies fed. In the law, the weight of the sanctuary was twice as big as the common weight, to typify that spiritual things must be of far greater weight with us than earthly. The excellency of the soul may challenge our chief care about it. The soul is an immaterial substance; it is a heavenly spark, lighted by the breath of God; it is the more refined spiritual part of man; it is of an angelical nature; it hath some faint resemblance of God. The body is the more draggish part, it is but the cabinet, which, though curiously wrought, the soul is the jewel; the soul is near akin to angels; it is capable of communion with God in glory.

It is immortal; it doth never expire. It can act without the body, though the body be dissolved into dust, the soul lives, Luke, XII. 4. The essence of the soul is eternal; it hath a beginning, but no end; it is a blossom of eternity. Sure, then, if the soul be so ennobled and dignified, more care should be taken about the soul than about the body. We make but one petition for the body, but two petitions for the soul.

It reproves them that take more care for their bodies than their souls. The body is the brutish part, yet they take more care, first, about dressing their bodies than their souls. They put on the best clothes, are dressed in the richest garb, but care not how naked or undressed their souls are; they do not get the jewels of grace to adorn their inner man; second, about feeding their bodies than their souls; they are eaters for the flesh, they do make provisions for the flesh, ROM. XIII. 14; they have the best diet, but let their souls starve, as if one should feed his hawk, but let his child starve. The body must sit in the chair of state, but the soul, that princely thing, is made a lackey to run on the devil's errand.

Let us be more careful for our souls. If it be well with the soul, it shall be well with the body; if the soul be gracious, the body shall be glorious, for it shall shine like Christ's body. Therefore it is wisdom to look chiefly to the soul, because in saving the soul, we secure the happiness of the body. And we cannot show our care for the soul more than in taking all seasons for our souls; reading, praying, hearing and meditating. O, look to the main chance—let the soul be chiefly tended! The loss of the soul would be fatal; other losses may be made up again. If one lose his health, he may recover it again; if he lose his estate, he may make it up again; but if he lose his soul, this loss can never be made up again. The merchant that ventures all he hath in one ship, if that ship be lost, he is quite broken.

From the connection in the text, as soon as Christ had said, give us our "daily bread," he adds, "and forgive us." Christ joins this petition of forgiveness of sin immediately to the other of daily bread, yet all is nothing without forgiveness. If our sins be not pardoned, we can take but little comfort in our food. As it is with a man condemned, though you bring him meat in prison, yet he takes little comfort in it without a pardon; so, though we have daily bread, yet it will do us no good, unless sin be forgiven. What though we should have manna, which was called angels' food—though the rock should pour out rivers of oil, JOB. XXXV. 6. All is nothing, unless sin is done away. When Christ has said, "give us our daily bread," he presently adds, and "forgive us our trespasses." Daily bread may satisfy the appetite, but forgiveness of sin satisfies the conscience. Peace with the congregation; peace I leave with you as Christ spoke unto his disciples. Amen.

THE USE OF THE ROD.—The following story is told of a father of the Church. At an association dinner, a debate aros: as to the use of the rod in bringing ue children. The Doctor took the affirmative, and the chief opponent was a young minister, whose reputation for veracity was not high. He maintained that parents often do harm to their children by unjust punishment, from not knowing the facts of the case. "Why," said he, "the only time my father whipped me was for telling the truth." "Well," retorted the Doctor, it cured you of it, didn't it?"

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

XXXIXTH CONGRESS!

The Thirty-ninth Congress has just saved itself from the eternal infamy with which all good men were prepared to baptize its name. Never before has a legislative body trifled so long and so injuriously with the peace of the country and the great interests of all its citizens. The Southern people, both the loyal and the disloyal, have had just cause to complain against a delay which brought each and all to the verge of ruin, political and financial. That which has been done at the last moment should have been done months ago; and the land would have had rest. We rejoice, however, that our National Legislators have at length acted as indicated by the following telegram to the N. O. Crescent:

Washington, Feb. 20.—Much surprise is excited here to-day by the return of Thad. Stevens and his friends to their party on the vote to recede from the resolution to disagree to the Senate's amendment to the reconstruction bill.

Reverdy Johnson voted for the bill to-night, and his conduct is generally commented on; although remarks in which he has been indulging in for some weeks, about the President, have indicated that such was likely to be his course.

A strictly party vote of 25 to 7 carried the bill.

Several of the President's friends say he will not pocket the bill, but veto it, and allow it to pass this session.

Much indignation is expressed among the conservatives at the prospect of such a course.

Death of Dr. Monroe.

We learn from the Christian Advocate that the Rev. Dr. Monroe was suddenly killed on the morning of Saturday, Feb. 9. That morning at 8 o'clock he had left home (Camden, N. J.,) for New York, to fill an appointment in Brooklyn on the following Sabbath.—When near Jersey City—at the Point of Rocks—he stepped out upon the rear platform of the middle car in which he had been sitting, probably on account of faintness caused by a momentary nausea, and it is presumed he was thrown off the platform while the train was passing round a sharp curve, against a wall of jagged rocks, causing, it appears, instant death. His body was found soon after the train had passed, and was taken charge of by Thomas Aldridge, Esq., a justice of the peace of Hudson City, whose delicate kindness in the case merits for him the thanks of the friends of the deceased.—Certain papers found upon his person led to the supposition that he might be a Methodist minister; and, accordingly, notice of that fact was given to Rev. M. E. Ellison, of Hudson City, by whom the deceased was identified, and to whose residence the body was at once removed. His funeral was largely attended the next day.

Dr. Monroe had been in the traveling connection since 1843. At the time of his death he was the corresponding secretary of our Church Extension Society. He was a devoted Christian and a faithful minister. In his death the Church sustains a great loss. But he is at rest

AID FOR THE CRETANS.

On our first page we publish a descriptive account of the Island of Crete, which will repay a careful reading. There is so much of present interest clustering around this small Ægian Island, as to impart a special importance to whatever pertains thereto. The noble Cretans are in death-grapple with the Turks—their political masters. Oppressed as no other people have ever been, they are manfully asserting their independence. Three several times they have risen in their own defence, and as often been compelled to submit to a government as unjust as it is inhuman. Again they are in arms; again they appeal to the Christian nations of the earth for sympathy and support. Although contending against fearful odds, yet with a heroic determination not unworthy their noble ancestry, they are imploring America to remove their women and children to a place of safety, while the men fight for liberty with the hated Turks. Their appeal should be heeded and assistance afforded at the earliest possible moment. Humanity, justice, and the love of liberty, demand a favorable response from our country.

The appeal and response may open the question of non-intervention, and some may hesitate on the ground of national neutrality; but their claims on our assistance are too reasonable to admit of a moment's doubt. Themselves Greeks in origin, language and religion, they are naturally a part of the Greek nation, and should be nationally and politically connected with the kingdom of Greece. They are subject to the Turks not from choice or conquest, but by the settlement of 1827, at which time the Allies confirmed the gift of their island by the Sultan to Mahomet Ali, Viceroy of Egypt, in requital of his great services during the war for the suppression of the Greek rebellion. Through a long series of years, they have been denied their rights; robbed of their property and murdered in the most barbarous manner. Their sufferings appeal to us, and laying aside our illiberal theory of non-intervention, we should demand of Turkey a cessation of hostilities, until an impartial investigation is had. Rejecting the selfish, political maxims of the past, we are bound, as a great Christian power, to defend the weak against the encroachments of the strong, and the oppressed against the intolerance and cruelty of tyrants. Impelled by no motives of national aggrandisement, but led by a humane and lofty sentiment of universal justice and a common brotherhood, we should demand of other nations the exercise of justice and mercy towards all their citizens.

Were the Cretans Mahommedans, and prompted by sectional ambition to establish an independent government, this appeal would be less reasonable; but they are Christians, and are hated and oppressed for their religion's sake. With a consistency which admits of no doubt, they are contending for annexation to that other part of themselves—the kingdom of Greece—to which they are bound by the sacred ties of a national faith. After enduring the most heartless persecutions for years, not a few of the Cretans have assumed the Mahommedan religion that they might live in comparative peace. But this is temporary. Disregarding the sacred precincts of the Church and monastery, the infidel Turk has polluted both in search of the faithful priest and venerable bishop. The Turkish ferocity displayed in the war, springs from hatred of Christianity. It is Mahommed against Christ. It is the intolerant spirit of 1453, when Constantinople fell beneath the arms of Mahommed II.; when the noble Church of St. Sophia was converted into a Mosque, and when the cry was raised "Death to the Christians."

The story of the fall of the monastery of Arcadi is a story of Christian martyrdom. Situated in the town of Canea, it was one of the oldest and strongest monasteries on the island. Erected 800 years ago, its wealth was considerable, and in its library were many rare Byzantine manuscripts, all of which perished in the ruins. Around its ancient walls the fierce Turks had assembled to the number of 3,000. For a whole day they cannonaded the convent with four mountain howitzers, but not till the second day were they able to force the outer walls, when for two hours a desperate hand to hand fight took place. Many fell; the surviving Cretans then retired within the strong walls of the monastery. Within were 316 women and children, and 200 men—516, in all. When the building was found untenable, the Greeks resolved to die rather than surrender. It was a sublime moment! The Superior of the monastery gathered around him the women and children and lifting his hands to heaven, he commended them to God, while at the moment, a priest, by the name of Mansissi, applied the match to the powder magazine, when a terrific explosion followed; from out the flames and smoke the Christians ascended to heaven, while over 2000 Turks descended to flames and smoke.

A people capable of such sublime courrage and faith are worthy of all sympathy. The sacrifice of Arcadi, is the promise of success; God never gives men such a lofty spirit except to inaugurate some grand movement. At present that movement promises to be the annexation of 23 Ægean Islands, now subject to Turkish rule, to the Kingdom of Greece. And even more—the overthrow of Mahommedan rule in Europe and the re-establishment of the throne of Greece in Constantinople. This is not improbable, for according to some German journals, who profess to be extremely well posted in regard to the affairs of their formidable neighbor, Russia, that enterprising and barbaric power is about to adopt certain rather stringent measures toward the rival barbarism, Turkey. That is ro say, the following extensive demands are about to be made upon the Ottoman Empire, preferred in the form of requests, but supported by the substance of menaces:

1. Egypt must be allowed to set up for itself as an independent State, under the government of the viceroy, who is to assume the title of Sultan of Egypt, and resume in himself the glory of all the Pharaohs and Ptolemies.

2. The islands of Crete, Cyprus, Rhodes, Chios, Mitylene and Lemnos are to be freed from the Turkish yoke, and the memory of Homer and the Templars cleared from the stain of foreign oppression. 3. Thessaly and Epirus must be remitted to Greece. 4. The independence of Roumania and Montenegro must be assured, and also that of Servia. In the 5th article is guaranteed the formation of an independent State of Bulgaria, under the sovereignty of a Russian Grand Duke. The Ottoman Empire, after the fulfilment of these conditions, would then be reduced, as far as its European possessions were concerned, to Roumelia and Albania.

Mr. Peabody's Donation.

We know not which to admire more, the munificence of the gift or the wisdom of the purpose. The former awakens our gratitude and excites our admiration; the latter convinces us of the discrimination of the donor, and is proof of his practical mind. Impressed with the immense importance of a common intelligence in a country whose government is republican in form, the plan contemplates the education of the masses. Here, where the people are the government and the rulers but their agents; where each man is a republic; where each man is a sovereign expressing his will by the ballot—the necessity of intelligence is greater than in those lands where the few do the thinking for the many, and aristocratically control the whole. No one can contemplate the tremendous power of the American franchise without the deepest concern. A single ballot may decide a Presidential election; the vote of the humblest citizen may change an administration and radically affect the policy of the nation at home and abroad. With us the vote of a fool counts as much as the vote of a philosopher.

And the influence of knowledge on the morals of society is no less worthy of profound consideration. Ignorance and vice naturally co-exist. The baser passions control the life of him whose mind is uneducated. The perceptions of right and wrong are dull; the distinctions between truth and error are blurred; the relations of the soul to God, and of man to his fellow are unappreciated; and the regal benefits of virtue upon home, society, government, time and eternity, are not realized.

With these lights around us, we cordially approve the expressed intent of Mr. Peabody's princely gift; and more particularly so as its benefits are to accrue to a class of persons who have waited long for such advantages. Animated by the loftiest patriotism, and embodying the noblest conception of Christian philanthropy, his donation of a million of dollars is to be applied for the "promotion and encouragement of intellectual, moral or industrial education among the young of the more destitute portions of the Southern and Southwestern States of our Union; my purpose being that the benefits intended shall be distributed among the entire population, without other distinction than their needs and the opportunities of usefulness to them." His only distinction is between the rich and the poor. Rising superior to the prejudices against race and caste, he recognizes the common brotherhood of man and the equality of a common citizenship. His benefactions are to fall to the more "destitute portions of the South," and be "distributed among the entire population." By the terms of the bequest, the "poor whites of the South" and the "children of the freedman" will be the beneficiaries. Sadly neglected from generation to generation, the former may yet enjoy the advantages of education, and the latter be qualified for their new and untried relations.

The trustees of this large fund are to be governed in the distribution thereof by two general rules: 1. "The promotion and encouragement of intellectual, moral, or industrial education. 2. Among the young of the more destitute portions of the Southern and Southwestern States of the Union." By the first rule they may establish new literary institutions, or aid those now in existence; or found libraries and museums of natural history; or institute courses of popular educational lectures; or tempt the young by prizes to habits of mental culture. In view of the actual destitution to be met, and the vast area whose youths are the appointed heirs, it were not possible, from the amount placed at their disposal, for the trustees to do more than inaugurate some general plan, to be carried forward by the States severally, and by the aid of other private donations, as suggested by Mr. Peabody.

In the inception of this great movement, we bespeak systematic and harmonious action. Let Mr. Peabody's gift be the first contribution toward an Educational Fund, to be increased by the Southern States and from private sources. The application of the funds may not be easy for the time being. Many plans will be suggested, but the necessities of the people will soon appear. The most simple plan should be adopted. Some of our cotemporaries have suggested a State University for Louisiana, as the object for which her portion of the gift should be applied; but Louisiana has more need of a system of free schools, in which all her children shall be educated, than a grand University. And there should be established in New Orleans a Free Academy, similar to the one in New York, as the centre of this great system. Hitherto only the children of the rich have enjoyed the advantages of education. There are now in this city 65,952 educatable children between the ages of 6 and 18; 43,769 are white children, and 22,183, colored. Not more than half of the white children attend school, while less than 3,000 of the colored attend. The balance are growing up in vice and ignorance. The proportion of educatable children in the country parishes, white and colored, who do not attend school, is far greater. Private and taxable schools cannot meet this great want, either in the city or country. What we most need and must have, are free schools, everywhere established throughout this State, where all classes of our children can attend without embarrassment from their social condition.

Human Experience and Bible Truth.

It has ever been a favorite plea of the wicked against Christianity, that, to them, there is no experimental evidence of its truth. Of the positive in religion this is true, and must be; for God has ordained that only the obedient shall eat of the good of the land. "If any man will do His (God's) will, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God." Again: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." That is, know these things, do them, and then you shall be happy. Here is knowledge, obedience and enjoyment; which last is experimental evidence—spiritual demonstration, which ends all doubt of the Bible's truth. This experience, of course, the ungodly cannot have. But have they therefore no experience which is to them proof positive of the truth of Revelation? Yea, verily. For as in the natural world, "The invisible things of God from the creation are clearly seen, being understood by the things which are made, even His eternal power and Godhead; so that they (Atheists) are without excuse;" so is it in the moral world: "For the wrath of God is revealed from Heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness; because that which may be known of God (of the truth of Christianity) is manifest in them"—the unconverted—"for God hath shown it to them," in their own experience.

Let us, at a few points, compare the teachings of Scripture with the experience of the wicked, and see how exactly they correspond; and in the mouths of these two witnesses let our words be established: The Bible represents the sinner as in a state of moral and spiritual darkness, and this is his experience. Without the light of God's word and Spirit, what knows he of his own origin or end? Ignorant of God, what knows he of himself?—his nature, relations, or duties? Of life, death, eternity? Of human freedom and accountability; or right and wrong, virtue and vice; of the great mystery of human suffering? In all of these respects, "the way of the wicked is as darkness—they know not at what they stumble." "They grope at noon-day" What better is the poor blind sinner of the present, than the benighted philosopher of past ages? of all ages, and of every clime? or than the pagan nations of to-day?

But the Bible represents this darkened mind as opposed to God and goodness, and this is his experience. His heart is at enmity with God—not subject to His law. In darkness, he loves it rather than light. He desires not the knowledge of God's ways; spurns His authority, denies His word, grieves His spirit, rejects His offer of life, and abuses His mercy. His whole nature—intellect, sensibilities and will—is averse to holiness and heaven; it is arrayed against God's Church and its ordinances, His ministers and people, His providence and grace, insults His dignity, provokes His judgments, and defies His power. Of all this every sinner is conscious, in some degree, and his experience accords with the testimony of Scripture.

Again, Revelation asserts that there is a conflict in the sinners nature—"a law of his members warring against the law of his mind." And it is so. Sin has never so reigned in the human heart, but that a voice there protested against its lordship. This it was that made Xenophon exclaim that he felt "as if two souls" were lodged within him; that made Seneca write (Epistle xxii.) "We are carried up into the heavens, and down again into the deep by turns; we are torn to pieces betwixt love and anger, hope and fear;" that made Plato set forth at one time the soul of man "as a chariot drawn by two horses, one white and one black"—representing the good and the evil in man; and again, to declare "There is that in every man which is drawing him up to God, there is also that in him which would drag him down into the mire of sensual and beastly lust;" that led Ovid to pen the oft quoted line:

"Video meliora probqoue, deteriora sequor," and Saul of Tarsus to exclaim: "O! wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from this body of death." [See Rom. vii., 14 to 24.] With all this accords the experience of every sinner;

"They see the right, approve it, too:—
Condemn the wrong, and yet the wrong pursue."

The Bible also declares that sinners have "a conscience of sins"—a sense of guilt and dread of danger. [See John 8th and 9th; 2d Cor. 4 and 2; 5th and 11th; Heb. 9, 9 to 14: 2d and 22d.] To the correctness of all this let human history, from Cain, the first criminal, to Byron, the misanthropist, and down to the last heart-sick, sin-stained, sorrow-darkened, fear-haunted soul bear testimony. Byron, in his "Manfred," tells us most fearfully how a soul may be tortured with conscious guilt. In "Childe Harold" he calls it

"The ineradicable taint of sin—
The boundless Upas, the all-blasting tree;"

and tells us how its keen pangs are ceaselessly throbbing "thro' the immedicable soul with heart-aches ever new." It was of this he wrote:

"Still, still pursues where e'er I flee,
The blight of life, the demon thought."

And again:

"I have thought till my brain became,
In its own eddy boiling and o'erwrought,
A whirling gulf of phantasy and flame."

In Manfred, Act. ii., Scene ii., he writes:

"My solitude is solitude no more, but peopled with the furies;—
I have gnashed my teeth in darkness till returning morn,
Then cursed myself till sunset;—I have prayed
For madness as a blessing—'tis denied me.
I have sought for death—but in the war
Of elements the waters shrank from me,
And fatal things passed harmless by—the cold hand
Of an all-pitiless demon held me back.
In phantasy imagination, all the affluence of my soul—
Which one day was a Crœsus in creation—
I plunged deep, but, like an ebbing wave, it dashed me back
Into the gulf of my unfathomed thought.
I plunged amidst mankind—Forgetfulness I sought
In all, but where 'tis to be found I have yet to learn—
I dwell in my despair, and live—and live forever."

Witch:

"It may be I can help thee."

Man.:

"To do this thy power
Must wake the dead or lay me low with them.
Do so—in any shape, a any hour, with any torture,
So it be the last."

Once more: Of that "demon thought" which pursued him thro' every lane of life, he wrote:

"Dost ask that thought? Nay, do not ask,
In pity from the search forbear;—
Forbear, nor venture to unmask
Man's heart, and view the hell that's there."

This is a common experience with the guilty, and many a conscience stricken soul has groaned inquiringly with our poet in his "Prayer of Nature:"

"Can guilt like mine be e'er forgiven?—
Can vice atone for crimes by prayer?"

In all this how perfectly human experience harmonizes with Bible truth!

But Scripture, again, represents the unregenerate man as, of himself, powerless to contend with his spiritual enemies—as taken captive by the devil—as the slave of sin, and increasing in wickedness. He adds sin to sin. His course is marked out in the first Psalm: he "walks in the counsel of the ungodly, stands in the way of sinners," and at last "sits down in the seat of the scorner." Let the history of great men, of all the men who have been ruined by vice, bound with the chains of habit, imprisoned by association, tell how correct is this representation. And let the confirmed transgressor compare his immoralities of to-day with the purity of his childhood, and mark the progress he has made in sin!

Again: The Bible teaches us that "the way of the transgressor is hard." And is it not so? Let any sinner read the 20th and 21st chapters of Job, and then read the book of his own life and see the harmony between the two. According to the word of God the wicked live in fear of death. And is not this true, also? A great purpose of redemption was, to "deliver them who, thro' fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage." To no one is the monarch of the grave clothed with such terrors as to the wicked. None so fear him. Thought of him, withers their every earthly joy! [See "Course of Time," book vii., near the close.] And at last, "the wicked is driven away in his wickedness," and dies without hope in his death.

Now, the Bible declares that in all this journey of the wicked, from the cradle to the grave, they have found no rest for their weary feet—no real happiness. And where in all the devious way was it to be found? In that night of moral darkness wherein they were born and had lived? In that enmity against God which rankled in the heart? In that conflict we saw raging between the flesh and the spirit? under the inflictions of a guilty conscience which chastised them as with a scourge of scorpions? In that fatal progress they were daily making in the downward road? When under the judgments of God they were "receiving in themselves that recompense of their errors which was meet?" When tortured by the fear of death, his gloomy terrors, dipped in sin, before them frowned? When shrieking in despair they gave up the ghost, and took a leap into the dark? Ah, no! There was no rest in all that weary road.

And finally: The Bible teaches us that with all this sad experience, wicked men, the majority of mankind, love sin more than they love life, and prefer its dark and deadly way to the peaceful, pleasant path of piety. And what need we say more? The comparison might be extended, but time fails us. We have been able only to suggest the train of thought. But enough has been indicated to show that the experience of the wicked in this life demonstrates the truth of the Bible; so much of it at least as applies to them. Let their experience challenge their faith in the whole Divine record: let them "do God's will," and they shall have still more ample experimental evidence that Christianity is from heaven, and not of men.

Methodist Quarterly Review

We had intended an earlier notice of the January number of this able Review. The Quarterly stands as a prince among the journals of our periodical literature. The general newspaper press aims to give the facts transpiring in the community, the church and the nation. The aim of the Review is to give the philosophy of these facts, to trace the progress of great principles, and the bearing which recorded facts have upon the general advance of society. Its contents should be carefully studied by all our ministers and leading laymen who would wish to understand the tendency of the events which, with such rapidity, press upon us. We, who live in this transition period, in the forming time of a new civilization, would but half discharge our obligations to society and to the church if we failed to keep pace with great movements. Our ministers especialy should be "men having understanding of the times," forecasting with a clear eye the future and sounding the proper rallying cry to the church. Society moves in masses, and no minister should consider himself well-furnished until he has carefully studied the tendencies of the times.

This important department of our church literature is in able hands. Dr. Whedon is a first-class thinker, profound, searching, accurate. His keen logical acumen, terse and vigorous style, and his familiar acquaintance with the learned discussions of this and other lands give special zest and add great value to the critical notices which form such an important part of a learned review.

The first article in the number before us is a review of "Hursts's history of Rationalism," from the polished pen of Dr. McClintock, one of the most finished of American scholars. It outlines the history of the great struggle between rationalism and Christianity, which is but "the conflict of the ages," in a revived form, between Christianity and the powers of darkness. The American church needs to be forewarned of danger from this source. Already the outcropping of this rationalistic theology is seen in some of the most popular literature of the day. Our civilization is indeed "undergoing a complete revolution" and if the true form of christian faith is to be maintained we must guard against the insinuating skepticism that seeks to undermine the ancient pillars of our faith.

This history of Rationalism says our reviewer, "gives a map of the field of free thought in the present age, showing where it trenches on the domain of faith, and where it reaches into the dark territory of unbelief." He states that the issue now at stake is over the person of Christ, and that "So long as the majestic figure of the perfect Man, the Son of God remains in its ineffable grandeur, at the head of the march of humanity, so long is christianity master of the intellect, as well as of the heart of the human race."

The second article traces the relation of Methodism to the great principles of our Republican government, and gives some stirring views of the responsibility and duties that now press upon our denomination

The articles entitled "Adam Clarke, as a Preacher" and "The New Testament Idea of the Pastoral Office" should be especially studied by all our younger ministers.

But to our mind the chief attraction of this review is its Synopsis of the other Quarterlies and its Quarterly Book Table. In this deparment Dr. Whedon shines pre-eminent. His sharp critical notices often contain nuggets of richest gold, real gems of solid, sparkling truth. Not unfrequently we find interspersed among these notices, the broadest views of the great questions of the day, and appeals to the highest motives that influence humanity. As a specimen, take his notice of "the Great Rebellion, by John Minor Botts," in which occurs the following striking views of the growing power of the West:

"This contest North and South is transient. The West, the mighty West comes bounding into exultant existance and boundless empire. She rises over our horizon like a young omnipotence. The thunder tones of freedom, the death knell of obsolete oligarchy, come rolling from her sky. She will soon obliterate, as with the swelling surge of an incoming ocean, all traces of the old antithesis between the North and South. But in principle she is intensely one with freedom and nationality; and north and west are rolling on the day when our South will be in spirit and in institutions completely one with both. The sectional spirit that creates caste, that abolishes the free common school, that suppresses free discussion, that excludes immigration, that despises industry and destroys prosperity and progress, must disappear. The broad sunny plains of the South must be filled with a free, educated, industrious, prosperous yeomanry, and freedom must inaugurate the era of a new and nobler South. Unless the southron is born with a twisted neck and a face reversed, and perpetually looking backward, let him promptly and forever renounce the dead, buried and putrid past and heroically cast forward his welcoming eyes toward the new and better age."

Send your subscriptions for the Quarterly to Carlton & Porter, 200 Mulberry st., New York.

Editorial Items.

Rev. Dr. Newman

will preach in the Hall of the House of Representatives to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Dedication.

The new church at Carrollton will be dedicated to-morrow, Sunday, Feb. 24, at three o'clock P. M. The friends of the enterprise are cordially invited to be present. Sermon by Rev. A. C. McDonald

Ristori.

We regret that M'me. Ristori has consented to appear on the stage on Sunday night. In so doing she has not only offended the Christian sentiment of our community, but has lessened the admiration of many, who hitherto have been loud in her praise. The Sabbath is God's Holy Day and should be so observed.

We are glad to learn by a note from Mr. Willson, Superintendent of the freedmen's schools at Columbus, Miss., that the citizens of that place (that is the better portion of them) have subscribed some $1,200, toward building a schoolhouse for the freedmen, in place of the one they burned up, which was worth $5,000. Mr. Willson assures us that many of the citizens really regret the burning of the house, and that the teachers have succeeded in renting a house for a dwelling. In every community there are those, doubtless, who regret these acts of violence, but they are in the minority, and powerless to stay the hands of the assassin and the incendiary.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs.—For churches and all public uses these Cabinet Organs are admirably adapted, having great power, and being furnished in plain cases at very moderate cost. But their widest use is in drawing rooms and private houses. Unlike the melodeons, they are adapted to secular as well as sacred music, for their action is so quick that the most rapid music can be performed upon them, while from their sustained tones they are capable of a variety of effects which cannot be obtained on any other single instrument. Most opera music, and music originally written for orchestral instruments, is better upon the Cabinet Organ than upon the piano-forte. A great advantage of these instruments is their quality of keeping in tune. One may be used for years without needing to be tuned. They are made exclusively by Mason & Hamlin, who are the inventors of several of the improvements from which they derive their fine qualities. Other reed organs are made, more or less resembling the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs, but there are important differences of construction which seem to give them acknowledged superiority. Nearly all the artists of note pronounce them superior to all others, the best instruments of their class in the world. The popularity which these instruments have acquired in fashionable circles has led to their manufacture in very elegant cases, and we have not seen more attractive pieces of furniture than are some of them.—New York Day Book.

Mississippi Items.

The civil authorities of Yazoo City, Miss., are enforcing the laws passed by the legislature of the State in 1865, and afterwards set aside by military authority, prohibiting negroes from buying, leasing or renting real estate, and requiring every negro and mulatto to be under contract to work for some white person by the year, and to have a license from the Mayor to remain in the city. The freedmen are being much annoyed and oppressed by the Mayor and Sheriff. They arrest and fine them, and put them in jail without any just cause. The officers admit that many of those they arrest are industrious, orderly people who take good care of themselves.

The principal reason of this seems to be that the dilapidated chivalry are short of funds and are trying to raise a little whiskey money by extorting it from the freedmen under these infamous laws.

Joseph Davis, brother of Jeff., has sold his plantation on the Mississippi river, to one of his former slaves for the sum of three hundred thousand dollars. Poor negroes! how unfortunate they are to have no master to take care of them!

D.

Local and Southern News.

Legislature.

GOVERNOR'S VETO.

State of Louisiana,
Executive Department,
New Orleans, Feb. 18, 1867.

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my signature, "an act to take the sense of the people on the expediency of calling a convention to form a Constitution and to provide for the election of delegates, and for the holding of the convention."

If the general object of the bill received my sanction, I could not, consistently with regard to a sense of my constitutional duty and respect for the prerogatives of the office I hold, give it my approval. First, because I believe the bill in its title and substance is in violation of Article No. 118 of the Constitution of the State, which provides that "every law enacted by the legislature shall embrace but one object, and that shall be expressed in the title." I regard the sense of the people on calling a convention, and voting for delegates, as distinct and separate objects. Secondly, the bill ignores the governor in the issuing the usual writs of election, and to that extent is an invasion of his constitutional rights, which make it his duty to see that the laws are faithfully executed. I must further construe this feature of the bill as intentional under the belief that I would refuse to obey the law, an imputation I am not willing by any act of mine, to countenance or admit. These objections are regarded by me as justifying the withholding of my approval of the bill, and I, therefore, refrain from entering into a discussion of the question as to the expediency of the measure. I concede in the fullest sense the right of the people to alter the laws or amend the Constitution, provided they are loyal and true to the Government of the United States.

I am justified in believing, from events transpiring in Congress, that a Convention of the people, as provided for in the bill under consideration, would not be permitted or recognized. Whether in view of this almost certain and fixed fact it is expedient or politic to persist in the enactment of a law that cannot be executed, is a question I leave to the consideration of the legislature. I will only further say, if the bill is submitted to me, on its merits, as regards expediency, free from all objections in its phraseology, I will be prspared to meet the issue.

(Signed) J. Madison Wells,
Governor of Louisiana.

CONGRESS DENOUNCED.

Mr. Palfrey offered the following preamble and resolutions relative to the proceedings of the Congress of the United States:

Preamble and Joint Resolutions in relation to the proceedings of the Congress of the United States.

Whereas, On the second day of April, A. D. 1866, the President of the United States did issue his proclamation making known that the late civil war had ceased, that peace was re-established within the borders of the said United States, and that the States in which the laws of the United States "had been opposed and their execution obstructed," retained their integrity of dominion as before the war, which dominion consisted in their participation in the sovereignty of the Federal government, and the establishment and operation of their own State governments, as the same existed before the war, in all the departments thereof; and

Whereas, One department of the said Federal government consists of a Congress, which should be composed of members elected under the Constitution of the United States from each and every State in the Union; and

Whereas, Notwithstanding the said proclamation and the entire cessation of the said war, and the return of the people of the said States to a condition of allegiance and submission to the government of the United States, and notwithstanding the said States are carrying on their several State governments in good faith and fidelity, in entire loyalty to the Federal government, and with patriotic regard for the prosperity and renown of the entire nation, yet the said Congress of the United States having, since the date of said proclamation, pertinaciously refused admittance to the halls of the Congress of United States [by arbitrary rules and regulations of their own, adopted by a factious majority,] to members of said Congress constitutionally elected as they themselves were, to that body from the following named States, viz: Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas, Florida and Louisiana, without show of right, or legal or constitutional capacity, thereby effecting a usurpation of power, without precedent in the annals of civilized nations governed on republican and constitutional principles, and revolutionary in its character; therefore,

1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened. That the said so-called Congress of the United States is not a constitutional body, inasmuch as it is not composed of representatives and senators from the several States as required by the Constitution and laws of the United States, and consequently all acts emanating from said Congress of the United States which affect the status or integrity of the States unrepresented, since the date of said proclamation, are usurpations of power, and are null and void.

2. Be it further resolved, etc., That copies of this preamble and resolutions be forwarded to the governors of the several States of the Union, to be laid before their several State legislatures

3. Be it further resolved, etc., That a joint special committee of both houses of this General Assembly be appointed, to consist of —— members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives to agree upon a remonstrance on the part of the General Assembly of this State, to the people of all the States of the Union, setting forth the injustice and unconstitutionality of these enormous usurpations, and urging the people of all the States, and more particularly the constituents of the members of the said Congress as at present constituted, to adopt some mode for producing a cessation of the usurpations herein complained of.

4. Be it further resolved, etc, That a new national flag be procured, to be displayed over the halls of this General Assembly, "with not a stripe erased or polluted, or a single star obscured," to be paid for out of the contingent funds of the General Assembly.

The above was unanimously referred to the Committee on Federal Relations.

The Kentucky House of Representatives has passed a bill to set apart the taxes collected from the colored people for the support of separate schools for that race, and for the relief of paupers.

A marble bust of Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated with impressivee ceremonies at the Academy of Music in Louisville, Ky., on the 12th. Governor Bramlette presided, and ex-Attorney General Speed delivered the oration, being followed in short addresses by Generals Thomas and Davis.

Ladies' Department.

The Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER VI.

With what sisterly pride and admiration did I gaze on Addison as he came in one morning attired a la militaire. He was really Captain in the State Militia, and dressed for "General Training." His uniform was so becoming his tall and dignified figure—I thought him not only noble, as he really was—but quite majestic. Fisk was sergeant, which was an honor for one so young, but his trappings were far less brilliant than Addison's. This was a high day throughout all the surrounding country, for old and young, high and low, turned out "to see General Training;" but our discreet parents believed it to be no place for young girls, and so we never saw Addison or Fisk upon the field of glory. Dear Fisk made many mortal enemies at court martial—faithful in the discharge of his duty, it was beneath him to spare any man who in peace refused to prepare for war by soldiery drill. I saw one man cry like a big baby when he said to brother, "How could you return me court-martial?" He may have died of grief long ago; if not, I presume he was one of the champions of Bull Run in '61

Wilberforce married Mary, sister to Miriam's husband, who lived at the west, and when she first came to visit us, I could not think she was nearly as handsome as our brother; but she was so good, we looked into her heart and saw the beauty there, which our Mother taught us was more to be prized than outward charms.

Addison married the daughter of a wealthy farmer, living in an adjoining neighborhood. She belonged to the same church we did; I had seen her there every Sabbath, richly dressed, but I never dreamed of her becoming my sister; yet it was evident Addison had more than dreamed. Our Father married them one evening at the bride's home, and the next day the bridegroom's wedding was to be celebrated at our house. We little girls were considered too young to attend the evening wedding, but it was a great event to be dressed in our best and to enjoy this occasion. Our long table was made still longer by the addition of another table, and ornamented with a set of new dishes loaded with wedding cake. Several of our good neighbors were invited to meet the newly married couple, and the young people, who were coming after the ride. In those days, dear Minnie, you know it was a custom to invite the bride's young lady friends and their beaux to take a ride from the bride's to the groom's house, and there enjoy what was known as the second day wedding. These processions were recognized, when seen approaching, by the single carriages containing each but one gentleman and lady, and the full speed of the gay horses, so unlike the measured tread of those in funeral processions. The company was to be at our house at precisely three o'clock, but it was now nearly dark and our little eyes were growing dim looking out at the open gateway. At length the joyful note sounded out, "They are coming!" but when they drove up to the door, instead of the joyousness I had anticipated seeing, every countenance wore a shade of sadness. Two or three of the gentlemen sprang from their seats to assist Addison in helping our new sister from the carriage, and the ladies followed her quickly to her room. It was soon discovered that an accident had occurred, and my little ears were all attention to know the true version of the sad event. That they might enjoy a longer ride the party had decided, with the groom, to prove the old adage "the longest way round is the shortest way home." The bride and groom led the way in the first carriage, when suddenly they came in close proximity to the steam cars. Addison's horse was young and gay, and not having a very good reputation in the presence of the iron horse, at this time, quick as thought he whirled, upsetting the happy pair in the mud. They were soon gathered up, not much injured, but greatly to their mortification, for it marred the pleasure of the young people. Our Father and Mother and the good neighbors agreed that it was a great mercy that they were not killed, thanking God that it was no worse. Such is life, that even the most joyous events often become darkened by clouds.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

It was a fearfully dark night when I rode for the first time nearly five miles to visit Addison in his new home. The next morning, which was the Sabbath, shone out in all the beauty of a glorious May day. I did not go to church, but remained to keep company for sister Anna, who was not able to go. During the morning her elder sister came, and as their conversation did not exactly belong to a little girl not a dozen years old, I became restless. Dear Anna noticed this and asked if I would like to take a walk, and said, "If you desire, you can go a little way into the woods just in the rear of the house." This was a charming idea, and away I glided quick as thought. I had not advanced far in the open field when little voices I had often heard before when tempted to do wrong, whispered to my heart. I quickly silenced them by saying to myself, "Sister said I might go, and of course she knows what is right." I soon reached the woods, which appeared like a magnificent grove, so level and so unlike the hilly woodlands on our farms. The green meadow extended far into among the trees like a soft carpet. There were half trodden paths, I discovered, striking out in several directions; following one of these, I soon found myself in the dense forest—the grand old trees seemed like magestic giants looking up to heaven, and stretching out their arms to God in adoration—while the birds had selected this sublime temple as their orchestra, and were warbling their ravishing notes on my ear. The glorious sunlight streamed down in irregular lines of light, tinging every leaf with gold and silver, and adding new lustre to every floweret opening its petals to inhale his genial warmth. My whole soul so reveled in this elysium that I lost all idea of time or distance. I gathered the spring beauties and young wintergreens till I could no longer hold them in my hands, then taking up the folds of my dress I commenced to place them there in abundance, and still enchantment led me on. In stepping out of the pathway to pluck a little flower that peeped its bright eye at me from among the bushes, I discovered a little bird's nest with four dear eggs in it. I tried to convince my mind that the mother bird had forsaken them, and thus I could take it and place it in my dress among the flowers. I did so, but at this time I hushed the sweet voices much easier than when they whispered after leaving the house that it was Sabbath. As I advanced I found other nests filled with eggs, and now I reached out my hand in wholesale theft, and did not even hear the sweet voice whisper "thou shalt not steal." But the music of the warbling hosts seemed hushed, and the countless leaves hung like mourning drapery; even the hum of the insects had died on my ear, and no gentle voices whispering in the inner temple of my soul, telling me to look from Nature up to Nature's God. An awful silence reigned around me, and I stood in this universe of trees alone; even God appeared to have forsaken me. Like one in despair I cried out, "I am lost!" I looked on either side, then before and behind, but could not tell which way I came. I wandered, it seemed to me, for hours, and just as I was ready to sink down exhausted, I came to a place that looked familiar, when, lo! I had come back to the very place where I first knew I was lost; a poor little bird fluttered around me songless, but reminding me that I had something belonging to it. I opened the folds of my dress which I had held with a death-like grasp, and the little eggs in the nests were like so many eyes staring into mine; the flowers, so fresh and gay wher I gathered them, bowed their heads in shame as they looked at me. I took the nest of eggs carefully, and tried again to place them in the shrubbery where the old bird could find them; some of them were broken, and the others left on the cold ground. I could no longer carry them, for far too heavy were their weight for me. I then fell on my knees and prayed to God to forgive me, and promised if he would lead me out of the woods safely I would never break his commandments again. After a little, a gentle, yet unseen hand seemed laid in mine, and I arose and started in the way I imagined would lead me out. After wandering long I saw an opening, and my heart leaped for joy as I thanked God. On reaching the open field, it was rough and uncultivated—not like the soft green meadow I had passed on entering the woods; again despair seized me for it might be miles from brothers. In the distance I saw a house and resolved to reach it. Onward I rushed, running over the newly ploughed ground until my shoes became so clogged I was obliged to take them off and go in my stockings. I leaped over the fences for I was as wild as a deer, and ere I was aware I was in a field among cattle that stared at me so maliciously that I ran and cried pitiously; again I begged God to direct and save me, and once more the gentle hand seemed in mine as I pressed on. Before reaching the house I met a young man, and running up to him I said, "I have been lost in the woods. Can you tell me where my brother lives?" He looked at me with an air of pity and said, "why, little girl, what is your brother's name?" I stood a moment for I had almost forgotten it, for had not an age elapsed, and had I not grown old since I had pronounced his name? I told him, and he said, "it is away off yonder, two or three miles; you can just see it in the distance." I looked eagerly, but doubted, saying, "his house is painted red;" "but those you see are only the barns and out-buildings." I thanked him as he stood there like a statue, while my little heart throbbed double quick time. I was not long in jumping the fences and bounding over the fields towards the cluster of buildings I had seen in the distance—fearing after all they might not be brother's. Before reaching them I saw two ladies approaching; I imagined they beckoned to me, still I thought them strangers. I flew, however, toward them like a wild girl who had lived, at least, a brief lifetime in the woods—Judge of my joy and surprise Minnie, to find dear Anna and her sister, who thought I stayed too long and thus walked out to meet me. They laughed when they saw my muddy shoes in my hands, and opening the folds of my dress to find the crushed flowers and wilted wintergreens, I had retained to give them. I could hardly take another step but wept like an infant in its mother's arms. Only saying, I have been lost and will never ramble in the woods again on Sunday, nor will I ever rob the sweet bird's nest again.

Evangeline.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

Friendship.

You and I, dear reader, may be expecting to meet some one in a few days, who, though a stranger to our sight, is yet familiar to our thoughts. She may be the intimate acquaintance of one dear to us, and we have often heard of her cultivated mind, quick sympathies, and our eyes have dwelt on the clear, beautiful words penned by her hand. Anxiously we look for the day that brings us the meeting, for have we not heard only good spoken of her always? Her heart will be the fountain of gentleness in which our soul will find repose and strength; her true instincts will be like waves of joy passing o'er our soul.

The day comes, and we meet a graceful lady whose countenance wears the refinement of culture; we see immediately that everything about her is exquisite—her dress soft and elegant—all her ornaments rare and artistically arranged; and the outward adorning adds a charm to her sweet voice and the words of welcome. As the conversation continues, we become more convinced that at last we have found the perfect friend for whom we have been seeking; until suddenly some word is spoken that causes our pleasant aircastle to vanish. She gives expression to a prejudice or stubborn ignorance—pardonable faults in an acquaintance, but impassable barriers to all—demanding friendship.

How many of us have like failures to record. We approach a desired acquaintance with trembling. We long to give him or her our admiration, but the fear that we will again be mistaken draws us away. I have known persons whom I regarded as almost saints, the beauty of whose character caused many an exultant thrill, and yet those persons I would not seek. Let me keep in thought the ideal picture of loveliness for which they sat, unsullied by temper or failings.

If there are those whom we wish always to love and reverence; let us hold them charily, as many do sacred relics, only to be seen and worshipped with clean hands and pure heart. Let us struggle in secret with the ugly demons of anger and selfishness and appear before our friends in the mildness of principle. In this way we will call up in their hearts gentleness and confidence, and our communion rare must it be—partaking of the love which chargeth never.

*

Intelligence from our Mission Rooms.

Revivals and Collections.—A pastor in the East Genessee Conference, who writes to us for more Missionary Advocates, says: "Our missionary collection yesterday was a success; compared with last year will be about as 4 to 1. This increase is largely owing to the glorious revival with which the charge has been favored during the last three months."

The Junior Division.—We really cannot afford to have this department of the grand missionary army diverted from its course as appointed and prescribed in the Discipline of the Church. We had the pleasure to witness the movements of the juveniles of the Seventh Avenue or Central Methodist Episcopal Church on Sabbath, Jan. 27. Under the inspiration of their pastor, Dr. Hare, Rev. H. B. Ridgaway and Gen. Clinton B Fisk, who severally addressed them, they offered willingly thirty per cent. more than was given last year.

The Subject Well Put.—Rev. Dr. Nesbitt, of the Pittsburgh Advocate, has some of the best put paragraphs for the missionary cause which have fallen under our observation for some time. They are like a charm.

But our centenary offerings were special offerings. They will have been laid on the altar to very little purpose if they are given at the expense of other objects. They will not rise as grateful incense to the Deity if we have withheld in any other directions. O, brethren in the ministry, we must not allow our missionary collections to fall off. It is true we have had much to say concerning the duty of giving these last twelve months, and we would love to sound other notes, and many of our people will plead for rest. But the gospel must not be hindered. The missionaries must not be called home. The work of the Lord must not stop Let us lead our people once more. They will follow us. Everywhere let the resolve be to increase a little—at least a little over last year. The people can stand it. Much as they have given, they have not given more than they have received. God gave them all they have. When He converted them they gave it all back to him. Let us remind them of this. Every one that is still converted will acknowledge the covenant, will respond to our solicitation in our Master's name, there will be meat in the house of the Lord, the angel flying through the heavens having the everlasting gospel to preach to the dwellers on the earth will continue his flight of mercy, and the world receive another impulse toward the hour when

> Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
> Does his successive journeys run—
> His kingdom spread from shore to shore,
> Till moons shall wax and wane no more.

Law Point.—It sometimes occurs that those who have the distribution of missionary money appropriated to conferences have not a proper understanding of the mode of doing it. Hence, we find a decision of the bishop, in one of the conferences, the following language: "I. The missionary appropriations are made to the charges respectively, to aid them in supporting their preachers, and not to particular preachers. II. The appropriations are due to the charges at the maturity of the drafts, but the usage is general, perhaps quite universal, for the presiding elder to pay in the appropriations at the quarterly meetings."

The Missionary Treasury.—Dr. Cobleigh, of Zion's Herald, is a faithful sentinel in the missionary cause. Looking out upon the current of trade, the rapidly-shifting winds of the times, and the instability of all earthly things, he takes occasion to utter the following words:

In this state of things, and in view of the possible contingencies of the year before us, we desire to have our readers see two points very clearly, and to feel their importance very forcibly: First, that no individual member or society in our Church should contribute for the Missionary cause less this year than last; and secondly, that every one should try to make, at least a slight advance upon his last year's contribution. Striving earnestly to reach one or both of these objective points, by the pastors and people, will, in our judgment, be the only safe line of policy to be pursued. The missionary cause must not be allowed to abate its earnestness, or slacken its efforts, for the want of funds.—What we write now is not in fear caused by any present embarrassment: but in the spirit of a prudent forecasting and caution that there may come no embarrassments with coming events.

Some of our readers may be thinking that, in view of their large centenary subscriptions, they will be justified in giving less to the missionary cause than they did last year. This is precisely what some feared and predicted, but what we hope will not be allowed to come to pass.

Smithfield-street, Pittsburgh Conference.—This charge was among the first west of the mountains, if not the first, to make her missionary offerings for this year, and true to herself and the demands of the cause, has so advanced that, if every other congregation will follow, the one million and thirty thousand called for will be forthcoming.

Notes Suggestive.—We have before us communications from the Illinois Conference, showing that they had in 1865-6 ten domestic missions within their boundaries, three of which returned to the treasury more money from their missionary collections than had been appropriated for their own support. Three of the ten missions have become self-supporting. Two of the ten missions made no returns of mission money—some mistake somewhere in their cases. The conference adopted the following resolutions:

1. That while we have increasing faith in the missionary cause, we will strive to advance our collections for the ensuing year to an average of one dollar per member.

2. That we will endeavor to infuse additional missionary life and strength into all our Sunday-schools.

3. That we do most heartily indorse the efforts of our bishops and ministers that are now being made in the Southern States, and will devoutly pray for their ultimate success.

4. That the first quarter of 1867 be set apart as the time when we will take up our missionary collections and subscriptions in our respective charges.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR,

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in cold water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

To planters and other persons Employing Freedmen.—Headquarters, Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen and Abandoned Lands, State of Louisiana—New Orleans, La., Jan. 12, 1867.—To correct a false impression which seems to exist as to the matter of obtaining transportation for freedmen, when it is desired to procure labor from other States, under the provisions of a late order of Gen. Howard, Commissioner, etc., Washington, D. C. the public interested are hereby notified that any party can make the necessary application in person, and by complying with the regulations governing the subject, can secure for themselves all the priviliges granted in the order alluded to. No person or persons have any appointment which gives them the sole right to transact this business in this state.

By order of

Bt. Maj. Gen'l J. A. MOWER, U. S. A.,
Assistant commissioner, etc
WM. H. STERLING,
Captain 1st. U. S. infantry,
A. A. A. General.

Ja15 3t

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist.

Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives of great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 596 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STR'T.

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B.T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

---

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says; "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I. Adveriser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights - Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,
Gen'l Agent for United States,
r10-1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine al Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark- & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists m12-3 m

---

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytan's Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Lousiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALS

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

---

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other muscal instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior

PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the surervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co.... Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.
J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montonr Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,
MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.
Street Rails,
STRAP RAILS.
OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,
ROLLS,
ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY
Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS
Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,
HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison — "I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL

FREEDMEN'S SAVING

AND

TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM'L L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,
THOS. J. DURANT.

THE BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS OF DENmark and the young Czarewitch of Russia; Eminent American Divines, including the Reverend Doctors Stevens, Thompson, Durbin, McClintock, Morris, Janes, Simpson, Whedon, Ames, Nast, Elliott, and Haven; also, Hon. J. M. Howard, Capt. E. B. Ward, and Keri-Keri, an Australian Cannibal; "Your Likeness," by Rev. Dr. Weston; Self-Government: Pope's Essay on Man, etc., in February number Phrenological Journal. Only 20 cents, or $2 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. H. MONTIEU, Secretary

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation.)

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and

WILL PAY $1,000

to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of
CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY
—AND—
DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs.

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or Webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the de, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitters is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum or Whisky, and cannot make Drunkards, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous System. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,
W. S. SEIGFRIED,
No. 254 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptis Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMTH,
966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,
J. H. KENNARD,
Eighth, below Coates street,
Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berns county, Pa, was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D, Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle; Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

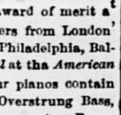
These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.



No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

JONES & EVANS,
(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)
Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States ma10 ow

---

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 1-1y

---

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES, plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops. Prices $75, $90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan29

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 327 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good references; none others need apply Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton Seed and "Sa" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Line Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute.

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, is an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city ☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten." [feb3]

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music, Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1y

---

VICK'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

OF

HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost of postage prepaid to all. All l

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No. 9. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, MARCH 2, 1867. Whole No.—59.

Poetry.

SLACK A LITTLE.

Slack a little! Slack a little,
Darling wife;
Why such breathless haste and hurry
All thy life?
Slack the vigor of thy striving,
Ere too late.
Tell those monsters, care and labor,
Just to wait.

Slack a little! Slack a little,
Busy hand!
Slack thy rubbing and thy scrubbing,
Drop the sand!
Minister thy blessings slowly,
And the longer;
Bind love's thousand precious tendrils
All the stronger.

Slack a little! Slack a little,
Weary feet!
'Tis a thorny road ye're treading
Death to greet.
Slack your quick and fearless stepping,
Spare your strength!
Ye the golden streets of Heaven
Shall tread at length!

Slack a little! Slack a little,
Precious heart!
Slack the fervor of thy throbbing,
Ere we part.
Thrill not thus with every sorrow,
Anxious ever;
Trembling like an Angel Lyre
Forever.
Strung for high and holy themes,
Slack thy sorrow,
Heaven those rapturous themes may wake
Perhaps to-morrow.

Slack a little! Time, how fleeting,
Slack thy wing!
To my heart's long cherished treasure
Let me cling!
Go to mirth and from his chalice
Take the pleasure;
Pilfer wealth, and from his palace
Take his treasure;
Why such haste my night to bring?
Slack, O Time, thy scythe and wing!

Slack a little! Slack a little,
Death, O Death!
Vain thy strife and panting haste,
All out of breath!
See! she fears not thy approaching—
Thou hast no sting!
Clasp her in thy cold embracing
She will sing!
Slack, O Death! how sure thy loss,
Thou wast conquered on the Cross!

Harper's Magazine.

Gems.

"To one who ever felt the sting
Of sorrow, sorrow is a sacred thing."

"No wounds like those a wounded spirit feels,
No cure for such; 'til God who makes them heals.

"And thou sad sufferer, under nameless ill,
That yields not to the touch of human skill,
Improve the kind occasion—understand
A Father's frown, and kiss the chastening hand!

"There are two considerations upon which my faith in Christ is built as upon a rock: 1st. The fall of man, the redemption of man, the resurrection of man, the three cardinal articles of our religion, are such as human ingenuity could never have invented, therefore they must be Divine. 2d. If the prophecies have been fulfilled, (of which there is abundant demonstration,) the Scripture must be the word of God; and if the Scripture is the Word of God, Christianity must be true."

Dr. Young.

"He that slanders me, paints me blacker than I am, and he that flatters me, whiter. They both daub me, and when I look in the glass of conscience, I see myself disguised by both.

"Life is but the parenthesis (—) of eternity."

Sir Wm. Temple.

"Had we eyes sharp enough, we should see the arrows of Death flying in all directions, and account it a wonder that we and our friends escape them but a single day."

Cowper.

Remarkable Religious Movement in Shantung Province.

Foo Chow, Nov., 1866.

A communication with the above caption has just appeared in the China Mail, Hong Kong. It is from the pen of Rev. J. Doolittle, of the North China Mission, and, therefore, reliable. As your readers may not otherwise see a narrative whose facts seem so strange, yet blessed here, I cheerfully communicate it through your columns. I must condense somewhat, but will be faithful in every essential particular.

About last February an aged stranger was seen in one of the streets of Tientsin (where Mr. Doolittle resides) inquiring where he could get information about the Roman Catholic religion. Some one directed him to the Protestant Chapel of the English Methodist (new connection) Mission. He eagerly sought the place, and found the native assistant preaching from the Beatitudes on the "blessedness of the pure in heart." He manifested great joy on hearing the discourse, and subsequently made the following statements:

He lived in Loh-Ting, distant from Tientsin about 450 li (over 100 English miles) and about 7 or 8 only from the south border of Chili province. His age was 68 years. Some months previous he was sick, and believed himself near death. He felt that he was a very great sinner, and unprepared. His mind was deeply depressed, and he could find no rest nor satisfaction. One night he dreamed that he was conducted by a superior being, to the gate of a magnificent palace. He had never seen anything so grand and beautiful. Looking in, he saw that it was filled with splendor, and inhabited by many happy beings like his conductor. On attempting to enter, he was told that such as he were not admitted. No unclean or vile person was allowed within. And then the great difference between himself and these happy ones was pointed out to him. He was assured, however, that he was not to die for some time, and that, if he became pure, after death he could enter the palace and join in its pursuits. He awoke astonished, but could not comprehend the dream. Full of longing to understand it, he slept again, and dreamed substantially the same dream. In the morning he told it to his friends, but no one could give a satisfactory explanation. He recovered from his illness, but his distress of mind increased in view of the vision. At length it occurred to him that there were some native Roman Catholics in his neighborhood. He went to them and described his feelings and his dream, but they were utterly unable to answer his inquiries. They directed him, however, to go to Tientsin, and seek instructions from Roman Catholics there. He started without delay, and, on reaching the city, was directed to the Protestant chapel above referred to.

His story and evident sincerity excited much interest at the time. For several weeks he attended the chapel services, read Christian books, and learned all he could about the new doctrine, which he embraced joyfully. Finally, he returned to his distant home, carrying with him the precious books.

After several weeks had elapsed, he appeared again at Tientsin, with a letter signed by a number of his neighbors, who had become deeply interested in the statement of his experience at that city, and in the truths of the books. The letter requested that a native Christian might be sent to Loh-Ting to explain them more fully. It also stated that the interest was widening, and that many desired instruction.

In accordance with this request, the Methodist Mission sent back with the old gentleman a supply of books and a native assistant. The latter was absent about a month, and on his return gave wonderful accounts of the serious attachment of a comparatively large number of the people to the Gospel. Soon afterwards, two colporteurs were sent to Loh-Ting, who spent a month there. On their return they confirmed the previous accounts, and bore an invitation for a foreign missionary to go and administer baptism to those who should be judged suitable candidates. But as one of the two members of the mission was then absent at Shanghai, and the other could not be spared from his post, a native preacher and his wife were sent instead of the foreign missionary.

On the 4th of September, one of the missionaries started for the place, and in nine or ten days sent back intelligence of a deeply interesting nature, more than confirming the statements made by the natives. The other missionary then went to Loh-Ting and assisted his associate in the work of examination and baptism. They both returned on the 29th of September, and made known the following interesting facts:—After careful and prayerful examination, they baptized 45 persons, of whom 18 are women and 27 are men. There are several tens more, a good portion of whom are females, who desire baptism. The village of Loh-Ting district, where the chief interest centres, bears the name of the family clan, of which the old gentleman above mentioned is the head. It is a small village, surrounded by similar ones, only a few li apart. The interest extends in all directions. Some come on Saturday afternoon from 20 to 40 li and more, bringing food and bedding, so as to attend the Sabbath services, returning Sabbath afternoon after the second service. One old man aged 72, living 45 li distant, was heard to say that, if the foreign teachers could afford to come 450 li, he could come 45, and so he walks that distance Saturday afternoon to hear the Gospel.

The native helper, before the missionaries arrived, remarked publicly, one Sabbath, on the duty of destroying their idols and instruments of superstition. On the following day, 17 families brought their images, pictures, etc., and burned them in the helper's presence.

The Sabbath is strictly observed in some things. The Christians, of their own accord, have made a rule that, during the intermission of the services while preparing and eating their meals, no secular topics of conversation shall be introduced, as those relating to their farming and gathering the crops. As those attending the meetings are farmers or laborers on farms, it is manifest that the rule is a practical one, and evidences their earnestness and sincerity.

Those living in the village go to their farm-work early in the morning. Returning for breakfast about 9 o'clock, they meet in the chapel for worship about half an hour, and then go again to their work. In the evening, after supper, they assemble again for worship.

The women are not so reserved as respectable Chinese females usually are, often meeting in the same building with the men, and manifesting a desire to hear the word for themselves. The wife of the native helper has a good influence among them, and sometimes twenty or thirty of them bring their needle-work, etc., to her house, and sit and work while she reads and explains the Bible. Some of them, too, can read.

These Christians are said to pray with fervency and propriety, and to sing hymns, if not according to rules of music, yet with animation, with the Spirit, if not with the understanding. They have, what cannot be said generally of native Christians, an affecting and profound sense of their personal sinfulness and unworthiness. They manifest an ardent desire for the conversion of their families and neighbors, of which their prayers, as well as their daily conduct, give abundant evidence.

Our missionary brother, in conclusion, speaks of the above movement as "unprecedented," so far as China is concerned, and requests the reader to "remember that the work was commenced and carried on, till less than one month ago, without the presence of a foreign missionary, and that previous to last spring no one in Loh-Ting knew anything about the Bible or its doctrines as explained by Protestant Missionaries." The future, he says, will tell more perfectly than we now know, the real nature and extent of the work. It appears to be an extensive and genuine turning from idolatry to the worship of the true God.

I beg that your readers will ponder carefully the deep significance of this movement. Look at the wonderful providences and the means, then at the glorious results and the precious promise for the future. Surely, God is with us, and China's redemption seems near at hand. Dear brethren in the ministry, and all who love Christ and the souls for whom he died, take this account to your monthly concerts and family altars, to the secret place, too, and pray over it. Men are needed simply to guide such movements and other more ordinary operations. Who will come in the love of Jesus, and lend a helping hand in this grand work of China's regeneration?

As ever, yours truly,

C. C. Baldwin.

A Night in the Senate.

The important debate upon the bill to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States attracted crowds to the Senate chamber last week. The climax of the debate as well as of the public interest in it culminated on Saturday evening. It was understood that the Republican members of the Senate would refuse to adjourn until they reached a vote upon the bill. In the early part of the evening the Senate galleries were well filled, and the large audience remained intact until a very late hour. After midnight, however, a large number retired, but even then, and until the adjournment of the Senate on Sunday morning, a respectable audience remained. The interest and the curiosity of the auditors seemed to be aroused soon after midnight, and became more intensified every hour until the morning. There was a disposition upon the part of the Democratic members of the Senate to fillibuster by calling for the yeas and nays upon every motion, and to speak against time with a view to delay a final vote. One by one the Democrats gained the floor and discussed the entire question of reconstruction, many of them commencing with the period of the rebellion itself and ending with the future glory of the Republic which shall be revealed when "my policy" becomes popular and the Democratic party obtains the reins of power. The leader on the Democratic side of the House, the Hon. Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland, retired rather early, and the honors of opposing the substitute for Mr. Stevens' bill proposed by Senator Sherman were equally divided between Senators Hendricks, Doolittle, Cowan, Davis, Buckalew, McDougall, Saulsbury and Norton. Some of these gentlemen contented themselves with a single speech of moderate length, while others repeated themselves several times. It seemed to be understood among the opposition that each member should speak as long as possible, and tell the country all he knew upon this important question, and that they should relieve each other by turns. Mr. Saulsbury led off and was followed by Mr. Davis. Mr. Cowan and Mr. Buckalew next gave their views. At two o'clock on Sunday morning, Mr. Saulsbury again obtained the floor and made an able plea for the sanctity of the Sabbath, concluding with a motion to adjourn; but the implacable Radicals, recognizing the fact that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath, and that they were entrusted with the accomplishment of a work of paramount importance, refused to adjourn without a vote upon the bill. The Democrats, doubtless foreseeing the ultimate result, determined to sell the victory as dearly as possible, and seemed to take delight in keeping the Republicans out of their beds. When the result of the motion to adjourn became known, Mr. Hendricks immediately took the floor, and the Republicans seemed as patient as ever. The people in the galleries began to give signs of fatigue, and not a few of them fixed themselves in comfortable positions for sleeping, like persons in a railroad car who were starting on a long journey. They seemed to feel that, notwithstanding the gloomy predictions of Mr. Hendricks should the bill become a law, the country was, for the present, at least, comparatively safe—safe enough to warrant them in indulging in a little sleep. When Mr. Hendricks became exhausted, Mr. Buckalew came to the rescue, rushing into the breach with an ardor worthy of a better cause. So much inspired was he with the importance of the occasion that, contrary to his usual custom, he spoke entirely extempore. After him came Mr. Cowan, who talked for an hour and more to the indifferent Republican Senators and the listless sleepers in the galleries. Before he had concluded it was observed that Garret Davis was preparing to follow. He was turning over some manuscript upon his desk, and eagerly searching into some authorities. When he obtained the floor the drowsy people in the galleries yawned more incessantly, and those of them who were yet awake prepared to follow the example of their more philosophic neighbors, who were already asleep. A few Senators laid themselves down upon the sofas in order to obtain a few moments of repose. Even the gentleman who occupy the reporters gallery seemed to have abandoned hope, and set about the work of making themselves comfortable for the remainder of the night. Mr. Davis was followed by Mr. McDougall, and so on till the end of the programme. The Republican column was unbroken; its members stood as firm as a rock, but there was no speaking among them. At last, tired out and seeing opposition useless, the Democrats ceased to speak, and at half-past six o'clock the vote was taken, to the satisfaction of all concerned.

—Philadelphia Press.

Temperance Meeting at the Capitol Last Night.

The National Temperance Society, composed of members of both branches of Congress, held a meeting at the Capitol last night. The hall of the House of Representatives was crowded until there was not room enough left for standing, and the galleries were packed almost to suffocation. Hon. Henry Wilson, Senator from Massachusetts, presided, who, on taking the chair, addressed the meeting in a strong and powerful appeal for the cause of temperance, after which Hon. Hiram Price, of Iowa, presented the claims of the cause in an able and argumentative speech of some fifteen or twenty minutes.

At the conclusion of Mr. Price's remarks Senator Wilson introduced Hon. Samuel McKee, of Kentucky, who so gallantly fought against treason and rebellion during the war, and who has now enlisted to fight against the foul demon, alcohol. Colonel McKee said he had never made use of ardent spirits as a beverage, and deprecated the use of the article all his life. Although he had never been a candidate for the suffrages of the people for any office until he made the canvass of his district for Congress, where no man had ever before been elected without the use of liquor with which to make friends by treating, he succeeded in his canvass after a positive refusal to take part in the spread of whiskey to secure votes. His only platform was truth, justice, and the right.

Hon Richard Yates, Senator from Illinois, was next introduced, and was received by the audience with the most rapturous applause. He said that he had but just embarked in the cause of temperance, and gave an account of his signing the pledge. Having signed it after carefully reading the same, he rose from the place where he had been sitting in his own private room, promised his God and himself that he would keep it, and felt that he was free. His speech was exceedingly interesting, and abounded in many pleasant and humorous thoughts which he connected with his former use of liquor. At the close of his speech he was presented with a very beautiful basket of flowers, after which he retired from the stand amid general applause.

Hon. F. E. Woodbrige, of Vermont; Hon. William E. Dodge, of New York; Speaker Colfax, the veteran champion of the cause of temperance; Hon. Josiah B. Grinnell, of Iowa, and Hon. J. W. Patterson, of New Hampshire, each addressed the meeting in speeches of ten to fifteen minutes.

At 9½ o'clock the Rev. W. C. Van Meter, superintendent of the "Home for Little Wanderers," in New York, entered the hall with ten little girls of that institution, who added much to the interest of the occasion by singing several appropriate hymns. At 11 o'clock the meeting dispersed, and all seemed highly pleased with the exercises of the evening.

A SERMON

BY REV. EUGENE ROYAL, (COLORED,) OF THE LAHARP ST. M. E. CHURCH.

Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.—Matt. v.: 8.

While I stand before you in the name of my Master, who sent me, I want you to give me your faithful prayers and your quiet attention. These words were spoken by our blessed Savior, Jesus Christ, while he dwelt upon the earth, establishing his gospel among men. He saw that the time would soon come that He would have to depart from this earth. He went about Galilee and the river Jordon, selecting his apostles, that when He departed from this world these men should go preaching the kingdom of Heaven. And after He had chosen them, they followed him everywhere, and he taught them. He then went on the Mount and said to his disciples, "Blessed are the pure in heart."

Now from this text we learn that God intended that man who worshipped him should worship with a pure heart, for he saw that in that day and time that man's heart was corrupted, which made it necessary that some change must take place that the heart of man may become pure. The change to take place is what Christ said to Nicodemus, that man must be "born again." A man must repent of his sins; turn from his evil thoughts and come to Christ. The heart which is prone to evil and is a fit temple for the devil and all his imps, must become a temple for the Holy Ghost. Then the heart is pure where God dwells. In a state of nature, man can't love himself, can't love his neighbor, nor his Maker. Now to become right, man must renounce the devil, himself and the world, and feel that he is nothing in the presence of his God. And he must forsake all his deeds, and come with a heart unto righteousness. When he comes before God, and says that he is undone, he feels that his house is against him, that his friends have turned against him; and then he says within himself—I go and make my last prayer and give up all for God to be merciful unto me. His heart is now surrended, and Jesus looks down from the shining seats above and sees the penitant, and reaching down his lily white hand He lifts him up as a brand from the eternal burning. Then he hears the small, still voice, telling him to tell to all the world what a dear Savior he has found. His goings are now established and God's love fills his heart; then the soul is pure. This is the heart that shall see God.

But understand that we do not say that you shall see God with the natural eye, for God is a spirit, but every heart shall feel the Lord, and that is better than seeing Him. We neither do not mean to tell you as the Catholic priest tells us, that we must come to him with our sins, and that he will carry our sins to the Virgin Mary, and Mary carry them to Christ, and Christ carry them to God. In the dispensation of Moses, man confessed to man, but now each man may come God for himself, for Christ, when he preached this sermon knew that man would do better to come directly to Him. Now what do we understand to be "pure in heart?" It is to desire nothing but God, walking in self-denial, and following Christ in evil and good report. The cross may be heavy and the waters deep and chilly, but Christ is our helper. It is to love our fellowmen; your brother's cross is yours. We do not mean by being pure in heart, it is to undermine his fellow-men, and wrong him of his rights.

But some may say—I have been for 40 years, in my weak manner, serving the Lord, yet I have never seen God. This may be true, yet you are to see Him here with spiritual eyes. But the time will come when you shall be called to depart from this earth; when physician, wife and children shall weep over you, then the Lord shall come and you shall see Him as He is. But you must be pure, to see Him. If you are, you shall see Him in that city where there is no need of the sun, or moon or stars, for Christ is the light of that place.

Perhaps the ungodly may ask, "Shall I see Him?" Yes, you shall see Him, but you won't want to see Him long! Because John says that every eye shall see him, when he comes with the clouds to judge the quick and the dead. Then He shall say to the ungodly, "Depart from me, ye cursed!" but to the righteous He will say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." Then the godly shall be the jewels to adorn His crown.

Now I hope that my congregation will treasure up these words, and will live close to the cross of Christ. Have the mind that was in the apostle Paul, who received many stripes for his Master; was bound in prison, yet he stood to his integrity, and said, "none of these things move me." This was by being pure in heart. May the Lord bless you and keep you always. Amen.

Slow Marriage Ceremony.—Recently, not far from Washington, a couple, whom we will indicate as Mr. J——— and Miss H———, were to be married, and the somewhat slow-going Elder ——— was called upon to perform the ceremony. The parties all being ready, the Elder proceeded as follows: "Gentlemen and ladies, I hold in my hand authority from the State of Maryland to unite Mr. J——— and Miss H——— in the bonds of matrimony. Doubtless you all expect some sort of ceremony this evening, but my voice is weak, my health is bad, and I have had disease of the throat a year or more. Different churches have different forms, and different people have different forms; for my part I have no form. I do not remember any form. In some countries it is not so easy to get married as in this once free and happy country; and in some States they marry without license. In some countries it is required that the marriage shall take place at the hour of midnight; just as the clock strikes twelve the company take their lamps and go forth to meet the bridegroom, and then they all go into the house, and the door is shut, and no one is allowed to enter in afterward. Yes, my friends, the door is shut, and if you come then, you may cry your eyes out, and you may wear your knees out praying, but you'll never get in, for the door is shut. But this is not the case in our once free and happy country. As I said before, my lungs are weak, and I must make the ceremony as short as possible. My friends, it gives me much pleasure to see a young and loving couple like this, with their hearts united in the bonds of affection, come to be joined in marriage; and you must recollect, my young friends, that you cannot live together always—one of you will be taken by the cold, icy fingers of death and laid in the dark and narrow grave, and the other will be left to weep over the dear remains. Marriage is an old institution; it is spoken of in the first part of the Bible. It is an old institution; it is an honorable institution; it is a moral institution. All of you like it, and you all encourage it—all of the young people like it. The old would like to be young again that they might once more feel the influence of Cupid's darts. Come on, all of you. I do not remember any ceremony, but I reckon I know enough to join these two together. I suppose before I proceed I must ask the usual questions. Is there any one present who knows any just cause why Mr. J. and Miss H. may not lawfully be joined in the bonds of matrimony? [After a pause.] No one says nothing, as I suppose there is no reason. Mr. J. and Miss H., will you please give your right hand? Mr. J., will you take the lady whose hand you hold to be your lawful and wedded wife? Will you love, cherish and protect her? 'Yes, sir.' Miss ———, will you take the gentleman whose hand you hold to be your lawful husband? Will you love, honor and obey him in all his reasonable requests? 'I will.' I now pronounce you husband and wife, man and wife, or man and his helpmate, which I much prefer." The ceremony was concluded with a long prayer, in which he prayed for all mankind, collectively and individually, and at the end the contracting parties and the guests joined with considerable heartiness in the "Amen."

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months..... 2 00
Three Months..... 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion.....$1 50
" each subsequent insertion... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, MARCH 2, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

Reconstruction Bill.

After two years of thorough investigation, mature reflection and earnest debate, the XXXIXth Congress has crowned its labors by adopting a plan for the reconstruction of the Union, which the people should willingly accept, as by it peace and justice may be secured to all the States, and all the inhabitants thereof. The expression of the Southern people thus far, whether given through the press or legislative bodies, is not favorable to the bill. There are loud complaints of military despotism, and solemn appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, in behalf of an injured people, and some little talk of revolution. Doubtless it were too much to expect a cordial acquiescence in such a measure, and therefore we are not disappointed at the "much talk and some bluster," from the opposition.

The military feature of the bill is not really objectionable In its adoption, Congress acted but consistently with its own theory of the war, and in accordance with the war-power of the Constitution. By this action Congress has placed the ten States, named in the bill, where they were when Lee surrendered—that is, under military control.

Viewed from a war stand-point, this is their logical position. They are conquered provinces, having been subjugated by the military power of the nation. And it would have been better for the South and the Country at large, had military supervision been continued uninterrupted up to the adoption of a plan for political reconstruction. The logic of war would have justified such a course, and the people of the South expected the same. While we regret the length of time intervening from the suppression of armed rebellion to the adoption of the bill under consideration, yet we deem it most fortunate that by the provisions of this bill, the States late in rebellion are subject to military control Whether for the protection of "life, liberty and property" from the violence of individuals, or for the suppression of armed resistance on the part of whole communities, (in view of the contingencies which may arise,) the military authority under which we are now placed is preferable. The loyal people of these States are content with this measure, and we hazard nothing in saying that it is more acceptable to the other portion of the people than to have the civil authority of these States pass directly into the hands of a new class of office holders. Some of the southern press complain of military despotism, but this is for bunkum, rather than from any serious dread of illegal military interference. Louisiana has everything to hope and nothing to fear from such an officer as Maj. Gen. Sheridan, should he be appointed. Instead of being an overshadowing military despotism, the bill is eminently magnanimous. The work of reconstruction is entrusted to the southern people themselves. When they shall determine, they may take the steps necessary to restoration to self-government on the one-hand, and to representation in Congress on the other. As subjugated insurgents, they cannot demand more magnanimous terms. It is all they deserve; it is more than they had reason to expect. The disfranchisement of the rebel leaders and the enfranchisement of the men of color, may offend their pride; but the comparatively small number affected by the former, and the good effect to be realized by the latter, should allay opposition and prompt to a hearty co-operation.

According to the provisions of the bill, the present State governments are not only provisional but are "in all respects subject to the paramount authority of the United States, at any time to abolish, modify, control, and supercede the same." Thus by this, the sixth section of the Act, Congress has reserved the right of future legislation, to be used if necessary. Is not this a warning to the people of the South to act at once? Had they voluntarily adopted the proposed Constitutional Amendment, that would have precluded the necessity of further legislation, and they would have been admitted to Congressional representation. But they indignantly rejected the Amendment, and hence the bill now under consideration. Should they continue to resist, their contumacy may provoke even severer measures.

The bill provides for the continuance of the present State governments, subject to certain conditions: I. They are to be considered provisional, and subject to be abolished, modified, controlled or superceded by Congress. II. That in "all elections to any office under such provisional governments, all persons shall be entitled to vote, under the provisions of the Vth section of this Act."

Thus the extension of the franchise to the people of color becomes operative at once, and the last clause of this section also excludes from office all such persons who are now in office who cannot qualify under this bill: "And no person shall be eligible to any office under such provisional governments, who would be disqualified from holding office under the provisions of the third article of said Constitutional Amendment."

And the people of the Rebel States, whenever they are tired of this government, may, by a vote of all their citizens, without respect to color, except those disqualified from holding office by the Constitutional Amendment, elect delegates to a Convention to form State Constitutions. When these Constitutions are established upon the basis of impartial suffrage, and and are ratified by the people, and when the States thus organized have adopted the Constitutional Amendment, they shall be admitted to representation in Congress, when military rule will cease, and South Carolina and Texas will hold the same places in the Union as New York and Massachusetts.

Sunday Amusements.

On Feb. 21st, Mr. Mohan iutroduced in our State Senate an act providing for the closing of all places of amusement, except markets, from midnight on Saturday to Monday morning. It underwent two readings, and was referred to the committee on the judiciary.

This bill has greatly offended the religious notions of our neighbor, the Picayune. Singularly enough, the Picayune commences its article of Feb. 24 with the remark.

"We have a natural aversion to the moral ideas of New England, and would protest with all our might against the introduction of anything savoring of that locality into our community."

Pray, what have the moral ideas of New England to do with the great question of the proper observance of the Holy Sabbath in New Orleans? Is it not the old question, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" We insist that this important measure should not be embarrassed by sectional prejudices. It is a question of universal application, and should be discussed upon its own merits. It is wholly irrelevant whether New England enforces the Fourth Commandment by statutory enactments or not. The practical point is, what is the duty of the Legislature of Louisiana in the premises? The obligation to observe the Sabbath in a becoming manner is a duty no less binding on legislative bodies than on individuals. As the representatives of the Divine Law-giver, human legislators derive their authority from God, and are responsible to Him. They are bound, not only to embody His will in their legislative enactments, but also not to become party to the violation of His law. Taking the Ten Commandments as the expression of His gracious will, it may not be possible to prevent the infraction of some of the precepts thereof. It may be impossible for human laws to prevent profanity, or covetousness; yet it is a fact that the most enlightened of civil governments have embodied in statutory law, the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth of the Ten Commandments, as being promotive of the well-being of society.

Laws are mandatory and prohibitory. We do not favor a mandatory Sabbath law,—compelling people to do this or that, but we advocate a prohibitory law—restraining citizens from doing certain things. To illustrate: Places of Sunday amusements are usually licensed establishments. We would have the legislature pass a law limiting such licenses to the six secular days of the week, and making it a penal offence for the proprietors of such establishments to keep open on the day excepted. We hold that the party that issues the license which does not except Sunday, is no less guilty of the violation of the Sabbath-law than the man whose licensed place of amusement is kept open on that day. Under existing circumstances, the evil may be cured by the adoption of Mr. Mohan's bill, thus making void that part of the licenses already granted which include Sundays. And we heartily hope his bill may become a law.

New Orleans would be the gainer—financially, morally and religiously. Sunday would then be a day of rest, and not, as now, of feverish excitement in the pursuit of worldly pleasure. The attention of the young would be turned to the attainment of knowledge. Thousands of dollars would be saved to the employer and the employee. The debasing associations of theatres, of drinking and gambling saloons would be superseded by those of a purer nature.

It would have indicated the philosopher and the philanthropist, had the Picayune approved of Senator Mohan's bill, and then suggested to the honorable member the importance of asking an appropriation for the erection of Museums of natural history and galleries of sculpture and paintings, where the taste of our people could be cultivated, and their love of novelty gratified. Attached to these buildings we would have elegant parks with noble walks, and adorned with sparkling fountains and fragrant flowers, where the laboring man and his family might wander on Sunday—his day of leisure; and where the minds of the young might be lifted from Nature to Nature's God. But such thoughts are too high for the Picayune.

We do not agree in the statement of our cotemporary that the good people of this city are opposed to Mr. Mohan's bill. It is a notorious fact that the better class of our citizens do not patronize "Sunday amusements;" but strangers who are detained here over the Sabbath are tempted to these places of demoralization. And it is a fact which should be well weighed, that the performers at such places are themselves opposed to the demand for "seven days of labor." They need relaxation, but are compelled to yield to the greed of their employers. These facts indicate that the proposed law could be executed without serious difficulty, and also indicate the greater guilt of those who grant the license without excepting God's Holy Day.

Dying of Dignity.

Dignity is a disease with which a certain class of people and certain churches seem to be wonderfully afflicted. The Rev. Sydney Smith, himself an Episcopal clergyman, once said that the church of England was "dying of dignity." Of course there is a true dignity which belongs to real worth and to right conduct; but there is also a sham dignity which goes with principles and practice, that are simply mean and contemptible.

True dignity is distinguished by this, that it may be left to take care of itself, requiring for its preservation no special nursing or diplomacy, whereas the counterfeit, ever suspicious of encroachment, is on the continual lookout for its own standing, which it seeks to bolster up by resolutions. True dignity is self-forgetful, while its opposite is terribly self-conscious. The former, intent on duty, thinks not of itself, assured that the performance of duty is true glory. The latter, caring more for the praise of men than of God, is ever looking into the faces of men, dreading the frown of mortals far more than that of the Eternal.

These remarks have been suggested by the late action of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, to which we called attention in a recent issue, in an article upon "Caste in the Church." This Southern body—Church we can hardly call it—seems to be laboring under a severe fit of dignity. It is anxious to drive out of its fold all the poor who belong to the despised class of so-called Africans. These "people" are not respectable enough for so august a body as the Southern Presbyterian Church. For how else can we interpret its action in utterly refusing ordination to a black man, and the bold endorsement of that action by a leading member of that church, Dr. J. H. Rice, editor of the Presbyterian Index, published at Mobile; in a late number of which paper he says: "Instead of repelling the charge made against our General Assembly of trying to hold the colored man in the Church just as he was before his emancipation, we confess it and glory in it." This is not the first time that men have "gloried in their shame." Shame, shame, we say, on such abominable, unchristian sentiments, and let all Christendom shout, Amen! Let the angels who sang, "Glory to God, peace on earth, and good-will to men," when He was born who should preach the gospel to the poor, fold their wings and weep over the apostacy of a so-called Christian Church. The primitive Christians gloried in this noble distinction of their religion, that it was the gospel of the poor. It remains for the Southern Presbyterian Church, in this nineteenth century, to repudiate this distinction, and to ally itself with those dainty Pharisees who, gathering up their sanctimonious robes, exclaimed—"Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on Him? But this people who knoweth not the law are cursed."

We learn that these "people," treated with such supercilious indignity, shut out of the parlor, and compelled, if they remain in the Southern Presbyterian Church, to live in the kitchen—not as brethren, but as servants, in the "household of faith," are rapidly migrating to less dignified churches, where their christian manhood will be fully recognized. Fifteen hundred colored Presbyterians, it seems, of North and South Carolina, have left the Southern Presbyterian Church, for the newly organized Presbytery of Catawba, which is in connection with the Northern Assembly, and has colored men among its ministers. Others, we are told, are elsewhere leaving the Southern Church for other denominations which do not object to colored ministers; and a religious journal states that the Methodist, Episcopal and Roman Catholic Churches at the South are rapidly waking up to the conviction of the propriety of receiving colored men into equal church rights and privileges. The Southern Presbyterian Church will be left "alone in its glory,"—a dignified body. But let it beware lest it "die of dignity." We would say to, it what Christ said to some of his day who were in that very predicament: "Go, and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy and not sacrifice." A mere cultus will not suffice, however carefully and even expensively it may be arranged, if the spirit and practice of true Christianity be wanting. Your boasted orthodoxy and your sacrifices in other directions cannot save you from the anathemas pronounced against those who preach "another gospel." You are ever defaming the Northern Churches as infidel, but at least they respect the rights of man, irrespective of the conventional distinctions which prejudice and pride have erected, and so far prove themselves to be Christians. They believe that within the Christian Church all, as being alike the purchase of the blood of the Son of God, are entitled to an equality of rights, and they have no fear that their dignity will be compromised if they receive to such fellowship those for whom the "Lord of all" was not ashamed to die.

P. S.—Since writing the above, the following, from the pen of Rev. Dr. Atkinson, a distinguished member of the Southern General Assembly, has fallen under our eye: "No particle of warrant can be found in the standards of the Church for the inhibition to men of any race of any of these offices" [preachers or deacons.] This shows the presence of a wholesome leaven in the Southern Church, and we predict a fearful fermentation. If the Church should refuse to accept the leaven, it must perish in its corruption. The righteous ones will come out and be separate, and touch no more the unclean thing.

Dedication at Carrollton.

The reader will recall the interesting account of the "dedication of the first M. E, Church, built in free Louisiana," published in Vol. 1, No. 11, of this paper, and the sad announcement some months later of said house being burned. It has been rebuilt, and on last Sunday the new house was dedicated. The services of the day began by a prayer meeting at sun-rise—a joyous time for the few members of the long scattered flock who gathered together to enjoy it. At 11 o'clock, A. M., Rev. N. L. Brakeman, Presiding Elder preached a sermon on "Consecration to God," showing its nature, obligation, extent and results. A very good congregation toward the last had gathered, and a good state of feeling prevailed.

But 3 o'clock P. M. was the great hour for the people, as then commenced the dedication services. They began to assemble two hours before the appointed time, and ere it had arrived the house was filled to overflowing. The "Band" from Jefferson City was out, well "officered" and in full regalia, and gave efficient aid in the singing. Marais, Wesley and First Street Churches each contributed to swell the congregation, and at 3 o'clock, the house was filled, packed, and scores standing without at the doors and windows.

The services were conducted according to the form in the Discipline. Rev. A. C. McDonald, preached an able and interesting discourse; a synopsis of which we give below:

The Lord loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob.—Psalms, 87: 2.

In his introduction he dwelt upon the love which God had to his ancient Israel and the special regard he had for Mount Zion. He then announced as his theme:

The manifestations of the high regard, the constant care, and the ineffable love of God toward His church.

1. It is specially blessed with the Divine favor. There is a sense in which God bestows favor even on the ungodly, but it is that of forbearance, of temporal good, of offers of salvation, and not of approval. But the obedient Christian enjoys God's smile. Enoch had the testimony that he pleased God. Abraham was called "the friend of God." Paul testifies of peace.

2. Distinguished gifts are conferred upon it. The Church is the repository of Divine truth. It has for its lamp the Holy Bible; for its illumination, the Divine Spirit. It enjoys holy altars of worship, sacred ordinances, the blessedness of pardon, joys of devotion, communion of saints, fellowship of the Spirit, communion with the Father and Son. As the building reposes on its foundations, as the branch is imbedded in the vine, as the members are united to the head, as the bride is cherished by the bridegroom, so the Christian rests in Christ. Who can measure the riches of these glorious gifts?

3. The honorable work to which the Church is called. Privilege is ever joined to duty. The noble gifts God has conferred on the Church guage his estimate of what it can do.

Trace the position of the Church. It is a "city on a hill," a "candle on a candlestick." The church is the most prominent institution in the world.

View its mission. It is the "salt of the earth," the "light of the world," the "leaven" of humanity. The church is the only hope of man. The conversion of the world rests instrumentally upon it.

Look at its efficient instrumentalities. It is the mightiest agency upon the earth. The omnipotence of God is in it. Its entire organization is in reference to aggressive effort. The pulpit is the throne of power.

See the fellowship of labors to which we are called. Patriarchs are fellow-workers; prophets, martyrs, apostles, are partakers in the toil; angels are our servants to "minister" unto us; more even than this, "we are workers together with God." What honor! What encouragement in such fellowship of labors! Shall we fail, then, or be discouraged? Never, never! Lo, Christ leads the way; angels beckon onward; shouting veterans, gone before, urge us forward; a "great cloud of witnesses" are about us. Then run; never remit your toil till crowns are given and kingdoms are administered.

Note the success already attained. Empires and kingdoms have passed away, but the Church lives, and is stronger than ever before. She is girding herself for the last great moral fight and glorious victory. The dawn of the future is tinged with beauty. Its crimson flushes betoken the coming of a brighter and better day.

4. The love of God to the Church is further seen in the sure defences he has provided for it. That which is highly prized should be well protected from danger. There are enemies, human and Satanic, that have tried to overthrow the church. Its existence, at times, has seemed imperilled, but a strange Providence has guarded it. When the corrupt, infidel and scoffing antediluvian world was overthrown, an ark bore up the Church. When the Church wore manacles in Egypt, Moses was preserved in his little ark, and afterwards sent to its deliverance. When a cruel captivity dispersed and oppressed the Church, Cyrus, miraculously preserved in infancy, was raised up to restore it. When Jesus came, and the implacable Herod sought his life, he escaped the slaughter of the Innocents, and re-adjusted the foundations of his Church so that the "gates of hell" may strive in vain against her. The Church is secure. Its foundation is Christ; its bulwarks are the truth of God; its sentinels are the angelic guard; God himself is in the midst of her.

5. The Church is to be crowned with glory. She is to be placed near the throne. The Zion below is to become the Zion above. Would you know more? Look up. Lo! "a Lamb standing on the Mount Zion," and the "redeemed" about him. See, "the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven. * * Having the glory of God and her light like unto a stone most precious." A little while and all that sleep shall wake; the trump shall sound, the dead shall rise, and the new Church "without spot, or wrinkle or any such thing," shall be presented "faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding great joy."

Then love the Church; sustain it by your contributions, and above all, never bring a reproach upon it."

Tears and shouts of joy and triumph told how the truth took hold upon the hearts of the people, and they will long remember the day, and the sermon. After the sermon a collection, nearly meeting the entire indebtedness was taken up, and the house dedicated. It is five feet longer than the former building and will furnish seets for fifty or a hundred more people.

After meeting closed, the religious feeling which had been high, and somewhat demonstrative, still continued and broke out afresh in the cars as we returned to the city, and found expression as usual, but chiefly in sacred song Brother Williams, the pastor, has kept his flocks well together, while his churches have been in ashes. The church at Jefferson is being built and will be completed in three weeks. Thus is the church moving forward in spite of foes and persecution.

Editorial Items.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach in the Hall of the House of Representatives, to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.

The Methodist Home Journal.—We gladly place on our list of exchanges this journal. Mechanically, it wears a handsome appearance, and editorially, it has a freshness and simplicity which we much admire. If we judge correctly, the Journal has before it a bright future. Published in Philadelphia, where we have so many churches, it cannot fail of support. Such a city should have such a paper. We hazard nothing in saying that Methodism in Philadelphia has lost much by not having, years gone by, its own organ. In every large city in our Union, our Church should have, at least, a weekly paper.

The Charleston Advocate.—We salute our new cotemporary with a hearty welcome. We readily imagine the difficulties attending the inception of his enterprise. Not fifteen months ago we were in the midst of similar labors. We feel now as we felt then, that our church in the South should have the aid of its own weekly journals. We rejoice, therefore, that our brethren in South Carolina have commenced the publication of the Charleston Advocate. We assure them of our sympathy with the divine sentiments they announce, and wish for them large success. The first number of the Advocate is worthy of them and the cause they represent.

A letter from brother Moses Adams, of Meridian, informs us of the prosperity of his chapel, and also that he has visited Marion, the county-seat, five miles North of Meridian, and organized a class of fifty members. They have engaged an acre of ground for $75, for building purposes. Half the money for the land has already been given, and one brother subscribed $300 worth of lumber for the church. Last Saturday and Sabbath brother Adams was to have spent at Enterprise, where he had been sent for, to organize another society. Thus the work goes on. Brother Moore, a local preacher, has charge of the new society in Marion.

We have also received a note from J. H. Mason, of Meridian, in which he speaks of the prosperity of the school in Meridian, of 150 pupils, under care of Miss Lou Jarvis, and states that himself and Jesse Phering have established a night school of 25 scholars. Miss J. needs and will soon have an assistant. A benevolent society has also been organized to care for the aged and sick, and bury the dead.

Rev. W. N. Darnell, Presiding Elder of Mississippi District, was in this city Tuesday last, in good health and spirits. He gives an encouraging report of the work in his field, which in spite of devils and wicked men, through storm and flames, is prospering. The church blown down in Jackson will be rebuilt immediately.

In a letter to Bro. Brakeman, Rev. Bishop Thomson says:

"You are still in the war, but I hope none of 'these things move you.' The time of peace is coming. Meanwhile let us stay ourselves upon the living God. Patience, prayer, perseverance and piety, can do wonders in a short time. I rejoice in every success, and watch with great interest all your proceedings. Dr. Newman's paper is indispensable, and he makes it interesting. Nothing do I deplore so much as the spirit of the A. M. E. Church. The colored population must continue to be depressed as long as they sever themselves from those whites, who are their true friends."

"Great Fun for Sunday.—We know that the announcement made in our amusement columns this morning will attract crowds—half the population of the city, we should think—to the Metairie track on Sunday next. The long-talked of pony race, in which three well-known nags are entered as contestants, viz: Martin Lee's Eagle, McKay's Bonnie Lassie and Boyle's Dan. O'Connell, will positively take place. Further entries can be made until 9 o'clock this evening. As each of the ponies named has a large list of friends and backers, there will be big excitement at the sale of pools by Dr. Underwood, at the Cafe Imperial, this evening.

Next will come a mule race—mile heats—six entries, all from a drove or pen. We see Dr. Underwood, the famous pool-seller, has entered, and it must certainly be a "stunner," or the Dr. would have nothing to do with the animal. Further comment upon this amusing "bill of fare" is unnecessary. The advertisement tells the whole story. But there will be fun, sure!"

The above is from the N. O. Times of the 23d ult. It is the witness against vile breakers of God's holy day and the journal in which it is published. The morals of any community must be low where such scenes occur, and where they are not only not rebuked by its professedly leading journal, but warmly encouraged. God save the State!

Duel Across the River—Both Parties Die

FROM THEIR WOUNDS.—We had hoped that the duel reported to have taken place Thursday, in which one party was killed and the other wounded, would have proved to have been without foundation, but the facts, as now known, are still more melancholy than at first stated.

It appears that at the ball given by the dry goods clerks, a married lady, dressed in the customary evening toilette, was so grossly insulted by an indignity to her person as to cause an appeal to her husband. The latter sought an interview, and upbraided the party who had offered the indignity. In this quarrel the husband was struck, and the matter at the time was only quieted by the interference of other parties. A challenge from the husband of the lady soon followed.

The terms agreed upon were double-barreled shot-guns at thirty paces distant—weapons, the use of which, in duels fought near this city have, in several instances, been attended with fatal consequences. The ground selected was upon the other side of the river, below Algiers.

At the first fire the challenging party fell, mortally wounded through the hip, and died in twenty minutes after. His antagonist was also mortally wounded, a ball passing through his neck. He, however, survived until two o'clock yesterday morning.

The name of the challenging party is well known to our Creole population. His antagonist was from France. Both parties were young men with many friends and acquaintances, and the event has caused in this city as much excitement as any duel that has been fought for years. —N. O. Crescent.

The murderous duello is still in vogue in our community. We have not yet reached that civilization when civil law and public sentiment prevent such a barbarous practice. God holds the community responsible for such terrible deeds.

Rev. H. G. Jackson, one of the loyal men who was shot at in the great New Orleans massacre, lectured in the University Chapel, Greencastle, Tuesday evening, February 12th; subject, "Southern Loyalty and the New Orleans Riots." Mr. Jackson is an alumnus of Indiana Ashbury University.

In an article upon the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organ the Boston Journal says: "The establishment is now turning out from sixty to seventy instruments per week, and there is a steadily growing demand for the instruments, which in the four years which have elapsed since it was first put in the market, has become more widely introduced, and is much more extensively and generally used, than any other of this class that has ever been invented."

Local and Southern News.

Legislature.

HOUSE.—Mr. McEnery introduced a joint resolution, to advance from the State treasury $1000 to each member of Congress from the State, who shall go to Washington to claim his seat.

On motion $2000 was inserted in place of $1000, and thus amended, the resolution was adopted.

The Senate bill requiring those appointed judges, either in the supreme or district courts to have been citizens of the State, and licensed practitioners at the bar in the State, five years before the time of their appointment, came up, which was discussed and adopted.

Mr. Kidd offered the following:

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, in General Assembly convened. That the judiciary committees of the House and Senate be instructed to investigate, jointly, and report as early as practicable, the best and most expeditious method of testing before the Supreme Court of the United States, the constitutionality of any act which has been or may be passed by Congress infringing upon the rights of Louisiana as a sovereign and duly organized State.

Mr. Kidd. The resolution having been read by the clerk, observed that it must be evident to all, the dominant party in Washington—notwithstanding the submissiveness of the people of the South; notwithstanding they had gone to the very verge of sacrificing honor in their desire to conciliate—were bent upon moulding the States to their own wishes. The conservative power in Congress was not sufficient to defeat their designs. It was powerless to help us. No matter how much we might admire President Johnson, it was obvious he had not the Jacksonian will; he did not possess that great moral force, which resolving to abide by his oath of office, and to maintain the Constitution, would demonstrate itself in such a manner as would make radicalism tremble in its presence. We had but one refuge, and that was the Supreme Court. As had been eloquently remarked by the distinguished gentleman from Indiana, who lately spoke in this hall, (Mr. Voorhies) we should thank God that we had a Supreme Court to appeal to for protection. True, there was neither a Marshall nor a Taney now presiding in that court; its chief was openly in alliance with the radical party, yet there was every reason to expect that when a great constitutional question should go before that tribunal, there would be found there honor and justice. This was the rainbow of hope. Mr. Kidd trusted the judiciary committee would be able to mark out a course by which the issue, so vitally affecting the liberties of the country, could be properly brought before the Supreme Court, and should the decision of the court be such as there was reason to hope it would be, he believed two millions of swords would leap from their scabbards to maintain the decision, if necessary.

After being discussed the resolution was adopted.

The bill for a State Convention has been passed over the Governor's veto.

The constitutionality of the Reconstruction bill is to be contested.

GALVESTON, Feb. 26,—Advices from Mexico show that the recent defeat of the Liberals has been greatly magnified. They are still on the offensive, and there is every probability that they will take the capitol. Bazaine openly says Maximilian ought to retire, as it is impossible for him to retain the government. Liberal Mexican papers justify the execution of the Miramon prisoners.

LATER:—According to later reports, the Liberals were not defeated.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—The Missouri Senate passed a bill by a vote of 19 to 7, submitting to the people, next general election, the Amendment to the Constitution striking out the word "white." A similar proposition has been introduced into the House, and made the special order for Thursday.

PASSAGE OF THE NEGRO SUFFRAGE BILL IN TENNESSEE.

NASHVILLE, Feb. 18.—The Senate has passed the bill conferring suffrage on negroes. A motion to strike out the clause preventing them from serving on juries, or holding office, was rejected by a tie vote. The bill having previously passed the House is now a law, unless reconsidered, and that event is not probable.

PREPARING TO GO INTO A TERRITORY.—A gentlemen residing on a farm near Richmond, a few days since, in view of the passage of the territorializing bill, addressed the commissioner of agriculture, begging him to send on about five hundred bushels of prairie grass and ten buffaloes.

The amount expended for the support of freedmen and refugees in Louisiana is $88,000

Mississippi Items.

The unreconstructed still exist about Vicksburg. Young children occasionally use offensive language towards the teachers of freedmen's schools, calling them "Nasty old nigger teachers." One specimen of female chivalry relieves her mind by going on the street near one of the schools and loudly pouring out a tirade of abuse against the "nigger teaching Yankees."

WANTED A GUN.—While in the office of the sub-commissioner of Freedmen at Vicksburg, we saw a one armed man taking an oath and giving a bond, with a one legged man going his security, not to violate the provisions of the Civil Rights Bill. He had taken a negro's gun under the State law prohibiting Freedmen from keeping arms.

AN UNJUST JUDGE.—The judge of the Probate Court for Hind's County, refuses to grant license to colored minsters to solemnize matrimony.

DIDN'T WANT OFFICE.—We heard a man lamenting the fact that in one County no one could be found willing to serve in the Legislature. Will not some patriot migrate to that county?

MERIDIAN.—The Brethren at Meridian are building a Parsonage.

CORINTH.—Brother Williams, reports prosperity in the church at Corinth.

DESTITUTION IN MISS,.—Many of the people are utterly without means to cultivate their lands. We hear of many who are unable to feed their old servants who wish to remain with them, and are willing to wait for wages till crops can be raised.

DELIVERING THE MAIL ON YAZOO RIVER.—They have an original way of delivering the Mail on the Yazoo. A colored gentlemen on board provides himself with a quantity of short clubs. Around the heavy end of each of which he wraps papers and letters for a certain point, securing them by driving a nail through them into the wood. With these he takes a position on the upper deck The river is narrow and he can easily throw them to the shore, without stopping the boat.

HARD ON THE SOUTH —A Southern man said he somtimes wished that not another boll of cotton or another blade of grass would ever grow in the South, that the country would become a desert and the people all die.

The Pope in the Freedmen's Bureau.

We noticed at the time the fact that President Johnson attended the closing session of the Council of Roman Catholic Bishops in Baltimore. On this subject the Independent holds forth as follows:

"The Pope sent word to the late Council of Bishops at Baltimore that they must look after the emancipated negroes. This letter of instructions was made public, contrary to the intentions of the Council. The action of the Council is kept secret until it is approved by the Pope. But the Bird says that a plan was concocted. to which President Johnson is a party, to this general effect:

The object is to bring the body of Freedmen under the influence of the Church of Rome. As a means for this end, the President is to take the Freedmen's Bureau out of the hands of Gen. Howard and the Evangelicals, and give it to Gen. Rosecrans, who is a Romanist and brother of one of the bishops, and who would be willing at least to be President of the United States. The three or four millions of dollars a year passing through the hands of the Bureau and its agents would supply handy change for all the parties—President, General, Bishops, Jesuits and Pope."—National Baptist.

Special correspondence for the N. O. Advocate.

Letter from Texas.

MR. EDITOR.—Is it necessary for a man in order to maintain a show of consistency to continue wrong? And yet sir, such is the decision of the great majority of the people here in the South. If a man abjures his former belief in the jure divino of slavery, and the non interference of churches upon political subjects, when a moral principle is involved, or that a State has a right to secede from the Union, I care not how many other excellencies he may exhibit in his character, he is condemned, ostracised, outlawed. In their estimation he was a hypocrite from the beginning, or else a panderer to the taste and feelings of those in power. But if he will only believe that slavery is of God—that they have been wronged out of their property in freeing the negro—that the Southern people are the bravest, most magnanimous race of people that now flourish—that the yankee army stole all the silver tea-sets and pianos in New Orleans and South Carolina—that they are all a set of scoundrels, liars, intriguers—that the Methodist church, North, is a political church; if he will believe this, it matters not how deficient he may be in other respects, they are ready to cannonize him a true Southern saint. You may grow in their Southern virtues, but you must not apostatize from them at risk of being cast out of their synagogue. That same intolerant spirit that characterized them in ante-war times, is still as manifest as ever, though it dare not now as it did then exhibit itself in the same manner. As a specimen of it, I will give you an instance. Some week or so ago, I organized a freedman's school in the town of ——and appointed one or two colored men to see the owners of the town property in my absence in order to get a lot to put a school-house on. As soon as "their old masters—their best friends." (?) heard of it they were much displeased at the idea of having a negro school in their town, but having no power to forbid it, they could only exercise their prerogative by refusing to sell them any land, so an end was put to the school. And yet sir, they will have the unblushing effrontry to tell the negro, "we are your best friends." No longer than last Sabbath I heard a preacher of the church South, make this assertion with as much earnestness as, I reckon, he ever said his prayers. But cuffee can't some how or other see the "spint," when he knows that the "chivalry of the South" poured out its best blood in many hard contested battles for four years to keep him in slavery. That now they are not willing that he should testify on oath against a white man—not willing he should be enfranchised—not willing that he should be educated. These quasi friends of the negro, are frequently heard to say, "beware of the Yankee—all he wants is your money." Do you see the bunkum in it?

And sir, is it possible that "the slavery question is a mere accident" in the controversy between the Northern and Southern churches, as asserted in the Texas Christian Advocate of the 17th of Jan.? Do you see with what pusillanimity, the editor of that paper tries to get out of its disgrace of having been a pro-slavery church? He forgets how prominent the slavery question was made here as a justification for separation from the North. He forgets with what a hearty endorsement the church papers and preachers gave Dr. William A. Smith's work on slavery, and also Dr. Rioer's moral philosophy, which was made a text book by the general conf. which justified the institution upon Bible grounds. But he contends that the main point of difference, is the right of churches to interfere with affairs of State. Have you noticed with what horror the church South, looks upon political subjects? No doubt, sir, you think them perfectly free from all political interference, but I tell you that during the war, when the T. C. Advocate had been suspended for some time and the Texas conferences resolved on resuming its publication, the publishing committee fell on the expedient of making it a semi-religious and semi-political paper in order to get help from the outside, and the agents were sent round to solicit donations of cotton to send to Mexico to purchase printing material; and the appeals they made to the cotton planter to get his cotton, was that the Rev. Mr. Cairnes the editor could write the ablest articles in defence of the war, and the fast expiring cause of the Confederacy; and so he could and so he did, as the files of that paper will show. And yet that church will have the temerity in the face of all these facts, to assert, that they have ever ignored politics.

The ecclesiastics of this church, in order to prevent any of their members from leaving them and joining the M. E. Church, will represent to them that that church is nothing now but a political organization—that the immence centinary fund that was raised this year was for political instead of ecclesiastical purposes, to pay political propagandists, to preach anti-slavery and negro equality, etc. Their editors are continually garbling the northern Advocates and giving such extracts, as will have a tendency to influence and irritate the public mind. Why, sir, to hear the fireside tales that are handed round among the members of their flocks, how Southern Methodist preachers are murdered in Missouri and Kentucky, and East Tennessee, by mobs, always headed by northern Methodists, is truly appalling. From this you may judge of the obstacles we have to meet, and the animus of the people towards us. But, sir, "truth is mighty and will prevail."

More anon. T. B. F.

Ladies' Department.

From "Records of Five Years," by Grace Greenwood.

The Baby in the Prison.

A few years ago I visited a grand model prison, conducted on the solitary system.

Slowly we passed down the long, melancholy corridors, now and then entering one of the cells, to exchange a word of human cheer with its lonely inmate—utterly lonely but for the mute companionship of his labor, that primal penalty of sin, transformed into a consolation and a blessing. Occasionally we paused at a cell, but did not enter, being invited by the warden to look in upon the prisoner through a minute loop-hole in the heavy iron door.

Thus I gazed upon some of the most hardened and hopeless criminals in the penitentiary, as they bent over lap-stone or loom, or stood at the carpenter's bench, all unconcious that a human eye was dwelling on them, watching the dull gloomy face, the mechanical movements, with a sorrowful awe, a sombre curiosity, a shuddering yet yearning pity. The women looked thinner, paler, more haggard and desponding than the men, though some seemed making a desperate effort at defiance. It is hard to defy solitude, silence and that dismal annihilation of identity, where one's very name is merged in the number of a prison-cell.

Evidently these things told more upon their spirits than on those of the male prisoners, and the more quiet and monotonous nature of their occupations seemed to weary and wear upon them. Their eyes met ours with a dull and stony expression, or retreated with shy, evasive glances. Yet the most sad or sullen among them followed us from the cell door, with a look of longing and mournful envy more touching than the wildest appeal for freedom and human companionship.

On the floor of one these cells we found a little child, a baby-girl, somewhat less than a year old. The sight surprised me, as the appearance of La povera pacciola, the poor little flower, springing up from between the flagstones of his prison-yard, surprised the sad captive of Fenestralla. A pale and sickly blossom this seemed, though not without a certain plaintive beauty in her wan and wistful little face. She was very fair, too fair. There seemed no sunshine in her veins, no stir of life in the pale-golden hair which hung dejectedly about her waxen forehead.

The eyes were blue, but of the dull uncertain hue of violets that have grown in the deep shade. I fancied they might have caught all they lacked of light and color from the gleam of running waters, or the rich depth of summer skies. They had, too, a strange blank look—from striking ever against dull prison walls, I thought. They certainly had not the eager, distant reaches of expression, flashing out from the eyes of happier children. Was the infant's sight dwarfed to suit the dimensions of its mother's cell?

How strange and sad it seemed! The earth had almost made its mighty revolution around the sun, passing through all the wonderful changes of the seasons, through the countless phenomena of nature, since this baby was born in the prison; and she knew nothing yet of spring's fair bloom, of summer's glory, of autumn's ripeness, of winter's splendor, nothing of winds, or waves, or woods, or birds, of skies, or stars, or rain, or snow. I fear her little feet had never been set in the grass, her little arms never been thrown round a pet or a playfellow. I fear she had never looked into the heart of a rose or the face of a little child. Surely the sight of either would have kindled a faint momentary flush in her palid cheeks.

It was a cloudy, showery day, and double gloom pervaded the prison. Suddenly the sun shone out and sent a glad beam through the high, narrow, grated window, to fall on the prison floor, beside the child. For the first time I saw the little creature smile as she bent forward and clutched eagerly at the dancing ray. It was a pretty yet piteous sight, that instinctive, hungry grasp at her small ration of God's free sunshine—her crumb fallen from the Master's table—while the outer world were feasting half unconscious, and all too unthankful, on the rich, life-giving bounty.

In another instant a pitiless cloud swept over the sun, and the radiant stranger was gone. Then the bereaved baby cried, in a silent, old way, which showed one that tears were more native to her than smiles. The mother took her up and strove to comfort her with a few feeble love words and a languid caress. Then I regarded the mother. She was little more than a child herself, "a going on eighteen," she said; and looked a weak, inoffensive creature, with no muscle or fibre, desponding, listless—a frail and sorry thing for the law to wreak itself against.

The babe ceased weeping presently, but began again, as we drew nearer, hiding her face against her child-mother's breast. "Don't mind her, ladies," said the mother; she is a puny, scary thing. She ain't used to strangers, and don't seem to take kindly to prison life, for all she was born to it. I hope she will be better when we get out, but I don't know. You see, she did not have a fair chance at the start, I fretted so much 'fore she was born, and a good bit after. She don't know what it is to be lively and cherry, like other children. I think a little more of the fresh, open air would do her good, and she ought to see more folks, especially young folks. I doubt I am a poor hand at brightening her up, I feel so odd, and it's so dismal here."

"Could not some friend take the child away and care for it till your term is out?" I asked.

"I haven't got any friends that know I am here but one, and he's in too," she replied, with a faint flush. "Some of the prison visitors have offered to take care of her, but I can't live without her. I should fret myself to death in a little while, and I ain't fit to die. I expect to have a hard time to live, when I get out; but if I don't go wrong again, it will be because of baby. 'Pears to me God has got a hold of me there."

Let us trust that he has—a sure, eternal hold! Let us hope that this sorrowful picciola, this little drooping flower, springing from a sinful love, bedewed with tears of shame, nurtured in prison gloom, may yet instruct the mother's simple heart in the divine lesson of virtue, and breathe into it the balm of God's peace.

This young mother, I was afterwards told, was sent here for larceny, for a term of two years. She had been a servant girl, and had stolen from her mistress a diamond brooch. Whether from the promptings of evil counsel, or the sudden, wild temptation of girlish vanity, or from an insane, inborn propensity for thieving, she committed the crime, I know not. At all events the penalty was a hard one. Sure the poor girl was too young to be beyond the hope of reformation through milder means. For all the diamonds in Victoria's crown, I would not deprive an unfortunate sister, so young and but lately so innocent, of God's free air and sunshine for two years, condemn her to meet her time of peril and of pain, to bring forth her first baby in a prison-cell.

A MAN IN A MILLION.—Mr. Beecher relates the following incident in one of his sermons:

Not long ago a gentleman who was engaged in the oil business had made some twelve or fifteen thousand dollars, and he concluded that he had made enough—extraordinary as it may seem—and that he would wind up his affairs and come home. I do not believe one of you would have done it! Fifteen thousand dollars! Why, that is just enough to bait the trap of mammon. Well, he wound up his affairs, and was on the point of leaving, when he was met by a young man of his acquaintance, (I believe they both reside in New York,) who had invested six thousand dollars, all he had, in an experimental well, and had been boring and boring until he had given out in discouragement, and coming to this man he said: "I shall lose six thousand dollars if I am obliged to take up my interest in that well," and begged him to take it off his hands. "I am selling out and not taking on," says the man.

But the young man plead with him, and out of personal kindness he said: "Very well, I will take it." In two days they struck a vein in this well, and it was an immensely fruitful well, and he sold his share for two hundred thousand dollars. The young man was present, and saw the check drawn on New York for the amount, and he felt like death, and mourned and said: It is always my luck; I am always a little too late." And the man said: "You may take ten thousand of it if you want" The young man thought he was jesting, but he assured him that he was not, and said: "I will make it twenty thousand, if it will do you any good." "O," said he, "I will make it fifty thousand." "Well," said he, "take the whole of it, I do not want it. Give me the six thousand, and you may have the advantage of the good luck." And so he gave the young man the advantage of the two hundred thousand. All of you that would have done that may rise up.

A SINGULAR DISCOVERY.—A Western exchange says that two men were recently engaged in securing drift-wood on the Mississippi, when they noticed, at some distance from the bank, a large trunk. As it seemed sound, they exerted themselves to bring it in, and, with much difficulty, succeeded. On examining their prize they found that one end had been partly split open, and appeared to have been filled up with moss or leaves. The curiosity of the men was excited, and they went to work, and by inserting wedges in the crack, succeeded in splitting the log open, when they discovered that it was hollow on the inside, and that the cavity was partially filled up with what, at first sight, appeared to be the full form of a man, wrapped up in a buffalo robe.

Naturally, their nerves were a little shaken at so unexpected a sight, but at length they sufficiently recovered themselves to prosecute the examination. They removed the buffalo robe, which, although bearing indications of great age, was still unbroken, and discovered inside the skeleton of a man, the flesh entirely wasted away, but the bones still adhering together, and preserving the form and outline complete. Beside the bones of this departed brave were found, it is said, a tomakawk, a quiver full of arrows and a bow, all exhibiting marks of great age, and doubtless having been preserved from decay by the exclusion of the air.

Sunday School Collections.

The Missionary Advocate reports 70 dollars received from a Mission Sunday-school at the North. Some of the children brought a few pennies at one of the sessions, and inquired whether the teachers were "going to take up a collection?" The teachers taking the hint, received the pennies, encouraged the practice, and at the year's end, had seventy dollars.

We commend this practice to all of our Sunday-schools. On the Opelousas District it is made the duty of each superintendent to see that a collection is taken at every Sunday-school session, and last year the school at Franklin, by this means, obtained fifteen dollars for singing books; five dollars for Sunday-school papers, and five dollars for the Sunday-school Union. We say to all "Go and do likewise." D.

The Internal Revenue of the Government, from the City of New York, reached $35,706,588 in 1866, against $37,158,412 in 1865, $18,340,773 in 1864, $7,912,105 in 1863, and $1,011,765 in 1862. The revenue from this City in the last calendar year was more than a tenth of the aggregate excise revenue of the National Treasury collected in all the States of the Union in the last fiscal year.

The City is divided into seven collection Districts, the most important being that denominated the Thirty-second District, which has yielded $27,591,697 to the National Treasury since it was organized in 1862. The next in point of magnitude of the Government income is the Fourth District. It has paid into the Treasury $22,344,480 since October, 1862. The Eighth District has yielded an income of $21,313,610; the Sixth District of $12,831,370; the Ninth District of $5,709,005; the Fifth District of $5,338,733; and the Seventh District of $5,098,848, since they were organized.

N. Y. Times.

THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.—The editor of the Church Almanac for 1867 has compiled the following statistics of the Episcopal Church in the United States:

Dioceses	34
Bishops	44
Priests and deacons	2,486
Whole number of Clergy	2,530
Parishes	2,305
Ordinations—Deacons	98
" Priests	86
Candidates for holy orders	236
Churches consecrated	33
Baptisms— infants	23,974
" Adults	6,527
" Not stated	898
Confirmations	16,296
Communicants—added	14,183
" Present number	161,224
Marriages	9,900
Burials	16,828
Sunday school teachers	17;570
Sunday school scholars	157,813
Contributions	$3,051,669 94

Acknowledgement.

I hereby acknowledge the receipt of the following amounts from the 10th U. S. Colored Artillery Regiment for the Orphan's Home Society:

Surgeon Wm. H. Mather, $5; Capt. John H. Varney, $5; Major Albert Loring, $5; Lt. G. W. Knight, $5.

From Co. "A," received of Chas. Phillips, $2 50; L. Washington, $2; A. Robinson, $1.75; W. King and P. Dalone, each $1. A. Spencer, M. Clay and E. Hill, each, 50 cents. Total from Co., $9 75.

From Co. "B," received of J. Marriday, $1.

From Co. "C," received of H. Givens, $1.

From Co. "D," received of Sylvester Caffrey, John Robinson, George Hayden and Perry Brown, each $5. Jesse Miles, $4. Bristow Smoothe, $3 25. John Jones, T. Arms, H. Magee and J. Rhodes, each $2. Jas. Taylor. $1 50. G. Mitchel, P. Buohoist, L. Brown, J. Bicum, G. Brown, W. Bean and J. Rollins, each $1. O. George, J. Henderson, A. Jackson, F. Morrow, J. Nelson, L. Poplar and H. Scott, each 50 cents. C. Vabass, 25 cents Total from Co., $47 50.

From Co. "F," received of Richard Randolph, $5. J. Vollaire, C. Wilson, S. Young, each $2. J. Camel and S. Hed, each $1. E. Freeman, Wm. Turner, G. Washington, H. Washington, each 50 cents. Total from Co., $15 25.

From Co. "G," received of F. Ellis, John Gantt, M. Rope, R. Thomas, J. Thomas, Wm. Vickers and Dudley Warner, each, $2,00. L. Simms, $1,50. G. Brown, J. Anderson, R. Richard, J. Basile, J. A. Brown, D. Brown, S, Collins, S. Crowder, R. Carter, C. Coleman, A. Fernandez, F. Green, P. Jackson, W. Johnson, D. Madison, S. McLain, F. Orwait, John Paul, E. Prorant, W. Romas, J. Foney, C. H. Turner. H. T. Thompson, G. B. Washington, V. Williams each, $1,00. J. Williams, 80 cents; P, Carter, 75 cents. M. Smith, E. Brown, M, Enoch, J, Scippear, each, 50 cents; J. Eli, 25 cents. Total from Co., $48,30.

From Co. "H," received of Wm. Thompson, $2,50. E. Augustus and O. Ross, each, $2,00. N. Ellis, H. Alexander, B. Bridget, L, Turner, N. Young and J. Philip, each, $1. Paul Martin, J. Richards, R. Smith, each, 50 cents. J. Brisco, S. Ray, S. Williams, each, 25 cents. Total from Co., $14,75.

From Co. "I;" received of Thomas Watson, 50 cents. A. Mitchel, 25 cents.

From Co. "K," received of Dominick Cavorick and Peter Murphy, each $5. S. William and M. Smith, each $2. Thomas Marbro, Leon Jones, Walter Henry, H. Eugene, R. Morgan, R. Allen, each $1. D. Strother, 75 cents. S. Whatesley, 50 cents. Total from Co. $21 25.

From. Co. "L," received of J. Meride, H. Miles, each $1. John Henry, 75 cents. Total from Co., $2 75.

From Co. "M," received of R. A. Smith, J. Wesley, W. Allen, G. Watkins, M. Marcellan, L. Arrapas, T. Griffin, each $1. Total from Co., $7.

Total from the Regiment, - - $188 05

W. B. ARMSTRONG,
Treas. Orphan's Home Society.

Information Wanted.

By Ellen Jackson, of the City of Washington, D. C., who desires information concerning her aunt named Ellen Thomas. Ellen Jackson did belong to a man named Wm. A. Linton, in Washington. Her brother Syles was in Leesburg, Va.,—did belong to a man named Henry Harrison. Also a brother named Wm. Jackson, and one Nat Jackson.

ELLEN JACKSON, New Orleans.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR.

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in COLD water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT,
No. 71 Nassau street,
Mh2m1 New York City.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South.

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STREET,

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.
2—eowtf

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S
LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No 64 to 74 Washington street,
New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adveriser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,
Gen'l Agent for United States,
rl0—1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine al Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark- & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12—3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism,

By I. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

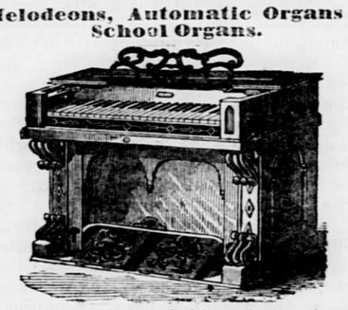
BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.



Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores through out the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans. Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London, Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.
87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

—o—

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,
MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.
Street Rails,
STRAP RAILS.
OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

—o—

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES, ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S
SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"
PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS
—OF THE—
MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree" [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL

FREEDMEN'S SAVING

AND

TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
P. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,
THOS. J. DURANT.

THE BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS OF DENMARK and the young Czarewitch of Russia; Eminent American Divines, including the Reverend Doctors Stevens, Thompson, Durbin, McClintock, Morris, Janes, Simpson, Whedon, Ames, Nast, Elliott, and Haven; also, Hon. J. M. Howard, Capt. E. B. Ward, and Keri-Keri, an Australian Cannibal; "Your Likeness," by Rev. Dr. Weston; Self-Government: Pope's Essay on Man, etc., in February number Phrenological Journal. Only 20 cents, or $2 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

DOCTOR

L. Q. C. WISHART'S

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL!!

A GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE CURE OF

THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safe and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the Pine Tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system.

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs.

It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Blind and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, and Diptheria, etc., etc., etc.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

There is not a medicine discovered that has so much power to dissolve the thick mucus that stops up the wind passages of the lungs as the Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which subdues the fever and inflammation that destroy the power and vitality of the lungs, and consign the patient to the grave. We say to all whose lungs are affected, use Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial with great confidence, as it has restored thousands of cases to health that were hopelessly give up to die.

COLDS AND COUGHS

are speedily cured by the use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it does its work at once, and the patient is cured before other medicines would have had time to have any beneficial effect.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR SCROFULA.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial will purify the blood and cleanse it, of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores internal and external, Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, and all Skin Diseases are especially cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it is good to be applied internally and externally in the above cases, as it has great power to heal where it comes in contact with the human flesh.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

is a great remedy for Chronic Croup and Diptheria, which is sending thousands and thousands of children to a premature grave. It can be cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

Out of ten thousand cases where it has been tried in the past two years, it has never missed a case where it was taken in time. All families should have it on hand, as it gives instant relief in Croup and Diptheria.

BLIND AND BLEEDING PILES.

Thousands of cures of this most painful and dangerous complaint are now enjoying the blessings of health by the use of the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Its great healing properties will stop the bleeding and pain immediately.

CONSTIPATION OF THE BOWELS.

Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is a great remedy for costiveness, as it acts upon the surface of the stomach, and causes a flow of gastric juice, enabling the stomach rapidly to digest the food, which give health and vigor to the bowels, and causes regular evacuations. Let no one that is suffering from constipation of the bowels neglect to use the Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND GRAVEL

are speedily and permanently cured by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. It subdues the inflammation in the Kidneys, and in Gravel it dissolves and carries away the sediment which forms what is called stone in the bladder.

ASTHMA AND COUGH.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial gives instantaneous relief in cases of Asthma and Whooping Cough. It often cures whooping before it has run half its course; as it acts at once upon the phlegm and mucus, and expels them from the throat, and the sufferer is relieved. In cases of Asth-

DR. WISHART'S DYSPEPSIA PILLS WITH THE CORDIAL,

as they have never been known to fail to cure that dis-

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial acts with great power upon the Liver, and restores it to a speedy action, giving it a healthy secretion by its cooling and equalizing principle.

THE CAUSES OF CONSUMPTION IN THE LUNGS.

A sharp and poisonous corroding humor, either coming from other parts, or breeding in the lungs. From our own observation, we conclude that of ninety-six out of every hundred that die with consumption, their disease originated first from Dyspepsia—indigestion. The food fermenting, souring and rottening in the stomach, creating a poisonous catarrh, which is drawn by the brain to the head, passing through its different ramifications, creating inflammation throughout its course. The brains, eyes, and all the organs of the head receiving its poisonous and corroding effect, uniting together, they struggle to relieve themselves from its grasp, hence comes dizziness, dimness of vision, headache, and staggering in walking. This phlem and catarrh is discharged from the head to the throat, falling on the bronchial tubes filling up the air passages of the lungs, and if suffered to remain there, will chicken, corrode, and breed ulcers in the lungs; then come ugh and consumption. We say to the sick, use with great perseverence, one bottle after another, until it has had power enough to dissolve the mucus and phlegm which stop up the air passages, and expectorate it from the lungs.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

☞ In all cases of Dyspepsia with Consumption use

DR. WISHART'S

Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

WITH THE

TAR CORDIAL.

L. Q. C. WISHART, M. D.,
Office and Store 10 North Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. of America.

WHOLESALE AGENTS:

BARNES, WARD & CO., 24 Magazine street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

☞ Sold by all Druggists. mh3 1y

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy
Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES; plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops. Prices $75, $90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS.

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.

HOMŒOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

R. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton seed and "aa" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Line Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Malden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

DR. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,
127 CARONDELET STREET,
Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city ☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten."
ffeb3l

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music, Music Books and Music Merchandize in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mrl0-1y

VICK'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

OF

HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the.

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost of postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my catalogue. Address

Jan18 JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 10. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1867. Whole No.—60.

Poetry.

The Infant to its Mother.

Oh! cradle me on thy knee, mamma,
And sing the holy strain
That soothed me last, as you fondly press'd
My glowing cheek to your soft white breast
For I saw a scene when I slumbered last,
That I fain would see again.

And smile as you then did smile, mamma,
And weep as you then did weep,
Then fix on me thy glistening eye,
And gaze and gaze till the tear be dry,
Then rock me gently and sing and sigh,
Till you lull me fast asleep.

For I dreamed a heavenly dream, mamma,
While slumbering on thy knee,
And I lived in a land where forms divine
In kingdoms of glory forever shine,
And the world I'd give if the world were mine,
Again that land to see.

I fancied we roamed in a wood, mamma,
And we rested as under a bough;
Then near me a butterfly flaunted in pride,
And I chased it away through the forest wide,
And the night came on and I lost my guide,
And I knew not what to do.

My heart grew sick with fear, mamma,
And I loudly cried for thee,
But a white-robed maiden appeared in the air,
And she flung back her curls of golden hair,
And she kissed me softly ere I was aware,
Saying, "Come pretty babe with me.

My tears and fears she 'guiled, mamma,
And led me far away,
We entered the door of the dark, dark tomb;
We passed through a long, long vault of gloom;
Then opened our eyes on a land of bloom,
And a sky of endless day.

And heavenly forms were there, mamma,
And lovely cherubs bright;
They smiled, when they saw me, but I was amazed,
And wondering around me I gazed and gazed:
And songs I heard, and sunny beams blazed
All glorious in the land of light.

But soon came a shining throng, mamma,
Of white-winged babes to me;
Their eyes looked love, and their sweet lips smiled,
And they marvelled to meet with an earth-born child,
And they gloried that I from the earth was exiled,
Saying, "Here, love, blest shalt thou be."

Then I mixed with that heavenly throng, mamma,
A cherub and seraphim fair;
And saw as I roamed thro' the regions of peace,
The spirits which came from the world of distress,
And there was the joy no tongue can express,
For they knew no sorrow there.

Do you mind when sister Jane, mamma,
Lay dead a short time agone?
How you gazed on the sad and lovely wreck,
With a full flood of woe you could not check,
And your heart was so sad you wished it would break,
But it loved, and you, aye, sobbed on.

But oh! had you been with me, mamma,
In the realms unknown to care,
And seen what I saw, you had ne'er had cried,
Though they buried pretty Jane in the grave when she died:
For shining with the blest and adorned like a bride,
Sweet sister Jane was there.

Do you mind of that sickly old man, mamma,
Who came so late to our door,
When the night was dark and the tempest loud,
And his heart was weak but his soul was proud,
And his ragged old mantle served for his shroud,
Ere the midnight watch was o'er?

And think what a weight of woe, mamma,
Made heavy each long drawn sigh,
As the good man sat in papa's old chair,
While the rain dropped from his thin gray hair,
And fast as the big tear of speechless care,
Ran down from his glazing eye.

And think what a heavenward look, mamma,
Flashed through each trembling eye,
As he told how he went to the Baron's stronghold,
Saying, "Oh! let me in, for the night is so cold!"
But the rich man cried, "Go sleep in the wood,
For we shield no beggars here."

Well, he was in glory too, mamma,
As happy as the blest can be;
He needed no alms in the mansions of light,
For he sat with the patriarchs, clothed in white,
And there was not a seraph had a crown more bright,
Nor a costlier robe than he.

Now sing, for I fain would sleep, mamma,
And dream as I dreamed before;
For sound was my slumber and sweet was my rest,
While my spirit in the kingdom of life was a guest,
And a heart that has throb'd in the realms of the blest
Can love this world no more.

Remarkable Revival in South Africa.

UNDER THE LABORS OF REV. WM. TAYLOR, OF THE M. E. CHURCH.

The Wesleyan Missionary Notices for January are nearly filled with letters from different stations in South Africa, where his labors, or the efforts of those who have entered into them, were continuing to be productive of blessed and abundant fruit, in the awakening of the very heathen, in the conversion of the nominally Christian, and in the general edification of the Church and its ministers. The letters date between September 25 and October 27, and cover a considerable width of ground, from Algoa Bay to beyond the Umzimvubu The tale of results comprises some thousands as having been added to the number of the saved. The bulk of them, perhaps, are persons who were already members, or at least hearers; but many hundreds appear to have been "brought in," who had before no tangible connection with the mission. The immense majority are natives; but not a few Europeans are among the new converts. The Queen's Town circuit, for example, had added above a hundred Europeans, besides colored men. Many of the Africans who have participated in the revival were, in some parts, in the habit of attending upon the ministry of missionaries of non-Wesleyan bodies At Hankey, a station of the London Missionary Society, one hundred and fifty had become earnest seekers for salvation; and at Kat River, another, three hundred had been added The accounts open with one striking proof of the divine power that was being put forth. A gentleman, un-named, attended the meetings held in the Graham's Town District. "When," says a private letter, this person was at a place the name of which is suppressed, "he stood up without hesitation, in answer to an invitation from Mr. Taylor, to 'tell what Jesus had done for him, and encourage the seekers,' and before a chapel full of people, bore testimony to what the Lord had done for him, 'I have lived,' said he, 'forty years in sin; tried horse-racing, cards, billiards, and other worldly amusements, and never knew what happiness was, either at home or in the world, until the Lord pardoned my sins, and ever since then I have been happy.'" Another European convert at the same place, avowed that, though he had ten children, "they had never till then heard their father pray."

With regard to the general effect of Mr. Taylor's visits, we have the testimony of Mr. Green, of Bathurst, that a tide of spiritual influence everywhere attended him. This missionary saw revivals in England, "many years ago," but never saw so remarkable a revival as this, which he compares to the "deep, calm flow of the river of life." The stir made among the missionary brethren is indicated by many tokens. On one occasion we find three of them walking a distance of five and twenty miles to join in the glorious work, and hear Mr. Taylor's last sermon, which seems to have been as fruitful as the first. Mr. Fish, of King William's Town, speaks, indeed, of the work as going on "slowly and gradually," none the worse on that account, perhaps; yet, in another part of the same letter he states that eighty persons, chiefly young, were converted in three services, with forty more at the same place. The reality and depth of the work appear by various signs. One is, the confession of an individual: "You heard me once tell the minister that I had found peace. I told a lie; but now God has really converted me."

The work had attracted the attention of the colonists, and been discussed in the newspapers. One writer in a local journal, avowing himself a member (and reported to be a minister) of the Established Church, argues that the great religious results Mr. Taylor aims at, and (under God) secures, by his preaching, may well cast into the shade all that has given rise to hostile criticism. Another, in another paper, vindicates the work from the charge of creating confusion, and of promoting enthusiasm, in the style of apologies for revivals published in this country in former years. Mr. Dugmore answers for himself. "All this 'religious excitement,'" he says, "does not evaporate in mere feeling." The change in manners and in action displayed by those whom God has brought to himself by this man's instrumentality has astonished and confounded their former associates. Leaders in vice have become champions of religion. Men of profligate lives have, with bitter shame, made confession, and are endeavoring to repair the evil of their former courses by zealous and courageous activity in a new one. Drunkards who were the terror of their families, and the pests of their neighborhood, have renounced the use of intoxicating liquors; and the very alteration in their outward appearance proclaims the change within. Profane swearers are shuddering at the recollection of their favorite oaths and blasphemies. Frauds and wrongs have been acknowledged, and restitution has been made. Men who had taken advantage of the detected villainy of others to escape from their own responsibilities, have come forward and paid the demands which they had asserted were forgeries. Long standing family discords have been healed; and quarrels that had lasted for years have ended in overtures for reconciliation by those most aggrieved. These practical effects of this preaching tell their own tale."

The power of Mr. Taylor's preaching upon the natives was, humanly speaking, attributable to the point with which he addressed himself to their prevailing characters and besetting sins. In them, indeed, he raised no small excitement, and what wonder? "Any man of common sense," as Mr. Dugmore observes, "would expect this. Unrestrained by the conventionalities of civilized life, the expression both of joy and grief has, in many cases, been uncontrollable. Mr. Taylor took for his text the Ten Commandments, explaining and applying them, and dwelling especially on the evils to which the Kaffirs are specially addicted—theft, falsehood, and licentiousness. Persons who listened to the entire discourse remarked, that, had the preacher been twenty years on the frontier, he could not have preached a more suitable sermon. The usual effects followed." Among those who looked on was a gentleman who talked of "calling in the civil powers to put a stop to such proceedings." But no such proposal was heard when the drunken and idolatrous practices of some of these same natives disturbed the whole neighborhood. However, it was not all noise and confusion, even among the natives. 'The grief of two thirds of the number," writes one of the missionaries, "was silent grief, or expressed in whispered earnestness." In fine, "thousands in the two districts of Graham's and Queen's Towns," says Mr. Shepstone, "are converted to God, and rejoicing in God their Savior;" and the "irresistible influence was still in operation."—Christian Advocate.

Tour to the East.

ROUTES TO JERUSALEM—EGYPT—JOPPA ON THE SEA.

(Editorial.)

Spring is the most delightful season of the year in which to visit the Holy Land, whether to enjoy the pleasures of the climate, or behold the magnificence of the scenery. Then the skies are bright, the air balmy, and the vernal sun lights up the landscape with a thousand forms of beauty; sparkling fountains are unsealed, silver brooks go murmuring by, and wild cascades, leaping from their rocky heights, come dashing down the mountain side, scattering wreaths of rainbow spray; then the valleys and hills are clothed with verdure, the fields are green with grains and grasses, the fig and palm are in blossom, the almond and apricot, the olive and pomegranate are ripening, the cypress and tamarisk, the oak and walnut, the sycamore and poplar, are decked with the clean, fresh foliage of a new year; then, herds of camels and cattle are browsing on the plain, and flocks of sheep and goats go frisking up the hills; then, in all the glens, on all the vast prairie plains, and over all the highest mountains, are flowers blooming—anemones, oleanders, amaranths, arbutuses, poppies, hollyhocks, daisies hyacinths, tulips, pinks, lilies and roses, growing in unbounded profusion, greeting the eye and transforming the land into a garden of flowers. Could Gibbon have seen the Promise Land in all the wealth and beauty of spring, from Dan to Beersheba, he would not have written against it, as unworthy the wisdom of God and the acceptance of a chosen people. In summer the heat is intense, the soil is parched, and the streams are few and scanty. In autumn the air has an unsurpassed balminess, and the time of vintage has come, but the fountains have failed, the physical and animal world languish for refreshing showers, and the bloom of spring is wanting. In winter the rains fall in torrents, the atmosphere is cold and nature is dead.

There are two general routes from New York to Jerusalem: One direct to Joppa or Beirute, over the Atlantic, through the Straits of Gibralter, along the Mediterranean, touching at Sicily, Malta and Alexandria; the other, to Havre, by steamer, and thence by rail to Paris. From the French capitol to the East there is also a choice of routes; from Paris to Strasburg by rail, over the Rhine to Stutgard, to Augsburg, through Bavaria to Vienna, on to Pesth in Hungary, down to Baziasch on the Danube, and descending that noble river to the Black Sea; thence threading the Bosphorus to Constantinople and passing through the Dardanelles to the Mediterranean, touching at Smyrna, Rhodes and Cyprus, and landing at Beirute in Northern Palestine. The other is by rail from Paris to Geneva, thence by rail and coach over one of the Alpine passes to Genoa, or from Paris to Marseilles direct; thence by steamer on the Mediterranean, touching at Leghorn, Civita, Vecchia, Naples, Malta, Alexandria and landing at Joppa, in Southern Palestine.

Having arrived in the East, there are three general routes to Jerusalem. One by rail from Alexandria, in Egypt, to the Isthmus of Suez; thence by camel to Mount Sinai, to Akabah, to Petra, to Beersheba, to Hebron, through the vineyards of Eschol to Bethlehem; thence to Jerusalem, five miles to the north from the city of our Savior's birth; or, landing at Beirute, in Northern Palestine, thence on horseback either along the coast southward to Sidon, to Tyre, to Akka, crossing the foot of Carmel, dipping into the Sea, to Ceasarea; thence turning eastward over the Plains of Sharon to Samaria, to Nablous and Jacob's Well; thence along the beautiful Plain of Mukhnah, over the Heights of Ephraim, to Shiloh, to Bethel, to Gibeah, (the birth-place of King Saul) and thence to Jerusalem, entering the city by St. Stephen's Gate; or from Beirute, ascending the new macadamized road over the Lebanons to Damascus; thence turning to the southwestward, around the base of snow-capped Hermon to the Sea of Galilee by Banias and Ceasarea Philppi, the fountains of the Jordan; thence to Kurun Hattin, through Chorazin, Bethsaida, Capernaum, and Tiberias; thence to Nazareth and Tabor; thence over the Plain of Esdrealon, by Nain and Endor, and Shunum, and Jezreel, to Carmal; thence over the Hills of Samaria to Jerusalem, by Jacob's Well, and Shiloh, and Bethel. Or landing at Joppa and taking the third route, ascend on horseback up the roots of the Judean hills to Ramleh, to Lydda, thence passing the two Bethhorons, and crossing the summit of Scopus, enter Jerusalem by the Damascus Gate.

Of the three routes thus described, the latter is the one by which I reached the Holy City, and is the shortest and most uninteresting of the three. Were I to visit that land again I would choose a fourth, and in some aspects, a novel route, possessing features of new and rare interest. Landing at Beirute and following the coast northward to Tripoli, I would enter the sublime valley of Kadisha and ascend to the cedars of Lebanon, amid profound ravines, through which foaming cataracts rush in wildest grandeur to the sea, and surrounded by beetling cliffs and snow-capped summits, ten thousand feet high, rivaling in the diversity and sublimity of their scenery the grandest of the Alpine passes. Reaching the cedars, I would cross the Lebanon range, covered with a bed of snow to the depth of a hundred feet, and look down upon the noblest landscape in the East; thence descending, I would cross the great plain of the Buka'a to Ba'albeck and linger amid the wonders of ancient ruins; mounting the Anti Libanus I would descend along the embowered banks of the Abana to dwell with Paul in Damascus; passing thence to Mount Hermon, to catch its dews and stand upon its eternal snows, and to Banias, where spring the fountains of the Jordan, I would follow that sacred river to the sea, to sail with Peter, James and John upon its clear waters, and muse amid the silent desolations of the upbraided cities; thence crossing the rugged hills that bound Tiberias on the west, I would sit with Christ upon the Mount of Beatitudes, dwell with Him in Nazareth, stand with Him on Tabor, and sweeping over the Plain of Esdraelon, light my torch on Carmel, drink at Jacob's Well, pray at Bethel, and rest in Jerusalem amid its hallowed memories. Thence making detours eastward and westward, pass southward to Bethelehem, to Hebron, to Beersheba; then, turning to the northwestward, strike the Plain of Philistia at Gaza, where Sampson perished, and following the coast northward linger at Ascalon—a royal city of the Philistines, at Ashdod, where Dagon fell before the Ark; at Joppa where Peter saw Heaven open; at Ceasarea, where Herod died and Paul preached; at Tyre, where Hiram reigned; at Sarepta, where Elijah raised the widow's son; at Sidon, whose famous architects reared the Temple of Solomon, and passing through its gardens of unrivaled beauty, re-embark at Beirute.

Having spent the winter months in Lower Egypt—in Alexandria, the scene of Cleopatra's shame and glory; of Anthony's defeat and Cæsar's triumph; in Cairo, the purest Oriental city in the world; on the Nile, whose gentle waters rocked the infant Moses; at Heliopolis, whose solitary obelisk marks the spot where "Joseph married the daughter of the priest of On;" at Geizeh, whose pyramids of forty centuries look down upon the mutations of time; and at Memphis, where the Pharoahs held their court; and, after a journey over the Arabian peninsular to Mount Sinai, I sailed from Alexandria to Joppa, in the Grand Duke Constantine, a Russian steamer, whose officers were as obliging as the accommodations afforded were excellent.

There are periods in human life when a moment's joy repays the anxious wishings of the past, in the consumation of long maturing plans and in the realization of fondly cherished hopes. Such was the moment to me, when, after a sail of thirty hours, far to the southeast appeared the long coast-line of Philistia, with the hills of Judea beyond. Images, which had lived in my imagination since childhood, assumed the well defined proportions of realities, and the manlier hopes of riper years brightened, as, in less than an hour thereafter, the Grand Duke anchored in the bay of Joppa. As Jaffa has neither harbor nor pier, small boats came out for freight and passengers. Owing to the dangerous reefs which abound along the coast, and also to the violence of the waves, it is impossible at times to land, and the steamer sails northward for the safer haven of 'Akka. The winds of the previous night had caused the sea to roll in long swells, and for a time a landing seemed impracticable. Impatient to tread the sacred soil, we determined to risk the danger, and, ordering a boat, two half-naked Arabs pulled bravely at the oars, the boat rising and falling from six to ten feet with each successive wave. Compelled to pass, on nearing the shore, between two perilous reefs, less than twelve feet apart, it was a moment of triumph, when, having threaded this Syrian needle, we landed at the base of the high rock on which the city stands. Having neither ladder nor rope, an Oriental staircase was improvised. An Arab kneeling upon one knee, we first stepped upon his upright one, then upon his shoulder, and, catching hold of hands reached down from above, sprang to the top of the rock. Our landing place was the Custum-house, a rickety, filthy old shed, where passports and baggage were examined, and where a crowd of donkey-drivers, with their braying asses, greeted us, willing to do any service for money. Following a dragoman through the lane-like streets to a small inn—the only hotel in the town—we immediately prepared to visit the scenes of interest within this ancient city.

(Continued next week.)

The Military Government Bill.

[The following is the full text of the Military Government Bill, which is now the law of the land. We publish the same, together with a copy of the Constitutional Amendment, that our readers may possess true copies thereof.—Ed.]

Whereas, No legal State governments or adequate protection for life or property now exist in the rebel States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Texas and Arkansas; and whereas it is necessary that peace and good order should be enforced in said States until loyal and republican State governments can be legally established; therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said rebel States shall be divided into military districts, and made subject to the military authority of the United States, as hereinafter described, and for that purpose Virginia shall constitute the first district; North and South Carolina the second district; Georgia, Alabama and Florida the third district; Mississippi and Arkansas the fourth district; and Louisiana and Texas the fifth district.

Sec. 2.—And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the President to assign to the command of each of said districts an officer of the army not below the rank of brigadier general, and to detail a sufficient military force to enable such officer to perform his duties and enforce his authority within the district to which he is assigned.

Sec. 3.—And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of each officer assigned as aforesaid to protect all persons in their rights of person and property, to suppress insurrection, disorder and violence, and to punish, or cause to be punished, all disturbers of the public peace, and criminals; and to this end he may allow local civil tribunals to take jurisdiction of and try offenders; or, when in his judgment it may be necessary for the trial of offenders, he shall have power to organize military commissions or tribunals for that purpose; and all interference under color of State authority with the exercise of military authority under this act, shall be null and void.

Sec. 4.—And be it further enacted, That all persons put under military arrest by virtue of this act shall be tried without unnecessary delay, and no cruel or unnecessary punishment shall be inflicted; and no sentence of any military commission or tribunal hereby authorized, affecting the life or liberty of any person, shall be executed until it is approved by the officer in command of the district; and the laws and regulations for the government of the army shall not be affected by this act except in so far as they conflict with its provisions; Provided, That no sentence of death under this act shall be carried into effect without the approval of the President.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That when the people of any of said rebel States shall have formed a constitution of government in conformity with the Constitution of the United States in all respects, framed by a convention of delegates elected by the male citizens of said State twenty-one years old and upward, of whatever race or color, or previous condition, who have been resident in said State for one year previous to the day of such election, except such as may be disfranchised for participation in the rebellion or for felony at common law, and when such constitution shall provide that the elective franchise shall be enjoyed by all such persons as have the qualifications herein stated for election of delegates; and when said constitution shall be ratified by a majority of the persons voting on the question of ratification, who are qualified as electors for delegates, and when such constitution shall have been submitted to Congress for examination and approval, and Congress shall have approved the same, and when said State, by a vote of its legislature elected under said constitution, shall have adopted the amendment to the constitution of the United States, proposed by the Thirty-ninth Congress, and known as article fourteen, and when said article shall have become a part of the Constitution of the United States, said State shall be declared entitled to representation in Congress, and senators and representatives shall be admitted therefrom on their taking the oath prescribed by law, and then and thereafter the preceding sections of this bill shall be inoperative in said State: Provided, That no person excluded from the privilege of holding office by said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States shall be eligible to election as a member of the convention to frame a constitution for any of said rebel States, nor shall any such person vote for members of said convention.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That until the people of the said rebel States shall be by law admitted to representation in the Congress of the United State, any civil government which may exist therein shall be deemed provisional only, and in all respects subject to the paramount authority of the United States at any time to abolish, modify, control or supersede the same; and in all elections to any office under such provisional government, all persons shall be entitled to vote, and none other, who are entitled to vote under the provisions of the fifth section of this act; and no person shall be eligible to any office under any such provisional governments who would be disqualified from holding office under the provisions of the third article of said constitutional amendment.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

ARTICLE XIV.

Section 1.—All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of its laws.

Sec. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, representatives in Congress, executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

(Continued on 2d page)

SEC. 3. No person shall be a senator or representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or under any State, who having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid and comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

SEC. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY. . . . . Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

REV. A. C. MCDONALD.
REV. N. L. BRAKEMAN.
REV. R. K. DIOSSY.
REV. JOS. WELCH.
REV. W. N. DARNELL.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1867.

THE NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

The New Era.

Loyal men breathe freer. The long night of their social and political ostracism is past. The rosy fingers of freedom's dawn have touched the mountain tops. The patriot's patience is rewarded, his sentiments are honored, his fidelity is vindicated. The victories of the sword are assured by the law of the land. Congress has acted nobly, wisely, and the Secretary of State has affixed the seal of his office to the law by which four millions of people are elevated to the rights of citizenship. Such grand events are centennial; they require centuries of preparation for their consummation. They are the indicia of the triumphal march of civilization; they are the corners of history, around which progress sweeps in her onward course.

With what spirit should we hail such glorious events? Certainly neither with pride, nor haughtiness, nor contempt for others, but rather with that gratitude which bespeaks dependence on God; with that meekness, which ever becomes true greatness; with that kindness, which "works no ill to its neighbor." Decisive for the right, steadily pursue it; strong in convictions of duty, boldly avow them; conscious of success, meekly wear the honors Heaven hath awarded.

New Men.

What Louisiana most needs and needs now, is a new and better class of office holders. Too little attention has been paid in the past to the moral character of our public men. It is not enough that a candidate for office has intellectual fitness and undoubted loyalty; he should also have those moral qualities, which will command public respect, and preserve him from the corruptions of party. Such men can be found, and in the inauguration of our new political era, such men, and only such, should be put forward as the standard-bearers of those great principles for which our armies fought, and which the National Congress has embodied in its recent action for the reconstruction of the Southern States. We do not hesitate to express the opinion, that the Loyal Party of Louisiana, has suffered more from the character of many who were its professed adherents, than from any other cause. Connected with that party were men of incorruptible honesty; of sterling integrity; of temperate and virtuous habits, but their influence for good was paralyzed by political associates, whose known official dishonesty, and low, immoral lives cast the shadow of suspicion upon all with whom they held party relations.

The latter sought office for money, and then spent their ill-gotten gains in places where virtue is a stranger, and where decent men never go. Revolution threw such men to the surface, and by the social and political demoralization which always follows war, they rose to positions of trust and power. Not a little of the opposition to the Union cause in New Orleans, on the part of the better class of our citizens who sympathized with the rebellion, had its inspiration from this source; and to this cause, more than to any other, may be attributed the reluctance of many union men, whether of the South, or from the North, to participate in political matters in Louisiana. It were better to be defrauded by our enemies, than cheated by our freinds.

Now we insist upon it, that we should have New Men, to fill all places of power and trust within the gift of the people. It is not only right in itself that such men should be elected, but they will command greater respect, exert a higher influence, and harmonize the discordant elements of the hour. We shall go for such men only. And we counsel our friends that they are bound by every principle of human and Divine law, and by every sentiment of justice and virtue, to elevate to official dignity and honor, those whose hands are clean of bribes, and whose antecedents for honesty and morality are well established.

The New South.

In a recent number of a Richmond paper there was an editorial calling upon the Southern people to throw aside the old political leaders, saying, "the time has come for new men and new ideas." It does seem, now the chains being broken that kept the southern people bound to one idea, that there should be sought a higher standard of excellence by the people, in all that pertains to a wider diffusion of knowledge, a loftier code of morals and a nobler christian spirit. There be those who if they would but remember to forget that the hour of strife has passed, might achieve triumph in the paths of peace far nobler than those written on the field of blood. In their minds some remembrance of the old hatred still lingers that should have died out with the last lingering sparks of the camp fires of the battle field. They would rather see the South outstripped in commercial prosperity, the arts, and sound learning, by its natural rival—rather see her clad in ancient error, crouching beneath the spirit of a mean pride, than to see her lifted, enobled and spiritualized by thoughts not of her own "clime, complexion and degree." Richmond was the last quarter we should have thought of turning our eyes to in the hope of witnessing signs of progress, and therefore we hail with double delight this indication that there is at least one editor of the old school, who dares advise the permanent interment of the dead politicians, placemen and tricksters, and as well the choosing of men who are actuated by the ideas that may be said to govern the age. God in his own way has beaten down the partition walls that shut in the black night of ignorance, and Low is beginning the new day, the new birth—we may call it the new South. We are to have freedom in these States, for all time. With freedom of action comes freedom of thought, and where there is freedom of thought, education is sure to follow. Labor, and especially educated labor, ennobles all that is touched by it—for by it nations become great, and man advances. It, so to speak, harnesses science and the arts for man's advantage; it gives increase, wealth, culture. A noble fate lies hid in the lap of these broad fields. These sunny lands are beckoning to the suffocating laborers of the old world, to come hither and breathe a new life. The builder must come with his rule, the artisan with his nimble fingers, the laborer with his iron-like muscle. And you, oh brother of the North, must come with your red blood and quick brain. For in this wokr of reformation there is a share for all. But there is another—higher, holier work, that crowns material prosperity, and without which the South can never be made new. It is cheering to believers in Divine Providence to feel assured that, though a missionary may be struck down here, a church or a press destroyed there, the great work of humanizing and christianizing the land will go on in the face of all opposition. To bear up under the scoffs and frowns of bitter prejudice requires stout-hearted workers; and as we cannot all enter the field as laborers, and as some of us must "stand and wait," we should at least strengthen the hands of those who sow the seeds of a higher christianity, a nobler civilization.

Rev. Dr. Curry on Personalities.

In our issue of Feb. 16, we took occasion to refer to a labored article by the edtor of the Christian Advocate, on the "Church and the Free Negro." We attempted to establish three points:—I. That there are not half a million of free blacks in the Northern States. II. That those who are there are not a neglected class. III. That our church has a sincere and deep interest in their welfare.

We hesitated to controvert the positions of the chief editor of our Church, and especially of one who is deservedly distinguished for his controversial abilities; but the interests of our mission in the South demanded a reply, and we sought to vindicate our church to the extent of our ability.

But our response offended our venerable confrere, and he has called us to an account. He complains of our use of "personalities," but we think the complaint is unfounded. Since reading his strictures upon us, we have carefully reread our own article, and failed to find in the whole column but one word that can be considered a "personality." The word "spleen," to which he refers, was selected, not as indicative of motive, but as descriptive of the spirit which momentarily possessed him. Of man's motives we claim no right to judge; God only is capable of such judgment. But the spirit of a man—as manifested in word or act, comes properly within the province of human judgment. Pope has well said.

"In noble minds some dregs remain,
Not yet purged off, of spleen and sour disdain."

But while we sincerely regretted our necessity to dissent from the expressed views of one "with whom we have held long and intimate friendship," yet we have just cause of complaint, that in his reply, he himself should deal so largely in "personalities." What has the "administration in our New Orleans mission" to do with the controversy in hand? Wholly foreign to the subject, it is alluded to in a manner to excite suspicion. Like any other man, he has a right to his "misgivings," and where so much is at stake, he is bound as a member of the Board, to see that an investigation is immediately instituted. Insinuations are more to be deprecated than personalities. For the present, it is enough for us to know, that the "administration of the New Orleans mission" has received, both orally and by letter, the cordial approval of the three bishops, who have severally had the supervision of this "mission." Two of them have visited New Orleans, since our arrival, and after a thorough examination, as is their custom, they had no word of censure to pronounce.

And it is no insignificant fact, that every important movement in this Department has been made, either at their suggestion or with their approval; and whatever may be the "misgivings" of my venerable friend or the "doubts" of others, the Missionary Board has approved the administration of this mission. At his leisure the Doctor can step to the Mission Rooms, opposite his office, where he will find the official correspondence complete. Had we reason to believe that there are as many "misgivings" on the part of the Church, as to the administration of the mission in New Orleans, as there are as to the editorial management of the Christian Advocate, we should certainly feel distressed. And now in view of all the facts it remains for others to decide, whether personal allusions are more to be deprecated than insinuations, which have no foundation in truth.

The Freedmen must be Educated.

Statistics reveal the startling fact that less than one seventh of the colored children in New Orleans attend school. In the country parishes the proportion of those in school is said to be still less, presenting the fearful spectacle of a large majority growing up without any adequate training for the duties of life. This is a state of things that demands immediate and serious attention. Evidently a great wrong and an alarming blunder has been committed somewhere, and one which must be immediatly repaired or untold mischief must result. It is not the fault of the colored people, for everywhere, with wonderful unanimity, they have manifested an intense anxiety for the education of their children. At one time thousands of them were in school and were making gratifying proficiency in their studies. That many of these schools have been discontinued is but another of the bitter fruits which have followed the mistaken policy of the administration.

But what is to be done? Twenty thousand colored children in this city are upon the street rapidly acquiring the fearful education which it imparts. Throughout the State the prospects are equally gloomy. The great curse of the old slave system was the growing up in a promiscious herd of the slave children. Left in utter ignorance, bereft of every worthy aspiration, and associating in a condition of half nudity, need we wonder at the rank outgrowth of sensuality that was produced. Their training was equivalent to a street education of the vilest kind, and that there is any virtue or christianity left is so much to the credit of the race. Nor were the results of this fearful education confined solely to the blacks. It was impossible that the children of the planter should escape the contagion. Do what he might, by parental authority, his children would associate sufficiently with the blacks to learn their vices, and thus upon his sons and daughters, as well as upon the poor slave, fell the heavy curse of this degrading institution. The dark cancer had struck its fiery roots to the core of Southern society. Its young men were ruined and even its fairer and better portion, instead of deploring the fearful evil, were led by a terrible infatuation to become the fiercest upholders of a system which was bringing disgrace upon their fathers, brothers, husbands and sons.

The greatest work before the philanthropists of this land is the lifting of the South from the dark, pestilent marsh of its past social life. The task is as difficult as it is imperative. The bitterest prejudice exists in the Southern mind against all efforts for its elevation by any who may be lovers of freedom. Blinded by a prejudice that would discard from their schools all text books whose authorship can be traced to the North; engaged in systematic effort to set aside all northern teachers; determined to give their children a southern and sectional education; they are no less determined to harrass and ostracise from society all who in any way endeavor to elevate the freedmen. Teachers in Freedmen's schools are insulted on the streets and public highways, and systematically sneered at and denounced by the Southern press. Papers, professedly religious, jeer at Biblical Institutes established for the training of colored ministers. Every hindrance which an unreasoning prejudice can invent is made to block up the work of elevating the freedmen.

And yet this policy is most suicidal to its authors. Southern society can never be elevated from the barbarism to which slavery brought, and in which it has left it, to the true standand while there remains an ignorant and uncultured element in the social state. The elevation of freedmen tends equally to the elevation of whites. Leave them a degraded element in community and, by an irrepealable law of the social forces, you bring down the whole fabric of the social state. It is the blindest folly that opposes the education of freedmen. Let him rise. Prejudice in you may be against his elevation, but you have interests at stake in your own children, in public virtue, and in the general prosperity which ought to impel to a wiser course.

A potent reason is now urgently presented for the immediate education of the freedman. The fiat has gone forth that he is to be vested with all the rights and responsibilities of a free citizen of this great Republic. Equally with ourselves, he is to cast the ballot of a free man. Henceforth he is charged with his full measure of responsibility in our government. It is right it should be so, Providence has willed it, and the nation has so decided. It is now irreversable. Under these changed circumstances he is a madman who longer fights against the education of the blacks. They must be educated or the nation will be covered with dishonor. How this great work can be done may form the inquiry of a future article.

From Aberdeen Miss.

A letter from the above named place brings us strange intelligence—strange, but not new, for our readers will remember that we published not long since, similar facts which came to us from Yazoo County, Miss. These things show the necessity of a radical change in the administration of government in the South, and loudly call for and justify the "military bill" of Congress. But to the letter. It is dated Feb. 24th, and says:

"To-day our town has been threatened with a riot. There is a man here who calls himself an officer of the Bureau, and says, he was sent here by the government, and who is enforcing the "Vagrant Laws" of Miss. (They require all colored persons not under contract for the year, by the 20th of January, to be arrested as vagrants.) He has imprisoned a number of persons and they have had to pay $10 or $12 to get out again. He has arrested persons who were working for themselves and families. In one instance a man had gone to a distance to work, leaving his wife here, and leaving money with her to support her while he was away. This "Bureau Officer" arrested her, forced her to contract with a planter, who lives 15 miles from town, and her husband knows nothing of it.

"This man gives us no authority for his acts; he has issued no laws, and we can get no understanding of him, or his business. He has arrested a great many people. He said he had fought five years to free the blacks, and that now he would fight ten years to enslave them again. His course has excited the colored people very much, and the whites fear a riot. To-day we all crowded to the mayor's office to see if we could not get some understanding about the matter, but we got no satisfaction. He told the guards to go to the school-house and arrest all the large boys and girls, and force them to contract, and they did so, and the school was closed for two days. We then went to a lawyer to see if we could not get justice, or defend ourselves. Our lawyer says he will stand by us, but we don't know. Who can we trust? Can't you get the law (the Civil Rights Bill) and send it to us so we can read it to our people and know for ourselves?

"The course this man has pursued will keep many of us from getting pay for last year's work. He forces men to contract with planters who did not pay them last year. It is rumored that the planters pay him for every one he forces to contract with them. We told him we would report to the "higher powers" and they would give us our rights. He told the whites if they did report the military would send troops here, and that frightened them, and they have pursuaded him to change his course. But he does not do right. Send us the law if you can."

Is it not strange that the intelligent and law-abiding (?) people of Mississippi will insist upon enforcing their odious vagrant laws, when General Wood long since notified them that all such laws were null and void? But we say to the poor outraged freedmen, be of good cheer, Uncle Sam will "send the laws" in a few days, and soldiers to enforce them, and you will, indeed, have your "rights." Meanwhile be patient, deliverance is at hand. Let there be no riot—no talk or thought of one. Return not evil for evil, but overcome evil with good. You can well afford to wait a little while longer. You have a stainless record for patience and forbearance; do not blacken it at the last, by yielding to anger and violence. Be like your Divine Master. Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, and pray for those who despitefully use you and persecute you.

Why is it?

We have often been asked by friends at the North and the colored people at the South, why it is that the A. M. E. Church has allied itself with the church south, and pledged opposition to the M. E. Church, which has all along been the steadfast friend of the freedmen. The alliance is indeed a strange one, and to some minds unaccountable, but "there is a cause."

The A. M. E. Church in the south, is not composed of the freedmen, but mainly of "the free people-of-color." And these free-blacks," so called, (tho' many of them have very little African blood in their veins,) were, many of them slaveholders before the war. They were wealthy and intelligent, and some good rebels, withal. And having lost their "property" by the war, they are still unfriendly to the government, and hate the northern churches which helped to kill slavery.

They have a cordial dislike for northern people, and style the colored people who join us, "Yankee niggers." They claim to be the "aristocracy" among American citizens of African descent, and some of them are the most snobbish people living. They look upon freedmen with much the same emotions of disgust with which the royal Caucassian of the south looks upon "poor white trash." They, too, believe in the divinity of slavery, and talk complainingly of "the reverses of the war." With this class the A. M. E. Church had hoped to control the destiny of the colored race, and ride upon the high places of power, and they cannot bear to see "Mother Church" exerting an influence which endangers their prospects for conquest and spoil—political and ecclesiastical. This at once accounts for the strange alliance, and seals the doom of the A. M. E. Church in the South, if we mistake not.

Editorial Items.

REV. DR. NEWMAN will preach in the Hall of the House of Representatives, to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.

THE little society at Ross' Chapel, numbering 60 members, have raised over $188 for the purchase of the ground for their new church. Nearly the whole amount has been paid; most of it was received last Sunday, their first Quarterly Meeting. This society is on the "Mason Plantation," five miles above Carrollton—Joseph Gould, pastor. He is doing a good work, and they must have a new church soon. A large society can be gathered in that locality, if a suitable place of worship can be secured.

THE CHURCH UNION.—We have received regularly The Church Union since its publication. We read each new number with redoubled interest. It is the product of the Christianity of this remarkable age. Fifty years ago such a journal would have had few patrons. In every age of the church there have been some noble spirits who yearned for the "communion of saints" in its higher significance, and who labored for the practical attainment of this Christ-like desire; but it was reserved for our age to publish a journal for the special advocacy of this blessed gospel truth. It was our privilege to be associated with those noble brethren, in their earlier efforts, who are now in the van of this great movement. Though absent from them, we have carried them in our hearts, and have never failed to advocate the sentiments of Christian Union, which we announced in one of the "sermons of the course," some four years ago. And we now assure them that we are still in full accord with them.

It would be an incalculable good, were some of our worthy laymen to place The Church Union in the hands of every minister of Christ in the United States.

THE WEATHER IN NEW ORLEANS.—The weather this month, until the 5th, was very warm and pleasant. The 1st and 2d, the thermometer indicated a temperature of 80 degrees in the shade. On the 3d, 77 degrees. On the 4th, at 9 o'clock, 78 degrees; at noon, 84 degrees, and at 3 o'clock, 82 degrees. On the 5th, at 9 o'clock, 52 degrees, being 30 degrees change during the night. And though not actually cold, yet the change was so great that it appeared cold and many donned their overcoats, and fires were built in many sitting rooms. Towards night it became a little warmer, the thermometer reaching 57 degrees. At 9 o'clock on the 6th, it stood at 56; at 3 o'clock, 53 degrees; and on the 7th, at 7 o'clock, at 44 degrees.

"LANDRETHS' WARRANTED GARDEN SEEDS."—These are household words in nearly every rural homestead in the land. In every hamlet and village store the leaf which bears the expressive words which heads this article may be read, for but few country storekeepers can be found so indifferent to the wants and true interests of their customers as to be in the planting season without a supply of Landreths' seeds. It is curious and instructive to observe the growth and extension of many industrial pursuits, and perhaps, none more so, than the culture of seeds. A generation or two back when the forefathers of the present Landreths commenced the business of rearing seeds for sale, a small plot sufficed to produce the required quantity—but since then great has been the increase in population, and thousands of square leagues of our common country have been cleared and cultivated, and the ten or a dozen acres in seeds, which at that time sufficed, have grown to be a gigantic seed-garden of six hundred acres; with steam power, improved machinery, and appliances for threshing, and a whole colony of workmen engaged in the culture, harvesting, cleaning, and general preparation of the crops.

Landreths' Rural Register and Almanac, of which there is an edition yearly publised, abounds in useful hints to both farmers and gardeners: Indeed, it has been said, no resident in the country but may find within its pages something to suit his personal wants—some information which may be useful, be his grounds large or otherwise. We invite the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Landreths' seeds in an adjoining column.—Eve. Post.

Local and Southern News.

Legislature.

Senate, March 5.—In view of the passage of the military government bill, Mr. Hough offered a joint resolution for the adjournment of the Legislature on the 15th inst.

Mr. Palfrey called for his resolution, which had been referred, on the declaration that Congress is an unconstitutional body, and its acts not binding on the Southern States.

The committee to whom his resolution was referred asked for further time.

House—Mr. Fagot presented a memorial on the impeachment of Governor Wells. The Governor stands charged as a defaulter to the State of Louisiana in the sum of $88,000, and as a usurper in issuing his proclamation in favor of the reconvocation of the convention of 1864.

On motion, action was deferred.

Washington, March 4, 11 a. m.—The galleries and corridors of Congress were crowded to their utmost capacity to witness the ceremony of opening of the Fortieth Congress. The pressure was so great that the families of members were admitted to the floor by a unanimous vote.

Butler and Brooks, who were early in their places, were warmly welcomed by their respective friends.

The House proceeded to elect officers. The Republicans nominated Colfax, who received 127 votes. The Democrats nominated S. S. Marshall, who received 30 votes.

Brooks referred to the fact that seventeen States were unrepresented, of which seven were of the original thirteen, and presented a protest from the Democrats against further proceedings. The Clerk refused to receive the protest.

Colfax resumed his seat, and the members were sworn.

Colfax announced that the President had signed, within the legal time, all bills passed within the last ten days, except that appropriating $50,000 for the Paris exposition, which was not engrossed.

A protest accompanied the army appropriation bill to the following effect: There are provisions in it to which I must call attention. The second section contains provisions virtually, in certain cases, depriving the President of his Constitutional functions as Commander-in-Chief.

The sixth section denies States of the Union the constitutional right to protect themselves by means of their own militia. These provisions are out of place in an appropriation bill. I am compelled to defeat necessary appropriations if I withhold my signature. I sign the bill with this protest against the provisions named.

The rules of the last House were adopted except that during this week it shall be in order to suspend them. Carried by 120 to 30.

House adjourned.

Washington, March 5.—Cameron, in response to Seward, said that, had Johnson been a wise man, he would have signed the reconstruction bill, and gathered himself back into his old harness. He might then have been forgiven some of the wrong done during the last four months, but it is now too late to forgive him.

Senate—Several bills were presented, one to reorganize the Supreme Court. All were laid on the table until committees were appointed.

A committee announced that the President had no communication to make.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Politics are very calm. The Radicals hold a caucus to-morrow night when their future course will be decided on. The chances are in favor of pushing the impeachment of the President. His cavelier treatment of Congress is commented on. He is said to have signed obnoxious bills for the purpose of leaving it nothing to do.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Sherman's and the tenure of office bills are officially published by the State Department to-day.

Seward publishes a circular letter in which he proposes a peace Congress to the belligerent South American republics, to be held here on the first of April, with an armistice until the termination of the conference.

The Senators from Colorado testify concerning a bargain which they made with the President, in consideration of their supporting him on the floor of the Senate.

The subjoined communication indicates the spirit of enterprise in the South, and the advantages which the railroads therein contemplated will be to the public:

HOUSTON, Feb. 27, 1867.

To His Excellency the Governor of the State of Louisiana, and His Honor the Mayor of New Orleans:

By order of his honor, John Brashear, judge of the county court of the county of Harris, I transmit you the following preamble and resolutions, adopted this day by this court, referring to the action of the city of Houston, heretofore transmitted:

Whereas, the city of Houston, by the unanimous action of the city council, this day adopted resolutions indorsing the Texas and New Orleans railroad company; and whereas, this county fully indorses and approves said action of the city, as representing the feelings, views and interests of the inhabitants and tax payers of this city, and the county of Harris; therefore be it

Resolved, That we would respectfully urge upon the city of New Orleans the value of the Texas and New Orleans railroad—Louisiana division—to that city, as well as to this county. As we have engaged to contribute to the construction of said road in the State of Louisiana the sum of $500,000, we earnestly hope our sister city, New Orleans, will appreciate the importance of the subject and contribute such aid as in her discretion she may deem advisable for the accomplishment of the end.

Resolved, That we fully indorse for the county of Harris the character and capacity of our fellow-citizen A. M. Gentry, and pledge all our aid and influence to assist his company in the completion of the great enterprise which he inaugurated, and which we anticipate he will soon complete.

Resolved, That we beg our sister State of Louisiana to pause ere she engages in acts of legislation which may be inimical to the interests of both communities, and retard the accomplishment of the construction of the road, and may be construed to be hostile legislation contrary to public polity. The State of Texas, as well as Harris county, both having large pecuniary interests in this enterprise expect good faith and comity from their neighbors.

Resolved, That a certified copy of the foregoing be transmitted to his excellency the Governor of Louisiana, and the honorable the mayor of New Orleans. Approved February 26, 1867.

(Signed) JNO. BRASHEAR, County Judge.

A true copy from the minutes. Witness my hand and official seal at Houston, this 26th day of February, A. D. 1867.

(Signed) STERLING FISHER.
Clerk Police Court, Harris county.

NEW ORLEANS, March 1, 1867.

Hon. John T. Monroe, Mayor of New Orleans;

SIR—We have the honor to inform you that the city of Selma has appointed the undersigned as commissioners to present to your city authorities and people the project of a direct line of railroad from New Orleans to Selma.

The Legislature of Alabama has granted a charter to a corporation styled the New Orleans and Selma Railroad Company, which gives to the company liberal corporate powers.

The direct line of communication with New York and the cities beyond, which the road will furnish to New Orleans, must be considered as a strong recommendation of its merits.

The country through which this road will pass in Alabama is of great fertility. It has been filled with wealth, and its people will probably soon become rich again. Added to its capacity for the production of cotton, it has deposits of iron and other minerals, which are of great value. Beyond Selma, it may be safely asserted, the extension of this proposed line passes through the best coal, iron and lime deposits to be found south of the mountains of Pennsylvania. The iron of this region is not excelled by any known deposits of great extent on this continent. But these are considerations that appear to be of less value than the advantages of a great trunk line to a commercial city such as New Orleans. Without undertaking now to decide the relative advantages of this project, we have the honor to request that at a time which may suit the city authorities we may have an opportunity of conferring with them on this subject, when we will present more in detail the plans which have been devised to aid in this important work, and the part which it is hoped your city and State will be prepared to take in its construction.

With great respect, your obedient servants,

J. E. JOHNSTON,
W. J. HARDEE.
JNO. T. MORGAN,
R. M. ROBERTSON.

For the New Orleans Advocate

Letter from Donaldsonville.

DEAR EDITOR—You would hardly recognize this as the ante-bellum Donaldsonville. Buildings are going up very slowly, and are usually of one or one and a half stories. Lumber is very high, I am told even $40 and $50 per thousand feet is asked, no mills being in operation near by.

The new Methodist church is a conspicuous object, and is exerting a great influence for good in the community. The Romish Priest has been stirred to emulate the Methodists, and has commenced a 11 o'clock Sabbath service for the colored people, besides inviting the children for instruction in the evening. About 5 miles below on the Bayou, the colored Baptists have just bought a house and eight acres of land for a church and burial ground. The property is to cost $5000, and they have already paid more than half the amount. They are numerous and some have considerable means. You have now about thirty subscribers to the ADVOCATE here and in the neighborhood. This speaks well for the intelligence and enterprise of our people, who are comparatively few and poor. The Sunday-school, the first ever started in the parish, has an average attendance of 60 scholars and 5 teachers. The singing is excellent. God has a great work for us to do here. The builder and architect, Mr. Barre, is taking some pains to make the new church an honor to himself and the place. This is usually a quiet, law-abiding neighborhood, but last week a difficulty occurred between one O'Hara, white, and Knight, colored man, resulting in the death of the first. Knight had been ordered off the place, but having some legal permission or lease, refused to go until directed to go by the city authorities. Subsequently he was ordered by a justice of the peace to leave in fifteen days. He was preparing to obey, but some days before the time expired, O'Hara met him in the road and from abuse threatened to kill him, if he did not leave at once. Knight said he would go at the end of the time appointed and not before. After hot words on both sides, the white man drew his revolver and began to fire, saying he would kill Knight. The latter then drew his pistol and opened fire, with the result named. The colored man remained upon the spot until the coroner arrived, when he gave himself up. Two pedlars saw the fracas, one of whom stated that the white man fired first—the other that both fired together. O'Hara's pistol had five charges gone, and Knight's three. The prisoner was committed on a charge of murder, and bail refused; he is now in the Parish jail. This is another sad comment on the wicked practice of going about armed, while whisky shops are open on every corner. Why will the authorities for the sake of the paltry license, allow this wholesale demoralization of the people, white and colored—and why are not the laws for carrying concealed weapons enforced?

I neglected to note that, as in other places, the colored people have organized an excellent benevolent society.

Yours, ITINERANT.

Mr Amor J. Williamson, the notice of whose death appeared in the daily papers, is well known to the public as the editor and proprietor of the New York Weekly Dispatch, to which he has been attached for a period of upwards of twenty years. Mr. W. came to the city of New York at an early age, and commenced his active life as a printer, and was one of the founders of the paper named above—and his connection with it has continued until his decease. He was a Whig in politics, and an ardent and devoted friend of Henry Clay, until that good and great statesman died, when Mr. W. cast his political fortunes with the Republican party.

For many years he resided in the Second Ward of the city of New York, from which ward he became the candidate of the Republican party in the fall of 1860 against Daniel E. Sickles in the Fourth Congressional District of that city, and, after a very spirited contest, the canvass resulted in favor of Mr. (now Gen.) Daniel E. Sickles. Mr. W. carried the contest into the House of Representatives, when the committee reported in favor of the contestant, but the House decided against him

Mr. W. subsequently represented the Second Ward in the Board of Aldermen for four years, and for a similar length of time was a member of the Board of education in the city of New York.

For the past three years he has been one of the Tax Commissioners of that city, which office he held at the time of his death, and had he lived he would have continued to hold that position, as the Legislature of the State of New York at its present session had extended the term of office of these Commissioners for three years.

He was also the President of the Republican Central Committee of the city of New York.

In the death of Mr. Williamson the city of New York has lost one of its best friends, whose place cannot be filled by any one who had more at heart the welfare and prosperity of that city of his affection. He was one of those warm hearted and sympathetic men, devotedly attached to his family, to whom his loss will be irreparable, and among a large circle of friends in the city of his residence his memory will be cherished as a man of pure and unsullied character, and who, though he had political antagonists, was universally esteemed by them for his truthfulness, honor and magnanimity.

Though he died among comparative strangers, it is a consolation to know that during his sojourn in this city he was faithfully nursed and cared for throughout his illness, his last moments were soothed, and his bedside was surrounded by friends who had learned and appreciated his worth and virtues as a man and a Christian; and knowing him to be far away from those he loved, they received his parting blessings and dying requests, and shed the sympathizing tear as his spirit winged its flight from this to a better world. Peace to his ashes.

Ladies' Department.

Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER VII.

During the summer, Edith began to look pale and emaciated—her gentle step grew fainter and fainter, until we whispered,—

"Can this be Death? there's bloom upon her cheek;
But now I see it is no living hue,
But a strange hectic—like the unnatural red
Which Autumn plants upon the perish'd leaf."

Our dear old family physician had been to see Edith several times, after she became too feeble to visit him. At one of these calls I noticed him, just before leaving, conversing with Pa and Ma, so seriously, that it alarmed me, when these words fell upon my ear like a knell, "There will be no use of my coming again." Ma stepped back into the room where Edith was, as if to communicate the sad decision, when tears choked her utterance; but Edith, calm and saint-like, asked, "Did he say there was no hope? you need not fear to tell me, dearest Mother. I am prepared for it—I have even anticipated it; I shall not be obliged to make any particular arrangements for the journey; they were made years ago, and now I only await my Master's call, for I know he will shortly come to summon me. An angel sweetly whispers to my heart, "only a few more shadows, and he will come." As she talked her face became radiant with heaven's pure light, chasing all the tears from our eyes. For as she was looking into that beautiful temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens—we seemed to catch a glimpse of its brightness by the glory reflected on her face.

It was a severe struggle for her to give you up, dear Minnie, for, from the night you left Mama's soft bosom, you had slept with her, and thus from babyhood you were near her heart, and our angel Mother's love was scarcely surpassed by the deep love she had for you. Having at that time a very delicate constitution, sympathy with her caused you to partake of the nature of her disease, which the Physician said would produce consumption if you remained closely together. She felt the pang like the snapping of a heart-string, but submitted cheerfully. Her bed was then placed in a room adjoining Ma's, and there every morning and evening she would enjoy family worship without moving. During the day she sat in the easy rocking chair Papa had purchased for her; she coughed severely most of the time, but was so cheerful we did not know whether she suffered much.

How sweet it must have been to her in the darkness of the night, while she was aware that she was wasting slowly away, to know that dear Mama was so near her with unsealed eyelids, keeping as faithful vigil as when watching her in her infancy. But who can ever express the conflict of a mother's heart in its agony of love, at the thought of parting with a child? Edith was now eight and twenty, and after Miriam left, had been Mama's every day companion and co-laborer in all the cares and duties of the household. The dear lamb of the flock, little Beatrice, so long ago folded by the heavenly Shepherd, was beckoning Edith from earth, to roam with her over the green pastures and beside the still waters, where the noontide of glory eternally reigns; and yet her gentle angel whispers were heard in Mama's dreams, telling her of dazzling crowns that were awaiting each of her precious jewels in the heavenly mansion, and her own reward for training them for the skies; then she would awake to the duties of the new day, triumphantly saying, "Thy will be done—only let me meet them all again in my eternal home."

One day Edith requested us all to come to her room. On entering, my eye rested on several articles lying near her, which sent a thrill to my heart—I knew their significance. She then addressed her conversation to us by saying, "Dear sisters, I am much older than any of you, and have, therefore, during all my years, cared a great deal for you; and having loved you tenderly, I trust I have not failed to exert a good influence, which will live with you as you grow older. Our Heavenly Father, ere another Spring time with its birds and flowers, will call me to a brighter home, where the angels sing and the flowers bloom perennial. But before leaving I wish to give each of you one of these little mementos, and when you look upon them, love me not as lost, but gone before." Then turning to Florence, she gave her a box of paints and brushes, which were as familiar to me as her sweet face, for she had, many a time, as a reward for being a good girl, allowed me to use them, to my greatest joy. O, thought I, if she had only given them to me—for I trembled at what I imagined would be mine. Agnes, next, received a Testament, whose pages I had often turned; even this I could have received, and my trembling ceased. But turning to me with her Bible in her hand, with deep emotion, she said, "Evangeline, you are now nearly twelve years old, and not yet a Christian." This was the arrow I had feared, and O, how it penetrated my inmost soul! "Cora and Minnie are younger than you, and will be likely to follow your example. I have prayed earnestly for your conversion, and now give you my Bible, which has for years brightened my life's pathway—and by faith it opens the pearly gates into the celestial city, soon to be my glorious home. In it you may find the Pearl of great price. Take it, sister dear, and love its precious truths as I have, and promise me you will be a Christian." While she uttered these words I felt that Heaven's treasury of gifts was so near me that to reach out my hand the Pearl was mine. As soon as I took the sacred volume, a strange spirit seemed to possess me; my heart in an instant appeared changed into stone. Her mild eye, so brilliant with the sun-light of Heaven, turned to mine for an answer. I did not dare meet that look, but said, "I will try and be a Christian," and sat down, hiding my face in both hands, so that I did not see what she gave Cora or you, Minnie, nor did I hear what she said to you—my thoughts seemed frozen. O, how cruelly did this evil spirit chain my poor heart for days afterward; nor was it broken until one day Edith said, so heavenly, to me "I fear your loving heart has changed toward me of late" As I heard these words, and looked into her pale face, the demon-like spirit gave way, and I wept on her neck, begging her to forgive me. But O, how unhappy I still was; each night as I closed my eyes for sleep, the Pearl of great price I was to find in the Bible given to me, seemed just within my reach, but some cruel power prevented my faith from grasping it. I think now that I rather shunned than sought the society of dear Edith in her last hours, fearing she would remind me of my promise.

It was midnight in cold, dreary midwinter, when Mama came softly and calmly to our bed-chamber, telling us to dress and come down, for Edith was sinking rapidly, and could not long survive. As we entered the room, a candle was burning on the table and a warm fire in the stove. The bed on which she lay seemed encircled with a holy radiance, such as is reflected from the faces of waiting seraphim with plumed wings, ready to convey a freed spirit to its home in Heaven. Her hands were clasped and her eyes uplifted as if in prayer; but as we came around her she kissed us tenderly good-bye, and then in holy triumph whispered, "I am happy—come, blessed Jesus, come quickly." And when she could not speak, Papa said, "My child, press my hand, if all is light." With a smile of ineffable joy and existing, all her remaining strength in the pressure, she fell back on the pillow, and the pure spirit had fled to God who gave it. I can never forget the mysterious, unearthly silence that followed, broken only by our low, deep heart-sobs. Had a convoy of the shining hosts left us, and was this death-silence the dying away of the sound of their wings on their upward flight, taking Edith with them? I had never seen any one die before—it was such a mystery. I knew she was free from pain and happy in the realms of light, and this was the ray of glory that lingered with us; but it did not fall on my poor heart. I could not die thus, not having learned the watchword that opened the shining gates of pearl before her. I even dreaded to look at her cold form, so beautiful in death, for it reminded me painfully of my unfulfilled promise.

At the funeral the minister preached from these words: "And God shall wipe all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow or crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Then we laid her in the old church yard. But O, what an Alpine torrent fell upon our hearts as the dull earth closed upon her remains; and we left the precious clay casket alone with the silent, frost-bonnd graves.

On returning to the house there was only one less of our number, yet every room seemed to echo back the loneliness of our hearts. As the dreary winter wind that night fell on my ear, I prayed, but failed to decipher the mysterious hand-writing of an All-wise Father in taking dear Edith, so good and useful, and sparing me, so young and useless. But the tears that moistened my pillow that night fell on the good seed that had been planted, and the precious truths of that Bible, given to me by Edith, were springing up in my heart. Not long afterward, around the Family Altar, while dear Pa and Ma besieged in fervent prayer the throne, around which they are now both striking their harps of gold in the most exalted strains of harmony and love—light from glory shone, and the Pearl of great price was mine.

EVANGELINE.

Thackeray's Religious Feelings.

Dr. John Brown, in the second volume of "Spare Hours," gives the truest and most thorough review of Thackeray's writings that we have seen, with the finest insight into his character. He tells the following incident, which has interest as an indication of the profounder religious feeling, which rarely found expression in his works:

We cannot resist recalling here one Sunday evening in December, when he was walking with two friends along the Dean road, to the west of Edinburg, one of the noblest outlets to any city. It was a lovely evening; such a sunset as one never forgets; a rich, dark bar of cloud hovered over the sun, going down behind the Highland hills, lying bathed in amethystine bloom: between this cloud and the hills there was a narrow strip of the pure ether, of a tender, cowslip color, lucid, and as if it were the very body of heaven in its charms; every object standing out as if etched upon the sky.

The north-west end of Corstorphine Hill, with its trees and rocks, lay in the heart of this pure radience, and there a wooden crane, used in the quarry below, was so placed as to assume the figure of a cross; there it was, unmistakable, lifted up against the crystal-line sky. All three gazed at it silently. As they gazed, he gave utterance in a tremulous, gentle, and rapid voice, to what all were feeling, in the word, "Calvary!" The friends walked on in silence, and then turned to other things. All that evening he was very gentle and serious, speaking, as he seldom did, of divine things—of death, of sin, of eteruity, of salvation—expressing his simple faith in God and in his Savior.

Sir J. Herschel on the Brightness of the Sun.

Let me say something now of the light of the sun. The means we have of measuring the intensity of light are not nearly so exact as in the case of heat; but this at least we know, that the most intense lights we can produce artificially are as nothing compared surface for surface with the sun. The most brilliant and beautiful light which can be artificially produced is that of a ball of quick lime kept violently hot by a flame of mixed ignited oxygen and hydrogen gases playing on its surface. Such a ball, if brought near enough to appear of the same size as the sun does, can no more be looked at without hurt than the sun—but if it be held between the eye and the sun, and both so enfeebled by a dark glass as to allow of their being looked at together—it appears as a black spot on the sun, or as the black outline of the moon in an eclipse, seen thrown upon it. It has been ascertained by experiments which I cannot now describe, that the brightness, the intrinsic splendor, of the surface of such a lime ball is only 146th part of that of the sun's surface. That is to say that the sun gives out as much light as 146 balls of quicklime, each of the size of the sun, and each heated all over its surface in the way I have described, which is the most intense heat we can raise, and in which platina melts like lead.

And then, in a further section, Sir John Herschel tells us that the nucleus or kernel of the sun itself, at an immeasurable depth beneath its intensely luminous photosphere, emits so little light as to appear, in the comparison, quite black, "though that does not prevent its being in as vivid a state of fiery glare as a white hot-iron when we remember what has been said of the lime light appearing black against the light of the sun's surface. And it is a fact that when Venus and Mercury pass across the sun, and are seen as round spots on it, they really do appear sensibly blacker than the blacker parts of the spots;" so that even the kernel of the sun is probably a luminous body, though so much less luminous than its outer envelopes as to appear quite dark in the comparison.

Information Wanted.

It is earnestly requested that all persons will read the following requests, and assist in seeking the information. Let them be read in all the churches and other gatherings of colored people, in every place where the ADVOCATE circulates, and copied in other papers:

Margaret Briggs wants information about her mother, Nelly, a cook, owned by James Leek; lived about 40 miles from Hannibal, Missouri. When a child of 10 years, she was sold away from her mother. They passed through Lodnon, staying there at night. Leek sold her in Hannibal to one Reed, and he sold her in St. Louis to a trader named Lynch, who sold her again to parties, who brought her to New Orleans 10 or 12 years ago. She has not heard from her mother since. Information may be addressed to

MRS. MARGARET HAMPTON,
Touro P. O., St. James Parish, La.

Mary Proctor wants information about her brothers and sister—Henry, Benjamin and Edmund Arnold, and Sophia Arnold. They were living in Garret county, Ky., when she left there—22 years ago. Henry was then owned by Daniel Bates. Benjamin, by William Kincoid. Sophia, by Smith Brown. Address

REV. THOS. KENNEDY, Donaldsonville, La.

William Brown wants information about his mother and five sisters, and two brothers. His mother's name was Dolly Brown, owned by John Carval Sutton, in Kent county, Maryland. He was sold away from them 19 years ago, and has not since heard from them. Also of his wife, Margaret Brown, and daughter, Catherine. Also his daughter, Matilda, who belonged to John Day Welch, of same county. Address

REV. THOS. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

Sarah Robinson, of Donaldsonville, wants information about her mother, Milly Cole. It is 20 years since they met. She lived in Louisville, Ky., before the war, with Dr. Lewis Rogers. Has been told recently that her mother had moved to Zenia, Ohio. Others say she is in Canada. Whoever has knowledge of the above will please write to

REV. THOS. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

Eliza Jackson asks for information about her three sons and three daughters, from whom she was sold away 29 years ago. Their names were John Frank, Daniel, and Charles Mortimer Waddington, Lucy Ann, Almarinda, and Martha Jane, and of her brother John Jackson. They all lived in Trick county, Kentucky. Address

REV. THOS. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

Cherry Crawley wants informationt about her five children who lived near Memphis, Tennessee, about 40 years ago. They were owned by Bird Crawley. Address

REV. THOS. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

Meredith Richardson wants information about his sister Ann Matilda, and his brother, John William Henry. She was owned by Polly Bell, and he by George Bell. Both lived in Montgomery county, Maryland, about a day's ride from Washington, D. C. Thirty-seven years ago he was sold away from there and has not since heard of them. He has since found his mother, Mary, in this State. She recently died here. Write to

REV. THOS. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

Information wanted by Lucy Lewis, about her mother named Guinea Courtney, her sisters Fanny, Mary, Kassy and Judith; her brothers Albert and Godfrey. She left them in Lynchburg, Va., in 1833. The year the stars fell her owner was Widow Speed, and she was brought to Louisiana by John L. Harris.

Address Rev. SAM. SMALL,
Alexandria, La.

Charles and Matilda Lewis, who belonged to Barnard Hoe in Alexandria, Va., desire information about William and Anneke Lewis, and other kin folks. Address

Rev. SAM. SMALL, Alexandria, La.

Rev. Osborn Dickinson, Baptist minister, Bayou Lafourche, La., desires information about the Hutchisons, on Church Hill, Richmond, Va. They are his brothers, and are named Robert, Clary, William and James, and his sister Eliza; all belonged to John and Ambrose Hutchinson. He has not seen them for 28 years, when he was sold off to this country with his brother Nelson. Address him at Donaldsonville, La.

Adam Young left Norfolk, Va., 8 years ago, and has not since seen his brother Cyrus Young, who belonged to James McKelpin, or his sister, Barbara Warren, who belonged to James Moore.

Martha Ann Bolen desires information about her three brothers and three sisters, Reuben, Giles, William, Fanny, Nancy and Harriet Bolen. Her brothers were owned by Col. Winn. Her sisters by William Wyatt. She has not seen them for 20 years. The girls were then in Dinwidie county, Va. Her brothers were brought by Col. Winn to Raceland, or Lafourche, about that time. Address

Rev. THOS. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

Lorenzo Fairfax desires information about his brother John, who belonged to Upton Wethrington, Frederick Co., and his brother Charles, who belonged to Walter Griffin, Montgomery county, Maryland; was sold away from home 13 years ago, and has not since seen or heard of them.

Address Rev. THOS. KENNEDAY,
Donaldsonville, La.

Edward Ford desires information about Chas. and Cassie, his father and mother. They belonged to Col. Steward, Baltimore, Md. He was brought from there 25 years ago by Chas. Steward, and has not since heard of his parents.

Address Rev. THOS. KENNEDAY,
Donaldsonville, La.

Joseph Taylor desires information about his wife Ann, who belonged to Harvey Wethers, Boyle Co., Ky. Was sold away from her 22 years ago.

Address Rev. THOS. KENNEDAY,
Donaldsonville, La.

Elvira Thomas desires information about her sisters Mary and Fanny Thomas. They belonged to old Bill Eaton, Warrenton, on Roanoke River, North Carolina. Left there 12 years ago. Address Rev. THOS. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

Phillip Strother desires information about his son Benjamin, who belonged to George Hathaway, Owensboro, Davis Co., Kentucky, and about his mother, named Maria, who belonged to the same. Thirteen years ago, he was brought to Louisiana by John Relafoot. Address Rev. T. KENNEDAY, Donaldsonville, La.

LANDRETH'S

Warranted Garden Seeds

Have been familiarly known to the American Public for upwards of three-quarters of a century.

THEY SPEAK THEIR OWN PRAISE
WHEREVER PLANTED.

Dealers in Seeds whether country Merchants, Booksellers, Druggists, or Regular Seedsmen, not already customers of the subscribers are invited to become such.

OUR WHOLESALE PRICE LIST,

Published to the Trade only, will be mailed to all dealers who apply.

Landreth's Rural Register and Almanac for 1867,

Containing numerous hints on Horticulture, will be mailed to all applicants who enclose a two cent stamp with their address to

DAVID LANDRETH & SON,
mar8 Philadelphia, Penn.

The Hartford Publishing Company will issue from the Press in a few weeks, a new work entitled

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE,

Both the Canonical and the Apocryphal, with illustrations, showing what the Bible is not, what it is, and how to use it; by Prof. C. E. Stowe.

The reputation of the author for piety and profound biblical knowledge, is a sufficient guarantee that this work, upon which he has expended much time and study, will be the best and most useful of its kind. Its style is popular, and such as will be readily understood and appreciated by all classes.

It will be sold only by Agents.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR.

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in cold water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT, No. 71 Nassau street, New York City.

Mh2m1

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C.. &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them," and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Harulin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them, Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled,—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerahn, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives of great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 596 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory, READE 154 SRT.

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adverliser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Haggard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,
Gen'l Agent for United States,
r10-1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine of Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Baker & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists m12-3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.

Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
Cincinnati.

feb. 3 1y

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALS

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL,

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston; also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
R. L. Nanchez, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.]

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off-cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

For CIRCULARS ADDRESS,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree;" [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart," in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,
Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM'L L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,
THOS. J. DURANT.

THE BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS OF DENmark and the young Czarewitch of Russia; Eminent American Divines, including the Reverend Doctors Stevens, Thompson, Durbin, McClintock, Morris, Janes, Simpson, Whedon, Ames, Nast, Elliott, and Haven; also, Hon. J. M. Howard, Capt. E. B. Ward, and Keri-Keri, an Australian Cannibal; "Your Likeness," by Rev. Dr. Weston; Self-Government: Pope's Essay on Man, etc., in February number Phrenological Journal. Only 20 cents, or $2 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Mattawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. H. MONTINU, Secretary

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation.)

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and

WILL PAY $1,000

to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY

—AND—

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs.

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or Webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitters is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum or Whisky, and cannot make Drunkards, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous System. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,
W. S. SEIGFRIED,
No. 254 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

"I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptis Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAN SMTH,
966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,
J. H. KENNARD,
Eighth, below Coates street,
Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berks county, Pa., was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

JONES & EVANS,
(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)
Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States ma10 ow

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin,] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to Professor Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 15-tf

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES; plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops. Prices $75, $90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT.

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS.

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Clubrates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good references, none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WHITE

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton Seed and "aa" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Linseed Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute.

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city.

☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten."

feb8]

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second-hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music, Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1y

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the.

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost of postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my catalogue. Address JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

jan15

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 11. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, MARCH 16, 1867. Whole No.—61.

Poetry.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

Pauline, The Forsaken.

BY J. WILLIS MENARD, (COLORED.)

The waning sun upon the western sky,
Has closed the portal of his fiery eye;
Fast fades the day, while twilight shadows spread
Their inky pinions o'er the mountain head,
The fanning winds, swift winging from the lea,
Awake the forest into melody.
The axe no longer echoes on the hills;
No sound is heard except the whipporwills
And the sweet music of the leaping rills.
The huntsman, weary from the chase, is come
To take the softer comforts of his home,
The plowman in the field no longer plods
Behind his team amid the stubborn clods;
But from the barn with tired limbs he goes,
To seek at home the blessings of repose.
The new half moon and all the stars appear
Like globes of silver in the vaulted sphere:
Triumphant through the ethereal dome
They sail serenely to their western home.
'Tis now the festive hour—and friendly mirth
Ascends in chorus from the social hearth.
The backward swain attends the rustic maid,
And pledges of unending faith are made—
While to the music's thrilling, measured voice,
The festive throng with active steps rejoice.
The winds have risen, and the lashing seas
Send forth their thunders through the distant trees,
While o'er the moon-lit hills and sandy shore
Submissive peace and twilight rule no more.
Yet still, while peace no longer rules the night,
And festive throngs are merry with delight,
Lies one in yonder cot, whose bosom heaves
With sighs of sorrow like the moaning breeze!
No costly lamp illumes the shadowy gloom
That broods in silence o'er the humble room—
No flow'ry carpet hides the rugged floors,
Or silver knobs enrich the paintless doors;—
No stately bed gives comfort or repose—
No honeyed words repel the burning woes
That rend the bosom of that lonely one,
Whose once bright hopes of joy and life are gone!
Such was the home—rude, lowly in its look,
That slumbered quietly near the sweeping brook—
Of the once proud, the gentle, and the fair
Pauline, whose life is linked with black despair!
Once, life was sweet to her as moonlight beams
That gem the bosoms of the ripling streams;
But sadly now upon her broken heart,
The joyous gleams of hope no longer start.
For there was one who at her feet had bow'd,
And with false words his love and honor vow'd.
Though false and mocking, he vow'd not in vain,
The tender passion of the maid to gain—
For the poor maid poured out her rich young love,
With heart as pure as seraphs from above!
She deeply loved; the earth was bright and new,—
Her soft, young heart no earthly sorrow knew.
But the stern lessons of unerring Time
Soon jarr'd the vitals of her maiden prime—
For soon the false one—Rosswell, left her side
To roam in climes beyond Atlantic's tide,
And left her weeping—left her, young and fair,
To die beneath the shadows of despair!
No more she wanders 'neath the sylvan grove
Where first her life's destroyer won her love!
For there she oft had strayed, in happier hours,
With her false lover 'mid the woodland bow'rs,
To list to perjured vows at starry eves,
And the soft zephyrs rustling in the leaves.
Days, weeks, and months still slowly roll'd away—
Her blooming life seemed fading with each day.
The gentle flowers budded, bloomed, and died—
The winds still vied along the mountain side;
The waves still echoed on the barren shore,
And the gay birds sang sweetly, as before.
Time sped; the guilty Rosswell ne'er returned,
And sorrows' woes still in her bosom burned.
Dark shadows, gathering o'er her youthful sky,
Proclaimed the awful message—she must die!
She slowly sighs upon her couch of death;
Her cheeks are pale, and feeble is her breath;
Her humid eyes with joy no longer glow,
But from their depths the tears of sorrow flow!
Why linger, Angels, on the liquid plain,
While your affianced suffers here in pain?
Why will ye not sweet consolation bring,
Or gently take her up above to wing?
The moonlight through the window seeks
To throw its kisses on her pallid cheeks.
But Oh, her soul is tired of life and earth—
She hates the ill-sent hour that gave her birth!
And now she prays, with her low, sighing breath,
For Life's destroyer—black, defiant Death!
She heaves aloud—her earthly race is done!
The gentle spirit to its God has gone!
Thus passed the gentle one, with tender years,
From the dark sorrows of this vale of tears,
With Virtue's wreath, by Truth and Honor given,
To swell the angel minstrelsy of Heaven!

[NEW ORLEANS, February 20, 1867.

Tour in the East.

JOPPA ON THE SEA—RAMLEH—LYDDA.

(Editorial—Continued.)

Though its authentic history begins with the partitioning of Palestine into tribal possessions, yet, according to Pliny, Joppa is one of the oldest cities in the world, having existed before the flood. Called by Joshua, Japho; by Luke, Joppa; by the Arabs, Yafa, and by the Franks, Jaffa, it was allotted to the tribe of Dan, and remained in comparative obscurity till the reign of Solomon, when it became the chief maritime city of his kingdom, and the port from which his merchantmen sailed to trade with distant lands. Being the nearest harbor to Jerusalem, the floats of pine and cedar from Lebanon for the building of the first and second temples were landed here, and thence transported to the Holy City on the back of camels. Centuries later, "Jonah went down to Joppa, and he found a ship going to Tarshish, and he went down into it to go with them unto Tarshish, from the presence of the Lord." In our own era, here lived and died the benevolent Tabitha, whom Peter restored to life, and here stood the house of Simon, a tanner, where the Apostle lodged, and from the top of which he beheld that vision which unfolded to his mind the ingathering of the Gentiles. The only antiquity to detain the traveler a single hour is the traditional house of Simon. Like all Eastern dwellings, it is constructed of stone, square in form, with a flat roof, and may have stood for centuries, as, without violence, it will stand for hundreds of years to come. Standing by the sea side, its location and structure are in harmony with the inspired narrative, and a venerable tradition points to it as once the residence of a tanner. The entrance is through a low gateway, before which the servants of Cornelius stood inquiring for Peter, and from a small court-yard within, containing a well of excellent water, a stone staircase leads to the roof, ommanding a noble view of the sea, over whose blue waters glanced the Apostolic eye, as Peter sat beneath those clear, expanded heavens, from which descended the symbolic sheet, opening to his Jewish understanding the purposes of the Divine mind. Turning towards the south, I observed the remains of several tanneries indenting the shore, singularly corroborating St. Luke's account of Simon's occupation. Plucking a fig-leaf from the solitary tree adorning the court-yard, I descended to the interior of the building, now occupied by the Moslems as a place of prayer, by whom it is revered alike for its antiquity and the sacredness of its traditional history.

Excepting its fruit gardens' Joppa is as featureless as it is filthy. Standing upon a rock, whose eastern base is lashed by the tirelesss waves of the Mediterranean, its streets are narrow and irregular, and its best buildings have no claim to architectural elegance. Enclosed by a stone wall, on which are mounted a few rusty guns, the city has a single gate, opening toward the east, the mart of orange and lemon hucksters, the rendezvous of lounging Arabs and donkey-drivers, and the seat of public justice, where the Cadi tries all civil and criminal suits, sitting in the gate of the city as in Bible times. As of old, Joppa is a considerable seaport town, and if possessed of a good harbor would be the most flourishing maritime city in Palestine. Covering an area of many miles, the adjacent country is one vast fruit orchard, the products of which, together with silk and soap here manufactured, are exported in large quantities to different cities on the Mediterranean coast.

Possessing a population of five thousand souls, a fifth of whom are Christians, two hundred are Jews, and the rest are Moslems, religion and not nationality is the basis of social and political distinctions. The Mohammedans have several mosques, the Jews a synagogue, and the Latins, and Greeks, and Armenians, have each a convent for the entertainment of pilgrims en route for the shrines of the Holy City. In piety and learning, the chief ornament of society in Joppa is Dr. Barclay, author of the "City of the Great King." Combining the two professions of physician and missionary, he is exerting a powerful influence upon the inhabitants of the ancient city of Simon and Tabitha. Appreciating the importance of the restoration of the Jews to their native land, he is heartily engaged in a society called "The Abrahamic Coalition," the object of which is the gathering together in one large community all the indigent Jews in the East, and locate them on the Plain of Sharon, securing to each a small piece of land and otherwise aiding the colonists in practical agriculture. A project so beneficent is not unworthy the prayers and offerings of the Christian world, and it is a fact, no less honorable than encouraging, that supplications are made in the Jewish synagogue of Joppa for this distinguished American missionary.

Hoping to reach Jerusalem the next day, we engaged horses for the journey at eighty piastres a piece, and left Joppa at 4 P. M., intending to pass the night in the Italian convent of Ramleh. As illustrating the changeless character of the East, before the door of an inn stood a magician performing astonishing feats with serpents. A Nubian by birth, his face was black and glossy, his eyes small and snakish, and his countenance expressive of great cunning. With a smile, which I shall never forget, he drew from the ample folds of his bosom, three immense black snakes, which had been nestling next his naked breast, and lifting them up to his neck allowed them to entwine themselves around his head, at the same time caressing them in the fondest manner. At his command they would extend themselves like rods upon the ground, recalling to our mind the Egyptian magicians, who, in the days of Moses, "cast down every man his rod and they became servants."

Accompanied by a single guide, we mounted our horses, and passing through the narrow streets of Joppa, to the gate of the city, we were en route for Jerusalem. For half an hour our path lay between hedges of enormous cactus-plants, enclosing orange and lemon groves, surcharging the air with the fragrance of their delicious fruits; and beneath the ladened trees laid heaps of lemons and oranges, like apples in an American orchard. Charmed with a ride as novel as it was delightful, we soon struck the plain of Sharon, streatching northeastward to the white and purple hills of Benjamin. Passing the hamlet of Yasur on the left, in thirty minutes we passed the pine groves of Beit Dejan a city of the Philistine god Dagon. The declining sun forewarning us of approaching night, we gave loose rein to our Arabian steeds, and bounded over that glorious plain, heedless of crimson anemones, tufts of lily leaves and white and yellow daisies, covering it like a carpet of many colors. In the fast-fading twilight, could be seen the shepherd's black tent, around which were gathered herds of cattle and flocks of sheep and goats, while the soft notes of his flute greeted us, borne on the evening air. In the star-light, far to the east, like a black column standing out against the sky of night, rose the solitary tower of Ramleh. Putting spurs to our horses, we dashed on, and at 7 P. M. stood knocking at the iron gate of the monastery. With a courtesy for which Murray had not given them credit, the Franciscan monks received us to their monastic retreat, while the tall and graceful superior, a man of much intelligence, displayed the ease and dignity of a Christian gentlemen. After an excellent dinner, eaten in the refectory, a quiet looking friar led us by the light of a single taper across a dark court-yard to a small chamber containing four beds, neat and clean, as if the work of a woman's hand.

Ramleh is one of the largest and best built towns on the Plain of Sharon, nine miles to the southeast from Joppa, surrounded with fig orchards and orange groves, and contains a population of three thousand souls, a majority of whom are Greek Christians. Tradition identifies Ramleh with the Ramah of Samuel, the home of Nicodemus, and the birthplace of Joseph of Arimathia. The southern rendezvous of the Crusaders, in 1191, A. D., it became the headquarters of Richard of England. Its chief architectural attractions is a noble, square tower, one hundred and twenty feet high, beautifully built of hewn stone, standing a quarter of a mile to the west from the town, amid the ruins of a large quadrangular enclosure. Whether the campanile of some Christian church, or the minaret of some mosque, it is impossible now to determine. A flight of stone steps, narrow and spiral, leads to the top, from which we obtained a view of surpassing beauty. At our feet stretched out the groves and orchards of Ramleh, mingling with those of Lydda on the northeast, and from the roots of Carmel on the north, to the promontory of Joppa on the south, extended the Plain of Sharon, bounded on the east by the hills of Samaria and Judea, and on the west by the Mediterenean, while in every direction the eye was gladdened by fields of grain, groves of fruit trees and towns, whose white walls shone in the sunlight like diamonds in a circlet of emeralds.

Thrilled with the thought that ere the close of that day I should gaze upon the towers of Jerusalem and my feet tand within her venerable gates, we mounted our horses at 8 P. M., and taking leave of the good monks of Ramleh, who, smiling, received a gratuity, we rode on to Lydda, the home of Eneas. The day was one of surpassing loveliness; shepherds feeding their flocks in the neighboring fields, greeted us as we passed. Through the lengthened avenue, connecting the two cities and lined with trees ladened with fruit, came men with unpretending turbans and women in white, with black veils covering the entire face, a peculiarity of dress I had not before seen in the East.

Ludd, the Lod of the Old Testament and the Lydda of the New, in an Arab village of two thousand inhabitants. Though unsurpassed in the beauty of its environs, the town itself is neither remarkable for the elegance of its buildings, nor the regularity and cleanliness of its streets. To the Christian, Lydda is interesting, as the place where Peter cured Eneas, who had kept his bed eight years, and was sick of palsy, and where he was still stopping when the benevolent Tabitha of Joppa died, in whose behalf two men came to inform him of her death. To Englishmen it is memorable as the birth-place of St. George, England's patron saint, and as containing his tomb in which he was interred near the close of the third century, after his martyrdom in Nicomedia, under the reign of the relentless Diocletian. According to William of Tyre, the Emperor Justinian reared a noble church over the ashes of the saint and martyr, which the revengeful Moslems razed to the ground. Around his tomb mail-clad knights contended with the Saracens for the Land of the Prophets, and the fierce Saladin contested the right of possession with Richard, Cœur de Lion. Adorned with beautiful pilasters, marble capitals, and a rich cornice, the walls and part of the vault of the eastern niche of the monumental structure remain. On the south side of the grand isle is a pointed arch of great elegance, supported by massive clustered columns with marble Corinthian capitals, forming one of the most picturesque ruins in Syria. Within the roofless church wild flowers now bloom, offering their sweet incense to the memory of the heroic dead.

(Continued next week.)

Sermon by Rev. Thos. Kenneday, (Colored.)

PREACHED IN ASCENSION M. E. CHURCH, DONALDSONVILLE, LA.

As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the son of man be lifted up. That whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life.—JOHN 3, 14:15.

When our blessed Savior was tabernacleing in this low ground of sorrow, completing a full and all sufficient salvation for us, He traveled from village to village, and from city to city. His great mission was to do good, to restore the blind to sight, heal the sick, and raise the dead. He was always found in the midst of the poor and needy, with the lame and halt. In this text he is showing them how to believe and be saved.

Whilst Moses was on earth, God trusted him to be leader of his people, and their teacher. He sent him to King Pharaoh and made him do many great works to have Pharaoh let them go from bondage. At last the oppressor had to send them out, and Moses led them through the Red sea and into the dreary wilderness. The Scriptures tell us they were there forty years, wandering up and down, and were much afflicted, for they disobeyed God's laws, and he sent among them the fiery poisonous serpents, so that many died every day; they would lay in heaps in the roads and fields. But God was merciful, and when they cried to him, Moses was told to make a brass serpent, raise it on a high pole so that all could see it; and whosoever looked on it would be healed and live. So the people were saved from their great affliction.

Now all this was to teach us about our blessed Savior, when he should come into the world. After he had finished his work, that he would be raised up on the cross, so that by his sufferings we might have life. Yes, the sacrifice once offered is sufficient. He dies no more. He made a full atonement; we are now invited to look and be saved. If we look, he will cleanse us, but faith is needed. The sinner is to come to Jesus with child-like confidence. The cross is before us—our hope, our only dependence, not only for conversion, but for grace in every time of need. As Moses lifted up the serpent, so Jesus is before us, to fly to him for safety, for help. You know how it is when you have no joy, when your heads hang down—when you hunted over hills and valleys and found no comfort, until you looked to the cross. And so all who will cast their care on him, will find rest. He has pledged his word to give eternal life to all who come unto him. But you must come by the way of the cross. He is the sinner's friend. Oh, then, let me entreat of you sinner who is in the broad road to death eternal, to hear the voice of this dear Savior. Instead of inviting you to the ball room, to the grog shop, or the gambling saloon, I call you to the holy service of God, and happy life of Christians. He says if your sins are as scarlet or like crimson, he will make you white as snow. If they have grown mountain high, he will forgive you, and say, "Go in peace, and sin no more." You must come now, just as you are. All he asks is to bring to him your sinful hearts. He will give you new hearts. Let me tell the ungodly man or woman here, there is no other way. Infidels have tried their way, but in vain; they found no peace and died without hope. Many have tried to satisfy themselves with the world, but at last had to come to Christ. So come today—deny yourself and the world. Remember how uncertain life is—to-day you are here, to-morrow you may be stretched out on the cooling board. How often have men put it off, saying, "Go thy way for this time;" but he has put it off too long. We see him borne away to the grave—to the Potter's field. When you go to the stores, you put your hands in your pockets, and it costs a great deal to get what you want. But Jesus gives you eternal life. He says, "Come buy, without money and without price." He hangs upon the cross to pay your debt, to buy your pardon, and he says, "Will not this suffice?" Now the gospel trumpet sounds—venture on him. But you are too proud; you are like the Pharisee who went to pray and thanked God he was not as bad as some others. Perhaps you pay your debts and try to do some good, but like him, you get no pardon, for you are not humble. The poor Publican smote on his breast, and cried, "God be merciful to me a sinner." And he went to his house justified. Let me beseech you do not sit in the Pharisee's seat or stand in his place, or his fate will be yours. We find Jesus in the way of the cross, through many trials and conflicts, but deliverance came in good time. Remember when you went to drink water, how it cried unworthy; when you went to eat, the food cried unworthy; everything cried out against you and said, "Jesus poured out blood for you—his tender flesh was broken for you." Then you looked to Jesus, and when you was sinking down, he put out his lily white hand and lifted you out of the miry clay. You had some neighbors you used to hate—you went and knocked at their doors and said, "Now I love you, for Jesus is in my heart, and to walk in the light I am determined." Oh, how glorious to have a Savior in time of refliction. Sometimes it falls to the Christian's lot to die alone—none to wipe the sweat from his brow—none to smoothe his pillow. Then Jesus makes our bed as soft as downy billows are. It is better than to have earthly friends about us. Then let us all stand fast until he says, son or daughter, you have been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many. But it presses on my heart about the dying sinner. Oh, sinner, think of it, only to believe and eternal life is yours. You have no abiding place here; you are passing away—every hour brings you nearer eternity. Jesus invites you with a gentle voice. In this world there is no lasting joy, but when we know our names are written in the Lamb's book of life, we can be sure that time is rolling us on towards our home, to our Father's house in Heaven. On the steamboat. in the cars, at work, we feel our lives are safe; they are hid in Christ. As Moses lifted up the serpent, so is Jesus before us, and eternal life offered freely to poor sinners. Do not despise it, or you may cry for a drop of water to cool your parched tongues.

And let me say to the Christian, press on to the celestial city. A few more storms, and you will bid farewell to the world and forever sing with the blood washed company. You shall see Jesus for yourselves, and when ten thousand years are gone, your joys are but begun. You shall go from glory to glory, and from mansion to mansion, meeting and rejoicing with those you love, fathers, mothers, children, to part no more forever. Scripture tells us we have crowns—robes without spot or seam, that Jesus bought when he was extended on the cross. Let us cheerfully bear the heat and burden of the day, that when we lay down the cross we may take up the crown. When Jesus was lifted he died for the whole world, made the way open for every son and daughter of man. And he expects of us to be humble and keep unspotted from the world. So that sinners may see how these Christians love one another. Let me say to the backslider and hypocrite, you have reopened the bleeding wounds of Jesus. Return and do your first works again; do not say the bible is made by man. Religion has no efficacy. No, you will find it different in the last day.

May God impress these solemn truths upon your minds, and bring us to heaven.

"There's room enough,
There's room enough,
My Lord says there's room enough,
Room enough for all.
Oh, sinner, don't stay away,
There's room enough for all."

As threshing separates the corn from the chaff, so does affliction purify virtue.—Burton.

A Warning to Prosperous Tradesmen.

A pious tradesmen, conversing with a minister on family worship, related the following highly instructive circumstance respecting himself:

"When I first began business for myself, I was determined, through the grace of God, to be particularly conscientious with respect to family prayer. Accordingly, I persevered for many years, in the delightful practice of domestic worship. Morning and evening every individual of my family was ordered always to be present; nor would I allow my apprentices to be absent on any account. In a few years, the advantage of these engagements appeared manifestly conspicuous—the blessings of the upper and the nether springs followed me—health and happiness attended my family, and prosperity my business. At length, such was my rapid increase in trade, and the necessity of devoting every possible moment to my customers, that I began to think whether my family prayer did not occupy too much of our time in the morning. Pious scruples arose respecting my intentions of relinquishing this part of my duty; but, at length, worldly interest prevailed so far, as to induce me to excuse the attendance of my apprentices; and, not long after, it was deemed advisable, for the more eager prosecution of our business, to make the prayer with my wife, when we arose in the morning, suffice for the day.—Notwithstanding the repeated checks of conscience that followed this omission, the calls of a flourishing concern, and the prospect of an increasing family, appeared so imperious and commanding, that I found an easy excuse for this fatal evil; especially as I did not omit prayer altogether. My conscience was now almost seared as with a hot iron, when it pleased the Lord to awaken me by a singular providence.

"One day I received a letter from a young man, who had formerly been my apprentice, previous to my omitting family prayer. Not doubting but I continued domestic worship, his letter was chiefly on this subject; it was couched in the most affectionate and respectful terms; but judge of my surprise and confusion, when I read these words:—'Oh, my dear master, never, never shall I be able sufficiently to thank you for the precious privilege with which you indulged me, in your family devotions. Oh, sir, eternity will be too short to praise my God for what I learned there. It was there that I first beheld my lost and wretched state as a sinner; it was there, that I first knew the way of salvation; and there, that I first experienced the preciousness of Christ in me the hope of glory. O sir! permit me to say—never, never neglect these precious engagements; you have yet a family, and more apprentices; may your house be the birth-place of their souls.'

"I could read no further; every line flashed condemnation in my face. I trembled—I shuddered. I was alarmed that the blood of my children and apprentices, as I apprehended, was soon to be demanded at my soul-murdering hands! Filled with compunction, and bathed in tears, I fled for refuge in secret. I spread the letter before God. I agonized, and—but you can better conceive than I can describe my feelings; suffice it to say, that light broke in upon my disconsolate soul; a sense of blood-bought pardon was obtained, etc. I immediately flew to my family, presented them before the Lord, and from that day to the present I have been and am determined, through grace, that, whenever business becomes too large to permit family prayer, I will give up the superfluous part of my business, and retain my devotions. Better to lose a few shillings than become the deliberate murderer of my family and the instrument of ruin to my own soul."

GEORGE PEABODY'S WEALTH.—The Washington Republican gratifies a general curiosity, which has been excited by the princely generosity of Mr. Peabody, as follows:

We learn that, in 1856, Mr. Peabody made a will which demonstrated that he was then worth about £50,000,000 sterling. We presume, from the liberal manner in which he scatters his charities, that he has not grown any poorer since. If he had not transacted any business since that time, the simple interest on such an enormous sum would have largely increased his wealth; but the fact is he has, ever since, been one of the largest, most active and cautious bankers in the world. Hence, his present wealth must exceed one hundred million of pounds sterling. This is a snug little sum for a rainy day.

The Republican adds that Mr. Peabody's late magnificent gift is understood to have been made in gold.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, MARCH 16, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

"Masterly Inactivity."

Some of the New Orleans Dailies, have of late, been urging upon the people of the South, to maintain a "masterly inactivity" in all matters political. Viewing the "situation" wholly from a Confederate stand-point, they argue that any participation in political movements, whether State or National, would be the compromise of their honor as individuals and a people; and, that as the provisions of the "Bill for the more efficient government of the rebel States," are both exacting and humiliating, therefore, they should not even seem to sanction a law so offensive to their pride; so destructive of all their constitutional rights. It is further argued that to be party to the execution of such a Law by participating in the elections therein provided, would be a confession of their own guilt and the acknowledgment of the right of Congress to pass a law the most arbitrary known to the history of nations. Mankind, they affirm, will honor them for their refusal and their inactivity will awaken a sympathy in the North, for a people, who preferred obscurity with honor, to positions of power and trust at the expense of a good name.

Now we hesitate not to say, that this view of the "situation" is both unwise, and mischievous to the best interests of the South. It is a proposition, as injudicious in itself as it is evil in its inevitable consequences. It is most manifest, that those who maintain the proposed "masterly inactivity," will be the greatest losers. Their refusal to participate in the re-organization of our civil government cannot even delay the work. Others will not be wanting to bear the burdens and ware the honors. The inactive may nurse their wounded pride and growl out their complaints in sullen stubborness, but time will not pause in its onward flight for them, nor the grand march of events cease, because they refuse to join the magnificent procession of patriots and new-born citizens, whose watch-word is, Onward; on whose banners is emblazoned, Excelsior; and whose mighty hosts of a new South, tramp to the music of the "Red, White and Blue."

During the pendency of the Constitutional Amendment, the Southern people were like those described in the Gospel, who would neither enter into the kingdom of Heaven themselves nor suffer others to enter in; and there are some who, under the new order of things, are also like that other class of Scripture characters, of whom it is said:—"Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust (left) out." The whole Nation is weary of hearing those hackneyed expressions—"wounded pride," "compromise of honor," "approval of mankind," and a few other such like political phrases which now belong to the "dead past." So far as can be ascertained, the Nation has accepted the Military Bill as the final settlement of the long vexed question of reconstruction, and the greatest unanimity prevails as to its execution. Congress, General Grant and the President are a unit on this question, and the people of the North—merchants, bankers and tradesmen, many of whom are unknown to the political world—are as one in sentiment on this subject. Nor is there any thing contrarywise to be feared from the action of the Supreme Court. The judges of that august tribunal have decided not to consider political questions for the present; and had they not so decided, it would require many months to obtain an adjudication of this question—during which period practical reconstruction would be too far advanced to be reversable; indeed, were the law under consideration carried to the Supreme Court, we have little reason to suppose that it would be declared unconstitutional—present indications are to the contrary. Of the fact of this unanimity there cannot be a doubt. According to report, Hon. Reverdy Johnson is in daily receipt of letters, from all sections of the South, which not only thank him for voting for the Military Bill, but also give assurances of a rapidly increasing acquiescence in the provisions of the Congressional Law. And this sentiment is on the increase in Louisiana.

It is true that that section of the Constitutional Amendment incorporated in the Law which we are now considering, consigns some to a "masterly inactivity," which is no less just than beneficial. Yet the majority of the Southern people are permitted to participate in the work of reconstruction. There are many good and capable men in this State, who, neither influenced by a false pride nor deterred by fear, should at once indicate their hearty acceptance of the "situation" and join with those who are now ready, in the re-organization of municipal and State governments, on the plan which Congress has adopted as the law of the land. Their aid would go far toward the speedy completion of the work, the final adjustment of all our difficulties, and the restoration of harmony, confidence and prosperity to our people.

Almost Another Riot.

By the prompt interference of the military, New Orleans has been spared the suffering and disgrace of another riot. According to the provisions of the City Charter, an election for Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen was to have been held on last Monday, March 11. In view of the election, Governor Wells issued a proclamation to the effect, that the municipal election should be held according to the provisions of the Military Bill, recently passed by Congress. This meant the application of the new law of suffrage in a practical sense. The disfranchised whites were to be excluded from the polls, while the enfranchised blacks were to put in their first vote. The whole city was in a state of feverish excitement. The daily press more than intimated that trouble was brewing. Angry words were heard upon the streets, and the ghastly scenes of July 30th rose up before many minds.

The excitement was heightened by the Governor's proclamation. He had previously appeared before Judge Durell, of the United States District Court for Louisiana, and qualified as provisional governor, under the Military Government Bill, and then issued his gubernatorial manifesto, declaring the new law operative and binding. For this the Governor was denounced as a usurper, and his acts as usurpation. As in July last, there was a collition between the municipal and the State authorities. It was Wells against Monroe, and Monroe against Wells; and as on that occasion, so now—the same persons appeared as the principal actors in the opening drama, each performing his old part and each repeating his old speech.

On Saturday last, Lieut Gov. Voorhies and Mayor Monroe, called upon Gen. Sheridan at his head-quarters, when Gov. Voorhies explained that in calling upon him (Gen. S.) the civil authorities were actuated solely by a desire to preserve the public peace and tranquility; that to this end, they desired the co-operation of the military; that they regarded the proclamation of Gov. Wells as illegal, and likely to create trouble—and that his (Gen. Sheridan's) views of the situation would be acceptable.

The General replied that he regarded any election which might be held at the present time, unless the provisions of the military bill were complied with, null and void; that should he be continued as District Commander under said bill he would declare vacant all the offices which may be filled on Monday next, by an election conducted in accordance with local laws; or, if not appointed District Commander, would advise the officer elected to command to pursue the course here marked out. Thus, considering the proposed election illegal, he advised as the most prudent plan that could be adopted, and the one best calculated to prevent difficulty and disturbance, a postponement of the whole matter until the political status of the people of this city and State shall be explicitly defined by the General Government, in accordance with the recently enacted laws. The General therefore recommended that the Legislature repeal the act ordering this election, he declining to assume the authority forbidding it to take place.

Admonished by the General's stern deportment, as well as by the wholesome advice he gave them, the gentlemen retired wiser men. An attempt was then made to rush a bill through the Legislature on Saturday afternoon, to postpone the election. The Bill passed the House, but the Senate refused to pass it, and thus the matter stood on Saturday night. It was a night of anxiety on the part of every good citizen, and of excitement on the part of those who were disposed to blood.

But on Sunday morning the fears of the public were allayed by the following military order:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, }
NEW ORLEANS, La., March 9, 1867. }

General Orders, No. 13.

No commander having yet been appointed for the military district of Louisiana and Texas, created by the recent law of Congress, entitled "An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States;" and Brevet Major-General Mower, commanding in this city, and the Mayor and Chief of Police of the city of New Orleans, having all expressed to me personally their fears that the public peace may be disturbed by the election for some of the city offices ordered by an act of the Legislature of Louisiana, to take place on Monday, the 11th instant, and that body, at a special session, having refused to postpone said election, thereby rendering it necessary that measures for the preservation of the peace should be taken, I hereby assume the authority conferred upon the District Commanders provided for in the act of Congress above cited, so far as it is necessary to declare that no such election shall take place. It is therefore ordered that for the preservation of the public peace, no polls shall be opened on that day, and that the elections shall be postponed until the District Commander, under the law, is appointed, or special instructions are received covering the case.

(Signed) P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

Let us thank God that we have such a commanding general, who is no less quick to discern the motives of men than prompt to act in a great emergency.

Bishop Soule.

This venerable bishop of the M. E. Church, South, expired at Nashville, Tenn. on the 6th instant at the advanced age of 86. Few men have exerted a more extended and positive influence upon the rise and progress of American Methodism than Bishop Soule. In his personnel, he was one of nature's nobleman. Majestic in form, strong and vigorous in mind, he was, in his palmy days, a preacher of rare power. We heard him in our boyhood in the old Forsyth St. Church, N Y address the candidates for deacon's orders. Our youthful mind was impressed with his lofty spirit, and not a few of his eloquent persuasive expressions still linger in our memory.

Born in the State of Maine in 1781 he entered the travelling connection in 1799, and was ordained to the office of a bishop in 1824 In the division of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1844, he decided to go with the Southern branch, and thence to the time of his death, remained firmly attached to the Church of his choice. This important act of his life will be impartially adjudged by the developments of the future. God permitted him to live to witness great changes in both Church and State, but removed him from the troubled scenes of earth, while yet the Divine purposes were in process of consummation. Most sincerely do we hope that the venerable Bishop has passed to happier and more congenial scenes.

Artemus Ward.

The ocean telegraph announced last week the death of Charles F. Browne, the famous Artemus Ward. He died at Southampton on the 7th instant and his remains were buried in Kensal Green, and were followed to the grave by a great number of literary gentlemen and friends, including many Americans. The United States legation was represented by Mr. Moran, Secretary to Minister Adams.

Mr. Browne was neither a wit nor humorist of a high order. The most that can be said of him is, he was "a fellow of infinite jest." He was a joker—nothing more. Both, in his writings and his lectures, he excited a giggle rather than a hearty laugh which does the soul good. Now and then he gave utterance to a witticism which was brilliant and "pointed a moral," but as a rule, he played upon words, and by a false pronunciation or spelling, made his auditor or reader titter. This may be said to have been his forte and also his power for evil. Like Petroleum V. Nasby and Josh Billings, he corrupted our language and vitiated the literary taste of those who heard him lecture or who read his books. This is our objection to the trio of jesters whose names we have mentioned above. It were better for men never to laugh, than to laugh at the vitiation of their own language.

Christian Recorder.

We rejoice that the editor of the Christian Recorder, in his issue of March 2d, repudiates the action of the three delegates of the A. M. E. Church, to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, held in this city about a year since. The conduct of those delegates appeared to us extremely humiliating and we are now happy to learn officially, that the "resolutions of the delegates were unauthorized by our denominations." Our labor therefore has not been in vain. Our articles on this subject have had the good effect to place the A. M. E. Church right upon the record.

As to the two columns of personal abuse in the Recorder of March 2d, we care not to reply. The spirit of the editorial is our best defense. The article refutes itself. Sensible men will read it with pity for the man who wrote it. In conclusion we may say: we hope not to be compelled to write the history of some of the ministers of the A. M. E. Church in the South, as to their violent opposition to the Methodist Church.

Editorial Items.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach in the Hall of the House of Representatives, to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.

A note from friend Wilson, Superintendent of Freedmen's School at Columbus, Miss, informs us that the schools are again under way, with about 400 pupils enrolled, 360 of whom can read. Three hundred scholars are in regular attendance. Mr. W. has ordered a large box of Bibles from the North, (Bibles don't grow on Southern soil!) and every reader is to be presented with a copy free. This is the way to elevate the freedman. Whom the Truth makes free is free indeed. School-houses may be burned, but the treasures of the immortal mind cannot be destroyed. Sow "the good seed," tho' it be in sorrow—it flourishes best in soil that is watered with tears.

Gen. P. H. Sheridan has been appointed District Commander of Louisiana; Head-quarters, New Orleans.

The Weather in New Orleans.—On the 8th inst, the thermometer stood at 56 degrees; on the 9th, 58; on the 10th it reached 83; on the 11th, 82; on the 12th, at 9 A. M., 70 degrees, and at 9 P. M. 48. On the 13th, at 7 A. M, it had gone down to 36 degrees, which is nearly as cold as it has been at any time during the winter.

Dr. and Mrs. Palmer, of New York, arrived in New Orleans from St. Louis, on the 13th inst. A fuller notice of their visit will be given next week.

Acknowledgment.—I hereby acknowledge the receipt of seventy-three dollars and fifteen cents; collections by Mrs. Henry Green for the Orphan's Home Society.

W. B. Armstrong,
Treasurer.

Editorial Controversies.

Some of our cotemporaries are attempting to create the impression on the public mind, that we are unnecessarily combative, and that our course is designed to provoke controversy. But we need not inform the constant and intelligent readers of this journal, that the spirit of the New Orleans Advocate is pacific rather than belligerent. In the controversies in which we have been engaged, we have invariably acted on the defensive. Some of our opponents have assailed us in a most violent manner. Our motives have been impugned and our work misrepresented. We have been compelled to reply; in some instances, sharply, and we have reason to believe not without good results.

Like the Apostolic Age, and the days of Luther and the Wesleys, the times in which we live are necessarily controversial; and especially is this true in this section of our country. The foundations of society are being shakened; the discussion of fundamental principles occupies the public mind; and a new order of things are being inaugurated both in Church and State. Truth is elicited by discussion. Men differ in their views and plans, and honestly differ in the choice of the means for the attainment of a common end. Thus understanding our age and our surroundings, we shall in the future, as in the past, defend the right and vindicate the policy of our Church, at all hazards.

A New Movement.

We have reliable information that the M. E. Church South is preparing to organize a colored Conference in Tennessee this spring. Their agents are going through the country trying to drum up volunteers among the freedmen. A letter from one of our preachers in northern Mississippi says: "The M. E. Church South is trying to raise a colored Conference in Tennessee. They have sent a Presiding Elder into this region, who is trying to persuade our people to join them. He called on me; he says they will meet at Jackson, Tenn., in April, and organize, if they can raise preachers enough. He wanted I should join them, but I told him he was too late—that 'Mother Church' had been here, and was doing more for us and our people than any Church in the whole land, and that we did not intend to leave her, and couldn't go with him. They (Church South) are trying to get into our Churches, and to divide our people. I hope you will put this in the Advocate so our people can know what is going on, and warn them against our enemies. For the M E. Church South and the A. M. E. Church work together against us. If they worked as hard to convert sinners, as they do to divide and break up our Churches, they would be better employed, and do more good."

A letter from Bishop Andrew in the N. O. Christian Advocate, bewails the loss to the Church South of so many of their colored people, and the above is another movement—a last, spasmodic effort to sustain their hold upon them in Tennessee. But we think it will fail. As our correspondent aptly says, it is "too late," and they are driven to it in self-defense, not drawn, in love for the colored. And when they talk of "love," the poor freedman calls to mind how affectionately "their best friends" bought and sold, and chained, and whipped them a few years ago; and how they still claim that slavery is divine, and the negro is not a man; they remember that this same church South looks silently upon the wrongs and outrages still inflicted upon freedmen, sees their school-houses and churches burned, and officers, teachers and ministers (friends of the freedmen) persecuted, mobbed and murdered, without uttering one word of disapproval or reproof. And then they remember that with this same M. E. Church South, which still prates of the divinity of slavery, the A. M. E. Church has joined hands, plighted faith and pledged fraternal symyathy, interest, and effort!

With these facts before them it seems hardly necessary to sound a note of warning; and yet we will say to our people in northern Mississippi—in Corinth, Aberdeen, Holly Springs, Grenada, and elsewhere—have nothing to do with the Church South or the A. M. M. Church, or their agents. They are wolves in sheep's clothing. They have united against you and us, but God can work and none can hinder. Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free!

Efforts to Educate the Freedmen.

A very general conviction rests on the American churches that they have a duty to discharge in the education of the freedmen. In all the leading denominations, North and South, efforts, more or less extended, have been put forth in this direction. Of the churches organized in the South the Romish church leads the advance. Shrewd and far-seeing, her leading minds have comprehended the importance of the colored element in this nation, and have formed gigantic plans for obtaining control of the freedmen. The influence of their efforts is already encountered by our missionaries in various portions of the field, especially in western Louisiana. This church, however, is embarrassed with the common difficulty of all southern churches. Though not so marked as in some of the protestant denominations, the Catholic Church has a record stained with treason. Less demonstaatively than some, but not less effectually, her full power was thrown against freedom, and in favor of oppression. This is the insuperable barrier to the efforts of all southern churches. The blacks cannot forget, and never will forgive, those churches that conspired to make their bondage perpetual.

The terrible truth, never to be forgotten, that southern churches constituted themselves the bulwark of wrong, that they combined to blast the rising hope of liberty, that they were first and fiercest in a wicked war, that they still deplore that their prodigal sacrifice of treasure and of life was all in vain, form an effectual barrier to any large success among the people they so cruelly wronged. The freedmen instinctively question their motives, and turn naturally to the churches which were foremost in advocating and defending their freedom. As by an inspiration, the churches in the North have felt that the duty of elevating the freedman was laid upon them. Some well directed efforts to this end have been put forth by various denominations, but they fall far below what is imperatively demanded. The vastness, the difficulty, the importance of the work has been perceived only in dim outline. The great, overshadowing interest involved in the education of four million of our population, is not appreciated. We need a new awakening on this subject. The head and heart of the church need to be touched with new power. The general sentiment that something ought to be done, should assume the form of a profound determination to accomplish the great work.

Ordinary efforts will not do. An opportunity, such as our fathers never saw, and which we may never see again, is before us. A call for benevolent effort on a grander scale than was ever practiced upon this continent rings it summons in our ears. To us it is given, in offer, to lift up a race—to arrest at once the progress of degeneracy at the South—to atone in some sort for the great wrongs of the past. We shall never hear a louder call to duty—we shall never feel the pressure of a more binding obligation than is presented by the condition of the freedmen. And yet we know of no society formed to aid the freedmen that is not sorely embarrassed for lack of funds. Our own Freedmen's Aid Society is at a stand, and projected enterprises must be abandoned unless an enlarged liberality prevail. Would that we could touch the conscience of the church on this subject—would that the whole church could see the work among the freedmen in its urgency and in its success as we are privileged to see it.

We have sometimes thought that our centennary efforts should have been turned mainly to the support of our southern work. It would have been the grandest work in the whole record of christian effort to have turned the vast charities of our centennail year in this great channel. Indeed, were all the churches of the North to unite in combined effort, it would not surpass the urgency of the demand that must be met at once, or left unmet to the fearful peril of our institutions. A great field is also open for individual beneficence. Our large-hearted men of means should take the work among the freedmen into deep and earnest consideration. A noble friend at the North writes to us, proposing a munificent donation. We trust others will link their names with the grandest benevolence of the century.

Opelousas District.

Letter from Napoleonville, La.

THE OLD NURSERY CHURCH—HAPPY CONVERTS.

The plantation church on Wm. Pugh's place well deserves a notice. The services are held in a large building, formerly the nursery, in size about 25 by 40 feet, It is comfortably seated, has an old fashioned round pulpit, very stoutly built. Overseers would sometimes throw the pulpit out of doors, and a less substantial one was apt to suffer some on these occasions. In a few minutes word went around that I would preach and soon after candle lighting, singing and shouting was heard from the church. I hastened to the place and to my surprise, a large congregation was gathered. The older members were singing and marking time very zealously, while the young converts, of whom there is a large number, walked up and down the aisles, rejoicing with exceeding great joy over their new found treasure. On entering the pulpit I observed a curious contrivance, by which the large kerosene lamps were protected from the violent gestures of the speakers, and the shaking of the floor, from the jumping. They were set in a sort of frame attached to the heavy-timbers above.

A WISE PLANTER—OLD ST. PAULS—SACRED SERENADE.

The employers of the laborers have been unusually considerate as to their religious interests; even in slave times, I am told, this was the case. The consequence is the people remain, and no trouble is experienced in having all the laborers needed. Church and School are encouraged, wages promptly paid, and dwellings kept in good condition. This is a well disciplined Methodist Church, having had the watch-care of old St. Pauls of New Orleans for some years.

I need not say that prayer and preaching were easy here, requiring however some care to repress the somewhat too emotional and demonstrative responses of the audience. Remaining some minutes after meeting for business, I observed on my way to my lodgings, a large gathering of the younger members in front of one of their homes, engaged in a sort of sacred serenade. The effect was singular and exciting Song after song of Zion was sung, until the happy company leaped and shouted, while overhead was cloudy, and the rain was falling, and under foot was the cold muddy earth. Brother Kennedy has reason to be encouraged and rejoice over his success at this appointment.

BUYING CHURCH LOTS—LITERATURE—WHISKY TRAFFIC.

The immediate cause of my visit, was the buying of land for a Church edifice. The people had collected $150, and agreed with the Planter for three arpents of land on the Bayou for the purpose, next day the act was passed, and soon another Methodist Episcopal Church will stand forth as a beacon of hope and sign of Christian progress and to bless the people

Napoleonville is only three miles from this point, another of brother Kennedy's preaching places, but not in a hopeful religious condition. The only Post Office in the large parish of Assumption is here; before the war there were six others. It may show the literary character of the population or their poverty, to know that not a dozen regular papers are taken from the Post Office, and not one religious weekly, except the New Orleans Advocate; about 15 copies of this journal are taken. On this circuit over 50 Advocates are taken. In this respect it is the Banner Circuit of the District. How can morals and literature flourish in the Parish when it licenses 25 to 100 places for the sale of whisky by the glass or bottle. How can the people buy newspapers and support schools, when between $4000 and $5000 is paid for license in this horrible trafic. Many of these whiskey mills are on plantations. I enquired of the Sheriff whether there were not more whiskey shops in the Parish, than the necessities of the people required. He rather thought not. In fact it is the interest of the Parish officers to multiply these pests, in order to obtain plenty of money for salaries etc. No newspaper is published in the Parish, no Public Schools exist; there is no Protestant Church and I found no place where the Scriptures could be purchased. I placed a few copies at a store in Napoleonville, and this state of things exists within 4 or 5 hours journey from New Orleans.

A TEMPERANCE CHURCH—WHISKY CHRISTIANS —DEGRADING THE SACRAMENT.

Every day more evidently demonstrates that the old Methodist Church is to be the agent in God's hands to reconstruct Bible Christianity in this unhappy region. Our disciplinary rule about drinking, buying and selling intoxicating liquors, will roll back this fiery flood. Papists, Baptists and others make no such condition for membership and communion, not even legal marriage is required by them. It is these whisky christians who thus impoverish and demoralize the community. The old hard shell principle is held sacred. Preachers go into their pulpits with brain stimulated and breath pestilent with whiskey. Let us hold on our way undaunted by their open or covert opposition and the blessing of those ready to perish will be upon us. Let us be more strict than ever with our people, for the colored people alone could close three-fourths of the whisky dens by refusing to buy. Curious ideas about the sacraments prevail on the plantations. A presiding elder of the African M. E. Church, comes from New Orleans, brings 3 or 4 bottles of claret, and in the room of his deacons or preachers, blesses the wine in bulk, then giving to each a bottle sends them through the country, to celebrate the Lord's supper. What a desecration! The same people have a novel plan for raising money at love feasts. They station a brother at the door with tickets at 25 cents each, for the admission of all who can pay. Another is a baptist notion. When our ministers have baptized persons by immersion, these persons are told, that now they are no longer Methodists, but are members of the Baptist Church; others are told that once being a member of a Baptist Church, they have no right to leave it to unite with any other. In one instance an old woman weighing near 200 lbs is the recognized "Shepherd" of a large Baptist flock. It is a cause of deep gratitude that a great light is breaking in upon these people and that they are hailing it with joy.

ITINERANT.

We have received, by Rev. N. L. Brakeman, from the 86th Colored Regiment, the following contributions to the Orphan's Home :

Lieut. Col. McFadden	$10,00	John Brown	$1,00
E. Davenport	1,00	Joe Beckney	1,00
B. Morris	1,00	Henry Rosey	2,00
C. Morgan	1,00	Joe Seiville	1,00
H. Felder	1,00	Jas. Woods	50
Chas. Elliotson	1,00	S. Benjerfee	1,00
Geo. Cooper	2,00	Ben. Sign	50
B. Steward	1,00	Pierre Beun	1,00
Wm. Hill	1,00	N. Roberts	1,00
Jno. Kisto	1,00	E Edmunds	1,00
F. Junior	1,00	M. Brevere	1,00
A Nergerson	1,00	P. Singleton	1,00
J. Shaw	50	H. Wilson	1,00
Will Valley	1,00	John Emerson	1,00
Geo. Fowler	50	Loisie Napoleon	1,00
E. Jeddison	50	J. Lixon	1,00
Jim De Mestre	50	Levi Johnson	5,00
Jas. Robison	1,00	Elmore Burnside	1,00
Henry Martin	2,00	A Fox	50
John Celestine	1,00	Andrew Jackson	1,00
Martin V. Rustine	1,00	Thomas Marshall	1,00
Wm. Josie	50	J. Bracken	50
Camelius Butler	1,00	Spencer Book	1,00
Geo. Newton	70	J Lewis	1,00
Ed. Adams	1,00	John Bartee	1,90
Jas. Castell	1,00	Andy Planche	1,00
E. Jones	75	C. Clamer	1,00
S. Sowie	2,00	A. Johnson	1,00
D. Warner	1,00	Homer Antoine	1,00
Jean Benn	1,00	H. Josephs	2,05
S. Morgan	1,00	Jean Pierre	1,00
J. Pier	1,00	Peter Morgan	1,00
Nat Peterson	1,00	Jas. Bailey	1,00
Joe S. Smith	1,00	C. Williams	1,00
		H. Rogers	5,00

Total paid with names $86 75
Amounts paid in sums of 25 cents and under $7 00

Total $93 75

W. B. ARMSTRONG,
Treasurer O. H. Society.

Local and Southern News.

Legislature.

HOUSE.—Mr. Murray presented a report from the Committee on Charitable Institutions, appropriating $50,000 for the Insane Asylum of the State. Also a number of memorials.

Mr. Simonds introduced a resolution raising a committee to select from the calendar a list of the most important bills, for immediate action, in view of the fact that the session is drawing to a close, and the necessity for the approval of necessary acts by the Governor.

Mr. Scanlon thought the resolution of Mr. Simonds was a good one. Let us act at once on the business most important. Let us suspend all laws for elections, repeal the Convention bill, and impeach the Governor ; and then go home and tell our constituents we have done all we could do, leaving the consequences to those who are determined to annul all our legislation by military force.

The resolution offered by Mr. Simonds was adopted, and the number of the committee fixed at five.

Mr. McConnell moved the adoption of the substitute, which provides that each State and municipal officer shall continue in office until the successor or successors shall have been qualified. The substitute was adopted and sent to the Senate for concurrence.

News from all directions represents the flood as unprecedented. The roads south from Louisville are badly broken up by the carrying away of bridges and culverts and by land slides. The Ohio is still rising and the weather is still rainy.

GENERAL NEWS.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The Republican Senators decided in caucus this morning not to fix a day of adjournment until a law should be placed on the statute book to establish the machinery for reconstruction under Sherman's bill. The calling of conventions, the registration of voters, the conducting of elections, and the authentification of all the acts are to be defined, and as the President may veto or pocket the bill, the session will be prolonged until it is enacted.

We have conflicting rumors here of trouble between State and municipal authorities at New Orleans.

The Senate Saturday passed a bill appropriating a million dollars for the relief of the Southern people regardless of antecedents, to be dispensed by the Freedmen's Bureau An amendment making the appropriation a million and a half was lost.

WASHINGTON, March 11, 1867.

SENATE.—Sumner's joint resolution, demanding further guarantees, was tabled after some debate.

HOUSE.—The following bills were introduced: An act amendatory of the Homestead act, for Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Florida.

A resolution directing the coin claimed by certain Richmond banks to be paid into the Treasury, with the right reserved to claimants of prosecuting before the Court of Claims.

A joint resolution directing the Secretary of the Interior to suspend action under the law passed last session for the relief of the heirs of John E. Bouligny.

The Judiciary Committee reported a bill to facilitate restoration. Under this bill the General is not authorized to delegate his powers to the acting Governor of the State. The registration oath requires the person registering to swear that he is sincerely and earnestly attached to the Union and the Government of the United States; that he will steadfastly support the Constitution and obey the laws, and will induce others to yield support and obedience. A majority of registered voters is required to confirm the Constitution. All elections shall be by ballot. The bill passed. Yeas, 117; nays, 27.

The President, to-day, having heard from Gen. Grant, Gen. Sherman, Gen. Hancock and other military officers with whom he consulted as to the appointment of commanders of the five Southern divisions, decided upon the selections to be made, and an order will be issued to-morrow.

The order assigns Schofield to the first division, Sickles to the second, Thomas to the third, Ord to the fourth, and Sheridan to the fifth. No instructions will accompany the order, which is a simple plain assignment to the several divisions with a copy of the law attached.

Instructions will be hereafter issued, as necessity shall suggest.

It is barely possible that there may hereafter be some change made in these commands, and the appointment of Gen. Thomas to the third district may require a new appointment for his department, for so much as embraces the States of Tennessee and Kentucky.

J. S. Whitaker was nominated to the Senate to-day, by the President, for the office of district attorney of Louisiana.

Louisiana Sugar Crop for 1866-7.

The Price Current, of last Saturday, publishes the result of its information collected regarding the past season's sugar and molasses crop. It gives returns from 328 plantatians, the agregate product from which is given at 36,767 hogsheads. There were 347 plantations under partial cultivation, and the estimates, from the whole, range from 39,000 to 42,000 hogsheads. The estimates for the molasses crop reach 65,000 barrels, at 65 gallons to the hogshead, on a basis of 40,000 hogshead, computing 40 gallons to the barrel. The plantations under cultivation before the war are numbered at 1291 ; the crop of 1861-2 (the largest ever raised.) was 459,410 hogsheads; that of 1865-6 only 15,000 the present season nearly thribbling it. The Price Current gives returns from seventeen out of the twenty four sugar-growing parishes. Its recapitulation of these, compared with 1861-2 is as follows:

Parishes	1866 7. Hhds.	1861- 2 D. Hhds.
Orleans	153	700
St. Bernard	1058	3775
Plaquemines	6509	19624
West Baton Rouge	125	1580
East Baton Rouge	388	1202
Terrebonne	4191	10884
Assumption	5999	20519
Iberville	2158	13018
Ascension	2700	17255
St James	4795	22739
St. John the Baptist	1275	5637
St. Charles	1466	4351
Jefferson	2067	5390
Lafourche Interior	3150	12704
St. Mary	560	2016
Vermillion	75	220
St. Martin	98	765
	36767	142379

Mississippi Items.

We left Jackson for Meridian March 1st We do not remember ever before to have seen so wild a country along the line of a Rail Road. For miles together the forest is unbroken. Piney hills and scrub oak brush, with now and then a space covered with a heavy growth of fine oaks and poplars. The road is appropriately called the "Southern" for it is a good representative of Southern things generally. Poorly constructed, out of repair, and very slow. Its receipts are hardly sufficient to pay the employees. From Jackson east, the country is poor and so are the people and the mules and the cows. Meridian is rather a pleasant looking village. It is nearly all new and looks more like a North Western town than any other place I have yet seen in the South.

We found Bro. Adams and his church awaiting us, and we had a good old style quartely meeting. The Sunday School is large and interesting. Great credit is due Misses Jarvis and McClelland for their industry and zeal in teaching both in the Day and Sunday-Schools. They teach night school and have been giving Saturday and Sunday afternoons to the instruction of poor white children.

There is a moral heroism about many of these teachers, that is truly great; denying themselves all home comforts, and the pleasures of society, they go among a people that are hostile, and work night and day for the benefit of the ignorant and lowly. Verily they shall have their reward.

We sold out our stock of Hymn Books and the people wanted more; and also want Bibles. We had to sell one of brother Whedon's Commentaries which we brought along for our own use.

Enterprise affords a good illustration of the way the colored people's "best friends" have of showing their love to them. The M. E. Church South, had a large membership of that kind who had been accustomed to having the use of the Church at night. Some time ago they rented the seats, and the colored brethren were turned out of doors. When brother Adams sent an appointment to meet them, the white brethren rallied and rented an old shanty and told them they should have a white preacher if they would raise $700 for him. The dear brethren could not see it, and 150 of them came over to us. We shall visit them to-morrow and take immediate steps to build them a church, for which they have already bought the ground. There are open doors around us on every hand, and the fields are ripe for the harvest. We cannot but regret that another district cannot be at once organized, and another Presiding Elder employed. Work would be abundant for both.

So far as we have learned, there seems to be quietness in the country and a fair state of feeling between the white and colored people. There is some suppressed muttering at the prospects of military rule again, but nothing serious has developed itself yet. Some are going to Brazil, which move has our hearty approval, and our earnest wish that they may like the country so well that they will remain, and all their friends and kindred follow.

From Mandeville.

Friday, March 8th, we left New Orleans for the above town, which is one of the far-famed Watering places on the Northern shore of Lake Pontchartrain. The object of our visit was to hold the First Quarterly Meeting for the Mandeville Circuit. We reached the lake from the city via the New Orleans and Pontchartrain Rail Road. The storm which had set in the previous night continued unabated and with increasing cold. We took passage on the Ella May. The wind gave us a rather rough ride, but a few hours brought us to our destination. The town contains about 800 inhabitants at the present, which during the hot season increases to 2,000 or more. It is situated immediately upon the lake-shore, has a lively and pleasant appearance in the summer season, is faned by cooling, healthful breezes and presents an attractive retreat from the heat, and dust, and epidemics of the crowded city.

Brother Levi Johnson, a local preacher from Wesley Chapel, New Orleans, who has been employed to supply the work this year, has labored faithfully, and amid many embarra-sments has won some success. They first rented a small room for $5 per month, but persecution drove them from that, the congregation being fired upon while at worship. For the next house they had to pay $15 per month, which they could ill afford to do. They then bought a piece of ground and began to build, but being mistaken in the survey, put the house upon the wrong lot and had to tear it down. At last they have a cabin upon their own ground where they now worship unmolested, a favorable change toward them having taken place among their persecutors. There are 4 preaching places, at only two of which Societies have as yet been organized There are 2 exhorters and 44 members, and a day-school gathered up since the conference —a good work for the first-quarter, all things considered.

Saturday we organized Quarterly Conference. Sunday, at 11 A. M. (the storm having ended,) we dedicated the new house (or rather place) of worship : at 3 P. M. preached, baptized 17 children administered the Lord's supper, took up a collection of $25 to finish paying for the land, and took five additional members into Church. (The lot is 62 feet front by 200 feet deep. A substantial commodious Church should be built at once, when the present structure will answer for a parsonage.) At night brother Johnson preached. In the P. M. and at night, despite the mud, many more persons were in attendance than could get into the house. Brother J. is greatly encouraged, and thinks the M. E. Ship is fairly launched, upon the "Mandeville" waters.

In 1699 Iberville, the great French explorer (a Catholic) entered Lake Pontchartrain, and landed upon these shores. 168 years later, a local preacher of the M. E. Church, an unlettered Freedman erected a house, of worship, (doing most of the work himself,) the first Protestant Church in the place; and a traveling elder of the same denomination was the first Protestant Minister to dedicate a House of Worship, and administer the Sacraments in M., baptizing 17 childrens the first day. What shall be the fruit 18 years hence ?

B.

Ladies' Department.

Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER VIII.

The Methodist ministers, as they revolved in their annual orbit, considered our house their home. In fact it was a part of our religious training to love the Minister and his family, and to care for all their interests. No one knew better how to welcome and make happy the weary and worn Itinerant than did our parents, who had themselves so long journeyed in this old Methodistic highway cast up by the Wesley's—nor did they covet a greater joy. The families of the ministers were not unfrequently our guests during the Conference—and seldom did they fail to leave their horses to enjoy, on these occasions, a holiday on our hill-side pastures ; more than this, scarcely a Sabbath passed that Pa did not relieve some overworked Pastor by preaching at least one sermon.

I am sure, dear Minnie, you often recall the time when we used to accompany our Father to one of his regular appointments, arranged by himself in a school house. At this very moment I seem to see the honest, sunburnt faces of those rustic yeomanry and their rosy cheeked families as they filled the house and stood around the doors to listen to him. Although he was no longer a regular Itinerant, moving from circuit to circuit, he was a true Evangelist, preaching everywhere—visiting the sick, attending funerals, assisting the poor—and eternity only will unroll the record of all the good accomplished by these varied and abundant labors—for the like is seldom fully appreciated in this life.

I involuntarily smile as I recall a wedding I once attended with Papa. It was a moonlight evening, and as it was not far distant, we preferred to walk. You, remember, Minnie, the road a little beyond our house that extended through a long, deep gorge, with hills rising on either side—where it is related that, during the old Revolutionary war, contending armies fought ; there seems no doubt of the truth of this statement—for not only were Indian arrows found there in great abundance, but our brothers, in plowing the hill sides, found hatchets, and several desperate looking knives. As we passed down this road, the dark shadows of the hills with their bloody legends, assumed spectral forms, which would have made me fear the sound of our own footsteps, so quiet was every thing in nature, had not my hand been firmly clasped in Papa's. At the foot of this hill, after having crossed the canal, we entered the house, and was greeted by a burly, red faced man, who said : "I suppose you are the Elder; walk in." He then pushed chairs toward us, and we were seated. We had known a very respectable family who formerly lived in this house, but strangers now occupied it. It appeared to me that Papa had exhausted every theme of conversation that the old gentleman and lady could comprehend, before the bride made her appearance. At last she came striding into the room with both hands in the pockets of her apron ; on reaching a certain point in the room she came to a sudden stand still, and turning around, to her surprise the bridegroom had not followed her. She looked eagerly for a moment at the door, then rushed back and commenced pulling the man, saying, "Why don't you come along here ?" when he would come in just far enough to be seen, and then draw back ; at last, by dint of muscular strength and entreaty, she succeeded in getting him out on the floor, where they lovingly stood, hand in hand She was, no doubt, a "strong-minded woman," at least strong-armed, to exert such an influence on a retiring man. She detained him until the ceremony was ended, and then we left—not, however, without a small fee, which was given to me.

From early dawn Mama had been engaged making pies and cakes, and other "goodies," to tempt the appetite, an art in which she could not be surpassed. The house was also being arranged in perfect order, assisted by five girls—some of them almost young ladies—whose hands were all busily employed. At one o'clock P. M. the horses were before the old family sleigh, and Papa started to go to a village nine miles distant, to bring Bishop Hedding and his wife to make us a visit As the sleigh creaked coldly over the hard packed snow, in our impatience we could hardly wait, fearing something might occur to prevent their coming—for seldom had more pleasure been anticipated in a visit. The full orbed moon had just looked up over the distant hill tops, and was showering her silver spangled light over the crest of the beautiful snow, when the old covered sleigh drove up to the door and the venerable Bishop and his wife, the latter tall and erect as in youth, stepped out. Pa and Ma had known them in other days, and to them it was the delightful renewal of olden friendship. The cordial manner in which they shook hands with us all made us feel at ease at once in their presence. With intense interest we listened, that long winter evening, after the ample supper had been enjoyed, to a thrillingly interesting summary of their early days, when they were co-laborers. The ever precious names of Coke, Asbury, Whatcoat, Emory, Garretson, Hibbard, Matthias, and a host of others, were richly interwoven in all their reminescences. They seemed to run over with all the vivacity of boyhood the extensive circuits they used to travel, equal in area to an entire annual Conference of the present day ; and taking them from four to six weeks to get around, and not only preaching four times on Sabbath, but every evening of the week and often during the week days. They spoke of their perils, which to me appeared most fearful, with cheerfulness, adding, "Those were glorious days when hundreds were brought to God." Methinks they must have been fed as was Elijah at times, for the Bishop, when alluding to their support in those days, said, "Pray, how did you manage with your numerous family ?" Pa assured him that he was never in real want, notwithstanding at one time he only received thirty dollars for half a year. The Bishop laughed heartily, saying, "I only received eleven for a whole year." He related many amusing incidents ; among them, one that occurred on a circuit, where he and family, with his collegue, occupied one house. "A miserly old man," said he, "owned the house, and after we had become settled, he came one morning to divide the garden for us ; then called us two preachers out, and in the most solemn manner, pointed to one side, saying, 'that is yours ;' and to the other, 'that is yours—now see that you do not oppress one another, for you know that the Bible says—if the poor oppress the poor, it is like a mighty sweeping rain.'" The Bishop added, "we enjoyed a right hearty laugh over the landmark, when the old miser left, but did not exactly like his manner of calling us poor."

The next day Mrs. Hedding and our Mother were more by themselves, lovingly communing of other days, and the varied scenes of their early life, but in recalling all their trials, mutually decided that were they young again, they could choose no happier lot than to be the wife of an Itinerant. One attentive listener, who, by the way, in a few years afterward followed their example, on hearing this remark, said, "but, Mama, you would not want to marry any one but Papa, if you were young again, would you ?" "My darling," she answered, "I presume you are right." Then turning to Mrs. Hedding, who was laughing, said, "I suppose you would also prefer, if you were young again, to marry Bishop Hedding ?" She acknowledged it to be true. It was a Christ-like cheerfulness in their every day life that would not allow care to bow them down, shedding the purest sunshine all along their itinerant wanderings.

Mrs. Hedding appeared to me to be of the Lady Huntington style, and yet it was surprising with what enthusiasm she entered into all our youthful plans, and even arranged a small cabinet of curiosities I had collected. Being a good deal flattered by her admiration of our hair albums, we modestly requested a lock of hers and the Bishop's. After giving hers, which was still as black as raven, she took the scissors to cut some of the Bishop's, which was quite silvery, when he good naturedly refused to let her cut it, saying, we could not have one hair unless we cut it ourselves. This honor was assigned to Florence, and the hair was retained by us as a precious memento. Years after the good Bishop had ascended to the high Heaven he must enjoy, this hair was incorporated into a Ministerial Hair Wreath, and sold at a Fair in New York for the benefit of the "Old Ladies Home" for one hundred dollars, and presented to Bishop Janes, the resident Bishop of that city, who, with his excellent lady, prize it as it now hangs in their parlor

EVANGELINE.

For the New Orleans Advocate

A Rare Family.

There lives in a populous city a family in many respects remarkable, not because they have ever done anything to attract popular attention, but for living an independent true life in the midst of shallowness and untruth. The boys have combined with all their energy the gentleness and kindness springing from a love for the meek and lowly Jesus—also a spirit of forbearance that is generally lauded as a feminine virtue.

The girls are equal both in energy and perseverance to the boys. As a family they do not imagine that the young ladies should absorb all the goodness and the men all the talent and usefulness—but a spirit of high endeavor animates each member of the household.

The three boys are strong, healthy and vigorous Their minds have been carefully trained; passing through the mazes of the higher mathematics and the classics, richly stored with the thoughts of past ages, enabling them to judge rationally of the deeds of their own era. They do not think that he who works with his brain, is the only respectable member of society, but respect equally the man of toil. Honest-heart, honest endeavor are their admiration in whatever sphere it may be found—working side by side with the sturdy plowman, greet him as a man and a brother.

The sisters stand on an elevation with the brothers, but they have overcome more prejudices to gain this stand point making their ascent more difficult. They early came to the conclusion that the life of most women could not satisfy the restlessness of their souls. They did not consider that God gave them minds fitted to comprehend the universe and yet intend them to waste their immortal powers on the adornment of their persons while all around them arose the cry for help. They did not for a moment think of poor fallen women only to be dispised ; while dissipated gentlemen were often sought and even applauded. They had never read any text in the Bible saying: If a woman falls excommunicate her; but if a man sins pass his fault over in silence.

The eldest sister studied architecture with her brother—together they visited the gorgeous edifices of Europe and brought back with them to their native city, minds teeming with the rich imagery of the beautiful and magnificent. Although her name did not appear with his over the Office door, every one knew that the partnership signified her half of the genius and capital of the firm.

The second sister adopted nurse as her high calling and diligently did she study to become efficient and successful in her chosen path, and exultantly she beheld the extensive field of usefulness open before me.

On entering this family mansion you immediately feel that you are in an atmosphere of candor and kindliness. If you have ought to offer of thought or earnestness you are sought as a friend, if you have need of spiritual aid you are welcomed as a brother, thus encircling you is the happiness of minds usefully employed; around you the beauty of cultivated tastes. On leaving the house you are constrained to offer the prayer that many such Rare Families may be scattered all over this country, where money is not the ruling power over the men, nor show and fashion the willing tyrant of the women. *

[For the New Orleans Advocate].

The Ark upon the Waters.

We sometimes picture to ourselves the emotions that must have throbbed in the heart of Noah as he witnessed from day to day the stupendous plan, the Almighty had given him, to be worked out under his directions, assuming the grand proportions of a ship which was to be an ark of safety for himself and household, and a cage for all beasts, birds and creeping things inhabiting the earth.

It was no ordinary honor conferred by God upon Noah to entrust to him the building of the Ark, which at no distant day was to be a miniature world bounding over an immense ocean encircling the globe.

God was pleased to style Noah a preacher of Righteousness to a people then dwelling on the earth who had become so corrupt that it is written, it repented the Lord that he had made man" For the space of three hundred years, he did not cease to warn them of impending ruin, if they did not repent of their wickedness, but stubornly they resisted all his entreaties, and taumingly scoffed at him as he labored on day after day.

At last the day dawned when the Ark was completed, standing up proudly against the sky on the open plain with no surging waters in which to launch. A mighty caravan is seen in the distance winding around the hill sides—not a procession of men, women and children, but of beasts and creeping things and birds of the air who came by a call unheard by mortal ear and entered two by two into the Ark. After all these had taken their allotted place, Noah called in his own household consisting of only eight human beings, and the entrances were closed by the Almighty, so that none could go out, neither any enter.

Who can ever portray the consternation of this wilfully deluded people who after looking on all that had been done with derision, and scoffed at the idea of a deluge—now to behold the rain falling in torrents. With fear and despair depicted in every countenance they exclaim to each other: Surely the prophecy of this man we, called a fanatic, is being fulfilled, and wither shall we fly for safety from the impending deluge? Would we could enter the Ark, but alas, it is formidably barred against us. Thus amid the wildest shrieks of maddened frenzy a world of human beings writhed amid the chaos of the contending elements until the fearful scene was vailed by the overwhelming flood of waters. Each tree and shrub and mountain top was hidden. Every sound of human voice had died away in profound silence. The terrific thunder of old Ocean alone went up to Heaven. The Ark so stupendous on the land was now a mere atom on the boundless sea of waters—but God's eye watched it in all its perils, and bye and bye it was safely landed on Mount Ararat.

Thus it is with the Christian's little barque tossed to and fro on life's surging billows—but if the eye of God is watching it, giving us courage and strength to contend nobly with the rough elements, bye and bye our little ark too will mount the crest of the last wave and land triumphantly on the shores of Immortality.

W .....

LANDRETH'S

Warranted Garden Seeds

Have been familiarly known to the American Public for upwards of three-quarters of a century

THEY SPEAK THEIR OWN PRAISE WHEREVER PLANTED.

Dealers in Seeds whether country Merchants, Booksellers, Druggists, or Regular Seedsmen, not already customers of the subscribers are invited to become such.

OUR WHOLESALE PRICE LIST,

Published to the Trade only, will be mailed to all dealers who apply.

Landreth's Rural Register and Almanac for 1867,

Containing numerous hints on Horticulture, will be mailed to all applicants who enclose a two cent stamp with their address to

DAVID LANDRETH & SON,
mar8 Philadelphia, Penn.

The Hartford Publishing Company will issue from the Press in a few weeks, a new work entitled

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE,

Both the Canonical and the Apocryphal, with illustrations, showing what the Bible is not, what it is, and how to use it ; by Prof. C. E. Stowe.

The reputation of the author for piety and profound biblical knowledge, is a sufficient guarantee that this work, upon which he has expended much time and study, will be the best and most useful of its kind. Its style is popular, and such as will be readily understood and appreciated by all classes.

It will be sold only by Agents.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR.

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in cold water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT,

No. 71 Nassau street,

Mh2m1 New York City.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression,

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist.

Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled,—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 596 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 164 Tremont street, Boston.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South.

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 SPRUCE

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND. It will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 64, 66, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No 64 to 74 Washington street,

New York

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adverliser says: "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,

Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.

Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.

Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.

Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.

Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.

Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.

Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.

Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,

Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.

Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.

A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.

Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.

Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights - Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.

Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor,

No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address ABRAM REQUA,

Gen'l Agent for United States

r10-1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine al Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark- & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists m12-3 m

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytan'a Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,

Agent for locating Homesteads,

Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.

Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.

feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By D. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALS

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,

Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

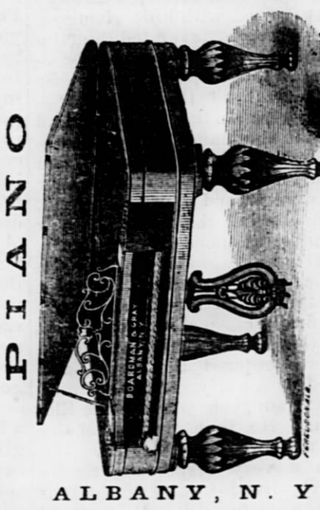
After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19 1y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.



24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

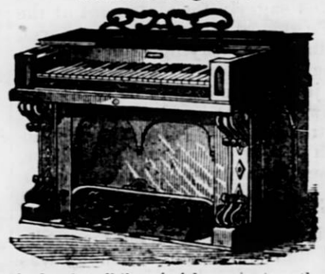
Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

PIANO FORTES,

ALBANY, N. Y.



Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores through out the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that NO Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.

Corner of Gold street.

FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte.

1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nanchor, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knwoltaoh & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,

Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,

BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen. [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,

Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL

FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York ● New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,

Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.

O. J. DUNN, Secretary.

C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

THE BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS OF DENmark and the young Czarewitch of Russia; Eminent American Divines, including the Reverend Doctors Stevens, Thompson, Durbin, McClintock, Morris, Janes, Simpson, Whedon, Ames, Nast, Elliott, and Haven; also, Hon. J. M. Howard, Capt. E. B. Ward, and Keri-Keri, an Australian Cannibal; "Your Likeness," by Rev. Dr. Weston; Self-Government: Pope's Essay on Man, etc., in February number Phrenological Journal. Only 20 cents, or $2 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.

feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.

J. H. MONTIEU, Secretary

DOCTOR L. Q. C. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL!!

A GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE CURE OF

THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safe and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the Pine Tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system.

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs.

It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Blind and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, and Diptheria, etc. etc, etc.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

There is not a medicine discovered that has so much power to dissolve the thick mucus that stops up the wind passages of the lungs as the Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which subdues the fever and inflammation that destroy the power and vitality of the lungs, and consign the patient to the grave. We say to all whose lungs are affected, use Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial with great confidence, as it has restored thousands of cases to health that were hopelessly give up to die.

COLDS AND COUGHS

are speedily cured by the use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it does its work at once, and the patient is cured before other medicines would have had time to have any beneficial effect.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR SCROFULA.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial will purify the blood and cleanse it, of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores internal and external. Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, and all Skin Diseases are especially cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it is good to be applied internally and externally in the above cases, as it has great power to heal where it comes in contact with the human flesh.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

is a great remedy for Chronic Croup and Diptheria, which is sending thousands and thousands of children to a premature grave. It can be cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

Out of ten thousand cases where it has been tried in the past two years, it has never missed a case where it was taken in time. All families should have it on hand, as it gives instant relief in Croup and Diptheria.

BLIND AND BLEEDING PILES.

Thousands of cures of this most painful and dangerous complaint are now enjoying the blessings of health by the use of the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Its great healing properties will stop the bleeding and pain immediately.

CONSTIPATION OF THE BOWELS.

Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is a great remedy for costiveness, as it acts upon the surface of the stomach, and causes a flow of gastric juice, enabling the stomach rapidly to digest the food, which gives health and vigor to the bowels, and causes regular evacuations. Let no one that is suffering from constipation of the bowels neglect to use the Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND GRAVEL

are speedily and permanently cured by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. It subdues the inflammation in the Kidneys, and in Gravel it dissolves and carries away the sediment which forms what is called stone in the bladder.

ASTHMA AND COUGH.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial gives instantaneous relief in cases of Asthma and Whooping Cough. It often cures whooping before it has run half its course; as it acts at once upon the phlegm and mucus, and expels them from the throat, and the sufferer is relieved. In cases of Asthma DR. WISHART'S DYSPEPSIA PILLS WITH THE CORDIAL, as they have never been known to fail to cure that disease.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial acts with great power upon the Liver, and restores it to a speedy action, giving it a healthy secretion by its cooling and equalizing principle.

THE CAUSES OF CONSUMPTION IN THE LUNGS.

A sharp and poisonous corroding humor, either coming from other parts, or breeding in the lungs. From our own observation, we conclude that of ninety-six out of every hundred that die with consumption, their disease originated first from Dyspepsia—indigestion. The food fermenting, souring and rottening in the stomach, creating a poisonous catarrh, which is drawn by the brain to the head, passing through its different ramifications, creating inflammation throughout its course. The brains, eyes, and all the organs of the head receiving its poisonous and corroding effect, uniting together, they struggle to relieve themselves from its grasp, hence comes dizziness, dimness of vision, headache, and staggering in walking. This phlem and catarrh is discharged from the head to the throat, falling on the bronchial tubes filling up the air passages of the lungs, and if suffered to remain there, will thicken, corrode, and breed ulcers in the lungs; then come cough and consumption. We say to the sick, use with great perseverence, one bottle after another, until it has had power enough to dissolve the mucus and phlegms which stop up the air passages, and expectorate it from the lungs.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

☞ In all cases of Dyspepsia with Consumption use

DR. WISHART'S

Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

WITH THE

TAR CORDIAL.

L. Q. C. WISHART, M. D.,

Office and Store 10 North Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. of America.

WHOLESALE AGENTS:

BARNES, WARD & CO., 24 Magazine street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

☞ Sold by all Druggists. mh3 1y

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,

West Troy, N. Y.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-1f

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—ofte life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgo ten"

[feb3]

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES, plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops Prices $75, 90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $55 0, $600 and upwards. Circulars with full part culars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address.

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,

NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Physchology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton Seed and "an" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Linseed Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y.

mr10-1y

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the,

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost of postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my catalogue. Address

JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

Jan18

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 12. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1867. Whole No.—62.

Poetry.

From the Dublin University Magazine.

The Burial of Moses.

By Nebo's lonely mountain,
On this side Jordan's wave,
In a vale in the land of Moab,
There lies a lonely grave;
And no man dug that sepulchre,
And no man saw it e'er;
For the angel of God upturned the sod
And laid the dead man there.

That was the grandest funeral
That ever passed on earth;
But no man heard the tramping,
Or saw the train go forth.
Noiselessly as the daylight
Comes when the night is done,
And the crimson streak on the ocean's cheek
Grows into the great sun;

Noiselessly as the spring-time
Her crown of verdure weaves,
And all the trees on all the hills
Open their thousand leaves—
So without sound of music,
Or voice of them that wept,
Silently down from the mountain's crown
The great procession swept.

Perhaps the bald old eagle
On gray Beth-peor's height,
Out from his rocky eyrie
Looked on the wondrous sight;
Perchance the lion, stalking,
Still shun's that hallowed spot;
For beasts and birds have seen and heard
That which man knoweth not.

But when the warrior dieth,
His comrades in the war,
With arms reversed and muffled drum,
Follow the funeral car;
They show the banners taken,
They tell his battles won,
And after him lead his masterless steed,
While peals the minute gun.

Amid the noblest of the land
Men lay the sage to rest,
And give the bard an honored place,
With costly marble drest,
In the great minster-transept,
Where lights like glory fall,
And the choir sings and the organ rings
Along the emblazoned wall.

This was the bravest warrior
That ever buckled sword!
This the most gifted poet
That ever breathed a word;
And never earth's philosopher
Traced with his golden pen,
On the deathless page, truth half so sage
As he wrote down for men.

And had he not high honor?
The hill-side for his pall,
To lie in state, while angels wait,
With stars for tapers tall.
And the dark rock-pines, like tossing plumes,
Over his bier to wave,
And God's own hand, in that lonely land,
To lay him in the grave!

In that deep grave without a name,
Whence his uncoffined clay
Shall break again (most wondrous thought!)
Before the judgment day,
And stand with glory wrapped around
On the hills he never trod,
And speak of the strife that won our life
With the Incarnate Son of God!

O, lonely tomb in Moab's land!
O, dark Beth-peor hill!
Speak to these curious hearts of ours
And teach them to be still,
God hath His mysteries of grace—
Ways that we cannot tell,
He hides them deep, in the secret sleep
Of him He loved so well.

Tour in the East.

THE BETHHORONS—GREAT BATTLE-FIELD OF GIBEON—SUN AND MOON STAND STILL.

(Editorial.)

Forty minutes from Ludd we passed the town of Jimzu, and just beyond, the road branched, one path diverging to the right, running through Wady Suleiman, and the other ascending the steep acclivities of Bethhoron the Nether. Though it is exceedingly rugged, yet, as it passes over one of the grandest battle-fields in sacred history, we chose the latter. Now began the toil of the journey. The verdure had disappeared, and the white limestone rocks protruded above the scanty soil, leaving only intervening patches of tillable land, which was being plowed as we passed. Disobeying the divine command, and disregarding the fitness of nature, a peasant was plowing with an ox and an ass, and another with an ass and a camel. Passing Um Rush in two hours from Jimzu, we toiled up a mountain path, and at noon reached Lower Bethhoron. Memorable in Bible history as the second stage of the flight of the five kings of the Amorites, the roughness of the scene is in harmony with the horrors of war. The surface of the land is broken into circular rocky hills, around the base of which equally stony valleys wind. From the hill-sides the rocks protrude like terraces, rising with much regularity one above the other. The modern town is perched on a rocky ridge, and called by the Arabs Beit 'Ur et-Tahta. Amid its sterility a few half-naked peasants lay basking in the genial sunshine of spring, who greeted us as we passed with a lazy smile. Though located on the northwest border of Benjamin, the city belonged to Ephraim, and from that tribe it was taken and allotted to the Levites. Passing over the roughest tract of land above the sea, in less than an hour we reached Upper Bethhoron. Bearing the Arabic name of Beit Ur el-Foka, it is a small village, the huts of which are composed of large hewn stones, once belonging to more pretentious buildings. Sturdy men sat smoking on the rocks, and near them women were playing with their children. Among the maidens were the sheikh's daughters, who wore about the head a circlet of silver coins. These ornaments are a maiden's dowry.

Surveying the surrounding country from the roof of the sheikh's house, the famous battle-field of Gibeon lay before me. Seven miles to the southeast is Gibeon, whose conical summit is just hidden by the loftier peaks of Benjamin. Less than three miles to the northwest is Lower Bethhoron, and five miles to the south, on the summit of a long, low ridge, is the small hamlet of Yalo, the traditional site of Ajalon. Between the two hills is the green valley of Ajalon, now called Merj Ibn 'Omeir, expanding as it opens, into the Plain of Philistia. Having formed a powerful coalition, the chiefs of the Amorites, with the King of Jerusalem at their head, had besieged the city of Gibeon. On the eve of the battle the Gibeonites sent to Joshua for relief, whom they had previously deceived into an alliance, and found him on the Plain of Jericho. Though despairing a treaty founded in craft, yet appreciating the obligations of an oath above a temporary inconvenience, and guided by the faint light of the stars, the Israelitish chieftain passed up the Plain of Jericho to Wady Farah, and, turning westward, he reached the scene of the conflict, after a forced march by night, in the early dawn of the next morning. Falling with irresistible surprise and power upon the confederate kings, "he slew them with great slaughter at Gibeon." Flying before his victorious arms, the remnant went "along the way that goeth up to Bethhoron." Outstripping their pursuers, the Amorites continued their flight "in the going down to Bethhoron." Reaching the ridge on which we stood, with all his "mighty men" around him, Joshua beheld the valley through which the fugitives were escaping, and, despairing of overtaking them if the day was not prolonged, he invoked the divine interposition in his behalf. Moved by a sublime faith, he stretched forth the arm that bore the conqueror's spear, and, in the presence of all Israel, said, "Sun, stand thou still on Gibeon, and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon." Respecting the faith of his servant and answering his prayer, Jehovah interposed; "and the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies; and there was no day like that before it or after it, that the Lord hearkened unto the voice of a man; for the Lord fought for Israel." Receiving more than he had asked for, a hail-storm came to his assistance, and after it had accomplished its terrible work, killing foes but sparing friends, Joshua and his warriors descended the declivities of Bethhoron, and pressed the remnant of a once proud foe so hard as to compel the five kings to take refuge in the great cave of Makkedah, around which he encamped for the night, and on the morrow hung the royal fugitives.

"God's testimony is in the rocks." The correspondence between the inspired account and the facts as they now appear, after the lapse of twenty-three centuries, illustrates the accuracy of sacred history. The night's march from Gilgal to Gibeon, a distance of less than twenty-five miles, was not only possible, but can now be accomplished by any ordinary pedestrian. The going up to Bethhoron the Upper, and the going down to Bethhoron the Nether, correspond with the altitude of the former from Gibeon, and the depression of the latter from Beit el-Foka. The relative locations of Gibeon and Ajalon to Upper Bethhoron, and the probable position of the sun and moon in the heavens at that time, agree with the statement as to where Joshua was when he invoked the prolongation of the day; and his subsequent pursuit of the foe in the direction of Azekah, Makkedah, and Jarmuth is confirmed by the identification of those places.

There is nothing in the text indicating that the prayer of Joshua was offered late in the afternoon, and that, as Gibeon is on the east of Upper Bethhoron and Ajalon on the west, therefore the sun could not have stood still on the former nor the moon on the latter. It was probably not noon when he invoked the lengthening of the day. The sun had not yet passed the meridian of Gibeon, while over the western vale of Ajalon the faint crescent of an old moon still lingered, just as it appeared to me. Hence, standing between the two planets as they rode high in the heavens above him, and between the two cities on the earth, he gave forth his miraculous command with the utmost accuracy; while from the western sea came that fearful hail storm driving up the valleys below, killing more than had been slain by the sword, and from the eastern border of the otherwise dark storm-cloud was reflected the light of the motionless sun and moon.

To the People of Louisiana.

FELLOW CITIZENS:—Deceived by the chiefs of the secession party, you were led into a long and bloody war against the government of your country.

Deluded by the promises of ambitious men seeking to recover lost political ascendency, you have resisted the power of Congress and refused its offers of reconciliation and forgiveness.

You have sacrificed your children on the battle-field and wasted the treasures of the Commonwealth to sustain the slave-power; and you have been vanquished.

You have heretofore contumaciously resisted all terms; now Congress offers you a plan of restoration to the Union, and should you prevent its execution, it will inevitably be followed by measures you will have no reason to think agreeable.

If the secession leaders are indiscreet enough to urge you to reject this offer, under pretence that even now they will lead you to victory, turn your eyes to the past, and you will perceive that every inducement and promise they have ever held out to you, have been delusive; and so will their present promises be if they tell you that you can do better than accept the terms now offered.

The question of peace or war is in the sole power of Congress. You waged war against them; they have not finished the war yet; but do and will hold you to it, until they are pleased to say there is peace. This is their right; it was your choice; and you cannot escape from it.

The question as to how your State government is to be restored, and how a Republican form shall be guaranteed to you, is one also for the exclusive decision of Congress. No other power in the Government can lawfully interfere. Any unlawful interference will entail the penalties of treason.

The Congressional plan exhibits a rare magnanimity and clemency. No man is punished in his person or property for past offenses. A few of the secession leaders only are excluded from the Federal and State Governments they sought to destroy.

The plan of Congress is founded on the rights of man and the idea of human progress. By admitting the people of African descent to political privileges, the power of the secession aristocracy will be effectually neutralized, and never can again take the lead to ruin you. Come, let us once more rally under the symbols of Justice, Union, and Confidence.

You need repose; the Union will give you peace.

You need a settlement of existing difficulties which will be permanent; Congress places the means of securing it in your own hands.

You long for the opportunity to resume the pursuits of industry; restoration will open to you the abundant sources of capital and credit.

Discard the errors and prejudices of the past. Stand forth as freemen, and advance to perform the work you are called to. Your own prosperity, the welfare of your wives and children, the safety and happiness of Louisiana, are hanging in the scale.

With a single effort you can pass from uncertainty, obstruction, sullenness, anarchy, to regular administration, activity, cheerfulness, and public order; you have only to will it.

The path is a plain one.

Assemble in your various parishes; exclude no man from your meetings whom Congress accepts; choose delegates to a State Convention to meet in New Orleans. Let the Convention call on the Governor to order an election for members of a Convention to form a State Constitution; and should the Governor decline, let your Convention itself order the election, and provide for the meeting of a Constitutional Convention. The Constitution formed by such a body, in accordance with the ideas of Congress, will undoubtedly be ratified by that body. Your State and Congressional elections can then be held, and you will thenceforth occupy a place in the free Confederation of American States.

T. J. DURANT.

From the Atlanta New Era.

What Shall The South Do?

SPEECH OF EX-GOVERNOR JOSEPH E. BROWN, OF GEORGIA, DELIVERED AT THE CITY HALL, ATLANTA, GA., ON MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 4, 1867.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:—I sincerely regret that my honorable friend (Col. Farrow) called you back, for nothing was further from my intention than to make any remarks. I fear I shall not be able to edify you by anything that I may say. In response, however, to this call, coming from my neighbors, and I trust I may say my friends, I will not decline to say something, and in the remarks I may make, I will say that I do not intend to wound the feelings of any one present. I think that this is a time when it is much better to pour oil on the troubled waters, than to excite the flames of passion and try to divide our people by angry strife. Remember that Congress has already taken action which places all of us under a military government. Remember that in a very few days the President, in all probability, will feel it to be his duty to place over the military district of Georgia, Alabama and Florida, a man whose will will be the law of the land; that it will be a matter of discretion with this commander whether he will allow any one charged with offenses to be tried before any of the civil courts of the State, or before a military tribunal, where the punishment and the mode of its infliction will be alike determined upon in accordance with military laws. It may be a punishment of fine and imprisonment, or with ball and chain, or any other adopted in the army.

Gentlemen, this is not child's play. It is a serious matter. It is such a state of things as you and I have never seen in all our past lives. In view of our responsibility, then, is it becoming for us to quarrel with each other, or to indulge in a spirit of fault-finding, or of crimination and recrimination? Is this the time to stir up angry strife among ourselves, or to take each other by the throats? Would it not be better in this state of things, if we differ, to differ respectfully, and if we discuss, to discuss calmly and with moderation?

The great trouble with our people seems to be that they do not recognize the fact that they are a conquered people, and that they must submit to whatever terms the conqueror imposes upon us. They forget that they have no longer any power of resistance, and that they must submit to the powers that be. The struggle that has ended by the triumph of the arms of the United States government, was one which had its commencement in a division of opinion that has existed since the formation of the government. It had its origin in the different theories of Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson, and raged with more or less fury until it broke out in the late unhappy strife which has deluged the whole country with blood. The controversy could not be decided by Congress or by the Supreme Court. It was left for the sword to decide the question. We appealed to that arbitrament, and the decree is against us.—Congress now claims that, as the war-making power is confided to it, so also must the power to make peace be confided to it; and Congress has maintained its supremacy by the passage over the President's veto of the bill which has just become a law.

Gentlemen say, we will appeal to the Supreme Court. But what would such an appeal be worth? Do you not remember a few days ago, if the newspapers report correctly, that Gov Pierpont, of Virginia, made a requisition upon Gov. Fenton, of New York, for the surrender of a violator of the laws of Virginia? Gov. Fenton refused, on the ground that Virginia was not legally a State, and that the question was carried up before the Supreme Court, who held it to be inadmissable, because a political one. It is also said that the Supreme Court has resolved to decide no more political questions, but to leave them to the other departments. As the issues involved in the Sherman military bill are political ones, it is hardly to be expected they will be decided by that tribunal. You will also remember that Congress has passed an act that whenever vacancies occur on the Supreme Bench, they shall not be filled until the number be reduced to seven. As the Supreme Court is now constituted, a majority of the justices have ruled the test oath unconstitutional; but three of them, Justices Nelson, Grier and Wayne, who concurred in this ruling, are now old men, physically infirm, and cannot be expected long to occupy their positions. When their positions are vacant, a majority of the Supreme Court will most likely entertain political opinions in accord with the party now in power. I think, then, that the South has but little relief in the present emergency to hope for, from that august tribunal. Their present docket, as I was informed when in Washington, is sufficient to engage their attention for the next two years, and it will be in their power to put the cases which may arise under the Sherman military bill to the foot of the docket, and thus avoid a decision till reached in their order.

During the whole of that time you will be under the military bill as it passed Congress.

I know that I am slandered and misrepresented, and my motives attacked for the course I have felt it my duty to pursue on this question; but I pass by all imputations of the kind as the idle wind that I regard not. (Applause.) They say I am not consistent. I admit it. And who of us is? I was born in South Carolina, in Mr. Calhoun's district; was reared in his political faith, and sincerely believed that the doctrines which he taught were the true principles of this government. But the sword has decided against the doctrines of that political school, and we ought to acquiesce. I was reared a secessionist, but I bow to the decision of the august tribunal that dictates between States and nations in the last resort. I am not, therefore, a secessionist now. (Applause.) Therefore, gentlemen, I am not consistent. I do not claim it. The man who sets himself up to be consistent at all times, and under all circumstances, in my judgment, acts very unwisely.

That which is expedient to-day as a matter of policy, may not be expedient to-morrow. As an illustration: would any body in this audience, ten years ago, have thought it expedient that negroes should testify in courts of justice, where a white man was concerned? Clearly not. Then they were slaves; but since that time they have been made as free as you and I. Would anybody, ten years ago, have thought it expedient that a negro should be allowed to sue a white man? Clearly not But now the case is different. Then he had a master to look after his rights; now he must look after them himself, and he must have them, and if they are denied him, he must have the right to sue for them. (Applause.) Then we are not consistent. Who is there, that, ten years ago, would have advocated the abolition of slavery in this State? But now that measure has been adopted by a unanimous vote. An ordinance to that effect has been passed by the convention of the State, and I do not remember whether it had a single opponent. Every man in Georgia, then, by his representative, has voted for the abolition of slavery, and every one who has been pardoned under the amnesty proclamation of the President, has laid his hands upon the Holy Evangelists and taken an oath that he would abide by it. Why did you do it? Because the fortunes of war were against you. The tribunal of the sword had decided against you. Were any of you consistent then? I think not.

Is a man degraded because he submits to this bill? My friends, let us reason together upon this subject. It is, indeed, very humiliating, especially to some of us who are disfranchised by the bill; but is there anything degrading in it? When Napoleon Bonaparte, who fought as gallantly as ever man fought, was overwhelmed by superior numbers, he surrendered to the combined powers of Europe. He was humiliated, but not degraded. Was General Robert E. Lee degraded when, after his forces had melted away, phalanx by phalanx, he surrendered to Gen. Grant? Let us look to this illustrous example You say that, although you have surrendered, you will not do what the conqueror requires. You will simply do nothing, and submit to whatever follows. But General Lee did not do this. After he had surrendered his sword to General Grant—who, it is reported, with a magnamity that has seldom been equalled, and never surpassed, returned it to him with expressions of admiration and sympathy—General Lee did not put himself upon his dignity, and say, I am conquered—I am at your mercy—do with me as you please, but rest assured I will do nothing—I will never disgrace myself by doing what the conqueror requires—I am in your hands, sir, but I will carry out no terms you dictate. On the contrary, Gen. Lee inquired, "What terms will you give me?" Gen. Grant informed him substantially that he must take a parole to abandon the cause for which he had fought so gallantly, and swear never again to take up arms against the government of the United States, which he had for the last four years attempted to destroy in the Southern States. When the terms were offered, Gen. Lee and his gallant veterans accepted them, as the best they could do under the circumstances. Gen. Lee's course then was not consistent with his former course. Had he stood upon consistency, and refused to act or sign the parole, he and his gallant comrades must have gone to a military prison and been tried for treason. What he did was humiliating to his pride. But the condition of the conquered is always humiliating. Did any one say that General Lee, by acting upon the terms, had degraded himself or forfeited the respect of others? How much more degrading is it for you to accept and act upon the best terms you can get as a conquered people?

Suppose you refuse to accept the terms of this bill, will you get any better? When Congress presented to us the constitutional amendment, which disfranchised but a small class, and we rejected it, did it present to us the same measure alone the second time? No! But they said, you have refused this measure, and now you shall accept it and universal suffrage too.

Suppose, now, you refuse to act upon the present offer. What may we expect but general disfranchisement of all who engaged in the rebellion, and a general confiscation act? But it is said that the bill disfranchises a large class of our fellow citizens. True, it disfranchises a highly intelligent class. Who are they? It disfranchises all who were members of Congress, or officers of the United States, who had taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and afterwards engaged in the rebellion.

There were few United States officers in Georgia prior to the war, except postmasters. But it disfranchises every member of the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the State government, who had taken the oath to support the Constitution of the United States and engaged in the rebellion. This embraces all persons who have at any time been governors of States, members of the legislature, or judicial officers. In the latter class is embraced all judicial officers who had a right to try causes, from a judge of the supreme court down to a justice of the peace who had taken said oath and afterwards engaged in the rebellion, as we are now obliged to call it, whatever may have been our opinions But there is a large class of officers who are not disfranhised, although their offices required them to take an oath to support the constitution of the United States.

No man under twenty-seven years of age is disfranchised; because a man had to be twenty-one years old to hold an office that required him to take the oath to support the constitution, and it has now been six years since the war began. Neither militia officers, nor county officers, nor judicial, are disfranchised—as sheriffs, clerks, tax-collectors and receivers, county treasurers, constables, coroners, road commissioners, notaries public, etc. Is it not better that the classes embraced in the disqualification submit to it, than that the whole mass of white men who aided in the rebellion be added to the excluded class, and the property of the whole people confiscated? I do not feel that it is degrading to submit to the terms of the conqueror. If so, all who hear me are degraded. You all took the amnesty oath, when so required, to save your property and avoid punishment. Why did you not then discover the degradation, and adopt the nothing, dignity policy, which gentlemen now talk so eloquently about? Those who acted then should have a little more charity for those who propose to act now.

Why did not gentlemen put themselves upon their dignity and manhood, when required to abolish slavery, repudiate the war debt, and abrogate the ordinance of secession, which we had passed with so much defiance? If we could take all that, and maintain our self-respect," I think we may take the balance of the dose, which we are informed shall be the last, without making as ugly faces as some of us now make. Let us put a little sugar-coating around it, and swallow the pill at once and be done with it—waiving the "dignity" for a time, as we have so often been compelled to do. Those who have taken the amnesty oath and voted for all these measures, now claim that they have done enough. So we all thought, but the conquerors say not, and it is our misfortune that they are in a position to decide that question for us without consulting us.

At the close of the war, a part of us were arrested, and for a time we had not the option of leaving the country. But all of you, gentlemen, who were not under arrest, had that opportunity. The way was open to Mexico, Brazil, Canada, or Europe, or to any other part of

(Concluded on second page.)

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months..... 2 00
Three Months..... 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion.....$1 50
" each subsequent insertion... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, MARCH, 23, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

Gen. Sheridan's Order.

Headquarters Fifth Military District, }
New Orleans, La., March 19, 1867. }

General Orders No. 1.

1. The act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States" having been officially transmitted to the undersigned in an order from the Headquarters of the Army, which assigns him to the command of the Fifth Military District created by that act, consisting of the States of Louisiana and Texas, he hereby assumes command of the same.

2. According to the provisions of the 6th section of the act of Congress above cited, the present State and Municipal Governments in the States of Louisiana and Texas are hereby declared to be provisional only, and subject to be abolished, modified, controlled or superceded.

3. No general removals from office will be made, unless the present incumbents fail to carry out the provisions of the law, or impede the reorganization, or, unless a delay in reorganizing should necessitate a change. Pending the reorganization, it is desirable and intended to create as little disturbance in the machinery of the various branches of the Provisional Governments as possible, consistent with the law of Congress and its successful execution, but this condition is dependent upon the disposition shown by the people, and upon the length of time required for reorganization.

4. The States of Louisiana and Texas will retain their present military designations, viz: "District of Louisiana," and "District of Texas." The officers in command of each will continue to exercise all their military powers and duties as heretofore, and will in addition carry out all the provisions of the law within their respective commands, except those which specifically require the action of the Military District Commander, and except in cases of removals from, and appointments to office.

P. H. Sheridan,
Major General Commanding.

Official:
George Lee, 1st Lt. 21st U. S. Inf.,
Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

The above order contains the official announcement, from Major Gen. Sheridan, that the military bill is in full operation in this State. The third section of the order is the one which excites special interest in our city. He therein announces, that it is not his intention to depose from office the present incumbents, whether city or State officials, "unless the present incumbents fail to carry out the provisions of the law, or impede the re-organization, or, unless a delay in re-organizing shall necessitate a change;" he also adds another condition, viz.: the "disposition shown by the people, and the length of time required for re-organization."

We judge this a most judicious order. It would have been the height of folly to have removed from office at a single stroke all the present incumbents. Society, in its present condition, could not have endured the shock. Anarchy would have ensued. Collisions would have been inevitable. Blood would have been shed. The policy adopted by the District Commander, is in accordance with the intent of the law under which he acts, and he is bound by its provisions. The conditions however, which he has prescribed, are simple and severe. State and city officials should take warning in time. There is an eye upon them. Their proceedings will be watched by one who has never been known to sleep at his post. Their official acts will be scanned with vigilance and with the utmost scrutiny; the axe will fall on the first offender and for the first offence. Yet it is not certain that General Sheridan will not make several removals immediately; indeed, we do not see how he can allow some to remain in office, in view of their well-known political antecedents and the pronounced conditions in the law under which he acts. Such are notoriously disqualified—they belong to the disfranchised class, and their removal will be hailed with delight by the good of all parties. Like the dead branches of a tree, they will be lopped off, one after another.

We are aware that not a few of our Union citizens are disappointed with the non-removal feature of the order, and especially those impatiently waiting to fill with honor the vacant offices. But to both classes, we say, "wait a little longer." True wisdom includes within its view the future as well as the present. Sudden changes are often ruinous. Great events more slowly. It is true that the Union men of Louisiana have been too long under the harrow of rebel rule, and this is the cause of their present impatience. But it were better to move slowly and sure, than hastily and disastrously. Repose implicit confidence in the Commanding General whose record is known to the nation. Nor is there any just cause for the fear, that, by the continuance of the present incumbents in office, they will control the coming elections, and thereby, they or their friends will retain the power. The law prescribing the elections are too plain to be evaded, and the military will secure a just and impartial election whenever it may take place. Therefore be united. Everywhere organize for the great work. Exercise more than ordinary vigilance. Educate the "new voters" in their rights and duties, and in less than six months, Louisiana may be reconstructed by her loyal citizens, and once more shine in the firmament of national glory.

Hon. Thomas J. Durant.

This eminent citizen and distinguished patriot has published an address to his fellow-citizens of Louisiana, which may be found on our first page, and to which we call the candid attention of our readers. Lofty in sentiment, kind in spirit, dignified in language, it is a timely appeal to the people of this State. Its wise counsels should be immediately followed. Residing at Washington himself, and knowing the sentiments of Congress as thoroughly and correctly as any other gentleman there, he has spoken advisedly on the points in his address. He knows, and we have good reason for the statement, that unless the people of the South comply with the mild provisions of the Military Bill, other and severer measures will be adopted by Congress. Let us then, not provoke Congress to harsher enactments.—"Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. Verily, I say unto thee, thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing."

We also call attention to ex-Governor Brown's address, on the same subject.

Political Harmony.

We much regret the late discussion at Economy Hall, between Messrs. Crane and Warmoth. These are not the times for personal recriminations.

"Let the dead past bury its dead.
Act—act in the living present,
Heart within and God o'erhead!"

The factions in the Union party in this State have been its destruction, and its present enfeebled condition is due, in no small degree, to the personal animosities of its leaders. Without discussing the merits of the points in dispute between these two gentlemen, we counsel harmony. At most, the Union party is not strong, and it is a question, with all their united strength and with all the advantages of the Military Bill, whether the party can carry even the City election; certainly it cannot, if split into factions. One thing is clear—the colored voters of our State will not be led by gentlemen who cannot agree among themselves. These "new citizens" have too much at stake to imperil their interests by entrusting them to such leaders. We shall advise them not to follow their lead. If there must be a division, let it be on some great principle, not on personalities.—Again we demand united action in this supreme hour.

That Letter from Aberdeen.—A note from Mr Condol, (teacher of freedmen's school,) which appears in an Aberdeen paper, corrects the statement we published two weeks ago, that the school there had been broken up for two days by scholars being arrested. No scholars were arrested in school, nor was the school broken up. The other statements of our correspondent are not controverted. We hope our correspondents will be very careful to give us only facts when they write.

Dr. and Mrs. Palmer.

These beloved friends and faithful servants of the Lord Jesus, are still with us. Since they arrived in New Orleans they have been abundant in labors.—On the day of their arrival they visited our Institute, and spoke earnestly to the students on the importance of personal holiness as a pre-requisite to ministerial success. On the evening of the following day they attended our weekly prayer-meeting, when the Lord was pleased to commence a gracious work. The leading men of our society were quickened, and all were refreshed. Such was the interest excited, that another meeting was appointed for the next evening, which was largely attended.

On Sabbath morning last, Dr. and Mrs. Palmer officiated in the Hall of the House of Representatives, our present place of worship. The audience was large and attentive. The Doctor expounded the 3d and 4th chapters of Hebrews, and was followed by Mrs. Palmer, who, in a clear, impressive and convincing manner, spoke on the inconsistency and evils of unbelief. In the afternoon, at 3 o'clock, they were present at Wesley Chapel, and addressed the congregation on a "Prepared people for a prepared heaven." Power attended their word, and the Lord's people shouted aloud for joy. In the evening they were again with us, and seven rose for prayers, four of whom were converted. Since Sunday, Dr. and Mrs. Palmer have attended meetings every evening, and on Tuesday afternoon they met our preachers, to whom they spoke with unusual sweetness and power. As the result of their labors, thus far, several have received the assurance of perfect love, and the work is still in progress.

The coming of these earnest evangelists in our midst is a cause of devout gratitude. No city of the Union needs their labors more than New Orleans, and the whole Church should pray for large success to attend their efforts.—At once appreciating the importance of the sinner's conversion, and the believer's sanctification, they labor as earnestly to secure the former as to promote the latter. Thoroughly understanding the plan of salvation; gifted with a conquering faith in Christ; ever imbued with the Holy Spirit; clear in their own experience; simple in their statements of gospel truth, and pathetic in their appeals to saint and sinner, they are the Lord's "chosen vessels," and the messengers of His love to a dying world.

They are the guests of Captain W. B Armstrong, 159 Carondelet street.

Revival.—We call the attention of the preachers of our Conference and of all our people, to the importance of holding extra meetings for the revival of God's work. Has not the "set time to favor Zion" come? The moral destitutions of the whole South is alarming to contemplate. War has entailed upon our people its moral evils. Morals are lax; infidelity has grown apace; Christians are indifferent; sinners are perishing. Let us then engage earnestly in the work of saving the people from their sins. Meetings are now in progress in most of our city churches, and we hope soon to learn that God is everywhere pouring out his Holy Spirit. We request our preachers to send to the Advocate whatever of revival intelligence they may possess.

Christian Earnestness.

The radical sense of the good old Saxon word earnest is "to strive to advance, to reach forward, to urge, to strain." It has come to denote "the inward conviction of the mind, and the warmth of the heart when awakened by important objects." Analyzed according to modern philologists, it has a variety of "first principles" which should be carefully noted, if we would thoroughly understand the import of the word.

The earnest soul will have a worthy object which it will pursue with intelligent understanding, intenseness of desire, fixedness of attention, an untiring diligence, an anxious solicitude, an energy of action, an eager importunity, and a zealous perseverance. All this it will do, freely and cheerfully. Such is earnestness—such the attributes of mind and heart belonging to the truly earnest soul. Earnestness is of the first importance to humanity in all its relations. Without it, nothing worthy of note can be accomplished in Art or Science, in Literature or Commerce. What, without it, has been, or can be accomplished in any profession, in any calling, in life? It is the price of success. Successful men are always earnest men. If there are exceptions, they only establish this law.

But of all men the Christian should be the most earnest in heart, the most diligent in labor, the most successful in his mission. He has the noblest object before him—the glory of God, and the salvation of men. What mighty motives impel him to action! He is under infinite obligation to love God and serve Him—obligations springing from God's relation of Creator, Preserver, Benefactor, Father, Friend, Redeemer, Savior. The Christian is free, and therefore responsible, and must strictly account to God for the manner in which he has met, or failed to meet, these high obligations. His own happiness and salvation depend on his faithfulness. Not that he is saved by works, for salvation is the free, unmerited gift of God; but on conditions. God says: "Be thou faithful, even unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Here he is bound to strict fidelity, at any and every expense—even of life—and the obligation is perpetual. We must "keep all the commandments," and always, that "it may be well" with us forever. And only thus can we glorify God.

And God has made us his agents to save others. Christ said to his disciples, and says to us, "Greater works than these shall ye do, because I go to my Father." The salvation of men—what a work is this! A work upon which God the Father "set his heart;" a work in which the Son became incarnate—tho' rich, became poor—came to earth, labored, suffered, died, rose again, ascended, and now sitteth at the right hand of God, interceding for our success as "workers together with Him;" a work, for the consummation of which the Holy Ghost has come to earth, dwells in our hearts and abides with us forever!—to be our advocate below—"the other advocate—against the world, the flesh, and Satan, as Jesus is our advocate above; a work in which good angels are intensely interested, (desiring to look into it, ministering to its agents, rejoicing over its success,) but in which they cannot directly engage—not one of all the shining hosts—because they have not "our nature;" a work in which fallen angels, too, are deeply interested that they may hinder it—

"Our, secret, sworn, eternal foes, Countless, invisible;"

they throng the air and darken heaven, and set themselves in battle array—thrones, principalities, and powers—against God and his Christ, His church and His people; the only work which interests all earth, and hell, and heaven, and in which the triune Jehovah has condescended to furnish us with arms and armor, and to command us in the field! Should we not be in earnest in such a work?

Look at the issues of this work—immortal weal or woe!

"Pregnant with all eternity can give—
With all that makes archangels smile."

What peace and happiness on earth; what palms of victory, robes of righteousness, crowns of glory, harps of melody, scepters and thrones; what honors, rewards and welcomes in glory, if we succeed; what guilt and condemnation here, what pains and penalties hereafter, if we fail in this work! Think of the brief space allotted us in which to work, and hear the Master's voice: "Work while it is day—the night cometh when no man can work," and learn to be in earnest. Remember how uncertain is the time when we may be called to give account of our stewardship. "In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." "This night thy soul is required of thee." Reader, there may be but a step between thee and Death. Be in earnest, that you be ready. Be diligent, that you may hear—"Well-done." Have you an unconverted friend or relative? Speak to them. They are exposed to eternal fire and pain—snatch them "as brands from the burning." Speak with feeling, be in earnest. Pray for them, and let prayer be an intense desire. Of Christ it is said, "He continued all night in prayer." He offered up prayer "with strong crying and tears." "And being in agony, He prayed the more earnestly." That was prayer. So do you pray, reader, while thy prayers may be heard, and let it not require "the vengeance of fire eternal to teach thee, as it taught Dives, how to agonize in prayer. Be in earnest. Are you a minister, a class-leader, a Sabbath-school teacher, a parent?

"Your work might fill an angel's heart,
And fill the Savior's hands."

Think of his self-denial, toil and tears—of His agony in the Garden, and upon the Cross—that the souls committed to your care might be redeemed; and ask yourself what you ought to do that they may be saved. Be in earnest. They who man the life-boat are in earnest. The fireman is in earnest as he snatches the child from the flames. The soldier, as he advances in the fatal, but triumphant charge, is in earnest. The miser is in earnest, and so is the lover of pleasure, and of fame. Are you a seeker of religion? Be in earnest. Is a vicious habit growing upon you day by day, ruining health, impairing mind, and corrupting your morals? Be in earnest, and break its power before it binds you fast in its slavish chains and drags you down to an untimely grave and a sinner's hell!

"Time flies, death urges, knells call, hell threatens,
Heaven invites; all exerts, in effort all;
More than creation labors—labors more;
And is there in creation what, amidst
This tumult universal, winged despatch,
And ardent energy, supinely yawns? Yes:
Man sleeps; and Man alone: Man whose fate,
Irreversible, entire, extreme, endless,
Hair-hung, breeze-shaken o'er the gulf,
A moment trembles! drops! and man for whom
All else is alarm—man, the sole cause
Of this surrounding storm! and yet he sleeps
As the storm rocked to rest! Throw years away,
Throw empires, and be blameless. But moments
Seize, heaven's on their wing! A moment
We may wish when worlds want wealth to buy."

Be in earnest then. Improve the moments as they fly. Be up and doing for God and the great future. Reader, are you awake? Are you active, are you in earnest? What meanest thou, O sleeper? There are no sleepers in eternity! Not one idle, listless soul, in hell or heaven. "Awake, thou that sleepest!"

B.

Steps of Progress.

Had we not been living amid events of hugest magnitude, and become accustomed to vast strides of progress, the recent act of Congress, which virtually lifts to the heights of the elective franchise the millions of a race long ground under the heel of the oppressor, would be regarded in itself as sufficient to stamp the age, and crown one generation of effort. Viewed in its connections it is one of many advance steps which mark this as an extraordinary era. What is the import of this great act? It lifts more than three millions, who had formerly been estimated only by the price they would bring in the market to the dignity of complete manhood; it redeems the nation from the infamy of leaving a hundred thousand heroic soldiers stripped of true citizenship; it rescues loyalty from helpless overthrow in the South; it tears down the walls of caste in the nation; it obliterates the infamy of the past; it removes the stains which had attached to the servile state; it raises from social degredation and ignominy, a large element in Southern society; it elevates the white population of the South, and it opens the gateway to christian, moral, social and industrial progress for an area embracing almost one-half of our extended country. Who, but a hopeless fogy, will not rejoice over such gains to humanity, to the country and to the cause of God?

Still, it must be admitted, this great change is received very ungraciously by a large number who, had they eyes and were they willing to use them, could but see that they were among those most largely benefitted. No man in the nation, the blacks excepted, gains so much by this act as the citizen of the South. The whole of our people are interested in the speedy elevation of the colored element, because to lift the lower, always elevates the higher strata of society. But the Southerner is in reality the one most deeply interested. The intelligence, virtue, christianity, prosperity of his own section hinges on the immediate elevation of the late servile class. But this though a complete specific for the present ills of the South, is to him a most bitter medicine. Your true born Southerner argues most strenuously against giving the high prerogatives of the ballot to ignorant blacks. It is hard for him, with his culture and refinement, to be placed on the level with a stupid descendent of a Hottentot or Congo. He is afraid such men cannot be safely entrusted with the destinies of this country and is full of fearful forebodings as to the result. But he forgets that the first and sovereign right to the ballot is loyalty. He fails to appreciate that the stupidest, blackest, most ignorant soldier who carried his gun in defence of his country has won a higher nobility than the most polished Caucassion who nerved his arm to destroy it. He forgets that the South by her unreasoning course since the surrender has hedged the nation either to giving the ballot to the negro, or disgracefully to abandon its friends to merciless enemies.

The policy of the nation may now be considered fixed. Borne forward on a tide which God alone could direct; led by his guidance to a sublimity of action which our people, unaided from above, would have never reached; compelled to action by a necessity which could not be set aside, this nation has landed upon the only tenable ground for Republican institutions. Ceasing to contend with destiny, passing by the prejudices of men whom no arguments can move, Congress has done wisely in relieving the rebels of the South from all responsibility of reconstruction. With manhood suffrage floating from the mast head of the Republic, with liberty and equality emblazoned on her flag, our country starts upon a new era and marches to a grander destiny.

But what is to be the position of the South in this higher and national life? Is she to wither amid the developments of this new period, or shall she too bound forward in the race of progress? Far behind, as she now is, she has all the elements that have built up the mighty North and West. Equal in the fertilities of her soil, superior in her commercial advantages, and possessing a more delightful climate, this land of fruit and flowers has been kept back solely by her unfortunate institutions. From all these she is now happily delivered. Freedom is her heritage, the fetters are lifted from her limbs, and a career of glory is before her, of which her recreant sons cannot even dream. But for leaders in the path of this progress we must turn to others than the present race of Southern men. Stupidly ignorant, or blindly prejudiced, or wickedly stubborn they spend their strength in resisting the inevitable, and trying to escape the great future which is thrust upon them. What is wanted at the South is new men, new men on the political arena, new men in commercial enterprise, new men in educational movements, new men at the public press, and especially new men in the church to whom may be safely entrusted the moral reconstruction of the South.

Editorial Items.

Dr. and Mrs. Palmer, will officiate in the Hall of the House of Representatives to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

The New M. E. Church in Jefferson City, will be dedicated to-morrow, (Sunday, March 24th,) at three o'clock, P. M. Sermon by Rev. A. Ross. Rev. A. C. McDonald will preach at eleven o'clock, A. M. A cordial invitation is given to all to attend.

The rise in the Mississippi river still prevails; the river is thirty-three miles wide at Memphis.

Parochial Schools.—The preachers of this Conference will bear in mind that our presiding elders have the supervision of our Parochial schools; and all communications on the subject should be addressed to them. Rev. N. L. Brakeheman, Presiding Elder of the New Orleans District, has the oversight of all our schools in his district, and all communications addressed to him touching these schools will receive his prompt attention. His address is New Orleans.

A Convenient and Useful Article.—Among the many useful inventions is Clark's Patent Indelible Pencil, manufactured by "The Indelible Pencil Co," at Northampton, Mass.

All that is necessary is to dampen the fabric with a little saleratus water, and write thereon as with an ordinary lead pencil. This does away with the inconvenience of pen, bottle, &c., and with the danger of blotting.

It is put up in a nice substantial case, and may be ordered by mail, from the manufacturers, post-paid, for the sum of fifty cents, or at a cheaper rate by the gross. It can also be obtained at various places in this city.

The American Agriculturist, which does not recommend humbugs, says of it, "It is much more convenient than ink, and equally good as to performance—we judge after several months' trial."

Mississippi Items.

From Meridian we went to Enterprise where the people were anxiously awaiting us. We found a number of white citizens ready to co-operate with us, and there appeared to be general good feeling towards our efforts to organize the "Old Church" and to build the Freedmen a house of worship. I have no where found evidence of a better feeling between white and colored people than here. The latter are all united as to church movements, and prospects are very encouraging. We got a very pretty lot of ground, and made arrangements to build a respectable house. It will probably be the best Freedmen's church in the State when finished. It will be ready for them to worship in as soon as the work can be done. I am under obligations to Mr. Turner, formerly of Alabama Conference, and once a missionary to slaves, for assistance in my work, and for a free and hospitable entertainment during my stay. Other citizens also gave valuable aid and encouragement.

Enterprise is a pleasant town on Mobile and Ohio Railroad. Having once received a visit from a certain well-known Southern tourist, W. T. Sherman, it had to "reconstruct" itself, which it has done with fair success. It is not without some of that quality indicated by its name. A large cotton factory is projected near by. Pine timber is most abundant and of good quality. Land and lumber very cheap. Climate pleasant and water good.

We next went to Macon. Bro. Jones has gathered a society of over one hundred members. A good school is in operation under the auspices of the Society of Friends, of Indiana. They have a school-house in which the people also worship, but it is not large enough for the congregation. We shall build them a church as soon as the work can be done. Public feeling towards the school and church seems to be quite fair, and prospects are favorable here also. The town is a rather hard looking one, but the country is good and with better crops, and more industry things would look better.

Every day gives us increased confidence in the future prospects and importance of our work in this country if we lay our plans judiciously and work them out well.

Southern men are seeing the necessity of recognizing the manhood of the negro and giving him religion and education. Several have admitted to me that the public sentiment and feeling of the South has been and still is wrong in regard to these things.

An Episcopal clergyman told me he would take hold of schools for Freedmen at once, if he could do so without destroying his influence with the white people. He said he was trying to start a free school for poor white children.

There is a point that ought to be looked at a little more. Thousands of them are as poor as the negro children, and, if we could aid them in education we might get a stronghold on whites as well as blacks.

Rain, mud, high water, and cloudy skies, are the prominent features of natural scenery here now. Weather has been favorable till last week, not since.

People grumble over the military bill, but none propose any violent opposition. Some say organize under it before some thing worse comes; others, perhaps the majority, are for the same sullen course pursued in the past. Let them mutter, a loyal man is as safe here as in Ohio or Illinois, but whether the volcano is to remain inactive or not, time alone can tell. D.

General News.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—House—A resolution suspending the issue of Agricultural College scrip to the insurgent States passed 103 to 23.

A joint resolution authorizing the publication of the laws and treaties in three Louisiana papers passed.

The supplementary bill, as reported by the committee of conference, was passed and goes to the President.

House adjourned.

Senate—The joint resolution suspending payments for enlisted slaves was postponed.

The credentials of Senator Thomas, of Maryland, were referred to the judiciary committee.

A bill to exclude from either house persons tainted with rebellion, was referred to the judiciary committee.

The committee of conference reported the supplementary bill. It provides that a majority of voters shall be sufficient to ratify a Constitution, providing a majority of registered voters do actually vote, with an additional clause that Congress must be satisfied that registered voters had unrestraint liberty to vote and that the constitution adopted meets the approval of a majority of the qualified electors of the State. The bill passed. The Senate went into executive session and adjourned.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The supplemental bill will be presented to the President to-morrow. When it becomes a law, Congress will probably adjourn.

Frisby, and J. M. G. Parker, Butler's wife's brother-in-law, are applicants for the collectorship, vice Benton, deceased.

Veazie has been confirmed as assessor of the second district of Louisiana.

The president held back the nomination of Whitaker for the post of attorney general of Louisiana, and to-day sent in that of Sam Torrey, whom the Louisiana radicals in Washington have promised to support and endeavor to have confirmed as marshal.

The House delegate to the conference committee agrees to a compromise retaining the power in Congress in revising elections under the bill. He alleges in support of his course, that it is better than requiring a majority of the registered voters in the first instance, and that it will not materially affect the final admission of Congressmen from the Southern States.

Chief Justice Chase and Attorney General Stanberry express strong disapproval of Judge Durell's absenting himself from his post so suddenly as he has, to go to Washington, without even the slightest previous notice to the authorities.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The nomination of Samuel H. Torrey, for the District of Louisiana, was to-day unanimously confirmed. This action of the Senate is considered a compromise with the Hahn party.

Quite a commotion was excited today among the Louisiana radicals, at present, place and power prospecting in Washington, on the announcement that General Steadman had been nominated and appointed collector of internal revenue for the State of Louisiana, vice Benton, deceased, and B. C. Fisk, of Vicksburg, collector of the third district, vice Collins.

WASHINGTON, March 17.

SENATE—At half-past eleven the Senate passed the supplemental bill, which in effect is as follows :

SEC. 1. Be it enacted, That before September, 1867, the commanding general of each district shall cause registration of citizens in each county or parish in State or States in his district, which shall include only those persons qualified to vote for delegates by act aforesaid, and who shall have taken the following oath : I do solemnly swear or affirm in the presence of Almighty God, that I am a citizen of the State—that I have resided in said State for —— months next preceding this day, and now reside in the —— county of ——, or parish of —— in said State ; am twenty-one years old ; have not been disfranchised for participation in any rebellion or civil war against the United States, or for felony committed against laws of the State or the United States ; have never taken the oath as a member of the Congress of the United States, or as an officer of the United States, and afterwards engaged in any insurrection or rebellion against said United States, or given aid or comfort thereto ; that I will faithfully support the Constitution and obey the laws of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, encourage others so to do; so help me God.

Which oath or affirmation may be administered by any registering officer.

SEC. 2 That after the completion of the registration hereby provided for any State, at such time and places as the commanding general shall appoint, of which at least thirty days' public notice shall be given, election shall be held of delegates to convention for the purpose of establishing constitutional and civil governments for such States as are loyal to the Union ; said convention in each State, except Virginia, to consist of the same number of members as the most numerous branch of the State legislature in 1860, to be apportioned among the several districts, counties and parishes of the States, by the commanding general, giving to each representation in ratio of the voters registered. The convention in Virginia shall consist of the same number of members as represented in the territory now constituting Virginia in the most numerous branch of the legislature of said State in the year eighteen hundred and sixty (1860), apportioned as aforesaid.

SEC. 3. At said election registered voters shall vote for or against the convention to form a constitution therefor under this act. Those voting in favor of such convention shall have written or printed on ballots by which to vote for delegates as aforesaid, words "for a convention." Those voting against such convention, shall have written or printed on ballots the words, "against a convention." Persons appointed to superintend the elections shall count and make returns of votes given for and against convention, and commanding generals to whom same are returned shall ascertain and declare the total vote in such State for and against said convention. If a majority of the votes given on that question shall be for convention, then such convention shall be held as herein-with provided. But if a majority of the votes be against the convention then no such convention shall be held under this act, provided that such convention shall not be held un'ess a majority of all such registered votes shall have voted on the question of holding such convention.

SEC. 4. Commanding generals of each district shall appoint such loyal officers or persons as are necessary, not exceeding three in each election district, to make and complete the registration, superintend the election, and make returns of the votes ; list voters of persons elected delegates by a plurality of votes cast, and upon receiving said returns he shall open the same, ascertain the persons elected delegates, and make proclamation thereof; and within sixty days from date of election, notify delegates to assemble in convention at the time and place to be named in notification ; and said convention, when organized, shall first determine by a vote whether it is the wish of the people that such State shall frame constitution and civil government according to the provisions of this act, and the act to which it is supplementary, and if so, shall proceed to frame constitution, and when the same is so framed, shall be submitted by convention for ratification by person registered at an election conducted by officers appointed by the commanding general, as hereinbefore provided, held after the expiration of thirty days, from the date of notice thereof, to be given by said convention. Returns thereof shall be made to the commanding general.

SEC. 5. If the Constitution shall be ratified by a majority of the votes of electors, qualified as herein specified at said election, at least one-half of the registered voters, voting upon the question of such ratification, the president of the convention shall transmit a copy of the same duly certified to the President of the United States, who shall forthwith transmit the same to Congress, if in session ; if not in session, then immediately upon next assembling, and if said convention shall be declared by Congress, in conformity with the provision of the act to which this is supplementary, and under provisions of said act shall have been complied with, and said convention shall be approved by Congress, States shall be entitled to representation, and senators and representatives shall be admitted therefrom as therein provided.

SEC. 6. All elections in States mentioned in said act, shall during operation of said act be by ballot ; and all officers making said registration of voters and conducting elections, shall, before entering upon discharge duties, take and subscribe an oath faithfully to perform the duties of said office and oath prescribed by act approved July 2d, 1862, entitled "an act to prescribe an oath of office."

SEC. 7. That all expense incurred by orders issued, appointments made by them under this act, shall be paid out of any moneys in treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 8 The convention for each State shall prescribe compensation to be paid all delegates and others, officers and agents herein authorized and necessary to carry into effect the purposes of this act, not herein otherwise provided ; and shall provide for levying and collecting such taxes on property in such State as may be necessary to pay the same.

SEC. 9. The word article in 6th section of act to which this is supplementary, shall be construed to mean section.

Wise words of a Roman Consul to his son : "If ever you marry, let it be to a woman who has judgment enough to superintend the getting of a meal of victuals; taste enough to dress herself well; pride enough to wash before breakfast, and sense enough to hold her tongue when she has nothing to say."

Speech of Gov. Brown.

[Continued from first page.]

the world. Why did you not all go? I suppose you stayed either from choice or necessity. Many had aged parents, wives, or children, or all together, for whose support they were responsible. They had not the means to carry them to a strange land. This class—a very large one—if they had no other attachments to bind them to the country, remained from necessity. A very large class, no doubt, remained because, with all its faults, they still loved their native land the best, and were unwilling to exchange this land with its government for any other. Most of those who then left have repented and returned We then chose this as our government and again placed ourselves under its protection. What follows? It is our imperative duty to give it our allegiance, and to support its flag wherever it may wave, against every enemy, foreign or domestic. There is neither manliness, dignity, nor good faith in any other course

A new era has dawned upon us, and whether for weal or woe, we must act our part, and make the best we can of the situation. We must accommodate ourselves to circumstances. God has given us a magnificent country. It needs development. We lack labor. Let us invite both. And when northern and western men come among us, let us treat them as friends. In war we were enemies. The war has ended, and we are again under the same government. Our ancestors were the same. Our blood the same. Then let us do all in our power to heal the wounds opened by the war, and as little as possible to irritate. This is the only way to advance our prosperity. The more population we have, and the more thrifty, the more valuable is the farmer's land, the better the merchant's trade, the more patients the doctor has, the more cases for the lawyer, the better the freights on the railroad, and, indeed, the better for every interest of the State.

I am assailed because I have recommended our people to do what the conquerors require on the suffrage question. Men are gravely discussing the question whether the negro shall be allowed to vote. This is a useless waste of breath. Congress has settled that question for us. We have no power to prevent it. They are now voters. That is not now the question. It is, shall the great mass of our white men vote?

If we accept the position and act upon it, the ballot will remain in the hands of nine-tenths of the white men of the South. If we refuse to do so, it will be taken from them and given to a very small class of white men, and the negroes During the war the blacks acted nobly. We sent our white men to the field, and the negroes, who knew our failure was their freedom, stayed at home and acted as protectors to our families, and made a support for them and their masters in the field.

The fortunes of war have placed them upon terms of civil and political equality with us. Many of them have nursed our children—others have been the companions of our boyhood, and our servants in manhood. Their interests and ours must be in a great degree identical in future. What sense is there, then, in such action on our part as will alienate them, and make them our enemies. I think we had better keep their friendship, and show them by kind and just treatment, that we are their best friends. In giving this advice, I trust I may not be considered as selfish. I am not courting their votes. They have no right to vote for me, as I am ineligible to office. I am caught on the three horns of the dilemma, if you will allow the expression, as I have been a member of the State Senate, a judge of the Supreme Court, and the Governor of my State, and I have taken an active part in the rebellion. While I may be denied the political privileges of a citizen, I am not unconcerned about the future of the country. I have children, relatives and friends, who are not now disfranchised. I wish to see their government and their country the best it can be made.

A few words in reference to the right of the governor and legislature to call a convention. It is contended that they have no such authority, because the preamble of the Sherman act declares our State governments illegal. But it will be seen by an examination of the act that the body of it declares them legal till set aside by Congress. By the Shallaberger amendment it is declared that the present State governments are provisional only, subject to the paramount authority of Congress. What is a provisional government? It is a temporary one, subject to be set aside, but legal while it exists. The intention of Congress, no doubt, was to declare the State governments, as organized by the President, illegal, but to legalize them temporarily, till Congress thinks proper to set them aside. Any constitutional act, therefore, which may now be done by the governor and legislature is legal.

It may be said that the governor is subject to the constitutional amendment, and, therefore, disqualified. This may be true—but it does not yet appear. So soon as that fact is established, he may be set aside; but that does not abolish the executive office any more than the resignation of all the judges in 1860 would have abolished our Supreme Court—or that the death of the incumbent would abolish the office. Charles J. Jenkins may be declared ineligible, but that does not destroy the government of the State. Till he is so declared by the authority having power to enforce the judgment, his acts are legal—made so, first by the President, then by Congress. Upon that point, at least, we have now the concurrence of both departments of the government.

Which is right and which is wrong, in the contest over this question, it is not my purpose to inquire. I do not stand here at this hour to praise or to censure either. I stand here to say what, in my judgment, is best for Georgia, in her present condition. I do not think Gov. Jenkins should hesitate to convene the legislature—to call a convention to comply promptly with the requirements of Congress. We should then elect a delegation to Congress, who can take the oath and take their seats. When this has been done, I am satisfied the test oath will be repaired, but never until then.

In conclusion, I have only to add that I give no advice to others that I am unwilling to act upon. Since the surrender I have taken the amnesty oath, which I did not feel, at the surrender, I would ever consent to do. I am satisfied I did the best thing I could have done under the circumstances ; and I feel fully conscious that I have done no act of disloyalty since that time. I have kept my oath religiously and sacredly thus far, and God being my helper I shall not violate it in future. (Prolonged applause by the large audience.)

Intelligence from our Mission Rooms.

THE FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL REPORT.—We now have this from the press, and shall forward with all convenient dispatch a copy to each of the traveling preachers Parties wishing an early copy can secure it by furnishing their addresses and four cents postage stamps to the office of the Missionary Society. The contents of this report will, we hesitate not to say, be found equal to, if not excelling in interest any of the forty-seven preceding it.

1. Africa, as the first and oldest of our foreign missions, dating back to 1833, is this year reported by Bishop Roberts for the first time, and will for that cause insure a careful perusal.

2. South America, the next foreign mission in the order of time, has a most gratifying showing, illustrated with three cuts of as many different churches, a force of nine missionaries in active labor, four only of whom were originally sent from this country—the fifth was born and "born again" there; graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan University, and returned to work for those who worked for him. This part of the report covers but six pages, but we are sure every word of it will be read with the most lively concern.

3. China comes next, and occupies twelve pages of matter as novel as any other of all the chapters in Methodist history; for it shows how primitive Methodism is being reproduced in all its essential features in a pagan land.—The statistics are marvelous.

4. Our Foreign German Mission, extending to Switzerland, and even to Paris. The most of our readers will suppose themselves familiar with this mission, but we assure them that when they commence to read the observations which are here reported by a visitor sent out by the board, they will have such a vision as will gladden their hearts and lead them to continued, if not increased devotion to the cause which in a single field shows as the result of seventeen years' labor, a corps of toilers numbering fifty-nine, with two hundred and fifty-eight preaching places, including twenty churches, a publishing house issuing four periodicals, a catalogue of books numbering nearly or quite one hundred different publications, independent of above one hundred different tracts, a mission institute, or training school for young preachers, and the results of last years' work in figures which will surprise them.

5. The Scandinavian Missions in Denmark, Norway and Sweden are reported by the corresponding secretary, who saw in person every one of the missionaries, if not every single field. What his views of this work are will be clearly ascertained in his observations; they cover eight pages.

6. India, now a mission conference ; the appointments will be found in another part of this column. The report from this committee covers about twenty-eight pages, but is full of instruction and edification. Great prosperity attends the labors of our brethren in this field, the work of their hands is established, the "glory of the Lord" appears to themselves and to the people round about; the way in which they "bring presents unto it" is a wonder. We need not say to our friends, read this part of the report.

7. Bulgaria is the younger of these sisters, and she is a little one ; but the signs of the times, her situation in the midst of the most momentous of current events, her contiguity, too, to Russia, that largest, mightiest empire of the world, if our own America be not so considered, lead us to unite with Bishops Simpson and Thomson, who have both been in it, to say, "Let not this mission be abandoned."

8. Domestic missions, from which we should have the fullest accounts, have afforded the means to the society of a most meagre showing. It may have satisfied those in charge of them to think that in the main they so soon become self-supporting, and, indeed, some sections of them so rapidly pass into conferences, that there is no use of saying anything about it. This has not yet come to the general intelligence of the people; we know they feel, and say, they are entitled to be told by those in receipt of their offerings the particulars, often and fully, of the results accruing to the Church from labors in domestic mission fields. An expenditure of two hundred, nearly three hundred thousand dollars, ceratinly warrants the expectation of more than four pages of matter.

8. Our Indian, Welsh, German and Scandinavian work is disposed of in less than three pages. The statistics are teaching.

9. The Third Class Missions, as they are called, from being heretofore outside and beyond any regularly organized conferences, will in this report prove an exceeding joy to our people. The first report is from Rev. Dr. Newman, whose foresight and energy have elevated him to the plane of the founders of Kingswood schools and orphan houses in Georgia. Read his report of the training school for colored ministers, if not the first in the land, yet the first among us as a people ; and then of his orphanage for those of whom it may have been written, "Thou shalt no more be termed forsaken." The name of Gen. Howard shall, with Brother Newman's, be handed down the annals of time with those who are of that "great cloud of witnesses," who look on to see who next will enroll themselves as friends of the orphans of those who are the most needy in our land. But having begun this part of the report, you will not be likely to omit any part, for surprise and delight will charm you along.

10. The statistics, which follow, are more complete than any ever before furnished :

INDIA MISSION CONFERENCE.—We have before us the appointments for 1867-8, made at their annual conference held at Shahjehanpore, Jan. 16, 17, 1867:

BAREILLY DISTRICT, C. W. Judd, P. E.—Bareilly Station, F A Spencer, J T Janvier. Bareilly Girls' Orphanage, D W Thomas. Pilibheet, to be supplied. Khairah Bajairah, C W Judd. (Bareilly Girls' Orphanage, Pilibheet and Khairah Bajairah to be united with the quarterly conference of the Bareilly Station.) Shahjehanpore Station, J L Hauser. East Shahjehanpore Boys' Orphanage, T S Johnson. (East Shahjehanpore to be connected with the quarterly conference of Shahjehanpore Station.) Budaon, T J Scott. Nynee Tal, J T Gracey.—Hardin, H M Daniel.

LUCKNOW DISTRICT, J. W. Waugh, P. E.—Lucknow : Hoosainabad, J H Messmore. East Lucknow, H Jackson, J Fieldbrave. Mission Press, J W Waugh. Seetapore, and Luckimpore, J B Brown. Gondah, S Knowles. Roy Bareilly, P T Wilson. Nawab Gunge, J David.

MORADABAD DISTRICT, E. W. Parker, P. E.—Moradabad and Chandausi, E W Parker, S S Weatherby, one to be supplied. Amroah and Babukera, Zahur-ul-Huqq, one to be supplied. Sambhal, J A Cawdell. Bijnour, H Mansell.—Paori, J M Thorburn.

The statistical footings are as follows : Members 196; probationers 162; deaths 5; local preachers 16; adults baptized 57; children baptized 45; churches 15; probable value $11,477-50; parsonages 23; probable value 40,900; benevolent contributions—missions, $17,475.—Next session of conference to be held at Bijnour, January 16, 1868. The session of the conference was marked by an unusual spiritual unction "The Spirit of the Lord" was upon us throughout all the session in a manner and to a degree never known before. "The old time came o'er us, and we felt the Lord of Hosts with us as we had known him to be with our fathers. Ask the Church to pray for yet further and fuller manifestations of the Divine Spirit in our midst." From a letter at hand we judge that Rev. J. T. Gracey was president, and Rev. T. J. Scott secretary of conference. Rev. D. W. Thomas was re-elected treasurer.

Freedmens' Saving and Trust Company.

(Principal office, 87 Cedar st., New York.)

STATEMENT FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY, 1867.

Augusta, Ga.	$ 2427 61
Baltimore, Md.	5226 55
Beaufort, S. C.	59,604 17
Charleston, S. C.	19,645 75
Houston, Texas	468 20
Huntsville	699 25
Jacksonville, Fla.	7,082 83
Louisville, Ky.	17,420 46
Memphis, Tenn.	548 00
Mobile, Ala.	8,166 07
Nashville, Tenn.	8,433 46
Newbern, N. C.	540 00
New Orleans, La.	7,370 28
New York City.	9,905 50
Norfolk, Va.	3,858 47
Richmond, Va.	401 00
Savannah, Ga.	3,389 64
Tallahassee, Fla.	2,140 02
Vicksburg, Miss.	207 25
Washington, D. C.	8,760 04
Wilmington, N. C.	293 83
Total	$166,588 38
Total drafts for the month	127,240 31
Excess of deposits over drafts	$ 39,368 07
Balance due depositors as per last reports	$351,476 95

DEAN SWIFT'S RESOLUTIONS.—The following resolutions were drawn up by Dean Swift, to be observed "when I come to be old:"

Not to marry a young woman.

Not to keep young company, unless they desire it.

Not to be peevish, morose or suspicious.

Not to tell the same story over and over to the same people.

Not to be covetous— the hardest of all to be kept.

Not to neglect decency or cleanliness for fear of falling into nastiness.

Not to be over severe with young people, but to make allowance for their youthful follies and weakness.

Not to be influenced by or give ear to the knavish tattling of other servants.

Not to be too free of advice, nor trouble any but those who desire it.

To desire some good friends to inform me which of these resolutions I break or neglect, and to reform accordingly.

Not to talk much, nor of myself—very hard again.

Not to harken to flatters, nor conceive I can be beloved by a young woman.

Not to be positive or opinionative.

Not to set up for observing all these rules, for fear I should observe none.

MARRIED.

New Orleans, March 14th, 1867, at the residence of the bride, by Rev. Henry Green, Mr. George Kincade, of New Orleans, to Miss Mary Miller, of St. Louis.

New Orleans, March 14th, 1867, at First Street Church, by Rev. H. Green, Mr. Joseph Hunter, of this city, to Miss Margaret Perry, of Mississippi.

March 18, 1867, by Rev. E. P. Royal, Mr. Joseph Brown, to Miss Henrietta Johnson, both of this city.

LANDRETH'S

Warranted Garden Seeds

Have been familiarly known to the American Public for upwards of three-quarters of a century.

THEY SPEAK THEIR OWN PRAISE

WHEREVER PLANTED.

Dealers in Seeds whether country Merchants, Booksellers, Druggists, or Regular Seedsmen, not already customers of the subscribers are invited to become such.

OUR WHOLESALE PRICE LIST,

Published to the Trade only, will be mailed to all dealers who apply.

Landreth's Rural Register and Almanac for 1867,

Containing numerous hints on Horticulture, will be mailed to all applicants who enclose a two cent stamp with their address to

DAVID LANDRETH & SON,
Philadelphia, Penn.
mar8

EGYPTIAN CORN!

Auspicium melioris evi. Bona fide. Quid pro quo!

The subscriber offers to farmers throughout the country the

EGYPTIAN CORN,

which, upon trial, was found to ripen, planted even the last of July. It is estimated, from its very prolific qualities, to yield 150 bushels per acre, and weighs, by sealed measure, sixty-five pounds to the bushel. This corn was produced by some procured direct from Mr. Jones, our consular agent, directly on his return from Egypt.

It needs no different culture from that of other varieties, and in the South two crops can be raised in one season on the same ground. It grows in the form of a tree, and thirty-four ears have grown on one stalk, and will average from five to fifteen. For domestic use it is unparalleled. When ground and properly bolted, it is equal in color and fineness to wheaten flour. As a forage crop, by sowing in drills or broadcast, for early feed, there is no kind of corn so well adapted to milch cows, and none that will yield half the value in stalk or corn.

It can be successfully grown in any State.

I give the most satisfactory references that the corn is, in every respect, what I represent it to be; and further, I am the only person throughout the country who has this variety of corn. Having secured a quantity, I am now able to fill all orders for those desirous of testing it.

TERMS.—In order that all may receive seed, we have reduced the price to one dollar and fifty cents a package. Any person who will get up a club of five will receive a package gratis. Fifteen packages for $10, fifty packages for $20, one hundred packages for $30. One package will contain enough to plant the following season from twenty to thirty acres, also directions for planting and cultivating.

Address, F. E. G. LINDSEY,
Box 75, Abindgdon,
Washington Co., Va.

INDORSEMENTS.

We, the undersigned, citizens of Washington county, Virginia, having examined some Egyptian Corn grown on thin soil in this county, do hereby certify that some of the stalks produced thirty-four spikes ; the longest spike we noticed measured 10½ inches in length and 6½ inches around

This corn, likewise, grew in the form of a tree, and presented a very healthy appearance.

R. B. HAMILTON,
Raven's Nest P. O., Va.,
Capt. T. M. COBBLE,
Craig's Mills.
Capt. J. C. STANFIELD,
Holston.

We, the undersigned, certify that the above gentlemen are actual residents of Washington county, Virginia, men of truth, whose veracity, purity from falsehood, fidelity and honesty none dare question ; enjoying an eminent moral, social and political position in society.

JOHN PHILLIPS,
P. M., Craig's Mills P. O., Va.
JOHN M. HAMILTON,
Ex-Sheriff of Washington co., Va.
JERIEL D. LINDER,
Act. Justice of the Peace.

THE PRESS.

F. E. G. Lindsey has presented us an ear of his "Egyptian Corn," heretofore advertised in our paper—the ear is about the size of Indian Maize, and has a solid grain. A lady who raised some of it last year sends us a certificate stating that she saw some that had not been plowed—it was sown broadcast—that produced twelve ears to the stalk.—(Abingdon Virginian.

EGYPTIAN CORN.—In another column appears the advertisement of the Egyptian Corn. It is something new for this section, and is worthy of attention. Mr. Price, of our office, is personally acquainted with Mr. Lindsey, the proprietor, and will vouch for the statements made. He has seen the corn grow, and thinks it would prove a success in Western Missouri. Try it. —[Clinton (Mo.) Advocate, Nov. 29, 1866.

EGYPTIAN CORN.—F. E. G. Lindsey, of Abingdon, Va., has the genuine "Egyptian Corn," which a great many farmers are delighted with This is a new corn to this country, and has many merits that do not appertain to other breadstuffs. It will ripen as far north as Boston, even when planted by the last of July. On rich land it will yield 150 bushels to the acre, and weighs 65½ pounds to the bushel and for domestic use it is unparalleled. It resembles flour, and contains 95 per cent. of nutriment matter. In the South two crops a year can be sown. A package can be had of Lindsey for $1 50.—Washington Constitutional Union.

61:63

MARK YOUR CLOTHING!

Clark's Patent Indelible Pencil!

"Much more convenient than Ink, and equally good as to performance—we judge after several months trial."—Am. Agriculturist.

"Invaluable for marking linen."—Chicago Tribune.

"Remarkable for the ease and neatness with which they can be used."—Detroit Tribune.

"One of the greatest conveniences that can be presented to a housekeeper."—Charleston (S. C.) News.

Manufactured and sold at wholesale by

The Indelible Pencil Co.,
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.

Every Pencil Warranted.

FRANK S. DAME, No. 18 Commercial Place, New Orleans, General Agent for the Southwest.

THE PIANIST'S ALBUM;

A COLLECTION OF

Marches, Waltzes, Polkas, Redowas. Galops, Mazourkas, Quadrilles, Four-hand Pieces, Dances, &c.

A BRILLIANT SET OF PIANOFORTE GEMS,

Suited to every grade of capacity, and indispensable to every Pianist who would become familiar with the POPULAR MUSIC OF THE DAY.

This new volume, being the third of the "HOME CIRCLE," will be welcomed by all who desire to have the Best Pieces in a convenient form. A very large number of the Gems contained in this new compilation are not to be found in any other, though much admired and in constant demand—a fact that will render it the leading book of its kind. Price—plain, $2 50; cloth, $3; cloth, full gilt, $4. Sold by all music dealers, and mailed, post-paid.

OLIVER DITSON & CO, Publishers,
277 Washington st., Boston.

The Hartford Publishing Company will issue from the Press in a few weeks, a new work entitled

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE,

Both the Canonical and the Apocryphal, with illustrations, showing what the Bible is not, what it is, and how to use it ; by Prof. C. E. Stowe.

The reputation of the author for piety and profound biblical knowledge, is a sufficient guarantee that this work, upon which he has expended much time and study, will be the best and most useful of its kind. Its style is popular, and such as will be readily understood and appreciated by all classes.

It will be sold only by Agents.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South.

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STREET

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade.

2—eowtf

---

50 PER CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

---

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER CENT SAVED By Using

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No 64 to 74 Washington street, New York

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adverliser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights - Taken on going to bed, compose and thave a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor,

No. 52 Dey street, New York.

BRICK MACHINE.

The National Brick Machine is a Clay Tempering Machine, which, with only two horses, will easily make 3,000 good marchantable Bricks per hour; or in default I will take back the Machine and refund the purchase money.

For Machines, City, County, Town or State Rights, address

ABRAM REQUA,

Gen'l Agent for United States,

r10-1y No. 130 Broadway, N. Y.

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicinal Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Barker & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12-3 m

---

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,

Agent for locating Homesteads,

Freedmen's Bureau, State of Lousiana.

Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100.

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.

feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By D. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by ALFRED L. SEWELL, Chicago, Ill.

Circulars sent free.

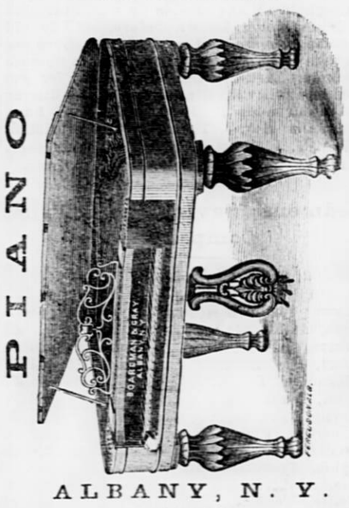
After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

---

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of



CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates.

Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.

Corner of Gold street.

FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS,

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte.

1-42y1

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Sancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knwoltaon & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray &Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK, Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES, ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,

BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

BRADBURY'S

SUPERIOR "GRAND SCALE"

PIANO-FORTES,

VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS

—OF THE—

MOST RENOWNED ARTISTS.

Harry Sanderson—"They are the best Square Piano-Fortes I have ever played upon." [Harry Sanderson.

Fradel—"After many trials I find them Superior to all others." [Charles Fradel.

Bassini—"As an accompaniment to the voice I have barely heard their equal." [Bassini.

Robert Heller—"In every particular as to tone, touch and power, they are perfect." [Robert Heller.

Wm. Mason—"They possess in the highest degree all the essentials of a Perfect Piano-Forte." [Wm. Mason.

Geo. W. Morgan—"I admire them in the highest degree." [Geo. W. Morgan.

W. Berge—"Bradbury's Pianos were used at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in company with ten others. Their Superior Excellence was fully proven." [W. Berge.

Gottschalk—"Bradbury's New Scale Piano-Fortes I have examined with great care. They are very superior instruments." [Gottschalk.

Pattison—"I consider them equal to any I have seen." [John N. Pattison.

WM. B. BRADBURY,

Nos. 427 and 425 BROOME ST., N. Y.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM'L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,

Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.

O. J. DUNN, Secretary.

C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., 1st November 1866.

The subscriber, a member of the New Orleans Bar, has opened an Office for the practice of his profession, in this City at No. 348 Pennsylvania Avenue, entrance No. 3 13C Street, near Seventh.

Respectfully your obt. servant,

THOS. J. DURANT.

THE BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS OF DENmark and the young Czarewitch of Russia; Eminent American Divines, including the Reverend Doctors Stevens, Thompson, Durbin, McClintock, Morris, Janes, Simpson, Whedon, Ames, Nast, Elliott, and Haven; also, Hon. J. M. Howard, Capt. E. B. Ward, and Keri-Keri, an Australian Cannibal; "Your Likeness," by Rev. Dr. Weston; Self-Government: Pope's Essay on Man, etc., in February number Phrenological Journal. Only 20 cents, or $2 a year. Address FOWLER & WELLS, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.

feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.

J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation.)

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and

WILL PAY $1,000

to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that it not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of

CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY

—AND—

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or Webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the de, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitter is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum o Whisky, and cannot make Drunkads, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

* * * * * * * *

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous System. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,

W. S. SEIGFRIED,

No. 254 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Millville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMITH,

966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. H. KENNARD,

Eighth, below Coates street.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berks county, Pa., was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.

JONES & EVANS,

(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)

Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States mal0 ow

---

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. B. MENEELY,

West Troy, N. Y.

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

---

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering in life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten."

[feb31

MASON & HAMLIN,

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS.

Adapted to Secular and Sacred Music; for Drawing-Rooms, Churches, Sunday and Day Schools, Lodges, Etc.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either. They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

FORTY STYLES; plain or elegant case; One to twelve stops Prices $75, $90, 110, $125, $130, $140, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $425, $500, $550, $600 and upwards Circulars with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices sent free to any address

Warerooms 590 Broadway, New York; 154 Tremont street, Boston.

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,

NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

J. G. BELDEN, M. D.,

HOMEOPATHIST.

Office 114 Carondelet Street.

Office hours—9 to 10 A. M., 1 to 4 P. M.

Residence, 227 Magazine Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

H. J. BAKER. C. BAKER JR. F. WILEY

H. J. BAKER & BROTHER,

Proprietors of the Gowanus Chemical Works, Importers of

Bi-Carb. Soda, Sal Soda, Soda Ash & other Chemicals.

FRENCH WINDOW GLASS

And East India Goods, Manufacturers of Linseed, Cotton Seed and "Sa" & Crystal Castor Oils, Refined Saltpetre, Line Flax and Fine Tow, 215 PEARL St., near Maiden Lane, N. Y.

☞ Manufacturers of Baker's Liquid Saponifier or Concentrated Lye. 1 lb, 2 lb and 3 lb bottles neatly put up.

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y.

mr10-1y

VICK'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

OF

HARDY BULBS,

FOR THE AUTUMN OF 1867, AND

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now published. It contains descriptions of the best

Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, &c.,

With full descriptions, and plan and full directions for planting, culture, prices, etc., illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the.

Single and Double Tulip and Scilla.

My importation from the best bulb growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country.

This Catalogue and Guide

is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost of postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my catalogue. Address

Jan18 JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR,

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in COLD water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT,

No. 71 Nassau street,

Mh2m1 New York City.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen or the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of syles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 13. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1867. Whole No.—63.

Poetry.

Not In Vain.

"I have labored in vain," a teacher said,
And her brow was marked by care;
"I have labored in vain." She bowed her head,
And bitter and sad were the tears she shed
In that moment of dark despair.

"I am weary and worn, and my hands are weak,
And my courage is well nigh gone;
For none give heed to the words I speak,
And in vain for a promise of fruit I seek,
Where the seed of the word is sown."

And again with a sorrowful heart she wept,
For her spirit with grief was stirred;
Till the night grew dark—and at last she slept,
And a silent calm o'er her spirit crept,
And a whisper of "peace" was heard.

And she thought in her dreams that the soul took flight,
To a blessed and bright abode;
She saw a throne of dazzling light,
And harps were ringing, and robes were white,
Made white in a Savior's blood.

And she saw such a countless throng around
As she never had seen before—
Their brows with jewels of light were crowned,
And sorrow and sighing no place had found,
For the troubles of time were o'er.

Then a white-robed maiden came forth and said,
"Joy! joy! for thy trials are past!
I am one that thy gentle words have led
In the narrow pathway of life to tread—
I welcome thee home at last!"

And the teacher gazed on the maiden's face;
She had seen that face on earth,
When, with anxious heart, in her wonted place,
She had told her charge of a Savior's grace,
And their need of a second birth.

Then the teacher smiled, and an angel said,
"Go forth to thy work again;
It is not in vain that the seed is shed;
If only one soul to the cross is led,
Thy labor is not in vain."

And at last she woke, and her knee she bent
In grateful, child-like prayer—
And she prayed till an answer of peace was sent,
And Faith and Hope as a rainbow blent,
O'er the clouds of her earthly care.

And she rose in joy, and her eye was bright,
Her sorrow and grief had fled—
And her soul was calm and her heart was light,
For her hands were strong in her Savior's might,
As forth to her work she sped.

Then rise, fellow-teacher, to labor go!
Wide scatter the precious grain—
Though the fruit may never be seen below,
Be sure that the seed of the Word shall grow;
Toil on in faith, and thou soon shalt know
"Thy labor is not in vain!"

—S. S. World.

Tour in the East.

CITY OF GIBEON—MIZPEH, "THE LOOK-OUT."

(Editorial.)

Leaving Upper Bethhoron, our path lay for some time along the old Roman road, sections of which remain as perfect as when the chariot of the proud Cestius was driven over it. Turing to the southeast, in two hours we reached the celebrated city of Gibeon. Like most Oriental towns, it crowns the summit of a conspicuous hill, which, being separated from the surrounding hills, rises in isolation from a noble plain. The encircling plains are unsurpassed in Southern Palestine for the richness of their soil, and their meadow-like smoothness and verdure. Covering many acres are vineyards, olive groves, and almond orchards. Such is the peculiar formation of the hill on which the town is built, that the rocks protruding from the sides serve the double purpose of steps and terraces. Over the summit are scattered the small stone buildings of El-Jib, which in part are composed of materials of great antiquity. Without walls or gates, the city is destitute of fortifications, and the crooked, unpaved streets are accessible to all. The present inhabitants are an illustration that character, like names, is transmitted from one generation to another. In their address and shrewdness they resemble their ancestors. The Sheikh of Gibeon is a man of medium height, and unlike his countrymen, is emotional, communicative and exceedingly gracious. Pressing us to enter his khan, he refreshed us with coffee, and, failing to persuade us to remain during the night, he accompanied us through the village, and received our gifts with flowing eyes and many bows. Nor are the children less crafty. Boys kissed our hands for paras, and for a piastre the maidens at the fountains let down their pitchers from their heads that we might drink. Reading the story of their ancestral cunning on the spot, we could easily fancy their fathers gathering together the emblems of deception to decoy the Israelites into an alliance that brought protection to themselves, but war to their allies; and with less difficulty their descendants could collect tattered garments, clouted shoes, rent wine-skin bottles, musty bread, and jaded asses, and with equal confidence declare themselves to be "embassadors from a far country."

Falling to the tribe of Benjamin in the division of the land, Gibeon afterward became a Levitical city. Subsequently to the destruction of Nob by Saul, it was the seat of the tabernacle till the completion of the temple. On the eastern side of the hill is a large well of delicious water. Springing up in a cave excavated in the solid rock, the water was originally conducted to a reservoir below, which measures 120 feet in length and 100 in breadth. Formerly it was called the "Pool of Gibeon," and around its peaceful waters the rival armies of Israel and Judah met in battle. It was here that Abner challenged Joab to terminate the strife by a gladiatorial fight between twenty-four chosen men—twelve representing David, and twelve representing Ishboshseth. But so equal were the champions in skill and power, "that they caught every man his fellow by the head, and thrust his sword in his fellow's side; so they fell down together." The death of all the combatants leaving the issue of the contest undecided, the two armies sprang to the fight on the adjoining plain, and, after a sore battle, Abner was defeated, and the claims of David to the kingdom of all Israel were confirmed by a decisive victory. Thirty-three years after, by the "great stone which is in Gibeon," in the same high way now trodden by the feet of careless pilgrims, "Joab took Amassa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him," and, with a sword in the other, treacherously slew his cousin.

But the glory of Gibeon is the dream and prayer of Solomon. Sanctifying the morning of a long and eventful reign by acts of devotion, he came from Jerusalem to worship the Lord. Upon a great altar which he had reared he offered a thousand burnt sacrifices and that night in a dream he communed with the God of his fathers, and asking wisdom to govern his kingdom rather than wealth and honor, he received a wise and understanding heart.

A mile to the south, beyond a green and lovely plain, is Mizpeh—"The Look-out"—one of the oldest watch-towers in Southern Palestine. With it stand connected many of the most thrilling events in Jewish history. Chosen in the infancy of the nation for the advantages it afforded as a point of observation in times of war, it subsequently became the national rendezvous, where the tribes were accustomed to meet to worship Jehovah, to make war, to conclude peace, and elect a king. Justly aggrieved at the insult offered the whole country by the citizens of Gibeah in refusing to surrender the young men who had committed the horrid crime on the person of the Levite's concubine, the eleven tribes here assembled, and, having vowed never to return to their homes till the inhabitants of Gibeah were punished, they marched forth to that series of battles in which thousands fell, and in which the tribe of Benjamin was well-nigh exterminated. Two hundred and eighty-six years later, Samuel gathered the armies of Israel at Mizpeh to fight against the Philistines, and after their return from the slaughter of the foe he set up a memorial-stone and called it Ebenezer. A quarter of a century thereafter the nation reassembled to choose a king; and here, for the first time in Israel, when the people beheld the majestic form of Saul, son of Kish, on whom the lot had fallen, their loyal exclamations awakened the echoes of the surrounding hills—"God save the king!" Fortifying it for the protection of his frontier, King Asa removed from Rama the materials with which Baasha had constructed his battlements, and with them built a strong fort. Five centuries after the coronation of Saul, Ishmael, of the royal family of Judah, here surprised and assassinated Gedaliah, the Chaldean Governor, who, during the Jewish captivity, resided at Mizpeh.

Called by the natives Neby Samwil, after the honored son of Hannah, the hill has an altitude of 600 feet above the surrounding plain. On its evenly-terraced sides the fig and vine grow luxuriantly. The summit is dotted with a few rude dwellings, composed of the remains of nobler edifices. The ruins of departed greatness are every where visible, and in the wall of a caravansary are imbedded shattered capitals and broken columns. In rude mimicry of happier days, the peasants have excavated small courts to the depth of several feet in the native rock in front of their unpretending homes Rising, as if by way of contrast, from amid these hovels is a large but deserted mosque. Erected by the Crusaders, it was originally a Christian church Constructed in the form of a Latin cross, the interior is ornamented with Saracenic arches. Within is the traditional tomb of Samuel, which, unlike the sepulchres of other prophets, has neither altar nor ornaments. Attached to the mosque is a graceful minaret, which rises 100 feet above the summit of the hill, from the balcony of which I obtained an extraordinary view of Southern Palestine As far as the eye could reach, the land of Judea was spread out before me, broken by deep ravines and dotted with conical hills. To the north was Gibeon, and beyond appeared Alaroth, Beeroth, the dark peak of Ophrah, and the famous rock of Rimmon; lining the distant horizon to the northeast were Gibeah of Saul, Michmash of Jonathan, and the Hills of Gilead; over a forest of summits to the east were the Mountains of Moab—that ever-visible wall of limestone; beyond, the small hamlet of Hanina; to the southeast rose the domes and minarets of Jerusalem and Bethlehem, and the tomb-like form of Herodium; to the south were the vine-clad hills of Hebron, and the home of Samson; while due west, as far as the eye could penetrate to the north and south, was the white shore of the Mediterranean, with the blue waters of the sea mingling with the mists of the western sky. Such was the prospect from Mizpeh, which in the mighty past, often met the eye of Samuel, Saul and Solomon; and, though he occupied a standpoint a few miles to the eastward, but of greater altitude, such must have been the vision of Moses from the summit of Pisgah ere he entered into glory.

AN ADDRESS

To the Colored People of Louisiana.

BY ONE OF THEIR OWN RACE.

Fellow Citizens: By agencies, both seen and unseen, which have been brought into existence by the fortunes of war, we have been suddenly brought to the possession and exercise of those privileges and duties which we have always claimed by every human principle and birth-right, and by virtue of those guaranties and safe-guards of liberty which underlie the great frame-work of our republican government. Having been the chief subject of public discussion for many generations past, among statesmen, travelers, writers, editors, jurists, slaveholders and philanthropists, on land and on sea, in Church and in the halls of legislation, we are now firmly and forever engrafted in the great body politic of the American people—possessing alike all rights, all immunities, all chances and advantages.—We have not earned these on the cotton and cane fields, nor on the fields of battle. They have always been ours. Happily, the power of wrong is vanquished, and law, so long dishonored, so long made a shield for vice, crime and robbery, and subservient to the evil proclivities of men, has been brought back, by the intervention of the sword, to its primeval province—to protect and not to oppress man. The vile prejudices of men are receding to the swamp-lands of ignorance and folly where they came from; while an unseen power is revolutionizing the minds of men, bringing them involuntarily to the domain of sober reason. Prayer, long-suffering and patience have been our surest elements of success; they have gained us a moral victory which is far more valuable and lasting than the usual conquests of the sword. As we are now recognized as citizens in the full sense, we must apply ourselves to the important duties which devolve upon us as such; because we cannot be efficient citizens unless we acquire to some extent, a knowledge of the theory of our government and duties and obligations which it imposes upon us. Although we have been crowned with victory thus far, yet the struggle is not ended. We are surrounded by numerous sources of danger. The common enemy is defeated, but his heart is full of the fire of revenge; and it is his settled purpose to gain by secret deeds, however revolting and cowardly, what he lost on the battle field.—We have seen this sadly verified by instances too numerous and horrible to name. The ballot will eventually be a safeguard to us, yet, in the meantime it will be necessary for us to employ those stern elements of defense which the war has necessarily taught us.

The wisest policy for us to pursue in order to maintain and enjoy our newly acquired rights permanently, is a subject that needs much careful consideration. The mighty agencies and elements to be employed in battling down the strongholds of caste and prejudice which now operate so powerfully against us, are to be found in the more perfect development of our intellectual powers and capacities; an ability to meet and successfully refute the false doctrines and base contumelies that have been so successfully and industriously circulated against us, and corrupted the public sentiment of our common country. The subtle schemes of political speculators are to be avoided in this moral revolution; our chief dependence must be in our inherent power to maintain those rights and privileges which the vitiated state of the public mind has so long and wrongfully withheld from us. We must demonstrate this problem by our individual manhood, in the different departments of industry, and by the spirit of genius in the mechanical arts, which always rewards its authors with character, honor, dignity and peace.

As American freemen, born under the great Magna Charta of human liberty, we should adopt that noble sentiment, and inscribe it upon our banner in characters of living light: "Better die than suffer our liberties to be taken away." It is one of the American cardinal doctrines, published from the pulpit, proclaimed from the rostrum, and inculcated in the common schools. It secures character and influence at home and commands respect abroad; inspires a laudable ambition in the minds of the youth, for emulation in the great enterprises of the present age, and points forward with high hopes and bright anticipations to the glorious future. The aspiring spirit of adventure which marks so peculiarly the age in which we live, causes men to endure the heat of the burning sands of the torrid zone, suffer the perils and snows of the icy realms, in order to amass immense treasures We must be imbued with the same spirit of adventure, and like other men, embark in the various pursuits of industry and development. The hour is full of important lessons; every day marks a new era of progress and enlightenment in our history, and we must either be carried onward in the great channel of the tide of progress or sink ingloriously beneath its surface.

We should be admonished to act upon this important subject in view of the progressive spirit of the age, and the grandeur of that revolution which at present is overturning the dynasties of oppression upon the continent of Europe.

In behalf of the millions with whom we are identified, and of the genius of our youth, and the sublimity lingering around the history of our fathers, we should swear by the altars of Liberty that this great republic shall remain free forever, under the control of just laws and free institutions, and free, loyal men of all races, colors and nationalities. Let this be our broad platform and national policy.

It is a source of pride to have been born on the soil of this great country, where Labor is King, and man is ruled by his own voice. In our wide domain; on the banks of our majestic rivers; along the shores of our stretching lakes; in our wide extended fields; in all these let us hope. In everything gorgeous in the green of Summer and rich in the glow of Autumn, sublime in the snow-drifted mountains, rising toward heaven, upon which is seated the spirit of sublimity, we see the elements of nature prophetic of the future greatness of a people redeemed, regenerated and disenthralled by the genius of our free institutions, under the beneficent folds of Republicanism.

In order for us to stem the tide of popular opinion and check its blasting influences, we must plant ourselves firmly upon the broad principles of justice, right and truth, with manliness, integrity, and our hearts full of the love of liberty and the welfare of our fellowmen. Then, party strifes and turmoils may rave with malignity, the waves of persecution and proscription may rise mountain high, dash and beat around us; the surging billows may beat upon, and for a while seem to overwhelm us; but we shall not be moved from our lofty eminence. Let us clear the stream of its driftwood, snags and impediments, and navigate our own crafts, and make them "walk the waters like the things of life." Let us take down the dams and bring the current to a dead level, and not be continually stemming the tide, with winds and currents against us. Let us officer and man our own boats, and if we cannot steer them safely into the port for which we are bound, let us sink. All that we demand from the heretofore dominant party in this country, is what Diogones requested of Alexander the Great, to get out of our sunshine!

But there are other elements which must be developed within ourselves that will be necessary for our progress in the various relations and stages of life. Educational development must be combined with other elements no less requisite in order to form a grand self-redeeming power. We must cultivate that self-respect and self-reliance which characterizes true manhood and give nobility to manly character and bearing. It is true, our past condition was very unfavorable to the cultivation of these vital social elements. We have not held any position of sufficient dignity and honor to encourage their cultivation; and so long has been our preclusion from the higher walks of life, that we had nearly lost all hopes of ever reaching them. Now that our pathway is being cleared of all the rubbish which silly prejudices have thrown therein, we must begin life anew, and apply ourselves to all those sources of improvement and prosperity which have made other men and nations great and powerful.

We must remain united and go to work as one man in the discharge of our new duties, and in maintaining and guarding our rights and privileges.—We have one common interest at stake, and our efforts and energies must be kept in one channel in order to protect it. We are too weak to divide and subdivide on political issues. Our political existence is yet too new to admit any local dissensions among us Our future success depends entirely on the nature of our first move If we begin disunited we will surely end in chaos and ruin. Wherever we have sufficient power we should make our mark by electing to responsible and honorable positions men of our own race. This will be our surest safeguard against those political retrogressions which have entailed so much misery and corruption in this country. There will be a reaction after the reorganization of our State which will send confusion in our ranks unless we are fully prepared to meet it. Much will depend upon the character of those men who will be called to put the new State machinery into operation. If we unite and elect truly loyal men—men who are willing to maintain the fruits and glories of the war, we will have a successful passage; but if those men are elected who are bent on making treason honorable and traitors respectable, the voyage will be attended with disorder, distress and desolation.

The elements which we should employ against this pending conflict is a subject that should engage our most sober consideration; and the first of these is unity of action and a thorough and rigid registration of every qualified voter of our race. Let the more intelligent among us see that it is done, because they will be likely to receive the benefits accruing therefrom. In every parish, in every district and precinct let us form ourselves into clubs; let the intelligent instruct the ignorant on the issues of the day; let the great principles of equal rights, unwavering loyalty and universal suffrage be discussed until they shall echo like reverberating thunders along the shady banks of the Red River and the sandy shores of the great "Father of Waters." There will be great odds brought against us; money, influence and threats will be offered us; but we must stand firmly, remembering two hundred and fifty years of cruel oppression; the separation of fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers, relations and friends, and the cold-blooded murders of our brethren, whose distress and agony load every breeze and fill mankind with horror.

Let our answer to those who would bribe us be, "Fort Pillow, Andersonville and Libby Prisons!" Let the ballot finish the work so nobly begun by the musket. Let us stand by Congress in all things; they have earned our lasting gratitude by their recent laws; they have shown a disposition to reward loyalty wherever found, and to have no fellowship with those who raise their puny arms to strike down this Government. The members of the 39th Congress have fixed their names in history as the second Fathers of this Republic, and will go down to future generations as the first pioneers of true Republican liberty.

In the great campaign before us, let us show wisdom and moderation; let us try and make our enemies our friends, and act always on the defensive principles. This beautiful country, sleeping beneath the mild rays of a warm sun, and blessed with so many sources of wealth, must soon yield its slumbering treasures under the new regime of freedom and by the strong arms of regenerated freemen. Onward then, and upward—unitedly, quietly, reliantly; for "THE WHOLE LAND OF THE SOUTH IS OURS!"

J. WILLIS MENARD.

New Orleans, March 26, 1867.

A French writer says: "Always avoid mention of yourself; since, if it be an eulogium, people will regard it as a lie. While, if you criticise yourself, they will take you at your word, and accept it as an article of faith."

Dedication.

About the time of the riot in this city, last July, some ill-disposed person set fire to the M. E. Church in Jefferson City, and in a few hours the building was reduced to ashes. The church had been erected by our Missionary Society at a cost of $3000, and was occupied by a quiet and intelligent colored congregation. But fortunately the building was insured, and the insurance money was sufficient to erect again the edifice, which was solemnly dedicated to Almighty God, last Sabbath, March 24. It is a substantial structure, and once more resounds with the praises of the Lord. Rev. N. L. Brakeman, Presiding Elder of New Orleans District, and Rev. Emperor Williams, the pastor, have labored zealously in the restoration of the church.

The day was beautiful, and an immense audience had assembled to witness the interesting services. At 11 A. M., Rev. A. C. McDonald preached an excellent sermon from Isaiah 52 : 1, 2. In the afternoon, at 3 o'clock, Rev. Anthony Ross delivered a telling sermon from the words, "Who am I, O Lord God? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?" II. Samuel, 7 : 18. The church was filled to overflowing, and many were compelled to stand in the yard and hear as best they could The preacher apologized for being unwell, which is a habit of his when he is about to preach a good sermon. It is high time that this habit of his should be discontinued, and forgetting himself, go at his work like a man of God, without apology; for his sermons usually contradict his statements. His discourse on this occasion was not as well prepared as some which have appeared in these columns. But we give an outline of his thoughts. After the apology he said: Give me your serious attention; don't spect to preach much this afternoon, but if the King comes along in his chariot, we shall have a good time; have nothing particular to illusterrate this evening. You will find the text some where in the Bible: "Who am I, O Lord God? and what is my house?" Such was David's language; he was a poor, imperfect, sinful man as we are; yet David became a man after God's own heart; he loved the Ark of the Lord, which appeared conspicious in the tabernacle. He brought this ark from the city of David to Jerusalem, with great joy. It was in the twilight of the day, and the ark was placed is the city called Zion; it was a great time. In this ark were two tables of stone and some other things. David's great resolution was to build a temple, for he was not contented that the ark should be in the mean habitation of the tabernacle. David's idea was that the ark should not rest in a house of boards covered with curtains. And God spoke sweet words to him. David then held a consultation with Nathan, one of his particular friends; but the prophet told him he could not build the temple, for the honor of it was reserved for his son Solomon. Yet David's termination was to build the temple any how. This was a pious resolution of his, and God well approved of it. Seems that David was interested. So he went into the tabernacle and prayed, and said: "Who am I, O Lord God? and what is my house?" Sweet words; humble words.

It becomes us in all our Christian progress, and in all our battling for the right, and after our best efforts are made, to cry out, "Who am I, O Lord God?" I have done nothing; I have worshipped Thee in a little shanty, compared to the house not made with hands. Hence, therefore, God brought David through, and when the temple was built by his son, Jesus wrote his name there, and filled it with his glory. So now Jesus comes not only to the house of wood and mortar, but into the humble heart; he is with us to-day on board the old ship Zion; she has crossed the ocean; she has been shot at on every side, but she still rides the storm, and like Noah's ark, she will land on the mountain tops. Now Solomon's temple was the type of the temple in heaven, and in view of getting there, we may say, "Who am I?" Go up there and walk around the throne; what is that house there! Built of God. See under the throne, the clear water gushing out; on both sides the tree of life is growing which bears twelve manner of fruits every month to heal the soul. Now do you think we shall ever get into that House? Jesus left his Father's bosom, took human nature up there, thus to assure us that we shall get there some of these days; we may have trials, but the old bull-whip can't cut Jesus out of you. Jesus is on the throne, and he has done big things for us as a people. Don't you know that there is a telegraph to that throne? well, somebody up North touched that telegraph, and Jesus turned round and said, "I will come down," and he has come down and sot us free; and he will come again and take us to that mansion in the skies. That will be a great meeting, and as we come up, it shall be asked, "Who are these?" we shall shout, "These are they who have come up out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Then the twelve elders standing on the twelve foundations shall cry "Amen!" Then the silver-golded winged angel shall go flying through the heavens, crying, "Thou art worthy."

(Concluded on second page.)

(Continued from second page.)

Now, Christians, live right; stand by the old Zion. Some talk of one church and some of another, but you had better come back to the old church. Change of churches won't bring you to heaven. You must be holy, then the dew from heaven will feed you, and then from our shanties here we shall go up to that house made without hands, that will outshine sun and moon. You know some persons won't let you come into their nice parlor for fear you will dirty their carpet; but we shall be welcomed by the Lord into that heavenly parlor, not carpeted with carpet that growed on the sheep's back, but with a carpet of gold.

At the close of the sermon, Mr. John Baldwin, of Berea, Ohio, made some interesting remarks, which touched all hearts.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Dossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

IMPORTANT MILITARY ORDER.

REMOVAL OF MAYOR MONROE.

REMOVAL OF JUDGE ABELL.

REMOVAL OF ATTORNEY GENERAL HERRON.

EDWARD HEATH APPOINTED MAYOR.

W. W. HOWE APPOINTED JUDGE.

B. L. LYNCH APPOINTED ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Headquarters Fifth Military District,
New Orleans, La., March 27, 1867.

General Orders No. 5.

Andrew S. Herron, Attorney General State of Louisiana, John T. Monroe, Mayor city of New Orleans, and Edmund Abell, Judge First District Court, city of New Orleans, are hereby removed from their respective offices from 12 M., to-day, and the following appointments made; to take effect from the same date, viz:

B. L. Lynch to be Attorney General State of Louisiana, Edward Heath to be Mayor city of New Orleans, and W. W. Howe to be Judge First District Court, city of New Orleans.

Each person removed will turn over all books, papers, records, etc., pertaining to his office to the one appointed thereto, and the authority of the latter will be duly respected and enforced.

By command of Major Gen. P. H. Sheridan.

Geo. L. Hartsuff,
Assistant Adjut. Gen.

Official:
George Lee, 1st Lt. 21st U. S. Inf.,
Acting Assistant Adjut. Gen.

OUR NEW MAYOR.

Thanks to Major General Sheridan for his admirable appointment of Edward Heath, Esq., to the Mayoralty of New Orleans. In his selection, the General Commanding, has indicated the correctness of his estimate of men and his full appreciation of the demands of the hour. Mayor Heath has been a citizen of New Orleans for the last twenty-five years. He is a prosperous merchant, a gentleman of excellent sense, of sterling integrity, of irreproachable character, and has an unblemished reputation for loyalty to the general government. Quiet in demeanor, strong in his convictions, firm in his decisions, he is in every way fitted for his responsible position. He is the freedman's true and abiding friend. While the whole community rejoice over the removal of Mayor Monroe, they have equal cause for joy over the appointment of Mr. Heath. We feel confident that the new Mayor will discharge his official duties in such a manner as to command universal respect. We bespeak for him the confidence of all, and wish him all success.

Negro at a Premium.

He who so recently was a slave and like the dumb mule, was struck off to the highest bidder, is now courted for his political influence; and they who bought and sold him as a slave are loudest in their assurances of friendship and in their solemn protestations that they have always been and are to-day his best friends. The black man has a vote and this is the secret of the change towards him, on the part of his old masters. To pronounce the change the offspring of self-interest is to state what facts prove and what everybody knows It is the change in the political status of the negro that has wrought the change in the sentiments of the Southern whites. Had the latter voluntarily emancipated the former, made him a soldier, recognized his manhood, and clothed him with the rights of friendship, they might now claim with consistency, the political co-operation of the freedman; but up to the passage of the Law which gave the franchise to the man of color, they have persistently and violently opposed negro suffrage. They favor it now from necessity rather than from choice. And even now, with an inconsistency so glaring that the untutored freedmen cannot fail to detect it, they utter sentiments which indicate their insincerity and which no black man can respect. We cannot forget that the principal Dailies of this city have attempted to prove that the negro is by creation an inferior being, and but one link removed from the brute. Steadily opposing his emancipation; violently denouncing his right of suffrage, they have aimed to perpetuate his degredation. And now, in the very dawn of freedom; in the hour of political enfranchisement; at a time when new hopes are blooming into fullness of beauty and power, the Times of the 27th inst. has the effrontry to state that "At the present time there is not one intelligent negro in a score, who, on being interrogated on the subject, will say that he wanted emancipation or has gained anything by it. They have always looked up to the white man as a superior being, have depended on him and leaned on him for guidance and direction, and regarding him in times past, and now more than ever, as their friend, they will be sure to continue to do it, the expectations and manœuvrings of tricky politicians to the contrary notwithstanding."

Such language is an insult to any freedman, and is another argument to convince him that his true friends are those who fought for his freedom and who gave him the ballot.

In this age of changes, it may not be remarkable that the votes of our "new citizens" are courted by those who, all their lifetime, have been their enemies. The love of power is inherent in the human mind. Accepting the situation because submission is a necessity; they now seek to regain power by the aid of those who are their creditors and not their debtors. And, over anxious to induce the Southern whites to action, the Southern press presents the objects to be attained. Recently the N. O. Times gave utterance to the following ultimate design:

Once so organized as to secure an efficient representation in the National Legislature, we may make our voices heard, and initiate such "progressive," backward movements as will secure the triumphs of constitutional conservatism, by undoing what has been hastily done, and unlearning what has been learned amiss.

And the N. O. Crescent re-echoes the sentiments of its cotemporary as follows:

We certainly cannot mend the matter by refusing to assume control of our domestic affairs. On the contrary, if a counter political revolution is ever to be effected, that object can be accomplished only by the firm alliance of the Southern States with the opposition party at the North. To resign these States to the radicals, would be to abandon all chance of defeating the Republican party. Already there are symptoms of disintegration in the radical ranks; and the recent election in New Hampshire shows that the tide of opinion is setting towards the Democratic side. The coming revolution seems to be forseen by the radicals, and they are beginning to count on the accession of the Southern vote, to offset defection in the North. The New York Post argues the necessity of republicanizing the South, and the Tribune predicts that, in a very short time, the late Confederate States will be converted into citadels of radicalism.

While such a consequence will inevitably ensue from a refusal, on our part, to participate in the elections, all these hopes and schemes will be baffled and disappointed if we avail ourselves of the advantages which the situation yet leaves in our hands. The newly enfranchised population, attached to us by education and by interest, will scarcely array themselves against us if we do not arouse their antagonism, by forcing them into the ranks of our adversaries.

And that such are the opinions of the Southern people, who so recently sought the destruction of the Union, is manifest from the following language of General Beauregard:

With regard to the suffrage of the freedmen, however objectionable it may be at present, it is an element of strength for the future. If properly handled and directed, we shall defeat our adversaries with their own weapon.

The negro is Southern born; with a little education and some property qualifications, he can be made to take sufficient interest in the affairs and prosperity of the South to insure an intelligent vote on his part.

In our future political contests with the North, on protective tariffs, internal improvements, etc., the freedmen of the South will side with the whites of the South and of the West, and they will thus contribute to give us back the influence we formerly had in the councils of the nation.

Our people should understand that the Radicals can remain in power only so long as the public excitement is kept up; as with the turbid waters of the Mississippi river, the sedimentary particles are kept up at the surface only so long as the waters are in motion; the instant the current is checked those particles fall to the bottom. Thus will it be with the Radicals, when peace and quiet are restored to the country; the Conservatives will then take the reins in their own hands, and the constitutional laws of the land will once more prevail.

Clearly the object of securing the colored vote of the South is the overthrow of that party which all through the terrible struggle for the nation's life, sustained the government and lifted the freedman to what he is to day. And even more, it is to "initiate" says the Times, "such progressive, backward movements as will secure the triumph of constitutional conservatism, by undoing what has been hastily done, and unlearning what has been learned amiss."

To what extent will this undoing be carried? To the disfranchisement of the blacks? To the re-enslavement of the freedmen? We solemnly protest against such sentiments and as solemnly forewarn the people of color to beware of the threatened danger. Your friends in war, the Republicans are your friends in peace. Neither compelled by threats nor seduced by promises, the freedmen of the South should stand firmly united to those who, in the hour of their need and peril, were their providential deliverers.

The Floods.

Owing to the recent heavy rains and the melting of large quantities of snow which had fallen during the past winter, the Mississippi River has been swollen to an almost unprecedented highth, overflowing its banks. The river is in some places seventy miles wide. The destruction of property is immence. Many valuable plantations are completely submerged, and the cotton and sugar crops, which were promising, are ruined. In some instances, dwellings have been undermined and floated away, and the inhabitants perished therein. Louisiana is destined to suffer greatly from the overflow. Several breaks have already occurred and the river has burst its natural barriers and sought a new channel over our rich plantations to the gulf. New Orleans is in imminent danger. The conditions of our levees is alarming, and unless there is a Providential interposition in our behalf, we may yet be flooded.

As things are at present a crawfish may bore a hole in the morning through which in the evening a scarcely noticeable stream may gurgle, but ere another morning dawns there is a crevasse, and a broad current of desolation pours in upon the fields on which hopeful husbanmen had expended all their industrial energies.

We give below extracts which indicate the extent of the flood:

The Cleveland Banner, of the 14th, says:

Along the rivers and creeks all the fencing has been carried away, and the farms greatly damaged. The Tennessee River was swollen ten feet higher than ever known before. Several houses have been washed away along the bottoms of the Tennessee. At Charleston, in this county, and Calhoun, in McMinn county, the loss was more than $10,000 in property by the overflow of the Hiwassee River. The East Tennessee and Georgia road lost no bridges, and is now in running order from Dalton to Knoxville, and on the Chattanooga branch to Chicamauga, a distance of eight miles from Chattanooga. Several small bridges on the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad were carried away, with three spans of the Strawberry Plains bridge across the Holston. The freshet made sad havoc among the mills, having carried two mills away, (the Castiller Mill and Cleveland Mill,) on Mouse Creek, and damaging more or less, every other mill in the country; still the people of Bradley county have not suffered like many others, for which they ought to be thankful.

The people of Chattanooga say the waters are fifteen feet higher than in 1847, the highest before known The suffering is very great. Houses, furniture, provisions and people have been washed away. The number of persons drowned is said to be over fifty. The Atlanta New Era, of the 15th, records these incidents:

Many houses have floated off with all the furniture they contained. One house, with four rooms, was seen floating down the river "right side up." A gentleman went out to it in a boat, and found all the furniture in home order. On one bed a dog was resting composedly, and on another a cat.

One man waded out with his child, about eighteen months old, and placed it, as he thonght, above the reach of the water, and returned to his house to bring out what goods he could carry. While absent, the water rose so rapidly that the little one was surrounded by it, and would have been borne off but for the timely appearance of a lady who rescued it.

A large boat passed easily up the main street of the city. Ladies were taken into it from the second story window of the Crutchfield House.

The water is entirely over the doors of most of the business houses, and consequently the goods are all submerged. A couple of provident Jews saved their stock, and have opened shop in tents on a hill near Chattanooga, where the people have fled for safety.

Five engines belonging to the State Road, and some fifteen belonging to the Nashville and Chattanooga Road, are entirely submerged. Even their stacks are out of sight.

The wood tanks are all emptied of their contents, the wood having gone off in the general rush of water.

Several passenger cars are submerged. Conductor Mayes, of the State Road, made an effort to save his cushions, but we do not konw with what success. Some of these cars are new ones.

Three gentlemen left Chattanooga on Monday in a skiff, and drew themselves by the telegraph wires three miles of the distance.

A number of houses have changed ground, having floated from their local habitations to the land of other parties.

Judge Hook, who lives on high ground, had to remove his family and supplies in a flatboat.

The Mayor of Chattanooga removed some casks of bacon from a train, and purchased some submerged flour, and this he is issuing as rations to the people of all classes. Money is of no use in the purchase of provisions, for there is nothing to sell.

The Louisville Courier, of the 13th, says:

The city, seen from the river, presents a curious appearance. The water is in the second stories of most of the houses along the levee, while Shippingsport, the Point and other localities are entirely submerged, and their positions only to be defined by the houses and house tops projecting from the rapidly flowing stream. In the upper portion of the city the sawmills are all under water nearly to the roofs of most of them, and all the lumber yards and shanties are afloat. Beargrass Creek and the river are blended into one great stream, with all the Beargrass bridges several feet under water. The rolling mill is some ten feet down, and the waves are leaving the banks within a couple of feet of the gas works. Down the river further, the stream has only left a small landing place at the foot of Third street, at which steamboats are huddled close together, loading and unloading their freights. In all the cross streets below Third, the water extends up nearly half the square—reaching nearly up to Greys Alley, on Fourth street—the water being close up to the ceiling in Benjamin Durret's store. Wherever the steamboats could find landings they availed themselves of them.

The canal and river were blended in one stream, the intervening strips of land being entirely under water. On the island formed between the canal and the river the only dry spot left was immediately at the canal bridge—the Louisville Garden. All the rest was under the flood, and the eye had an uninterrupted water view from the canal bridge to New Albany.

Says a New Albany, Indiana, dispatch of th 13th:

River rising one inch an hour, and now within four feet, actual measurement, of the flood of 1847. In many places between here and Evansville the river is thirty miles wide, and the whole country below Evansville is reported inundated.

Between the city and Evansville thousands of cattle, sheep and hogs have been drowned, unable to reach the high land, while hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, potatoes, etc., have been lost. The country below is literally covered with floating stacks of hay, wheat, oats, etc. Nearly all the steamboat landings are under water and boats cannot make landings.

The Evansville (Ind.) Journal of the 13th, says:

All the low lands on both sides of the river are an illitimitable waste of water, which sweeps from near Newberg to West Franklin, so deep that were it not for the timber, the largest class of boats could run straight across all points. At Shawneetown and Caseyville the river is now higher than ever before known. Shawneetown is perfectly inundated, and a steamboat of medium size, such as the Armada, for intance, could run through the main streets of the village. From the Wabash to Cairo the river is higher than in 1832, and the suffering along the borders is very considerable.

In the lower part of this country there is much suffering, and a large number of smoke houses and other out-buildings have been washed away. Vast quantities of corn have been destroyed, and scores of families have been driven from their homes. No lives have been lost, so far as we have learned.

Green River is unusually high, and much property has been destroyed. A tobacco warehouse at Ramsey was washed away, and another at Calhoun has been undermined and caved in.

The Memphis Avalanche has the following:

Business on the wharf is much restricted on account of the weather and mud. The Vicksburg trade is cut off on account of the overflow. The Dan. Able found only two dry landings between here and Vicksburg. The new levees are broken and washed away at Ashton, Miller's Bend and Grand Lake; the latter is broken in three places, and was considered one of the finest levees ever built. Friar's Point and Helena are inundated, and the denizens are forced to seek refuge on flatboats and water crafts of various descriptions. The lower country is partially destroyed; fences, cattle and houses have been swept away by the angry current. Hopefield, opposite here, is also under water. The river is up to the high-water mark of 1862, and keeps up longer than has been known for years. The river came to a stand yesterday, but we much fear the Ohio and Cumberland rise will have a tendency to keep the river at high tide.

Editorial Items.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach in the Hall of the House of Representatives, to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.

Revival.—The spirit of revival still continues among us. Our evening meetings are deeply interesting. The Church is greatly quickened, and souls are seeking Jesus.

Among our colored brethren the revival spirit is largely poured out. Two of our city churches are now holding meetings every night, which are attended with power. Let the whole Church pray for the general outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the South.

Our Orphans' Home.—The whole Church will rejoice with us that the $30,000 designed for the endowment of of our Orphans' Home has been secured. This day at 12 o'clock the Treasurer of the Home, W. B. Armstrong, deposited $20,000 in the Bank of America, in this city, which was the condition precedent on receiving M. de Boissiere's $10,000. Most devoutly do we thank God for this great achievement. By it we have a Methodist Orphans' Home in Louisiana for orphans, without respect to race or color. Thanks to M. de Boissiere for his munificent gift! Thanks to Gen. Howard for his equally noble donation! Thanks to all who have aided us in this great work! The blessing of the orphan will be theirs!

John Baldwin, Esq.—This venerable Christian brother is now in our city.—Having contributed $150,000 to the cause of Christian education in the North, he is now in New Orleans to contribute $20,000 to found a Methodist college. For the present, our Thomson Biblical Institute will be the beneficiary of this donation. This is timely aid.—May God's blessing richly rest upon this noble man!

Among those who took the degree of LL.B. at the Commencement of the Law Department of the University of this State on the 25th inst., was our young friend and brother, Henry C. Dibble.—Mr. Dibble was admitted to the bar some two years ago, but has seen fit to continue his studies in the University.

The funeral services of the Rev. Theodore Clapp, for many years a prominent Unitarian minister in New Orleans, were held last Sunday, in the Unitarian Church, in this city. The church was filled with his old friends and parishioners, who brought flowers and spread them on his coffin, in token of their affection. Dr. Elliot officiated and gave a lengthy biographical sketch of the deceased.

The attention our readers is directed to the notice of Dr J. White, No. 127 Carondelet street, under the head of "Medical." Dr. White assures the afflicted that his remedies cleanse the stomach and bowels, and give healthy action to the liver. In cases of severe colds, coughs, etc., the Doctor avers that they will prove unequalled as remedies, and that they specialy heal the lungs, if not irreparably wasted, purifying the blood and changing all the secretions of the system from an unhealthy to a healthy condition, and thus curing the chronic and inveterate deseases so stubborn in ordinary practice. Dr. White receives calls personally or by letter from all points of the country.

Contents of the Theological Eclectic.—"Rev. F. W. Robinson—What Gospel did he Preach?"—British and Foreign Evangelical Review. "The Military Metaphors of St. Paul."—By Rev. J. S. Howson, Sunday Magazine. "Spurgeon as a Preacher."—British and Foreign Evangelical Review. "Origin and Significance of Bible Names."—By Dr. Oehler.—Translated from Herzog's Real Encyklopadie, by Rev. W. F. Warren, D. D. "Luther's Theology."—By Dr. J. A. Dorner, Cotemporary Review. "Literary and Theological Intelligence."

Local and Southern News.

Military Changes.—Movement of Troops.—Pursuant to instructions from headquarters fifth military district, the following changes have been made:

Co. G, 20th U. S. infantry, now stationed at Fort Jackson, Louisiana, will reinforce the command at Shrevesport, Louisiana.

Co. K, 20th U. S. infantry, now at Fort St. Philip, Louisiana, will reinforce the command at Alexandria, Louisiana.

Co. A, 1st U. S. infantry, now stationed at Fort Pike, Louisiana, will report for duty to the commanding officer battalion, 1st infantry, stationed in this city.

These companies will be relieved by an equal number of companies from the 39th U. S. infantry, to be designated by the regimental commander, and will proceed to their respective stations without delay.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Washington, March 23.—The supplemental bill passed, veto notwithstanding, by 114 to 25.

The house failed to fix a day for adjournment.

Senate—The supplemental bill passed by 40 to 7.

A concurrent resolution to adjourn, on Tuesday, to the first Monday in December, passed.

Washington, March 25.—House.—A resolution that the House adjourn on Thursday, to meet on the first Wednesdays in May, June, September, November and December, unless the presiding officers jointly proclaim, ten days previous to the time of meeting, that there is no necessity for a meeting, was adopted—88 to 31.

Senate bills for connecting the Mississippi and the lakes by a ship canal were referred to the committee on commerce.

A resolution authorizing the secretary of war to employ two dredge boats to keep open the channel at the mouth of the Mississippi, passed.

Washington, March 26, 1867.—Senate.—Howe reported from the Committee on Claims a joint resolution relative to the claims of certain Northern creditors.

The bill withholding agricultural college scrip from the Southern States, until represented, passed. It goes to the President.

A bill fixing the day upon which the bankrupt bill shall take effect, was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Various adjournment propositions were discussed. Finally a resolution that both Houses adjourn on Thursday, passed.

The Senate held a short executive session and adjourned.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Berlin, March 23—The recent conclusion of a treaty between the kingdoms of Prussia and Bavaria and the Grand Duchy of Baden, whereby Prussia is to have command of the armies of the latter two countries in time of war, has engendered bitter feelings in France. It is believed that the effort of the Emperor Napoleon to form a confederation of France, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland against Prussia, is traceable to this cause.

Vienna, March 23—Assent to the proposition of the Great Powers of Europe, relative to the cession of the Island of Candia to the Grecian Government, has been emphatically refused by the Sublime Porte.

Berlin, March 23—King William, of Prussia, has just succeeded in effecting an offensive and defensive treaty with the Kingdom of Wurtemburg. It is understood that one of the features of the treaty is, as in the treaties with Baden and Bavaria, that in time of war Prussia is to command the consolidated armies of both countries.

Brussels, March 23—It is officially announced that King Leopold will not enter into the proposed confederation with France, Holland, and Switzerland.

Washington Conference Proceedings.

The fourth session of this conference, composed of colored ministers, met at Sharp street Church, Baltimore, on Wednesday, March 6, Bishop Simpson presiding. Revs. J. N. Mars and James Peck offered prayer. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was then administerd. Benjamin Brown was elected secretary, and E. W. S. Peck and R. H. Robinson assistants.

The following committees were appointed:

Stewards—J. H. Brice, P. Walker, J. Henry. Sunday-schools—Ephraim Lawson, T. Jackson, J. Thomas. Tract Cause—N. Carroll, R. H. Matthews. Bible Cause—C. O. Fisher, Wm. Wilson. Temperance—W. Cook, M. Spridle, and W. E. Echols. Centenary—J. Kennedy, J.

Gross, and Wm. Echols. Education—J. Dansbury, R. Lane, and G. Lewis. Missionary Money—W. Hicks, and W. Echols. Statistics—C. O. Fisher and C. D. Keys.

The second question of the general minutes was taken up, namely: Who remain on trial? and John Loggins, Wm. Wilson, J. Dansbury, Wm. Echols, W. Leeward, A. Edmundson, J. Hughes W. Casten, J. Randal, and J. Henry were continued.

Revs. H. C. Westwood, of New Jersey Conference, France, Curns, Dosh, and Gardner, of East Baltimore Conference, Bishop Wayman, Revs. Hall and Sluby, of the A. M. E. Church, and Rev. A. Wallace, of Philadelphia, were introduced to the conference.

The conference adjourned with doxology and benediction by Bishop Wayman, of the A. M. E. Church.

SECOND DAY.

Bishop Simpson in the chair. Opening services by Rev. James Peck. Drs. Trimble of the Missionary Society, and Walden of the Freedmen's Aid Society; Revs. M'Daniel and Leech, of the Baltimore Conference; and Rev. J. Pierce, of the Delaware Conference, were severally introduced.

The Bishop introduced Revs. W. Harnden, J. Brown, and Reed, of the Baltimore Conference. They stated the appropriation of $5,000 for the Biblical Institute, organized in Baltimore by Bishop Scott for the education of colored ministers. Bishop Simpson spoke earnestly in advocacy of the plan, and importance of the Institute. A committee, consisting of the presiding elders, was appointed to confer with the trustees of the Institute. The following resolution was also adopted:

Resolved, That we hail with pleasure and gratitude this evidence of the interest in us manifested by those engaged in this noble enterprise, and that we hereby pledge our hearty co-operation, and urge our young men to avail themselves of this opportunity.

Revs. Wm. Downs, Cadden, Caroll, and Hinkle, of the East Baltimore Conference, De Hass, of the Baltimore Conference, and Revs. Thomas Armstrong and Ashbury Jewett, of Baltimore City, were introduced.

J. H. Harper was continued superannated

Benediction by Rev. J. H. Vincent.

THIRD DAY.

Bishop Simpson occupied the chair.

Religious services were conducted by Rev. Benj. Brown.

Rev. J. H. Vincent addressed the Conference in behalf of the Sunday-school Union, Rev. W. C. Hoyt in behalf of the Centenary Fund, and Rev. S. W. Thomas in behalf of the Church Extension Society.

The following resolutions were passed:

1. That each effective preacher be required to present a statement, signed by his recording steward, of the amount estimated for his support, together with the amount received.

2. That hereafter no claim shall be allowed to any preacher who fails to make an effort to procure a Conference collection.

The following preachers were admitted in full connection: G Lewis, A Kennedy, J Browmar, J Gross, P H Mathews, M Lane, C G Keys, J Ockmay, and W W Foreman.

C G Keys was elected deacon's orders, and Stephen Tasko was continued on trial.

Conference adjournd with the benediction by Rev J A Gere, of the East Baltimore Conference.

South Carolina Mission Conference.

This Conference held its annual session in Charleston, commencing on Saturday, March 2, and closing on Tuesday, March 5. In the absence of Bishop Baker, who was prevented from officiating by continued illness, Bishop Scott presided. Dr. A Webster, editor of the Charleston Advocate, was elected secretary.

Eighteen preachers were received on trial. The following are the summaries of statistics: Members in full connection, 7,792; on probation, 1,876; total members, 9,668; an increase over last year of 6,531, or more than two hundred per cent.; local preachers, 103, an increase of 87; persons baptized during the year, 2,095; church edifices, 34, valued at $61,800; Sunday-schools, 33; officers, teachers, and scholars, 4,258.

The reports from all parts of the work indicate prosperity. We hope to make room next week for a more extended report. The next session is to be held in Charleston. The following are the appointments:

CHARLSTON DISTRICT, T. W. Lewis, P. E.—Charleston, A Webster, one to be supplied. Beaufort, W J E Fripp. Wadmelaw and Edisto, H D Owens. John and James Islands, R Townsend- Ashapoo, to be supplied. Ashley River, to be supplied. Charleston Neck, to be supplied. Summerville, J A Sasportas. Mount Pleasant, F Smith. Kingstree, W Darington. Mount Holly, to be supplied. Orangeburg, T Philips. Edisto Forks, to be supplied. Barnwell, A Middleton. Greeville. J Rosemund. Spartansburg, V H Bulkley. Darlington, L Ackerman. Florence, E J Snetter. Sumter, J R Tamlyn. Lynchburg, J White. Marion, to be supplied. Timmonsville, to be supplied. Cheraw, to be supplied. Oro, R. J Donaldson. Bennetville, to be supplied. Camden, W J Cole. Flat Rock, to be supplied.

M French, chaplain in the army.

B F Whittemore, Superintendent of Education in Estern South Carolina.

B F Randolph, Assistant Superintendent of Schools.

GEORGIA DISTRICT, to be supplied. Savannah, to be supplied. Augusta, to be supplied, Darien, to be supplied. Brunswick, to be supplied.

FLORIDA DISTRICT, J. C. Emerson, P. E.—Fernandina, J Felder. St. Marys, to be supplied. Greenfield, to be supplied. Jacksonville, to be supplied. Gordon and Waldo, H E Forsyth. Gainsville, I Davis, B Garman. Newnanville, I Johson, W Doby. Micanopy and Ocalee, L Anders. New Smyrna, to be supplied. St. Augustine, to be suppliee.

D P Leavitt and C Holman, transferred to New Hampshire Conference.

B.

Mississippi Items.

We went from Macon to Columbus. It was raining copiously, the rivers and streams were out of their banks, and there was "water, water, everywhere." Next morning the ground was white with sleet and snow and crusted with frost, and the morning following was colder still. The fruit of which there was an abundant prospect, is all killed; early gardens destroyed, and the flowers, alas, they all are in their graves. Many of the trees which had put forth young leaves and tender shoots appear to be dead. Some of the people appeared to be disposed to complain. We assured them that such things always did more good than injury, though we might not see it now.

There were more drunken men about the hotel than we usually see, and more bitter expressions concerning the Government than we have heard anywhere else. Columbus prides itself on its respectability, and was much mortified, we understand, over the burning of the School-house. They had an investigation of some sort, but as all the evidence went to show that it was the work of an incindiary, no report was made. Mr. Wilson says there was considerable indignation against him because he freely expressed the opinion that some one fired the house. The town is rather a pretty one and is improving.

We thought the cows were poor along the Southern Rail Road, but of all the horned, archbacked, hair-covered skeletons we ever saw, those about Columbus look the worst. It was near here too that we saw some newly manufactured plows of a kind we remember seeing about thirty years ago, but which we did not suppose any body had used since the era of railroads. They have a large wooden beam to which a wooden mould board with a point of iron is attached. They were known among the ancients as the "Cary Plough."

The wet weather is retarting agricultural operations but there is time yet. Some had planted corn before the rains. There is complaint of scarcity of laborers. We have not seen any white men at work in the fields, and not many anywhere else. In many places nearly all the mechanics are colored men.

We found Bro. Ryan hard at work. His people are slowly finishing their church, but as they have no stoves up yet, we could not hold meetings with comfort till Sunday, when we had good congregations. We administered the sacrament to 250 persons. Ten joined the church at the close of the service. Rev. M. Shaffer, of the Church South, was present and assisted us. At night we had a large and orderly congregation till the sermon was ended and they began to sing, when we had such a scene as can only be witnessed in a congregation of colored people. It was a grand time with them. These people are showing their ability to do something besides sing and shout. They are completing their church, and have raised $70 during the first quarter for their Pastor, and surprised him with a suit of clothes worth about $50. We have known some people who were never slaves to do worse than that.

So far as we have gone our work is progressing in a manner that is truly encouraging. We not only gain in members, but the people are feeling increased confidence in the stability of our work. Our opponents are managing so as to defeat themselves, and the opposition becoming weaker. The best of all is, the blessing of God is with us.

D.

PASS CHRISTIAN, March 8, 1867.

Editor N. O. Advocate:—Feeling that our friends would be glad to hear from this part of the Lord's Vineyard, I beg leave to inform them through your valuable paper that we have purchased a lot, beautifully situated and in a remote part of the town for the purpose of erecting a house of worship. We have made one payment already and are doing all we can to raise means to finish paying for it. We have named the church St. Paul's Chapel, M. E. Church. We are ready now to have the corner stone laid as soon as possible. We have many friends ready to aid us as soon as this is done. We hope it will not be long delayed. We are anxious to have a place of worship. We do long for a regularly organized Church with her class meetings, love feasts and sacraments. Send us an elder and let the corner stone be laid so that the building may go up.

Yours in the faith,

METHODIST.

DONALDSONVILLE, March 11, 1867.

MR. EDITOR—Dear Sir: This evening at 7 o'clock, at the M. E. Church of Donaldsonville, Rev. Thomas Kenneday, pastor, a society was organized to attend the sick and bury the dead, under the direction of Mr. J. P. Brown, of New Orleans, to which a board of officers was elected of eighteen, namely: Rev. T. Kenneday, President; Rev. S. Courtney, Vice President; P. F. Valfriot, Secretary; P. Landry, Treasurer; F. Fobbs, 1st Marshal; N. Wells, 2d Marshal.—Male Stewards: Wm. Brown, R. Graham, Wm. Ross, J. Turner; Female Stewards: L. Young, E. Graham, M. Turner, C. Brown, I. Lemo, E. Chatman, R. Taylor, D. Rolling. The Board of Stewards were ordained by Rev. T. Kenneday and Rev. S. Courtney, and J. P. Brown, Director; then a committee of four on tombs, namely: P. Landry, P. F. Valfroit, Wm. Brown, F. Fobbs. The Society numbers 87 members. An independent school was organized at the same time, numbering 65 scholars.

J. P. BROWN, Director,
P. F. VALFROIT, Secretary,
Century Second Union Band Society, of Donaldsonville, La.

Ladies' Department.

Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER IX.

We are linked by life to this beautiful world. God has placed us here—and the simple idea that we live indicates that there is a part for us to act in Life's great drama. If faithful to the spirit promptings ever present with us, calling for constant, cheerful labor, and grasping every hour, fleeting swift or slowly as golden links connecting earth with heaven, we can but tremble lest the chain be broken ere our work is done.

Life to me, dear Minnie, has ever been a busy scene, not all sunshine, nor all shadow, but checkered it certainly has been. Finis coronet opus.

The tireless waves of life's great ocean have been dashing—if not roughly, confusedly—around my frail barque the live long day, and I have sighed for just one hour of repose that I might, at this holy hour, turn again the leaves of memory's mystic book. Just as the great sun hid his golden crown in a western wave of glory, a gentle breeze wafted my barque into its home haven. Thus beneath the shadow of the dear old Family Tree, I greet thee again, dear Minnie. I fain would pillow my weary head as of yore, on the green grass amid the flowers—or whisper in a fond ear, "Rock me to sleep, Mother!"—when lo! a fearful darkness hovers over the family group; we tremble as a voice comes from the storm-cloud, saying to these curious hearts of ours, "Be still and know that I am God." How beautifully these words had fallen upon our ears from the old Family Bible that lay on the stand at morning prayers: "He shall give his angels charge concerning thee," and again, "The angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him."

That fearful moment stares at me as vividly as if it were but yesterday when Pa found that axe under the bed of our hired man, which he had placed there with a design to murder all of us before morning. Almost breathless, we looked at the huge weapon, when suddenly our eyes were opened, and a pillar of fire rose before us in which the angel of the Lord stood, having a drawn sword to defend us as we had slept, and knew not that only a hair breadth had been between us and death.

Our Father was now the owner of a large farm, and we were living comfortably in our new house, and as the trees began to grow it assumed a fine, if not a grand appearance. We had succeeded in maintaining a select school in the house during the winter, since the time Addison taught us, and each, as we grew older, were sent to boarding school—not expecting to complete a full course of study and graduate; this we had not means to accomplish, but it was to afford us some idea of life beyond our own family and the circle in which we moved at home. All these events composing the sum total of life, had been wrought out by industry and systematic economy, and yet people insisted on calling our Father rich—strange as it did appear, an anomaly in all creation, a rich Methodist minister. We were very happy to acknowledge that Providence had blessed us abundantly in giving us so comfortable a home, and surrounding us with so many blessings, since Papa's health had failed; still, we were far from being rich. The farm had never been made to yield its increase, for brothers had all chosen other occupations, and left Papa, with enfeebled health, to depend upon hired help—which scarcely secured an income equal to the outgo of our still large family. Papa's rule, which had been established as a law, not unlike that of the Medes and Persians, was never to purchase anything until he could pay for it; therefore, when the money was not in hand, our wants were laid in the ballance and found wanting. I have seen a load of grain disposed of in market and nearly the entire value deposited in a Methodist boot and shoe store. Only think, thirteen pairs at one time.

Mama's wonderful accomplishments in manufacturing all kinds of wearing apparel, from the smallest fragments of material, also remodeling old garments so that they appeared new, seemed imparted, or rather inherited by Florence—being the oldest of five girls, all rapidly becoming young ladies; thus endowed, her inventive powers were often taxed to their utmost limit in cutting, fitting, and making dresses, bonnets, cloaks, sacques—in short, every article that constituted our not very ample wardrobe. We did more of the dish washing, house sweeping, churning, milking—pie, cake, and bread making, and house work in general, than she did; still, even in this she excelled any of us. Thus her versatility of talent fitted her for any emergency, and she was almost as indispensable as our angel Mother to the family.

Spring time again smiled in our faces and on our lands, while all the trees on all the hills opened their thousand leaves. Our Father looked out on the fields, broken loose from their icy fetters, with some anxiety, and said, "how shall they be cultivated, and who will do it this year?" While the words were yet on his lips, a tall, robust colored man, came up to the door, and asked Pa to hire him. After exchanging a few remarks, he stepped in to consult Mama, and then decided that he could remain. I think at that time I had never seen more than half a dozen colored persons. It was quite a novelty in our neighborhood to see a colored man at work on a farm; he was faithful, and some said he did more work than two white men. He was large and quite athletic, and I have often seen him touch one hand to the back of a large farm horse we had, and spring over him like a cat; he would leap over a high barnyard gate without touching it. During the summer there were many complaints from the neighbors that their chickens were stolen; also their vegetables, mellons, and fruit, and at times, grain missing from the barn could not be accounted for. But no one thought of attaching the theft to black Benjamin, as he was called, who had become quite a favorite.

Winter began to howl its dismal requiem, and as the wood had to be cut and the grain threshed, Papa concluded to keep Benjamin, who had desired to remain, at reduced wages. He was accustomed to attend family prayer and Church, as our help always did, and appeared to have confidence in us. One day as Papa paid him his monthly wages, there was a dollar or two his due, and Pa said, "I will pay you the rest when I take the next load of grain to market." Benjamin turned away and said to himself, with a knowing and diabolical look, not thinking he was heard, "That is the way my old master down South used to talk, the old fool; didn't I know that he had bags of gold, and I reckon he has some of the like. He needn't wait to sell the grain to blind this nigger—I will find it one of these days as I did my old Massa's." He whistled a darkey air and went to his work. He was very talkative at times, still we never solved the mystery that involved his previous life; he could not be induced to allude to the past.

It was in mid-winter, and one of those leaden days—not raining or snowing, neither cold nor sunny, and yet the snow was rapidly disappearing, and the general remark was, we will certainly loose our sleighing. The flail was striking on the barn floor, while the fowls were crowing and cackling among the straw that the cattle were trampling down in the yard. A little after dinner Papa drove up in the sleigh to the door and asked who wanted to go to the afternoon meeting on the last day of the old year? All decided to go except Mama and Agnes, but when we arrived at the church the afternoon meeting had been omitted. On our return we urged Papa to take us to see Addison and Fisk, in their cabin in the woods, where they were at work removing the lumber from a lot they had purchased, and as it was several miles from home, they often remained there several days and nights. He wished to please us, still, we observed he went reluctantly as though some inward voice was calling him home. The novelty of the cabin and this aboriginal style of living quite enchanted us, while everything around assumed such a native air of grandeur, that I came near sighing, "O for a lodge in some vast wilderness." But before we had half enjoyed the pleasures of this wild retreat, where no sound save the woodman's axe broke the silence of the leafless but snow adorned forest, Papa said we must leave, and rapidly we glided over the snow homeward. It was nearly dark when we drove up to the door, and Mama met us with a smile as we jumped out, and Papa proceeded to the barn to put up the horses. When he returned he looked as pale as death, yet strangely firm. Mama followed him into the sitting room, and he said in a calm, yet subdued voice, "Has Benjamin been in since we left?" She replied, "He came in about an hour after you left, with that new axe you bought not long since in his hand, and sat down and commenced sharpening it. I thought it very sharp before, but he felt of the edge and said, 'I think that will answer.' For the first time since he has been with us, I felt afraid of him; there was an awful glare in his eye, and when he looked at me it was demoniacal. I said, 'Are you going to cut wood?' and hastily handed him a plate of cakes I was frying; he took them, and it did appear to me he must have observed the shudder that seized me. He then left without any excuse and returned to the barn. When I heard the flail again I thought it was only imagination, and I felt calm again. I observed it was getting late and said to Agnes, 'I fear you will have to go to the barn to milk old Brindle,' (the only cow that supplied us with milk during the winter.) I stepped to the door, and to my surprise this cow was in the yard coming toward the house; it was such a relief to my mind. I said, 'Why, child, here she is near the door; some one must have left the barn yard gate open; take a pail and milk her right here.'" Papa could refrain no longer, and tears of gratitude rolled down his cheeks as he said, with a trembling voice, "Verily, God has sent his angel to save you and the child, and deliver me in a most wonderful manner from death since my return. He intended to murder us all, but we must trust in God still, His arm is not shortened that he cannot save to the uttermost." They knelt and prayed, and then Papa said, "Have supper as soon as possible, as we are to attend watch-meeting, and I am to preach one sermon. 'Surely, the Lord is our defender,' we will trust in Him."

At the supper table we knew that something terrible had occurred, but did not dare to speak. In asking the table blessing, and invoking God's protecting care that evening around the family altar, Papa seemed to be talking with God face to face, and we felt that a wall of fire was round about us. Papa did not speak to Benjamin, still his eye seemed to control every move he made; he appeared to know that he was to accompany us, and when we were all seated in the sleigh, Papa stepped back to assure Mama that his eye would not leave him for a moment, and should he attempt to go, he would follow him, even though he were in the midst of his sermon. This terrible mystery controled all my thoughts until the meeting closed, and we were again seated in the sleigh and rolling rapidly home. When within a mile of the house, a tall figure turned out in the snow as we passed, when to our surprise we observed it was our brother Fisk. Papa said, "why, my son, is that you? where did you come from?" Fisk, after taking a seat in the sleigh, replied: "My cabin was so cold I could not think of going there, and something whispered to me to go home." Papa very calmly said, "I am glad you came; it is growing colder than it was during the day."

When we reached the house a good warm fire awaited us in the sitting-room, and plenty of doughnuts and apples, our New Year's greeting. Mama vainly attempted to smile, but her studied look restrained it. Again as a family, we were committed to God's watchful care, and we retirred to our chamber for the night. Benjamin occupied a bed in a recess during the winter between the kitchen and the sitting room; after he had retired Papa intimated to Fisk the danger we were in, and the circumstances that occurred in the barn after his return in the afternoon, when his eyes had been open to the murderous design of Benjamin; he knows I have in part detected him, and look upon him with suspicion, but as he did not carry out to-day his plan, he has intended to complete it to-night I considered it safer to retain him in the house, and am glad you are here; go now, my son, and lie down in the next room, and your mother and I will continue in prayer all night; then no evil will befall us, yet, aside from your being here, which may in a degree, intimidate him; but with his strength he could very easily dispatch us all. But God is with us and we will trust in him, and if no evil befall us until the morning dawns, he will then leave and we shall never see his face again.

Around the family alter the next morning, the New Year seemed ladened with the awful presence of Jehovah. Like wrestling Jacob, who, when he had prevailed, we felt like exclaiming, "Lo God is here let us adore and own how dreadful is this place." After breakfast, Papa conversed for a while with Benjamin; we did not hear the conversation, but it was enough to see him tremble as Papa's words were falling like blows upon him. He then paid him his wages, and Mama did up a little package of cakes and handed to him. He must have felt the Divine presence that had frustrated his murderous designs, as he bade us good bye, for the tears rolled down his black cheeks, which he continued to wipe away umtil he was out of sight

Papa, now overcome with emotion, sank down in a chair and related the circumstances of the previous evening while at the barn that had convinced him that he intended to murder him, had not God interposed in a most marvelous manner, as he did in the afternoon when he left his threshing and came in with that sharp axe, intending, no doubt, to murder Mama and Agnes, and then search the house for the gold he had at one time been overheard to refer to our having hid away; and when we arrived he could have easily put an end to us.

The thought now occurred where is the fatal ax? and after a long search it was found secreted under his bed, he having placed it there the night before, and had no opportunity to remove it during the morning without being observed. He did not imagine Pa would send him away so early and with the assurance that his face must never be seen again or he would be exposed and committed as a criminal, that he had discovered enough to sentence him to imprisonment. Time can never obliterate the memorable scene that then followed or the thrill of gratitude that filled our hearts as we all fell on our knees, or rather prostrated ourselves before "Jehovah's awful throne," to thank him for sparing our lives to behold that New Year's Day.

EVANGELINE.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

"Oh, Give Me a Flower."

With hurried step, I was passing along,
'Mid the din and the dust of the city's throng,

Scarce feeling the pulse of busy life,
And almost unheeding the jostling strife;

When the ardent gaze of most eager eyes,
Seemed fixed as if caught by a long-sought prize.

And these words were heard; "Please do not refuse,
O, give me a flower!" The morning dews

Still nestled on by violets sweet,
So recently culled as an offering meet

To a dearly loved friend; but that pleading voice
Arrested my walk, and suggested a choice

Between friendship's claims and the suppliant here,
Or who most needed my early spring cheer.

I scanned more closely the thinly-clad form,
Protected so ill from the wind and the storm.

Intelligence shone from the upturned face,
And a beauty which want had failed to erase.

"Little girl," I replied, "you would like many things,
Nay, all of the comforts that money brings;

Why not ask for that? the flowers soon fade,
A more useful request you might surely have made."

"O," she cheerily said, "I love them so,
And have longed so much to see them grow."

"Tell me, lady, do they so pretty look
In the grassy mead, near the gurgling brook?

"I have often dreamed of a beautiful place,
Of a home that roses and violets grace.

"In my waking hours I have longed to see How like my dreams the real might be."

I quietly placed my bouquet in her hand,
For those plaintive tones, O who could withstand?

A grateful thought to our Father in heaven,
As I musingly paused, was earnestly given—

Thanksgiving, that 'mid life's temptation and sin
So gently He leads us, our hearts to win

To Himself by a love of earth's beautiful things,
To the source whence all of beauty springs.

A few hours were gone—I retraced my way
Homeward, from the varied toils of the day.

I sought near the dwellings of want and care
The remembered mein of the child so fair.

She sat again on the door's broken sill,
Smiling and clasping the violets still.

They were withered then, and those drooping heads
Seemed sadly to pine for their native beds;

But the soul that gleamed from their eyes so bright
Shall ever shine with unfading light.

Dear one, in a land of perennial bloom,
For all of Christ's "little ones" there will be room.

Its glories no mortal hath ever espied,
But we know that each wish shall be satisfied.

BELLE.

New Orleans, Feb. 25, 1867.

Information Wanted.

It is earnestly requested that all persons will read the following requests, and assist in seeking the information. Let them be read in all the churches and other gatherings of colored people, in every place where the ADVOCATE circulates, and copied in other papers:

Information wanted by Hubbard Rathbone about his mother, Rachel, who belonged to William Patton, Huntsville, Ala.—not seen her in thirty years—heard of her four years ago.—Hubbard belonged to S. S. Ewen. Rev. Wm. Harris, Baptist minister in North Alabama, may know of her. Address,

Rev. S. M. SMALL, Alexandria, La.

By Huldah Jones about her son, Epps Jones, aged 29. He left Alexandria a year ago. Address, Rev. S M SMALL.

By Scott Oliver, of Floyd's Bridge, La., about his brother-in-law, Leveston Keys, aged 35—belonged to Gov. Moore, on Bayou Robert, La Has not seen him since the Mansfield battle—is supposed to have gone North with the Union Army.

By Louisa, who was brought from Alexandria, Va., twenty years ago by John Cook—wants information about her mother, Mimy Parker, who belonged to Mrs. Burgess, in Alexandria, Va.; and her sisters, Maria, Clara and Mary Jane; and her brother Jack—all belonged to John Dogenses, Culpeper, Va. Address

Rev. S. M. SMALL, Alexandria, Va.

Information wanted by Daniel Bias Sharp, who left Baltimore county, Maryland, seven miles from the city. He was owned by Sam and John Stone. Wants to hear of his brothers and sisters, who had the same owners. His sisters were named Margaretta, Melinda and Eliza, and his brother Ben; also of Samuel Stump and Charlotte Smith, of Baltimore. Address Rev. E. JACKSON, Opelousas.

Winny, old and blind, seeks information of her father, Stephen Frazer, and her mother, Judy Murray, Cumberland county, Maryland. Left there thirty years ago. Were owned, father, by Stephen Frazer; mother, by Captain John Murray. Address

Rev. E. JACKSON, Opelousas, La.

Selah Cook, about her father, Bennett, and her mother, Olly Cook, Warren county, Va.—Were owned by Robert Beverly, 25 or 30 years ago. Address

Rev. E. JACKSON, Opelousas, La.

Rosetta seeks information about her parents. The manner in which I was stolen is as follows: One evening late when our colored people were harvesting the wheat, old mistress sent the children after the geese, back of the field. We set out on our errand; when we had gone about half a mile and were gathering chestnuts, a carriage drove up, and two white men and two mulatto women got out, came up to me and asked me if I wanted to take a ride; I said yes, when they told me to jump in. I did so, under the belief that they would take me to my mother. The carriage moved off, and I in it. I fell asleep, and when I awoke the women had disappeared, but the men were still in the carriage. They afterward carried me to the Indian Nation, and from thence to Nachitoches. I was sold out in Texas. My mother's name was Betsey; my father's was Aaron; my eldest brother, Benjamin; the next, Henry. My sister was named Harriet, and my own name was Rachel, and since changed by my owners to Rosetta. Address

Rev. SAM'L M. SMALL, Alexandria, La.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Chicago, Ill.

Circulars sent free.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

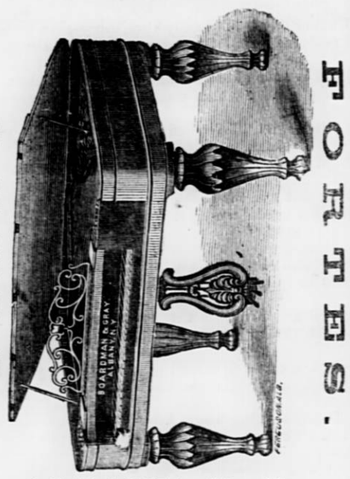
The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies."

my19-1y

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100.



PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
Cincinnati.

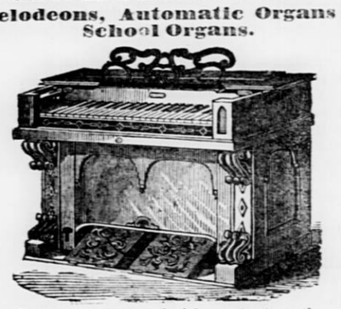
feb. 3 1y

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.



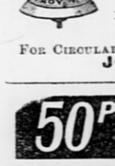
Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.



Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

---

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

---

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co, Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans. Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.

Corner of Gold street.

FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

EGYPTIAN CORN!

Auspicium melioris ævi. Bona fide. Quid pro quo!

The subscriber offers to farmers throughout the country the

EGYPTIAN CORN,

which, upon trial, was found to ripen, planted even the last of July. It is estimated, from its very prolific qualities, to yield 150 bushels per acre, and weighs, by sealed measure, sixty-five pounds to the bushel. This corn was produced by some procured direct from Mr. Jones, our consular agent, directly on his return from Egypt.

It needs no different culture from that of other varieties, and in the South two crops can be raised in one season on the same ground. It grows in the form of a tree, and thirty-four ears have grown on one stalk, and will average from five to fifteen. For domestic use it is unparalleled. When ground and properly bolted, it is equal in color and fineness to wheaten flour. As a forage crop, by sowing in drills or broadcast, for early feed, there is no kind of corn so well adapted to milch cows, and none that will yield half the value in stalk or corn.

It can be successfully grown in any State.

I give the most satisfactory references that the corn is, in every respect, what I represent it to be; and further, I am the only person throughout the country who has this variety of corn. Having secured a quantity, I am now able to fill all orders for those desirous of testing it.

TERMS.—In order that all may receive seed, we have reduced the price to one dollar and fifty cents a package. Any person who will get up a club of five will receive a package gratis. Fifteen packages for $10, fifty packages for $20, one hundred packages for $30. One package will contain enough to plant the following season from twenty to thirty acres, also directions for planting and cultivating.

Address, F. E. G. LINDSEY,
Box 75, Abindgdon,
Washington Co., Va.

INDORSEMENTS.

We, the undersigned, citizens of Washington county, Virginia, having examined some Egyptian Corn grown on thin soil in this county, do hereby certify that some of the stalks produced thirty-four spikes; the longest spike we noticed measured 10½ inches in length and 6½ inches around.

This corn, likewise, grew in the form of a tree, and presented a very healthy appearance.

R. B. HAMILTON,
Raven's Nest P. O., Va.,
Capt. T. M. COBBLE,
Craig's Mills.
Capt. J. C. STANFIELD,
Holston.

We, the undersigned, certify that the above gentlemen are actual residents of Washington county, Virginia, men of truth, whose veracity, purity from falsehood, fidelity and honesty none dare question; enjoying an eminent moral, social and political position in society.

JOHN PHILLIPS,
P. M., Craig's Mills P. O., Va.
JOHN M. HAMILTON,
Ex-Sheriff of Washington co., Va.
JERIEL D. LINDER,
Act. Justice of the Peace.

THE PRESS.

F. E. G. Lindsey has presented us an ear of his "Egyptian Corn," heretofore advertised in our paper—the ear is about the size of Indian Maize, and has a solid grain. A lady who raised some of it last year sends us a certificate stating that she saw some that had not been plowed—it was sown broadcast—that produced twelve ears to the stalk.—(Abingdon Virginian.

EGYPTIAN CORN.—In another column appears the advertisement of the Egyptian Corn. It is something new for this section, and is worthy of attention. Mr. Price, of our office, is personally acquainted with Mr. Lindsey, the proprietor, and will vouch for the statements made. He has seen the corn grow, and thinks it would prove a success in Western Missouri. Try it.—[Clinton (Mo.) Advocate, Nov. 29, 1866.

EGYPTIAN CORN.—F. E. G. Lindsey, of Abingdon, Va., has the genuine "Egyptian Corn," which a great many farmers are delighted with. This is a new corn to this country, and has many merits that do not appertain to other breadstuffs. It will ripen as far north as Boston, even when planted by the last of July. On rich land it will yield 150 bushels to the acre, and weighs 65½ pounds to the bushel, and for domestic use it is unparalleled. It resembles flour, and contains 95 per cent. of nutriment matter. In the South two crops a year can be sown. A package can be had of Lindsey for $1 50.—Washington Constitutional Union.

61:64

LANDRETH'S

Warranted Garden Seeds

Have been familiarly known to the American Public for upwards of three-quarters of a century.

THEY SPEAK THEIR OWN PRAISE

WHEREVER PLANTED.

Dealers in Seeds whether country Merchants, Booksellers, Druggists, or Regular Seedsmen, not already customers of the subscribers are invited to become such.

OUR WHOLESALE PRICE LIST,

Published to the Trade only, will be mailed to all dealers who apply.

Landreth's Rural Register and Almanac for 1867,

Containing numerous hints on Horticulture, will be mailed to all applicants who enclose a two cent stamp with their address to

DAVID LANDRETH & SON,
93:96 Philadelphia, Penn.

MARK YOUR CLOTHING!

Clark's Patent Indelible Pencil!

"Much more convenient than Ink, and equally good as to performance—we judge after several months trial."—Am. Agriculturist.

"Invaluable for marking linen."—Chicago Tribune.

"Remarkable for the ease and neatness with which they can be used."—Detroit Tribune.

"One of the greatest conveniences that can be presented to a housekeeper."—Charleston (S. C.) News.

Manufactured and sold at wholesale by

The Indelible Pencil Co.,
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.

Every Pencil Warranted.

FRANK S. DAME, No. 18 Commercial Place, New Orleans, General Agent for the Southwest. 93:96

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By D. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALS

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,
Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,

BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 SPRUCE

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade. 2—eowtf

---

THE PIANIST'S ALBUM:

A COLLECTION OF

Marches, Waltzes, Polkas, Redowas, Galops Mazourkas, Quadrilles, Four-hand Pieces, Dances, &c.

A BRILLIANT SET OF PIANOFORTE GEMS,

Suited to every grade of capacity, and indispensable to every Pianist who would become familiar with the POPULAR MUSIC OF THE DAY.

This new volume, being the third of the "HOME CIRCLE," will be welcomed by all who desire to have the Best Pieces in a convenient form. A very large number of the Gems contained in this new compilation are not to be found in any other, though much admired and in constant demand—a fact that will render it the leading book of its kind. Price—plain, $2 50; cloth, $3; cloth, full gilt, $4. Sold by all music dealers, and mailed, post-paid.

OLIVER DITSON & CO, Publishers,
1y 277 Washington st., Boston.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowltaon & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not forgotten.

[feb3]

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adverliser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened.
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—if turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bile, foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicinal Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark- & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. ao12-3 m

---

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,

NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music, Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1y

---

DOCTOR

L. Q. C. WISHART'S

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL!!

A GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE CURE OF

THROAT AND LUNG DISEAE .

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

☞ It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safe and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the Pine Tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system.

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs.

It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Blind and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, and Diptheria, etc., etc., etc.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

There is not a medicine discovered that has so much power to dissolve the thick mucus that stops up the wind passages of the lungs as the Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which subdues the fever and inflammation that destroy the power and vitality of the lungs, and consign the patient to the grave. We say to all whose lungs are affected, use Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial with great confidence, as it has restored thousands of cases to health that were hopelessly give up to die.

COLDS AND COUGHS

are speedily cured by the use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it does its work at once, and the patient is cured before other medicines would have had time to have any beneficial effect.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR SCROFULA.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial will purify the blood and cleanse it, of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores internal and external, Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, and all Skin Diseases are especially cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it is good to be applied internally and externally in the above cases, as it has great power to heal where it comes in contact with the human flesh.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

is a great remedy for Chronic Croup and Diptheria, which is sending thousands and thousands of children to a premature grave. It can be cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

Out of ten thousand cases where it has been tried in the past two years, it has never missed a case where it was taken in time. All families should have it on hand, as it gives instant relief in Croup and Diptheria.

BLIND AND BLEEDING PILES.

Thousands of cures of this most painful and dangerous complaint are now enjoying the blessings of health by the use of the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Its great healing properties will stop the bleeding and pain immediately.

CONSTIPATION OF THE BOWELS.

Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is a great remedy for costiveness, as it acts upon the surface of the stomach, and causes a flow of gastric juice, enabling the stomach rapidly to digest the food, which give health and vigor to the bowels, and causes regular evacuations. Let no one that is suffering from constipation of the bowels neglect to use the Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND GRAVEL

are speedily and permanently cured by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. It subdues the inflammation in the Kidneys, and in Gravel it dissolves and carries away the sediment which forms what is called stone in the bladder.

ASTHMA AND COUGH.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial gives instantaneous relief in cases of Asthma and Whooping Cough. It often cures whooping before it has run half its course; as it acts at once upon the phlegm and mucus, and expels them from the throat, and the sufferer is relieved. In cases of Asth-

DR. WISHART'S DYSPEPSIA PILLS WITH THE CORDIAL,

as they have never been known to fail to cure that disease.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial acts with great power upon the Liver, and restores it to a speedy action, giving it a healthy secretion by its cooling and equalizing principle.

THE CAUSES OF CONSUMPTION IN THE LUNGS.

A sharp and poisonous corroding humor, either coming from other parts, or breeding in the lungs. From our own observation, we conclude that of ninety-six out of every hundred that die with consumption, their disease originated first from Dyspepsia—indigestion. The food fermenting, souring and rottening in the stomach, creating a poisonous catarrh, which is drawn by the brain to the head, passing through its different ramifications, creating inflammation throughout its course. The brains, eyes, and all the organs of the head receiving its poisonous and corroding effect, uniting together, they struggle to relieve themselves from its grasp, hence comes dizziness, dimness of vision, headache, and staggering in walking. This phlegm and catarrh is discharged from the head to the throat, falling on the bronchial tubes filling up the air passages of the lungs, and if suffered to remain there, will thicken, corrode, and breed ulcers in the lungs; then come cough and consumption. We say to the sick, use with great perseverence, one bottle after another, until it has had power enough to dissolve the mucus and phlegms which stop up the air passages, and expectorate it from the lungs.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

☞ In all cases of Dyspepsia with Consumption use

DR. WISHART'S

Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

WITH THE

TAR CORDIAL.

L. Q. C. WISHART, M. D.,
Office and Store 10 North Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. of America.

WHOLESALE AGENTS:

BARNES, WARD & CO., 24 Magazine street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

☞ Sold by all Druggists. mh3 1y

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

---

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR,

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in COLD water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT,
No. 71 Nassau street,
Mh2m1 New York City.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhan, Musical Conductor, Boston. Excels in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of syles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 14. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1867. Whole No.—64.

Poetry.

For the New Orleans Advocate].

Our Flag.

I see our Country's Banner, fair,
Wave proudly in the morning air;
Its radiant folds are waving wide—
Rejoicing in their starry pride.
What impious hand would dare to tear
One star from all those shining there.
Or rend one lovely shred away
That's waving o'er our heads to-day?
Perdition seize the treacherous hand
That would deface one starry band;
Such hand would its own birth-right sell
To buy an Arnold's place in hell.
Oh! ever may that starry host
By fair Columbia's winds be tossed
Forgotten be Mount Vernon's shade
Before that Flag shall cease to wave,
And Allegheny's rocky sides
Lie buried 'neath the ocean's tides—
This glorious land of Liberty
Be whelmed beneath the dark blue sea
Before one glorious Starry Gem
Shall leave Columbia's Diadem!

Tour in the East.

HOME OF MARY MAGDALENE.

(Editorial.)

The morning sun rose upon the hills of Galilee in cloudless beauty; the surface of the Lake was rippled by the freshness of morning life, and far to the North rose the sublime form of Hermon, its snowy summits reflecting the early light. At 7 A. M. we started to visit the cities upbraided by our Lord. Our course was north-west, along the shell strewn beach, and in two hours we came to the birth-place of Mary Magdalene, out of whom Jesus cast "seven devils," and to whom he appeared immediately after his resurrection. Eighten centuries ago Magdala, or Mejdel, was a thriving town, but now it consists of a few wretched huts, on the top of which the children had built booths of reeds, and in the centre of the village was a solitary palm. The women are frightful specimens of humanity, and might be dispossessed of as many demons as was their ancient sister. Here begins the plain of Gennesaret, formed by the hills receding in graceful gradations, forming a plateau a mile in its greatest width, and three miles in length.—Plucking an anemone in memory of the devoted Mary, we rode on to Capernaum. Following the coast, we had to ford the mountain streams, which here pour their turbid waters into the lake, and in attempting to cross one, our horses sank into the soft clay bottom, leaving us no other alternative than to dismount and wade ashore. Accustomed to such incidents of traveling, we remounted and hastened on, and at 10 A. M. arrived at the ruins of Capernaum. The "woe" the Savior denounced against this once famous city recurred to our minds with singular impressiveness. Whether the exaltation referred to by Christ denoted the lofty site of the city, or its pride and prosperity, the abasement is equally applicable. There is a dispute among the learned whether the town stood upon the high hill around which are heaps of ruins, or upon the plain below. In all probability the hill served for the acropolis commanding the entire plain on which the larger portion of the village was built. Its site is at the northwest end of the lake, on the upper end of the crescent like plain of Gennesaret. A high bluff of naked rock rises perpendicularly from the sea, forming the northeastern limit of the plain. At the base of this cliff is the "Fountain of the Fig," so called from a noble fig-tree that covers the cave from which the stream issues. Near the fountain we saw what seemed to be the remains of a tower, with a portion of an arched gateway, and to the south of it, a mound of shapeless ruins.

Turning to our Bibles, we read with renewed interest the religious history of this highly favored city. Rejected by his townsmen at Nazareth, "He came and dwelt at Capernaum," which was then called "His own city." It was in its synagogue that Christ healed the demoniac; here he cured Peter's wife's mother; restored the centurion's servant; raised the daughter of Jairus from the dead; and when taxed, wrought the miracle of the "tribute money.'—Here at Levi's feast, He discoursed on fasting; to the Pharisees he denounced formality; to the people He preached faith, and to his disciples humility, forbearance and brotherly love. And after all such acts and words of love and wisdom, being rejected, He in turn rejected them, and the present desolation of Capernaum is the significant fulfilment of the prophetic judgments He pronounced against its people.

Bethsaida, the "House of Fish," is less than a mile to the east of Capernaum. In the side of the steep bluff which marks the site of the latter, a road is cut to the depth of five feet, much resembling the road at the ancient Abilene near Suk Wady Barada. The home of Peter and his brethren is in a charming little nook in the mountain's side, the hills rising one above another in graceful gradations, and to the west is a beautiful beach of firm sand encircling a small bay, just such a place as fishermen love to ground their boats and spread their nets. For its size, it is better watered than any other city in Palestine. There are ancient acqueducts overgrown with water plants, and octagonal reservoirs that would do honor to imperial cities, and gushing fountains lined with oleanders and pouring their crystal waters into the sea. Again the "woe" has been fulfilled, and Bethsaida is a desolation. Unoccupied by the examination of other ruins, we gave ourselves up to the recollections of the past, and to the reflections suggested by the associations of a scene so hallowed. We have often made long pilgrimages to the birth-place of men eminent in letters and renowned in the history of Church and State, but we were now standing amid the childhood scenes of Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, and Phillip, whose apostolic calling and mission has stamped the world with their influence and given immortality to their names. It is an ancient suggestion, and perhaps a true one, that the scenes of a man's childhood mould his character and give tone and direction to his coming years. Looking out upon the scene around us we fancied that the transparent atmosphere, the deep blue skies and crystaline waters of Gennesaret developed the character of "James the Just;" that the mellow dawn and roseate sunset, the placid lake and flowing fountain, the blooming flowers and shell-strewn shores, called forth the finer feelings and gentler traits of St. John's mind, while the rugged mountains and boistrous storms at sea, awakened St. Peter's fiery and impetuous spirit. The fact was strangely impressive and the impression overpowering, that in this retired quarter of the globe, and in a village of such humble pretensions, five inspired apostles were born, and that from fish-nets they were commissioned to preach the everlasting gospel; to be the biographers of the Son of God, and record those lessons of truth and doctrines of religion that affect the character and destiny of mankind.

It was probably on the shores of the little bay above referred to, where occurred the miraculous draught of fishes, and the subsequent call of the apostles; and within sight of their native town the disciples, while threatened with shipwreck, beheld the Master walking upon the sea, in the "fourth watch of the night." More than at Jerusalem, we realized while contemplating these stupendous facts, the earthly presence of Christ, and in looking out upon the self-same sea during the silent hours of night, we could fancy the boisterous waves, the affrighted mariners, the Divine form of the Redeemer, serene amid the storm, treading the troubled waters, and true to his benevolent nature, extending a helping hand to a presumptuous and doubting disciple. It was while thus living in the past, we were startled by one of those squalls characteristic of Gennesaret. The air was quiet, the lake calm and the heavens cloudless, but within the space of five minutes the wind blew a gale, the sea became boisterous, and the foaming waves rolling high, dashed violently against the shore, which must have endangered the safety of the small fishing boats caught within its power.

Another mile to the east brought us to Chorazin. Once a city of wealth and pride, it is now the most desolate spot on all this coast It was with the greatest difficulty that we could discover even the remains of the town Acres of reeds and thorns, and brambles, bleeding us at every step, now cover its former site and environs. Adders crossed our path, and jackals leaped from the jungle of thistles. Not a habitation could be seen in all that region, and the most beautiful site for a town on all these shores is now a thornbed and a howling wilderness. Associated with Bethsaida and Capernaum in the "woe," like them, Chorazin has experienced the Divine displeasure, and her condition is less tolerable than that of Tyre or Sidon. In the days of our Savior and for centuries after, Chorazin was a populous and wealthy Jewish city, possessing one of the grandest synagogues in Galilee. What the "mighty works which were done in her" were, we are not informed, but evidently they were of such a character as to give light to her people, the rejection of which has involved her ruin. Taking advantage of an hour, we rode eastward to the brink of the hill that overhangs the valley of the Jordan, from which we saw distinctly the mouth of that sacred river, and on the long sand bar that separates the river from the lake, were the black bulls of Bashan standing in the water. And in the distance rose the mountain on which Christ fed the 5,000, multiplying the 5 loaves and 2 fishes into a sufficiency for that great multitude.

From the New York Tribune.

The Death of Dr. Livingstone.

OFFICIAL ACCOUNT FROM THE AMERICAN CONSUL AT ZANIBAR.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The following official account of the death of Dr. Livingstone has been received by the State Department:

CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, ISLAND ZANIBAR,
Dec. 9, 1866.

SIR: It becomes my painful duty to report the death of Dr. David Livingstone, the celebrated African explorer, who, as I wrote under date of May 9, 1866 (Dispatch No. 4,) left here on the 9th of March last for the exploration of river Rovuma, and the region between the great lakes of Central Africa, of which as yet, but little is known. The sad intelligence was received here on the 6th inst, by the arrival of several native members of the expedition, from whom but little of importance could be elicited, save the fact of Dr. Livingstone's death. I am indebted to Dr. Kirk, H. B. M, Vice-Consul, and formerly a member of the Livingstone Zambesi expedition, for the following particulars of this sad event; and as his accompanying remarks may prove interesting, I cannot do better than to give them in his own words:

"The return of several of the Johanna men who accompanied Dr. L, has made it certain that that distinguished traveler has fallen, and, with him, half of his native followers. * * * *. His present expedition may be briefly stated to have been an attempt to unite the magnificent discoveries of the three late years, and determine the limits and connections of the three great lakes, which reach from 14th deg. south to 2 deg. north latitude, and flowing to the sea by the Zambesi and Nile at the two extremities, but with an intermediate space as yet unkown. Such was the geographical problem. But Dr. L. had in view to affect the present enormous East African slave trade, though pioneering the way which might lead to lawful commerce. To have consolidated in one the successive discoveries achieved by himself on the 'Nyanza,' Burton, on the 'Sanganyika,' Speke and Grant, on the 'Victoria,' and Baker, on the 'Albert Nyanza,' would have been a fitting triumph for one who was the first to cross the African continent within the tropical zone; but these hopes have been wrecked by his untimely death. * * * * We last heard of Dr. L. at 'N'doude,' at the confluence of the Novuma and Niende. Here he met with kindness, but found the land desolated by the slave traders supplying the market of Zanzibar. We have information that he proceeded further to Mataka, a Miao chief, who gave presents of cattle and food. At this point the Indian Sepoys remained behind, and have since returned to Zanzibar. From Mataka to Alake was eight days march. On crossing a wide water in Canves they followed the border of the lake for several days, and thus struck inland They were suddenly attacked in a bushy country, about 9 A. M., by a band of Mavite. Dr. L killed the most forward of the attacking party, but was surrounded and cut down by one blow of a battle-axe, which cut half through his neck. Beyond this we have no details, for those who returned were the first to flee. Almost all who stood near Dr. L. were killed, although they seem to have done considerable with their rifles. This happened about six weeks ago, or about Oct. 25. You now see how very meager our information is. Even with a personal knowledge of the lakes of the surrounding country, at least a short distance from the scene of this sad affair, and a knowledge of that very tribe of Zatees, called Mavite, Agite, Maozites, &c., it has been quite impossible for me as yet to elicit anything from the impenetrable simplicity of the few who have returned, as to where this tradegy took place. That it was to the west of the Nyassa is certain; and whether, in the district we had already explored, or further to the north, is still uncertain. That Dr. L. was killed by the same Mavite, as he and I were among, together, is certain. They would have attacked us then if they had dared, but we were too strong for them. With such enemies, it comes to be a question of numbers, as well as equipment. The death of a few will not break their charge; and a small party, taken unawares, has no chance. Only one of the survivors saw Dr. L., fall, but they buried his body at 3 P. M., when the Mavite had gone. They took off all the baggage, and also the upper clothing of the dead body, so that not even a note remains by which to trace the route."

It is hardly probable that any further particulars will ever be obtained in regard to Dr. Livingstone's death, as the Mavite are a wandering people, and it will be quite impossible to ascertain the particular tribe by whom Dr. L.'s party were attacked. I have the honor to be, Sir, very respectfully your obedient servant.

EDWARD D. ROPES, U. S. Consul.
Hon. W. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State

Methodist Freedmen's Aid Society.

We commend to our people the Freedmen's Aid Society lately organized by our Church, and now so successfuly engaged in the great work of educating and Christianizing the Freedmen. This Society has received the approbation of the Board of Bishops and of all the Annual Conferences held since its formation. It evidently meets a great want in our Southern work, and adds essentially to the efficiency of our missions. It is a matter of profound regret that its formation was delayed so long. It should have taken the field early in the movement in behalf of the Freedmen, and disbursed the funds of Methodists contributed so liberally to other associations in organizing schools, which would have co-operated with our missionaries in planting old-fashioned Methodism all through the South. Although the Society has been organized but a few months, it has already above forty teachers in the field, co-operating with our missionaries in educating the ignorant and degraded Freedmen, and preparing them for happiness and a glorious immortality. Its success, thus far, has vindicated the foresight and wisdom of its founders; and needs only to be successfully worked and liberally sustained to secure the grandest results. Our only fear for its future success arises from the multiplicity of calls upon the benevolence of our people; but we think that a wise discrimination in the disbursement of our charities will recognize the vast importance of this educational movement among the Freedmen, and furnish a liberal outlay for its accomplishment.

We are closing up our Centenary matters, which will give a chance to other enterprises that have been crowded out of sight by the pressure of this movement. Among our other objects of benevolence we call attention to the education of millions of heathen in our own country, at our doors, almost within the sound of our voice, scarcely surpassed by the heathen of heathendom itself. They are easy of access, anxious to be taught, make rapid progress in school, speak our own language, and yet we allow them to perish for lack of knowledge. Millions are anxious to be taught, devoted Christians teachers offer their services for this self-sacrificing work, but the funds are wanting. God moves the ignorant to cry for knowledge, Christian women to offer their services for this mission, and we trust that he will move those who have the means to respond to the heart-rending appeals of millions of deeply-wronged and degraded Freedmen, for teachers, books, and missionaries. We know of no more promising field of Christian effort, just at this crisis, and none in which a small outlay may secure richer harvests. Here is a golden opportunity for an investment which will secure most liberal and enduring returns. A small donation now may accomplish more than a large one at some subsequent poriod. The Society is desirous of sending twenty additional teachers at once into the field, and even a hundred would not fully meet the demand, but its treasury will not permit. We appeal to our brethren in the ministry in behalf of this cause, and trust that they will commend it to their congregations, and take liberal collections in its behalf.—Western Christian Advocate.

When Jeff. Davis was in Congress he was on a committee for the decoration of the capitol. On one of the paintings purchased for the purpose, the South was represented by an Arcadian scene, with a negro in the midst, sleeping on a bale of cotton. Mr. Davis made a single comment on the picture: "What becomes of the South when the negro wakes up?" Perhaps he can answer it now.

The New Route to the East.

On Wednesday last the steamer Colorado, the pioneer of the new line between China and California. arrived at San Francisco on her first return voyage fron Hong Kong and Yokohama. By her mails we have news from Japan only three weeks old, and intelligence from China up to the 17th of February. On the outward trip she made the run from San Francisco to Hong Kong in twenty-seven and one-half days, and her performance on the homeward voyage would no doubt have been equally satisfactory had it not been for unusually severe weather. We rejoice in such an auspicious beginning of an enterprise which promises to open to our country a new era of commercial greatnes.

There can be little question that the trade of the East is falling into our hands, and that San Francisco is destined to be the second city of America, and New York the great emporium of the world. By the present Overland Mail route, the distance between London and Hong Kong is about forty-eight days. It is now nearly the same by way of San Francisco, and in a very few years, when our Pacific Railway is finished, it will be shortened at least a week. What golden visions arise as the prospect of this future is unfolded to us! Our fast steamers plowing the Pacific will bring us the wealth of Indus—the teas, and silks, and spices for which the Old World nations have been contending for hundreds of years. The carrying trade of the world will pass across our continent, and New York will become the centre of exchange for all the commercial nations of the earth. How marvelous it seems that Christopher Columbus should have known so much more about geography than we do; how strange that the discovery of America should not have been after all, as we have wont to regard it, the result of a happy mistake, but that when the adventurous sailor steered out of the harbor of Palos with his little fleet he should have been actually following the best route to the East, and when he touched the new continent should indeed have been knocking at the gates of the Indies! It is only about a year since the establishment of a steamship line from Panama brought us into direct and quick communication with the great colony of Australia. The new enterprise is a still more important step toward establishing us in the position for which nature has destined us as the central city of the world. *

A MOVING ROCK.—The last sensation mentioned in our Southern exchanges, is an immense moving mass of rock in the northern portion of Arkansas. The Memphis Avalanche has been furnished with an account of this incredible phenomenon by a distinguished lawyer and politician of Tennessee. This gentleman derives his information from two young English noblemen, who have visited the far southwest in search of scientific knowledge. The Avalanche says: Southwest, about ten miles from the source of the St. Francis river, which rises in the Ozark mountians, and a short distance from the boundary line which separates Missouri from Arkansas, is a strip of limestone, or green stone, ranging from between one to two miles in width. It is interspersed here and there with plats of land, in many cases over an acre in length, peculiarly rich, in soil, and making the strange and perhaps hitherto unknown conformation of a swampy and rocky soil.

At the extreme northeast extremity of this rocky section the water from the St. Francis pours in, especially in the spring and fall seasons, in a heavy volume. The stream, for it is nothing else than a stream, although its current is swift beyond parallel, takes a zig-zag course through the rock, being particularly swift at the above-mentioned extremity, and again empties into the St. Francis. At this extremity is a solid mass of rugged and picturesque rock, almost oval in shape, washed on all sides by a rapid current, and moves directly and regularly back and forward; always in motion, and creating a deep and heavy sound which can be heard for miles. At first its motion is hardly perceptible to the ordinary vision, but as the sound increases and the strange eye rests more directly and minutely, the object becomes palpable. On either side of this immense moveable substance, which, as we have said before, is surronded by a swift current, are here and there eddies threatening instant destruction to everything within its yawning and awful reach. The mass of rock is covered with wild vegetation, which grows up thickly and spontaneously.

Whosoever will may come unto Jesus.

Death and Sleep.

Translated from the German of Von Krummacher.

The Angel of death and the Angel of Sleep, linked in a brotherly embrace, wandered over the earth. It was evening, and they laid themselves down on a hill, whence they thoughtfully surveyed the dwellings of man. A holy quiet prevailed, and the last toll of the evening bell had sounded from the neighboring village. Still and silent as their wont, sat both the beneficent spirits in a friendly embrace, when the beautiful night drew on. Then raising himself from his mossy couch, the Angel of Sleep scattered with light hand the invisible grains of slumber, which the evening breeze wafted to the still abodes of the weary husbandmen. Sweet sleep steals over the inhabitants of the cottages, over the old man who leans upon his staff, and over the young child in his cradle. The sick forget their pain, the mourning their sorrows, the poor their cares. All eyes are closed. But now, his employment ended, the benevolent Angel of Sleep turned toward his more serious brother.

"When the morning light appears," cried he, with incessant joy, "men will give thanks to me as a friend and a benefactor. Oh, what joy to bestow good in secret and unknown? How happy are we, the invisible messengers of the Good Spirit?" So spake the friendly Angel of Sleep.

The Angel of Death answered with quiet sadness, while tears, such as the immortals weep, stood in his large dark eyes. "Ah," said he, would that I, too, might receive those joyful thanks. The world calls me its enemy and the destroyer of its gladness. At my approach the mother holds her babe to her bosom, and frantically curses the power that robs her of the treasure of her life."

"Nay, my brother," replies the Angel of Sleep "Will not the good at their awakening acknowledge thee as their friend and benefactor, and gratefully bless thee? Are we not brothers and the messenger of one father?"

Thus he spake and the eyes of the Angel of Death gleamed more brightly as he tenderly enbraced his brother spirit.

The Sinner's Plea.

A man called at my house some time ago for charity—arrant beggar, I have no doubt. Thinking that the man's rags and poverty were real, I gave him a little money, some of my clothes, and a pair of shoes. After he had put them on and gone out, I thought, well, after all, I have done you a bad turn very likely, for you will not get so much money now as before, because you will not look so wretched an object. Happening to go out a quarter of an hour afterwards, I saw my friend; but he was not wearing the clothes I had given him, not he! Why, I should have ruined his business if I could have compelled him to look respectable. He had been wise enough to slip down an archway, take all the good clothes off and put his rags on again. Did I blame him? Yes, for being a rogue: but not for carrying on his business in a business-like manner. He only wore his proper livery, for rags are the livery of a beggar. The more ragged he looked, the more he would get.

Just so it is with you. If you are to go to Christ, do not put on your good doings and feelings, or you will get nothing; go in your sins, they are your livery. Your ruin is your argument for mercy, your poverty is your plea for heavenly alms, and your need is the motive for heavenly goodness.—C. H. Spurgeon.

ANTIDOTE TO SCEPTICISM.—I would recommend, as the best antidote to scepticism, a painstaking, reverential, prayerful study of the Bible itself. Infidelity is the offspring of ignorance and sin. It is quite surprising to find how few comparatively read the Bible for themselves; and, alas! how many hate the book because it condemns themselves. Men will read books about the Bible, but the Bible itself is too often neglected, as though it were a book too common, and therefore too unfashionable to deserve much attention. I would rather say, Let the book speak for itself! What can be more interesting and instructive than its narratives, whether contained in the Old Testament or New? How benificent are its precepts!—how calculated to bless all who obey them! How sublime and wonderfully adapted to our state as guilty sinners are its doctrines, revealing God's own method of pardon and His way of peace! Yet how few comparativly study these subjects with attention!—From "Things which Remain." New Year's Address to Teachers. By the Rev. C. R. Alford.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simeus, 85 Baronne street.

THE ISSUE.

What is to be the issue in our coming municipal and State elections? This is the vital question of the hour. The time is rapidly approaching when the answer must be given definitely, frankly, laconically. The mighty issues of the past are dead. Secession is a pronounced crime; slavery is abolished beyond the hope of restoration. Protective tariffs, internal improvements, and the national debt are questions too complicated and remote for these exciting times Something nearer, something more directly growing out of the late war will mark the division of parties; and in view of the intellectual condition of the great mass of our "new citizens," the issue must be a simple one, and expressed in terms so simple that the "wayfaring man though a fool" shall not err in his understanding thereof.

If we can rely upon the tone of the Southern press, and upon the speeches and letters of prominent men of the South, both of church and State, the spirit that will animate the Anti-union party in the South, will be opposition to the Radical party of the nation. Uniting all their forces with those of like political faith in the North, they will aim to cripple and destroy that party of patriots who have saved the nation and who are now in power. This will be at once the controlling motive and the absorbing purpose of the "reconstructed." But underlying this incentive are deeper and more selfish motives. To regain power in the councils of the nation, to retrieve lost fortunes, to undo what has been so well done, are the mighty reasons which will attract and bind together "every one that is in distress, and every one that is in debt, and every one that is discontented."

The issue therefore is a plain one, and involves the simple question, whether those who were in power when the war began, who plotted the destruction of the "great republic," who fought for its ruin during four bloody years, and who only ceased the strife when compelled to, or whether those, who flew to the rescue of the Union, who evinced their sublime patriotism on a thousand battle-fields, and who, in opposition to the whole power of the Executive, have given to the country the reconstruction bill, which secures justice and protection to all, shall control the future of this nation. Viewed from this standpoint, no loyal man can for a moment doubt as to his duty, and no emancipated, enfranchised man of color can hesitate as to which party he should link his political fortunes. With the latter class of our fellow-citizens, the issue is narrowed down to the simple question, WITH WHOM WILL YOU VOTE—WITH THOSE WHO FOUGHT TO KEEP YOU SLAVES, OR WITH THOSE WHO FOUGHT TO SET YOU FREE? This is the issue in a nut-shell. It is a plain statement; it is a palpable fact. Left to themselves, the men of color will remain true to their well-tried friends, but deceived by false statements, or alarmed by groundless fears, they may be induced to affiliate with those whose past promises have never been kept.

Nor is this the whole of the question under consideration. The living, supernal, practical issue, is, Shall the men of color be elected to office? This, their rightful privilege, cannot long be ignored. It is the logical sequence of their right to vote. It is one of the immunities of their citizenship. It is a demand which they themselves will insist upon, and they will affiliate with the party which first recognizes this, their rightful privilege. In the cities, especially, there are those of their number, whose intelligence, wealth, and social position entitles them to the suffrages of their fellow citizens, and who will fill not a few places of trust and power with credit to their own race and to the community in which they have been reared. Should both of the great parties in the South refuse to accord to the men of color nominations to office on their regular tickets, then the freedmen will build up a third party, and holding the balance of power, will turn the scale as their interests may dictate. The issue in the coming elections will therefore stand thus:

I. Shall the Republican party—which has saved the nation—or the Anti-Union-Southern-Northern Democratic party—which sought to destroy the Republic of our fathers—control the future of this country?

II. With which of these two great parties should the man of color affiliate?

III. Shall our now enfranchised fellow citizens of color, hold office?

City Affairs.

A perceptible improvement in municipal affairs has taken place since the appointment of a new Mayor. His Hon. Mayor Heath, has gained the well deserved approval of our citizens by his prompt action in relation to the levees, and the finances of New Orleans. The city having been rescued by his timely efforts from inundation, let him further watch with the utmost vigilance the finances of the city, and if possible, save us from municipal bankruptcy. And the Sanitary condition of New Orleans demands equally his immediate attention. At the earliest possible moment he should earnestly recommend to Gen. Sheridan such removals as will secure these ends. The present incumbents are incompetent to the duties of their office, and should be displaced for men whose loyalty and honesty are above reproach. As the municipal laws of this city are superceded by military law, let him form Bureaus of Finance and Health. Let him call around him those of our citizens whose intelligence, integrity and well known loyalty will immediately restore the credit of our city to public confidence, and relieve our people from the now too well-grounded fears of a coming epidemic. There are enough true, Union men to fill every position of trust and power, and they should be appointed.

The Old Flag Again.

Last week mention was made of the fact that Mr. Heath bad been appointed Mayor of the City of New Orleans. As soon as he had been qualified by taking the prescribed oath, his first official act was to direct that the stars and stripes be hoisted over the City Hall. Mr. Childs, the private secretary of the Mayor and some of his friends went upon the roof, run up the old flag, and saluted it with three hearty cheers. Every day since, the nimble fingers of the breezes have played with its starry folds. Some persons are in doubt whether the flag of our country was once hoisted while Mayor Monroe ruled, others believe that the flag was placed at half-mast as the funeral of a rebel soldier passed, and that it was properly displayed on one or two public occasions. We have now, however, a loyal man in office, who is not afraid to show the colors he works under.

Another thing showed that a "change" had taken place. A portrait of the rebel General R. E. Lee, which had long hung upon the walls of the Mayor's parlor was taken down and a fine oil painting of President Lincoln, put up in its place.

There is nothing like commencing aright, and Mr. Heath will have the thanks of the loyal people, not only of New Orleans, but of the whole country.

Editorial Items.

Bills.—To all our subscribers who have not remitted their subscription money for 1867. we have this week sent their bills, and we hope to hear from them without delay.

New Orleans Advocate.—Single copies of the New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at Duncan & Baker's Bookstore, corner of Camp and Lafayette.

The Second Quarterly Meeting of the Ames' M. E. Church will be held in the large hall of the Mechanics' Institute to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Information has been received in Washington that the Indians had captured and killed the entire garrison of Fort Beaufort on the Missouri. The savages numbered between two and three thousand. It is reported that Col. Ransom, in command, shot his wife to prevent her falling into the hands of the Indians. Previous to the massacre he had represented to his military superior that he was unable to defend the fort with his small force.

To Colored Voters.

FIRST PAPER.

Fellow Citizens:—In a wonderfully brief space of time you have been raised from the condition of bondsmen to the position of citizens and voters in this great Republic. You are called at once, and without previous preparation to the exercise of the noblest rights of freemen. Interests vast and weighty are entrusted to your hands and it is left for you by the judicious use of your new power to vindicate the confidence that has been reposed in you, or by your failure so to do, bring shame and confusion upon your friends. You are surrounded by those who have asserted your imbecility, and who, in the confidence of their own superiority, have already boasted that they will control your votes and make you subservient tools of your former masters. Under these circumstances you will not misunderstand our motives in presenting to your consideration subjects of gravest importance to you as a people. But before proceeding to more specific points, we would aid you to a true estimate of the dignity and importance of this new privilege, secured to you by the action of the national Congress.

1. In becoming voters you at once advance to the heighth of full citizenship under the most deirable government ever instituted among men. No great nation of the present or the past, has ever so nearly realized the true ideal of that most perfect form of government first indicated by God himself to his chosen people as our own at this present time. To obtain a republican government other nations have struggled through dark seas of blood in vain. They have toiled through weary centuries, hoping at last to reach what has come to you by a sudden revolution. So far as political privileges and the advantages of good government are concerned, you are at once on the topmost round of progress, and have suddenly leaped to the front rank of the world. In this respect there is nothing further to be desired, nothing more to which you can aspire. It only remains that you exercise the rare wisdom required by this high position, and that you prove yourselves worthy of the golden era on which you have entered.

2. The bestowal of the ballot secures the ultimate recognition of all your manhood rights. One of the darkest evils entailed on you by slavery, was the senseless prejudice it engendered; a prejudice which, in its unreasoning exactions, has hitherto hedged you from all the more honorable avocations and pursuits of life. It has denied the dignity of your humanity, pronounced you unfitted for any but menial occupations and asserting its own superiority, has condemned you as unworthy of the higher trusts and duties of humanity, and incapable of rising in intelligence and culture. Binding upon you the grievous burden of slavery, it has reproached you with your abject condition; denying you the loftier attributes of humanity, it has scorned your patient endurance; closing all paths of progress by iron gates and building aronnd you the walls of caste it has taunted you for not advancing. But this cruel fate is changed. The cords that bound you have snapped, the walls have crumbled, the iron gates have burst. You are not only free, but have all the incentives to honorable effort. The path of progress is before you, the arts and sciences welcome your approach, the learned professions are within your reach, fields of usefulness spread around you, all the higher impulses of humanity may now stir you to noble effort. So long as you hold the ballot you have the key which unlocks to you the high places of trust and power. It cannot, of course, give you an inherent fitness for these high positions, but it opens a free road upward to every excellence which you have the capacity to attain. With it, if you fail to rise, the fault will be your own.

3. The privilege of the ballot secures you ample power for self protection: No people who have an equal voice in the selection of their rulers need remain permanently under unjust proscription. If they only understand how to use their power they hold in their own hands the remedy for all civil disabilities. A powerful element, such as the present black population of the South, though not actually in the majority can by wise management, secure all its just rights. In the present emergency of reorganizing State governments and securing the guarantees of constitutional law you may, by uniting in full strength with the loyal whites, secure at once the full recognition of all your manhood rights. To prevent such a combination, which if formed, would be irresistable, your enemies are resorting to every effort. You are just entering upon the fiercest political conflict you ever saw; your destiny has been entrusted to your own hands, and if you now mistake, it will be most disastrous to your future prospects. Having aided to raise you to your present position, we wish in our next paper, to give you some clear, distinct notes of warning, and point out some of the duties that devolve upon you in this crisis.

From Pass Christian--A New Circuit Formed.

Saturday, March 23d, at Lake Pontchartrain, we took passage on the elegant coast steamer "Creole" for the above named place, where we arrived at midnight We started at 4 o'clock P. M. The sky was clear, the weather calm, and the ride upon the unruffled lake, at the close of such a day, yielded a pure delight, the enjoyment of which was enhanced as we contrasted the quiet and sublimity of the scene with the din, dust and demoralization of the great city we had but just left. We passed the Rigolet (which signifies "a water which flows both ways") and the mouth of the Pearl River, into Lake Borgne, just at dark, reaching Bay St. Louis at 9 o'clock, and the Pass, as above stated. There is now no hotel in Pass Christian, and we had to put up at a boarding-house, which we found filled to overflowing, and were obliged to "bunk" on the parlor-floor for the night.

The building owned by the M. E. Church South, and formerly used by them as a house of worship, was kindly opened for our accommodation, and the favor is hereby gratefully acknowledged. Sunday, we preached at 11 o'clock A. M., and again at 3 P. M., and at night administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and organized a class. It was the first time since the beginning of the war that the colored people of Pass Christian had met at the Lord's Table, so they informed us, and it was to them a season of interest and profit. Several white persons were in attendance, and received the Word gladly.

Monday morning we organized a Quarterly Conference, elected five stewards and five trustees, and Moses B. Avery and Samuel Chew were licensed to preach; Jeremiah Bolles, Wm. Swan, Edmund Parker and Wm. Thomas were licensed Exhorters. We organized the Pass Christian Circuit, which extends along the Gulf coast from Bay St. Louis to Biloxi, and embraces all intermediate and contiguous towns, and Moses B. Avery was appointed preacher in charge. Brother Avery, of his own free will, and unsolicited, comes to us from the African M. E. Church, as do also his wife and two daughters, young women grown. His mother was a free woman but was sold into bondage, and Moses was born a slave But while he was yet a child, his father bought both his and his mother's freedom, and he was raised a free man. He has a good education, reads both English and French, and has taught school under the Freedmen's Bureau. He was at one time local Editor of the New Orleans Tribune, —a freedmen's paper published in both French and English. His wife also reads and speaks both languages, and though a Creole and raised a Catholic, is now a zealous Protestant. It is truly providential that we have so good a man and such a family of "helpers" for the work. The pleasure of the Lord will surely prosper in their hands. And brother Chew will assist brother Avery on the Circuit.

Monday night we held Love-feast, at the close of which we obtained five subscribers to the N. O. Advocate, and took up a collection to assist in paying for the lot they have purchased on which to build a church. The society numbers 26 in all.

Pass Christian is one of the popular watering places on the Mississippi Gulf Coast—the first after passing Bay St. Louis. It stretches along the beach for more than two miles, and contains many beautiful houses and grounds, and a population of 1,000, which greatly increases during the hot season. It contains two churches—Catholic and Episcopal. The M. E. Church South and its votaries formerly held regular services, but they are now in a state of "suspended vitality." The large hotel, formerly the chief attraction of the place, has been purchased by the Catholics for a college, which is now in successful operation, and largely attended. There is also a young men's high school kept by Rev. Mr. Savage, of the Episcopal church, and also a young lady's school (Protestant) kept in the western part of town. In the rear of the city is a large cemetery, and near it an old Indian burying-ground, in the centre of which is a mound covered with large trees The town-site is most of it elevated, and the drive and walks dry and pleasant at all seasons of the year. The profusion of large and elegant shade trees is an attractive feature of the place. Live crabs, oysters, and a variety of salt-water fish are furnished at the market every morning, affording a wholesome, delicious diet, in striking contrast with the same articles as we often get them in the New Orleans markets. Pleasure excursions to the adjacent islands, some of which are in sight, are frequent. Hunting, fishing, walking, riding, are the exercises. Life here cannot be monotonous to either the permanent or transient resident. Nature herself gives variety. For at one time all is peaceful and serene. The evening zephyrs sigh among the trees, gentle wavelets murmur music as they die along the strand; Night walks forth in silent beauty, and a calm Ocean mirrors the moon and all her shining train. Again, the elements are at war. The heavens are black, a storm of wrath is gathering. God's voice is heard upon the waters. His thunder shakes the earth and sea. The mighty winds are loosened from His hand. Ocean is into a tempest wrought, and majestic waves, like an army of traveling mountains, walk the bosom of the troubled deep, and break in grandeur on the shore! It seems an appropriate place for a seat of learning, an attractive spot to the invalid, and a quiet retreat to the worn and weary worldling. Those who have tried it say that here one may court the Muses, acquire wisdom, and regain lost health. Let all concerned "take notice and govern themselves accordingly."

Since the above was written a change has come over the spirit of the people worthy of record. At the close of the meeting on Monday night an appointment was given out for preaching Tuesday night; but only an hour before the time for the Tuesday-night meeting to commence the house was closed against us, and we were without a place of meeting. The people however met at the residence of Bro. Avery. Bro. Henry Green had come from New Orleans, and notwithstanding the very unfavorable circumstances, there was a good meeting. Several persons came forward for prayers, and three joined the church.

And here it is proper to record another item of history. Many years ago, when Bro. Green, (mentioned above) was a slave, he hired his time for one dollar per day, and came here to work. He was then a preacher, and being zealous for God, he at once commenced laboring for the salvation of his fellow-slaves. But they had no place of worship, no time to build, and no money to buy one. However, "where there is a will there is a way," and so it proved in this instance, and a place of worship was secured as follows: A friend gave them a lot on which to build, another gave the timber, (standing in the tree) for a house. Bro. Green found a few faithful souls, who, with himself and some "sinner friends" engaged, after working all day for their masters, to work half the night for the Lord. So when the day's work was done, he, with his "working band" of fellow-servants, axes in hand, under cover of night, repaired to the forrest, and kindling each man his torch, began the work; some felling trees, some cutting poles, some riving "boards," (shingles,) some lining and scoreing timber, while Bro. Green wielded the broad-axe and literally "hewed to the line," as he is wont to do spiritually with the axe of the Gospel. And now as they toil,

"Loud sounds the axe, redoubling strokes on strokes."

Their sturdy blows startled the stillness of the night, and far-waked the echoes of the grand old woods, while their huge torches turned darkness into day! Thus night after night, the good work went on and mingled with all, might be heard "their songs in the night, the voice of thanksgiving and melody."—Thus they wrought for God while others slept, and sowed "good seed," while "the enemy sowed tares." At last all the material was ready, when at night, it was carried to the spot, and at night the rude temple arose, "a house built unto the Lord," and to whom it was "an acceptable offering," while to the humble contrite ones it was "the place of His glory." And there, for years, they worshiped the God of their fathers, and saw their fellow-servants converted, many of whom are now in heaven, and others still on the way.

The house was built of pine logs, and lasted well, and might still have served them for a place of worship, but at the close of the war it was taken from them (as was, also the ground,) sold, and was torn down, and removed. They are now paying $300 for a piece of land for a church, and are expecting the missionary society to help them build. Shall they be disappointed?

We had intended giving a brief sketch of the early history of the region embraced in the Pass Christian circuit, but have not time or space in this, and must soon close. Here we have met with Major G. W. Corliss, formerly of New Haven, Conn., who is the agent of the Freedmen's Bureau. He is a gentleman and a scholar, a true and tried friend of the freedman, and deeply interested in everything that pertains to their welfare. Would that all who are employed in the service of the government, especially in the Bureau Department were such men as he. Here, too, we have made the acquaintance of Dr. Wm. Caldwell, of Ohio, formerly a surgeon in the federal army, in which service he lost his health, and is a confirmed invalid. How many such there are—living martyrs to liberty; men who escaped the sword and ball upon the field, yet retired from the contest mortally wounded, and whose prolonged existance is only a lingering death. God bless them; and may they live forever in that land, where there is no more war, neither sickness or death.

Brother Avery will at once proceed to visit all the appointments in the Circuit, and organize societies, and we expect to hear from him a good report. Brother Green, who has already done so much for the cause here, will continue to visit the place and help the brethren.

B.

Pass Christian, Miss, March 27, 1867.

Mississippi Items.

The church at Jackson will be reopened on Sabbath, March 31st. Brother Proctor, the Pastor, has been very energetic and persevering in the work of rebuilding.

At Vicksburg, the church is prospering under the labors of Brother Baker. Revival influence prevails, and congregation increases. The school in the church, taught by Mother Brown and Sister Dowling is progressing finely. Taken altogether, the prospects of our work there are very encouraging.

We are indebted to Rev. Mr. Frazier and his corps of teachers of the U. P. Mission, for a pleasant home while there. They are doing a good work in educating the children. Miss Lindsay, who has an interesting school composed of the more advanced scholars, invited us to attend a prayer meeting which she holds once a week in her school-room after the close of the school. The room was well filled with children and young people, and great interest was manifested. Several have been converted and others are seeking the way. This estimable woman is doing a truly missionary work.

There are four ladies teaching under the Northwestern Freedmen's Aid Commission, who have large and well-conducted schools.

The way Southern people favor the education of the Freedmen and treat their own people who engage in that work, is shown in an effort of that sort recently made by the Episcopal minister at Vicksburg. He was going to have a school under the patronage of himself and his own congregation. A teacher was obtained who was the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman, and a native of the South. Such a one must have been unexceptionable as to antecedents. When she came the question was, what to do with her? The Rev. gentleman kept her at his house a day or two, greatly to the mortification of his better half, until he could get rooms for her, when he set her up to live alone. Not a female member of his parish will speak to her; and for society she has to go to the Sectarian Yankees.

Southern people may talk as much as they please about educating the Freedmen, but so long as they ostracize every one who teaches them, they can do nothing. The colored people must look for instruction to those who can afford to be independent of this bitter, hateful, develish spirit that now dwells in the hearts of those who control what is called society in the South.

General News.

Another Conflagration on the River.

BURNING OF THE STEAMBOAT ALABAMA.

The steamer Alabama, which left Shreveport on Friday afternoon last, with a cargo consisting of nearly twelve hundred bales of cotton, and about one hundred passengers, caught fire early yesterday, it is supposed by means of sparks dropped in the cotton from the pipe of a deck-hand, and in five minutes was totally enveloped in flames. At once, the wildest confusion prevailed.

The boat was at the time nearly opposite the Roman crevasse, in St. James parish, and was, upon the breaking out of the flames, at once headed for the right bank. A landing was effected instantly, and the entire stern of the boat was at that time enveloped in flames. Here ensued a general rush for the stage planks, and in the confusion several of the passengers, including one lady, were pushed into the river. They were all, however, rescued by the officers of the boat, and we are happy to state that not a life was lost. Had the landing been half a mile below, where the current would have subjected the boat to the risk of suction from the Roman crevasse, there is a probability that many lives would have been lost. As it was, the suffering among the passengers was extreme. A cold wind was blowing, and many ladies were obliged to escape, having on nothing save their under garments. Fortunately, the steamer J. M. Sharp, Capt Dugas, came by an hour after the passengers had landed, and, rounding to, brought the unfortunate travelers to their destination.

The kindness and hospitality of the officers of the Sharp is spoken of in high terms.

We are indebted for the above facts to Mr. M. D. Ball, of Bexar county, Texas, one of the passengers. One curious fact in this gentleman's experience during the conflagration is, that he was obliged to leave his stateroom in such haste as to forget his six-shooter, lying underneath his pillow. After landing, he had the pleasure of hearing it discharged by the heat of the flames.

Among the incidents of the disaster was the gallant act of Col. Johnson, of Texas, also a passenger, who, while endeavoring to save three thousand dollars in gold which he had on the boat, was appealed to for assistance by an aged lady, a perfect stranger to him. He gave up at once all thought of the money and carried the lady ashore, and was unable to return to the boat.

A poodle-dog belonging to one of the passengers had a portion of his tail burned off, but lives to tell the tale, which, however, he is no longer able to unfold.

The Alabama was built in 1860, in New Albany, Ind., was principally owned by Capt. Lee, her commander, and was, we learn, insured for $40,000 in a St. Louis office.

The money in the hands of the clerk of the boat was saved, but it is reported that all the books and papers belonging to him were lost.

Major Stevens, paymaster, United States army, had a safe on board containing $5000. A guard will, in consequence, be sent immediately to the wreck.

The boat and cargo will prove a total loss.—N. O. Crescent.

The New York General Assembly has passed a bill for the construction, in New York city, of a "three tier" railroad from the Battery to Central Park. The plan is to purchase enough ground in the rear of the building upon the proposed line for a double track. Three roads will then be built: First, one in a cut deep enough to receive a train drawn by steam, to be carried under the cross streets, and to be used for freight only. Second, a surface road, upon which cars are to be drawn by horses, and to be used as the surface roads now are. Third, an elevated track, sufficiently high to be carried over the cross streets upon arches, and to be used for the through passengers, stopping at but three or four fixed points. It is proposed that the road shall connect up town with the Hudson and Harlem roads, and distribute freight and passengers wherever required.

Letter from Gov. Patton.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Montgomery, Ala., March 17, 1867.

Hon. Albert Voorhies, Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana, New Orleans:

A heavy press of business has prevented an earlier reply to your letter of the 6th instant. You perhaps have seen in the public prints a letter which I wrote a short time since, on the general political situation. I sent you a copy of the Montgomery Advertiser which contains the letter.

It seems to me that it is the true feeling of the Southern people to contribute their best influence, in favor of an early organization of their respective States, in accordance with the requirements of the recent reconstruction act. Congress claims the right to control this whole question. In my humble judgment it is unwise to contend longer against its power, or to struggle further against its repeatedly expressed will.

I am clearly of the opinion that an appeal to the courts would accomplish no good. If a test case were brought before the judiciary, it would open up a series of the most complicated questions which perhaps ever engaged the attention of any tribunal.

Questions of such vast magnitude could not speedily be disposed of. They would necessarily require much time; and before a conclusion could be reached the Southern States, in all probability, would be fully reorganized under the congressional plan. Indeed, the supplemental bill provides specifically for a reorganization; and the only political question is, who will participate in the work. If the many do not co-operate in the movement and give it a proper shape, the few will carry it to completion, and there is no telling what discrimination may be made against the non-actionists. Very respectfully,

R. M. PATTON,
Governor of Alabama

BOOTH'S DIARY.—The diary of Booth, concerning which so much has been said of late, is a small pocket memorandum book, in which are entries concerning a variety of subjects. It contains accounts of expenses; entries of social visits, and statements of various matters concerning his flight after the assassination. It contains a description of his terrible condition the Friday subsequent to Mr. Lincoln's death, being then with a broken leg alone and an outcast in the Potomac swamps, and this is evidently written in a perfect agony of feeling.

The missing pages may have been torn out by Booth on various occasions, or cut out by some of the soldiers through whose hands it passed, or, as Butler believes, removed by some one in high executive circles. It cannot be positively stated that either the war department, nor the judge advocate's department, know anything of the book in any other than its present condition, and the same is true of Mr. Bingham's knowledge of it.

Rev. Ebenezer Hayward.

The numerous friends of Brother Hayward will be glad to read the following favorable notice from the Natchitoches Times, of his labors in that place. The incident referred to, occurred sometime since, and has just come to our knowledge.

PASS HIM AROUND—A WORTHY ACT—A short time since, a colored woman became possessed of a considerable amount of money, and proposed to a colored minister, a resident here, to take charge of it. The minister, the Rev. E. Hayward, being a man of intelligence, knowing that the condition and situation of the woman did not justify her having come by such an amount honestly, immediatly conveyed the intelligence to Maj. James Cromie, Agent of the Freemen's Bureau at this place, who took such steps in the premises as to cause the owner of the money to recover it—by advertising. The owner, on reading the advertisement in our paper, came forward and after identifying the sum recovered his lost package.

Had Mr. Hayward desired, he could have kept the money and used it, but he had the gratifying pleasure of seeing it returned to its owner.

We have noticed this Mr. Hayward particularly, since his arrival and we confess that he wields a powerful influence over the Freedmen here, and the change in the moral condition of the Freedmen is truly astonishing. He teaches them to become honest, industrious and religious, and his teachings have been heeded to a perfect success.

Our brethren of the press will please pass him around, so that his worthy example may be followed by others whose duty it is to teach the freedmen their true condition.

RELIGIOUS WORSHIP.—We copy below and warmly commend an article by the Lady Editor of the Natchitoches Times It will suit other localities:

We hope that all our citizens—independent of slight denominational differences of opinion,—will unite in endeavoring to secure to Natchitoches this desirable privilege. Regular church service is the greatest blessing a community can enjoy Regarding religion only in the light of worldly utility, it stands pre-eminent as a civilizing and refining social agent. A hundred purifying influences flow from the divine sanctuary—the very decorum it enjoins, the calm and passion quieting hush that pervades it—the music, bearing the spirit upward on its own soaring wings, the social sympathy engendered by the weekly "gathering together"—all these,—and many other delicate and subtle influences (independent of the lessons from the pulpit) make regular church service a privilege to be greatly desired by every community—and to be purchased, if need be, by the sacrifice of habits of unnecessary extravagance and pernicious self indulgence.

We, the undersigned Officers, Attendants, &c., at the U. S. Marine Hospital, contribute toward the erection of an "Orphan's Home," the following sums:

Dr. Harris	$15,00	Sallie Washington	50
Dr. Hershey	10,00	Martha Robinson	2.00
H. L. Downs	5,00	Kate Henry	1,00
Samuel Angell	5,00	Alfred Hodge	1,00
S. L. Mendes	10,00	Charlotte Hobbs	1,00
James Fisher	10,0	Hub. McAwaine	1,00
R. C. Baylor	10,00	J. K. Carrol	1,00
Elias Young	1,00	Peter Young	1,00
Charlotte Williams	1,00	Mrs. James	2,00
James Lewis	2,00	Mrs Lathrop	2,00
Manuel Thompson	1,50	Mrs. Lego	2,00
Isham Hill	1,00	Mrs. Lynn	1,00
Joe Valentine	1,00	Mrs. Conlin	1,00
Charles Hopkins	1,00	Wm. Hilbert	4,00
Jack Robinson	1,00	Mdme. L. DeMortie	5,00
Benjamin Tolbert	1,00	Garland Jackson	2,00
Reuben Hobbs	1,00	Edward Kirkham	5,00
Winnie Johnson	1,00	Julia Stephens	1,00
John Richardson	2,00	Francis Johnson	1,00
Emily Williams	1,00	Eliza Harris	1,00
Mary Sanders	2,00	Abraham Nelson	2,50
Maria Biddle	1,00
Pierre Fontainette	2,00	Total	$124,50
Cecilia Jones	1,00

The Number of Children in New Orleans.

Subjoined is a statement of the number of children, white and colored, in New Orleans, between the ages of six and eighteen years. The statement has been compiled from the returns of the board of State Assessors, Messrs. M. M. Feeney, E. A. Bozonier, Julius Falda and John C. Golding. It is not overpraising these gentlemen to say that we have never had a better board of assessors in New Orleans. They have performed their arduous and responsible duties with intelligence, judgment and fidelity, and with an impartiality rarely equaled by any of their predecessors:

Enumeration of Children between the Ages of Six and Eighteen.

City Dis.	Rep. Dis.	White Boys	White Girls	Col. Boys	Col. Girls	Total in Wards	Total in dis.
First	1st Rep.	1,52	1,739	329	444	4,0 3	.....
...	2d "	2,380	2,525	871	980	6,756	.....
...	3d "	2,965	2,741	1,988	1,979	9,963	20,452
Second	4th "	2,656	2,6 0	1,352	1,496	8,134	.....
...	5th "	1,911	1,961	802	913	5,587	.....
...	6th "	1,909	1,712	1,025	953	5,602	19,323
Third	7th "	1,690	1,657	1,225	1,503	6,149	.....
...	8th "	1,375	1,555	792	1,118	4,8 8	.....
...	9th "	1,990	2,381	1,179	1,405	6,972	17,957
Fourth	10th "	2,934	3,482	656	1,058	8,19	8,199
Total	.....	21,358	22,411	10 322	11,861	65,952	65,952

White boys 21,358
White girls 22,411
Colored boys 10,322
Colored girls ..... 11,861—65,952 Children.

WHITE CHILDREN.		COLORED CHILDREN.
Boys	21,358	Boys	10 322
Girls	22,411	Girls	11,861
	43,769		22,183

Whites 43,769
Colored 22,183
65,952 Children

Freedmen's Savings and Trust Company.

Principal office 87 Cedar Street, New York.

STATEMENT FOR THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY, 1867.

Augusta, Ga.	$ 1,067 66
Baltimore, Md.	13,962 54
Beaufort, S. C.	77,029 50
Charleston, S. C.	19,525 18
Houston, Texas	347 35
Huntsville	272 00
Jacksonville, Fla.	2,867 49
Louisville, Ky.	6,616 00
Memphis, Tenn.	1,973 1[illegible]
Mobile, Ala.	5,635 96
Nashville, Tenn.	2,779 41
Newbern, N. C.	640 00
New Orleans, La.	10,391 65
New York City	3,870 40
Norfolk, Va.	8,185 89
Richmond, Va.	1,967 45
Savannah, Ga.	3,370 43
Tallahassee, Fla.	808 31
Vicksburg, Miss.
Washington, D. C.	6,672 40
Wilmington, N. C.	1,750 75
Total	$169,634 55
Total drafts for the month	142,212 58
Excess of deposits over drafts	$27,421 97
Total deposits	$1,459,380 75
Total drafts	1,083,129 48
Balance due depositors	$376,251 27

M. T. HEWITT, President.
D. L. LAMBERT, Secretary.

Official.

HEADQUARTERS FIFTH MILITARY DISTRICT,
New Orleans, La., March 28, 1867.

General Orders No. 7.

[Extract]

* * * * * * *

2. It is hereby announced for the information and guidance of all concerned, that no elections for State, Parish, Municipal or Judicial offices will be held in the State of Louisiana, until the provisions of the law of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States," and of the acts supplementary thereto, shall have been complied therewith. Until elections held in accordance with those acts, the law of the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, approved March 15, 1867, which provides for the continuance in the performance of their duties of those persons whose term of office would otherwise have expired, will govern all cases except those which may be specially acted upon at these headquarters.

* * * * * *

By command of Major Gen. P. H. Sheridan.

GEO. L. HARTSUFF,
Assistant Adjut. Gen.

Official:
GEORGE LEE, 1st Lt. 21st U. S. Inf.,
Acting Assistant Adjut. Gen.

Grand Jury Impanelled—Charge of Judge Howe.

The following gentlemen were impanneled in the First District Court yesterday as the grand inquest of the parish for the quarter ending on the 1st of July: J. J. Tarleton, foreman; N. Olivier, G. W. Palfrey, E. Nott, A. Forstall, W. Holgrave, B. Munday, A. C. Delery, R. Strong, A. Prados, Jr., E. C. Abadie, S. Blossman, Dennis Downing, P. P. Labarre, L. J. Courten and J. E. Smith.

The jury having been sworn, was charged as follows by Judge Howe:

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury:—You have been selected and sworn to inquire into the commission of crimes, offenses and misdemeanors within the limits of the parish of Orleans, or within one hundred yards outside of those limits.

It is incumbent on the court to give you instructions as to the nature of your duties and to call your attention to such matters of public importance as may properly come within the sphere of your action.

It is hardly necessary for me to tell you, as intelligent men, that your investigations must be impartial. It is due to the obligations of your oaths and to the good name of the community you represent that all personal bias, all political feeling, and all prejudice should be strictly excluded from your deliberations. The criminal law of Louisiana, if rightly construed and truthfully executed, protects the liberty and property, and secures the safety of every person, without regard to race or condition. And it is for the Grand Jury, in the first instance, to enforce the law with all earnestness and candor.

You cannot, of course, determine the guilt or innocence of the person accused before you, but you are to ascertain whether or not it has been made probable that the accused has committed the offense imputed to him, and to do this you ought to be well persuaded of the truth of any indictment you may find, so far as the evidence before you goes.

The officers who represent the State will assist you in your inquest. Allow me, however, to call your attention to some special topics.

The practice of dueling seems to have been revived of late in this community. We do not require any arguments now-a-days to prove its cruel absurdity. The law of Louisiana has made it a crime and defined its punishment. If death ensue from one of these barbarous encounters, the survivor is, by law, simply a murderer, and all seconds, agents and abettors are accessories before the fact. As for that class of people who attempt to acquire a cheap reputation for courage by arranging duels, with a view to the encounter being prevented, they are provided for by enactments prescribing fine and imprisonment.

I am required by law to call your attention to the kindred offense of carrying concealed weapons, and I do this as something more than a mere matter of form. Our Supreme Court has declared this law to be unconstitutional, and Mr. Justice Preston used this language in regard to it:

"This law becomes absolutely necessary to counteract a vicious state of society growing out of the habit of carrying concealed weapons, and to prevent bloodshed and assassinations committed on unsuspecting persons."

The law, as it now stands, is as follows:

Whoever shall carry a weapon or weapons concealed on or about his person, such as pistols, bowie knives, dirks, or any other dangerous weapon, shall, on conviction, suffer fine or imprisonment or both, at the discretion of the court, and it shall be the duty of the judges of the district courts, in this State, to charge the grand jury, especially as to this section: Provided in no case the fine exceed five hundred dollars and imprisonment three months in the Parish Prison.

It will be your duty so far as lies within your province and power, to see that this law is not despised.

I would ask your earnest attention to our laws on the subject of bribery, corruption, oppression, extortion and misdemeanor in office. Such crimes seem to flourish with peculiar vigor in times of change and trouble like these, and it is painful to observe with what indifference the public regard their existence. Yet they are, to the reflecting mind, the saddest of all crimes, for they signify a loosening of the bonds of honor, or decay of the social conscience. In the name, therefore, of the community whom you are now representing and serving, I beg you to consider this important topic, and act with vigor and fearlessness in any cases of this sort which may come to your knowledge.

It is made my duty to charge you specially with reference to the statutes relative to trespasses on the public lands, enacted by the legislature of 1855. If there be any cases of such trespass within your jurisdiction, you will, of course, not fail to give them proper attention.

The same obligation rests upon me, in reference to the statute of 1855, respecting obstructions of navigable streams.

In the same law a punishment is provided for any tampering with the levees. You will be quite sure to feel a lively interest in this latter subject, at this time especially, and will require no urging to indict any violation of this important statute.

I am required by law to charge you specially in the statute of 1855, in regard to lotteries, and the statute of 1866, in reference to licensing the sale of lottery tickets. By the first of these laws the setting up of any lottery in this State, and the disposal of any property, real or personal, by lottery, is prohibited under the pain of fine and imprisonment. The fines, if any, are to go one-half to the Parish and one-half to the Charity Hospital of New Orleans. It is my duty to charge you in regard to this law, it is equally yours to enforce it, under the obligations of your solemn oaths.

It may seem an ungracious task for you to indict the managers of those lotteries in New Orleans, which have lately been drawn for charitable purposes, but I fail to find that charitable lotteries or their promoters are exempt from the action of this law. You will therefore feel bound to indict all cases of violation of this statute within the year preceding your action—without regard to the announced object of the lottery. Charity is an excellent thing, but a due regard for enacted law comes first in the list of social duties.

The law of 1866 provides for licensing the sale of tickets in foreign lotteries, a large license fee is imposed for the benefit of the State on the vendor—and a stamp duty on each ticket. There are three reasons at least why you should enforce this law with zeal—first, because it is a late law which no one can pretend has become obsolete; second, because its proper enforcement will help to fill the depleted treasury of the State; and third, because the honor of the State is pledged to protect the dealers who obey the law, by prosecuting those who do not. It would be ridiculous indeed if by our neglect, the dealers who violate this statute should, virtually, make money at the expense of the dealers who comply with the requirements of the law.

I will not detain you, gentlemen, with reference to any special subjects. You have the thanks of the court, in advance, for your labors, which will be arduous and at the same time most honorable. I am not unmindful of the peculiar circumstances under which we meet to-day, nor of the fears for the future of this community, which seem to mystify the minds of many. There are those who seem to see in the issue of recent national events an increase of crime, of confusion of civil tumult. Permit me to think they are mistaken. I am so sanguine as to believe that history never goes backward; that the doing of justice will always result in final good even though it create a temporary inconvenience, and that therefore we may, from this time, look for the progress of our community in all the elements of a true civillzation—and prominent among those elements in the imperfect condition of human nature will be an enlightened grand jury, pursuing its inquiries without fear, favor or affection.

Bills Vetoed by the President.

The following is a complete list of the bills vetoed by the President during the Thirty-ninth Congress, and of the bills which were passed over the veto, and those which became laws without the Presidential signature:

First Session.—To enlarge the power of the Freedmen's Bureau; vetoed Feb. 19, 1866.

To protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and furnish the means of their vindication; vetoed and passed April 9, 1866, over veto.

For the admission of the State of Colorado into the Union; vetoed May, 1866.

To enable the New York and Montana Iron Mining and Manufacturing Company to purchase a certain amount of the public lands not now in market; vetoed June, 1866.

To continue in force and to amend an act entitled an act to establish a bureau for the relief of freedmen and refugees and for other purposes; vetoed; passed July 16, 1866, over veto.

For the admission of the State of Nebraska into the Union; not signed; failed through the adjournment of Congress.

Second Session.—To regulate the elective franchise in the District of Columbia; vetoed; passed January 8, 1367, over veto.

To admit the State of Colorado into the Union; vetoed January 18, 1367.

For the admission of the State of Nebraska into the Union; vetoed; passed February 9, 1867, over veto.

To provide for the more efficient government of the insurrectionary States; vetoed; passed March 2,1867, over veto.

To regulate the tenure of office; vetoed; passed March 2, 1867, over veto.

Bills which became laws without the President's signature, the constitutional limit of ten days having expired without their return:

To repeal section 13 of "an act to suppress insurrection, to punish treason and rebellion, to seize and confiscate the property of rebels, and for other purposes, approved July 17, 1862; became a law January 23, 1867.

To regulate the franchise in the territories of the United States; became a law January 31, 1867.

To regulate the duties of the clerk of the House of Representatives in preparing for the organization of the House and for other purposes; became a law February 20, 1867.

To declare the sense of an act entitled "an act to restrict the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, and to provide for the payment of certain demands for quartermaster's stores and subsistence supplies furnished to the army of the United States;" became a law February 22, 1867.

Recapitulation—Vetoes, 10; pocket vetoes, 1; laws passed over veto, 6; vetoes sustained, 4; became laws without signature, 4.

The Atlanta New Era contains the following from the pen of an eminent jurist of Georgia, on a matter of great interest at this time:

WHO ARE AFFECTED BY THE AMENDMENT. It is believed our people do not generally understand who are affected by the Constitutional Amendment, and excluded from office, and from the ballot-box by the late bill.

The following persons are excluded:

1. All persons who, before the war, were members of Congress or officers of the United States, and afterwards engaged in the rebellion.

2. All persons who, prior to the war, were executive, legislative or judicial officers of the State, and took the like oath, and engaged in the rebellion.

This embraces governors, members of the Legislature, and judicial officers, from a judge of the Supreme Court down to a justice of the peace, who, at any time, held the office and took the oath, and afterwards engaged in the rebellion.

Who, then, are not excluded?

1. No one is excluded because he held an office under the Confederate States, from President down, if he does not fall within one of the excluded classes above specified. The simple fact that he was a Confederate senator or a Confederate general, or that he took an oath to support the Constitution of the Confederate States, does not exclude him.

2. No State or county officer is excluded on account of his having held the office and taken the oath and engaged in the rebellion, if he were not an executive, legislative or judicial officer; therefore, neither a lawyer, sheriff, clerk, tax collector, receiver, county treasurer, coronor, surveyor, constable, or road commissioner is excluded.

3. As no man under twenty-one years of age, when the war began, held any such office as disqualified, and none of them took the oath to support the Constitution of the United States during the war, and as the war commenced nearly six years ago, no man in Georgia under twenty-seven years of age can be excluded.

4. Militia officers are not excluded.

5. The whole mass of our people who fall within none of the excluded classes above mentioned are free from the disqualification, and may vote and hold office in the State without regard to the part they took in the war.

BOOKS.

Greeley's American Conflict.

No doubt every man desires a history of our late war. But the question arises, whose work is the best—the most reliable? Who, in writing, has been the least swayed by prejudice or partizan feelings? Who has given the greatest amount of information and the most facts in the fewest works? We answer, Horace Greeley.

No other history of our war has received such compliments from literary men, both of our own and foreign countries. And these, too, regardless of party. The Democratic press has been loud in its praises of this work. The New York World, speaking of it, says: "It seems to answer the question, 'what they killed each other for?'" It also adds, "Mr. Greeley has seized the true point of view from which the history ought to be written. He has thereby done a service like that rendered by a speaker in a debate, who correctly lays open the nature of the question. * * With all his shortcomings, Mr. Greeley is the best historian of the war."

The N. O. Picayune says: "Those who are well poised in their judgment, and desire to hear the other side before forming their conclusions as to cotemporaneous history, can have an opportunity to do so by subscribing for Mr. Greeley's History of the Great Conflict. Mr. Greeley is the fairest among our worst enemies. No man can get a fair view by reading the reports of one side only, and Mr. G. presents the most candid one from the opposite side."

Mr. A. Simons, General News Agent, 85 Baronne st., in this city, is the agent for this work, where subscription books are now open and where many volumes have been furnished to our citizens.

EFFECTS OF HABIT.—A letter from Paris, of the 22d January, says that a body of peasants, from the depths of Siberia, have come to Paris and put up wooden cabins like those of their own country, near the Palace of the Exposition. "They suffer horribly from the mildness of our climate. The other day, when it was freezing hard enough to split rocks, one of them cried out with a melancholy air: 'Oh, my God, when will it get cool here? Another thinking it midsummer, arrayed himself in a calico gown. And a third thus wrote to his father: 'The heat is excessive at Paris; would you believe it? For eight days that we have been here my nose has not been froze a single time!"

Ladies' Department.

Les Pensees.

BY M. ANNESLEY.

When we ask for peace, we must watch that we do not disturb our own peace—all our sorrows do not come from without—we sometimes make our own troubles.

The best kind of controversy in these days is, to present the truth of the opposite error, then God receives his own glory. This saves labor and temper.

We hear people complain of want of sleep—well, we know it is the gift of God. But did you ever inquire if you had earned your sleep? "The rest of the laboring man is sweet."

Faith takes a new spring after it has passed a severe test. Proved faith is worth something, both to ourselves and others.

We remember our own faults, and would like others to know that we had not forgotten them; yet we would not like to be reminded of them, but believe they were forgiven and forgotten.

Trouble always takes the darkest shade at night, even from David's time to the present; but the morning dawn often dissipates many fears, and lightens our hopes for a better termination than we gloomily expected.

A long state of discipline is oft-times needful to save people fully, who have strong, impetuous, impulsive wills.—And they are tempted to inquire, why is it so with me? But the calm, subdued spirit, the fruit of patient faith, is enabled to praise God for all the painful process.

If the hand of the diligent maketh rich, then the folded hands of the idle must make poor. Not only wealth, but happiness comes with industry.

Though you have failed many, many times to do well, and not have even succeeded to please yourself in doing right, yet continue to strive, for every attempt is nearer to a success.

Never be discouraged with yourself as long as God bears with you, in bestowing upon you time and opportunity. His mercy and love are infinite, so be of good cheer.

MARRIED.

By Rev. Henry Green, at the residence of the bride, Mr. Wesley Thomas to Mrs. Lucinda Miller.

No Cards.

Information Wanted.

Information wanted of John O'Hare; when last heard from lived in Sacramento county, California, 7 miles from Sacramento City, between the upper and lower Stockton roads. Any information will be thankfully received by his son, PATRICK O'HARE, care of New Orleans ADVOCATE.

The Sacramento Christian Advocate and Sacramento Daily Union please copy

PERSONAL.—Any one knowing the whereabouts of Mrs. Winnie Daniels, colored, living in Henderson county, Kentucky, who formerly resided with Mr. Lazarus Powell, will confer a great favor to a distressed sister, who wishes to know her residence. Persons knowing anything of the above person will please communicate with the undersigned, at the First Street Methodist Church, care of Mr. Henry Green, Pastor.

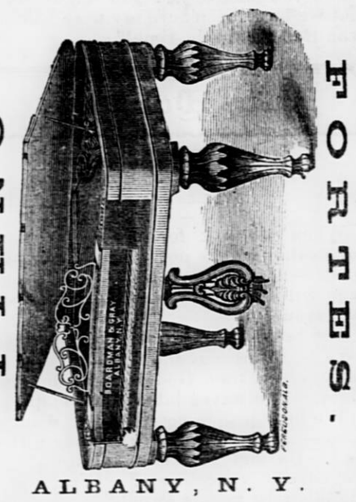
Papers in vicinity will confer a favor by copying the above.

MRS EMILY LEWIS.
Formerly Miss Emily Primus.

ZION'S REFRESHING SHOWERS.—A new Revival Hymn and Tune Book, containing nearly 300 Hymns and Tunes, principally used by Whitfield, Wesley, Knapp, Nettleton, Finney, Carl, Hammond, and other Evangelists, in their revival meetings. It is one of the best books ever published for such services as well as for Sunday Schools and Social Meetings. Price, paper covers, 30 cents, $3 25 per dozen, $25 per 100. Board Covers, 35 cents, $4 per dozen, $30 per 100. Cloth Embossed, gilt, 50 cents, $5 per dozen $40 per 100. Mailed at the retail price. Compiled by Horace Walters, Author of "S. S. Bell," Nos. 1 and 2, "Choral Harp," "Day School Bell," "Athenæum Collection," "Christian Melodist," etc.
Just published by C. M. TREMAINE,
64:66 No. 481 Broadway, N. Y

Grovesteen & Co,
PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS.
499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit at the World's Fair, over the best makers from London Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at the American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte.
1-42y1



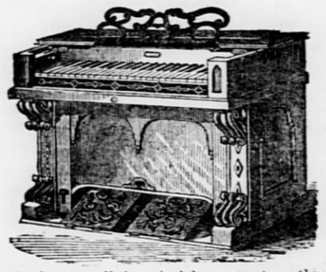
THE LITTLE CORPORAL
Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be
The Best Children's Paper in America!
Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by
ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.
After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.
The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My14-1y

HALLOWED SONGS,
FOR PRAYER MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.
A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100.
PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.
feb. 8 1y Cincinnati.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of
BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

PIANO FORTES.



ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S
Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

PATENT ROTARY YOKE. JONES & CO. TROY, N.Y.

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,
JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S
LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER-CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER-CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

BROOKLYN
White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that NO Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.
Corner of Gold street.
FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

EGYPTIAN CORN!

Auspicium melioris ævi. Bona fide. Quid pro quo!

The subscriber offers to farmers throughout the country the

EGYPTIAN CORN,

which, upon trial, was found to ripen, planted even the last of July. It is estimated, from its very prolific qualities, to yield 150 bushels per acre, and weighs, by sealed measure, sixty-five pounds to the bushel. This corn was produced by some procured direct from Mr. Jones, our consular agent, directly on his return from Egypt.

It needs no different culture from that of other varieties, and in the South two crops can be raised in one season on the same ground. It grows in the form of a tree, and thirty-four ears have grown on one stalk, and will average from five to fifteen. For domestic use it is unparalleled. When ground and properly bolted, it is equal in color and fineness to wheaten flour. As a forage crop, by sowing in drills or broadcast, for early feed, there is no kind of corn so well adapted to milch cows, and none that will yield half the value in stalk or corn.

It can be successfully grown in any State.

I give the most satisfactory references that the corn is, in every respect, what I represent it to be; and further, I am the only person throughout the country who has this variety of corn. Having secured a quantity, I am now able to fill all orders for those desirous of testing it.

TERMS.—In order that all may receive seed, we have reduced the price to one dollar and fifty cents a package. Any person who will get up a club of five will receive a package gratis. Fifteen packages for $10, fifty packages for $20, one hundred packages for $30. One package will contain enough to plant the following season from twenty to thirty acres, also directions for planting and cultivating.

Address, F. E. G. LINDSEY,
Box 75, Abindgdon,
Washington Co., Va.

INDORSEMENTS.

We, the undersigned, citizens of Washington county, Virginia, having examined some Egyptian Corn grown on thin soil in this county, do hereby certify that some of the stalks produced thirty-four spikes; the longest spike we noticed measured 10¼ inches in length and 6½ inches around.

This corn, likewise, grew in the form of a tree, and presented a very healthy appearance.

R. B HAMILTON,
Raven's Nest P. O., Va.,
Capt. T. M. COBBLE,
Craig's Mills.
Capt. J. C. STANFIELD,
Holston.

We, the undersigned, certify that the above gentlemen are actual residents of Washington county, Virginia, men of truth, whose veracity, purity from falsehood, fidelity and honesty none dare question; enjoying an eminent moral, social and political position in society.

JOHN PHILLIPS,
P. M., Craig's Mills P. O., Va.
JOHN M. HAMILTON,
Ex-Sheriff of Washington co., Va.
JERIEL D. LINDER,
Act. Justice of the Peace.

THE PRESS.

F. E. G. Lindsey has presented us an ear of his "Egyptian Corn," heretofore advertised in our paper—the ear is about the size of Indian Maize, and has a solid grain. A lady who raised some of it last year sends us a certificate stating that she saw some that had not been plowed—it was sown broadcast—that produced twelve ears to the stalk.—(Abingdon Virginian.

EGYPTIAN CORN.—In another column appears the advertisement of the Egyptian Corn. It is something new for this section, and is worthy of attention. Mr. Price, of our office, is personally acquainted with Mr. Lindsey, the proprietor, and will vouch for the statements made. He has seen the corn grow, and thinks it would prove a success in Western Missouri. Try it.—[Clinton (Mo.) Advocate, Nov. 29, 1866.

EGYPTIAN CORN.—F. E. G. Lindsey, of Abingdon, Va., has the genuine "Egyptian Corn," which a great many farmers are delighted with This is a new corn to this country, and has many merits that do not appertain to other breadstuffs. It will ripen as far north as Boston, even when planted by the last of July. On rich land it will yield 150 bushels to the acre, and weighs 65½ pounds to the bushel, and for domestic use it is unparalleled. It resembles flour, and contains 95 per cent. of nutriment matter. In the South two crops a year can be sown. A package can be had of Lindsey for $1 50.—Washington Constitutional Union.

61:64

LANDRETH'S

Warranted Garden Seeds

Have been familiarly known to the American Public for upwards of three-quarters of a century.

THEY SPEAK THEIR OWN PRAISE

WHEREVER PLANTED.

Dealers in Seeds whether country Merchants, Booksellers, Druggists, or Regular Seedsmen, not already customers of the subscribers are invited to become such.

OUR WHOLESALE PRICE LIST,

Published to the Trade only, will be mailed to all dealers who apply.

Landreth's Rural Register and Almanac for 1867,

Containing numerous hints on Horticulture, will be mailed to all applicants who enclose a two cent stamp with their address to

DAVID LANDRETH & SON,
63:66 Philadelphia, Penn.

MARK YOUR CLOTHING!
Clark's Patent Indelible Pencil!

"Much more convenient than Ink, and equally good as to performance—we judge after several months trial."—Am. Agriculturist.

"Invaluable for marking linen."—Chicago Tribune.

"Remarkable for the ease and neatness with which they can be used."—Detroit Tribune.

"One of the greatest conveniences that can be presented to a housekeeper."—Charleston (S. C.) News.

Manufactured and sold at wholesale by

The Indelible Pencil Co.,
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.

Every Pencil Warranted.

FRANK S. DAME. No. 18 Commercial Place, New Orleans, General Agent for the Southwest. 93:96

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By D. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALS

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

—o—

WILLIAM HANCOCK, Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

—o—

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!
Equal to Java!
HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South,

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 ST.

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 56, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade. 2—eowtf

THE PIANIST'S ALBUM:
A COLLECTION OF

Marches, Waltzes, Polkas, Redowas, Galops Mazourkas, Quadrilles, Four-hand Pieces, Dances, &c.

A BRILLIANT SET OF PIANOFORTE GEMS,

Suited to every grade of capacity, and indispensable to every Pianist who would become familiar with the POPULAR MUSIC OF THE DAY.

This new volume, being the third of the "HOME CIRCLE," will be welcomed by all who desire to have the Best Pieces in a convenient form. A very large number of the Gems contained in this new compilation are not to be found in any other, though much admired and in constant demand—a fact that will render it the leading book of its kind. Price—plain, $2 50; cloth, $3; cloth, full gilt, $4. Sold by all music dealers, and mailed, post-paid.

OLIVER DITSON & CO, Publishers,
1y 277 Washington st., Boston.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM'L L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.
Interest payable in January and July, in each year.
All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,
240 Broadway. N. Y.
CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger	formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq	No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co.	Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien	Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer	Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker	Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee	Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield	Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett	Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton	Wm. Knowltaon & Son.
Jacob H. Dater	J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross	Ross, Dempster & Co.
	D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,
127 CARONDELET STREET,
Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city ☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten." [feb3]

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says: "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I. Adverliser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion—Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened.
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—It turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bile foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

DR. TOBIAS'
VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this luvaluable article Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine al Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Bark- & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philpdelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Varnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12-3 m

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.
THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT
Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.
Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1y

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation.)

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and
WILL PAY $1,000
to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of
CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY
—AND—
DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs.

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or Webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bittes is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum o Whisky, and cannot make Drunkads, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

* * * * * * * * * *

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous System. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,
W. S. SEIGFRIED,
No. 254 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility, or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Boptis Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMTH,
966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,
J. H. KENNARD,
Eighth, below Coates street.
Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1864.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berns county, Pa, was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D, Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.
JONES & EVANS,
(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)
Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States ma10 ew

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy
Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, (Copper and tin) mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS
OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR,

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in COLD water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT,
No. 71 Nassau street,
Mh2m1 New York City.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $80, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression,

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives of great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of syles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 15. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1867. Whole No.—65.

Union Men Exhumed.

HOW THEY FELT DURING THE REBELLION—WHAT THEY SAID AND DID WHEN THE WAR ENDED.

Read the following proceedings of a meeting held in 1865, and now for the first time published :

To the Editor of the N. O. Advocate.

I enclose you an account of a Union meeting held on 16th of May, 1865, at Mount Hermon Church, Washington Parish, La, near the line of demarcation which divides the State of Mississippi and Louisiana. Much has been said against that meeting and the resolutions there adopted, and although I was requested to prepare a report of the meeting for the press, I did not consider it safe to forward the communication, and my judgment in the premises has been fully approved by the leading men of the neighborhood.

There was no Yankee at the meeting; it was a demonstration made by enthusiastic Unionists of both sexes, who did little more than express their joy at the termination of hostilities.

Immediately after the surrender, a number of Unionists, 12 in number, repaired to Baton Rouge, and after obtaining the written permission of General Herron, entered the city in procession, with an old Union banner flying, which they had preserved through the four years of warfare. Upon their return they published that a public meeting would be held at Mt. Hermon Church on the 16th of May, 1865. This was before they had heard of the capture of the rebel chief, or the surrender of the trans-Mississippi forces.

There was but two days notice given of the meeting, but as it was in the heart of the Union settlement, a goodly turn out was expected.

On arriving at the Church, I was surprised to see such a gathering Men, women and children were there, and all rigged out in their holiday attire. A long pole was found lying prone upon the ground with a spade at its larger end, and from the eagerness and good humor that pervaded the crowd, it was evident that something was about to "turn up."

The meeting was called to order by appointing Dr J. J. Alford, Chairman, and L. D. Snell, Secretary, of the meeting.

Eight Vice Presidents were appointed —four from Washington Parish and four from Pike County :

Vice Presidents.—From Pike County, Miss.—G. C. Fortinberry, Edwin Alford, Hon. Wm. Simmons, James Brook.

From Washington Parish, La.—A. C. Bickham, G. W. Dyson, Dr. H, Pierce, Joseph T. Ott.

Committee on Resolutions—Rev. James English, Rev. H. D. Berry, T. E. Tate, Esq., Daniel E. Tate, Esq.. G. W. Dyson, Esq., A. C. Booty.

The following preamble and resolutions were then offered:

Whereas, in the providence of God the war that has so long been waged for slavery is about being brought to a final termination; and whereas, the surrender of all the country east of the Mississippi River by the insurgents to the United States forces has lifted the cloud of despotism that has so long hung over us with nightmare dread, and we are once more permitted to assemble in primary meeting, and give free expression to our opinions; we, therefore, a portion of citizens of Pike County, Miss., and Washington Parish, La., this day assembled at Mount Hermon Church, do therefore resolve

1st. That we rejoice unutterably in the speedy prospect of peace that now lies before us, and in the re-establishment of the national authority, and we return our sincere thanks to Almighty God for our sudden deliverance from the despotism forced on us by Jefferson Davis.

Vice Prss. Bickham—"I move to amend the resolution by striking out the words 'Jefferson Davis,' and inserting 'Confederate authorities.' I feel unwilling to saddle the whole responsibility upon one man."

Parson English—"I shall vote against the amendment. I wish the stigma fixed right where it belongs. Mr. D. is responsible for the abuse of the power delegated to his agents."

T E. Tate, Esq.—"I think the resolution is a just one. Mr. Davis recommended conscription. He was the Sun of this Confederate world. He was the centre around which the lesser planets revolved, and his attraction bound them in their orbits."

Vice Pres. Alford—"I am opposed to saddling the whole blame upon one man, and shall vote for the amendment."

The vote was taken and the amendment sustained.

Resolved 2. That we mourn the untimely loss of so many noble-hearted men whose lives have been sacrificed upon the dark altar of Moloch; and while we hold no sympathy with the cause in which they fell, yet to their bereaved families we tender our kind regards, and recommend them to the considerative sympathy of our citizens. Passed.

Resolved 3. That we regard the murder of the late Chief Magistrate of the United States as the most foul atrocity ever perpetrated in a civilized community, and we trust all its aiders and abettors may be brought to condign punishment.

Resolved 4. That we forgive all reasonable secessionists who have practiced what they preached, who have not aided in the seizing of Union men and hunting them with dogs, or the despoiling the houses of those whom they considered deserters, and who have not maltreated prisoners, but who have conducted themselves like men and not like demons.

J. E. Tate, Esq.—"I move that resolution be layed on the table. I advocate a mild course towards our late oppressors, and can see no use in the resolution. It is our bounden duty to forgive."

Rev. Mr English—"I regard the resolution as in very good place. It is but just that we discriminate. It is due to our friends on the opposite side that we pass this resolution. I fall out with no man for his simple opinion. I have friends among the secessionists who are gentlemen. I would forgive the good and fix the brand of Cain upon the bad."

The vote was taken and the resolution was passed.

Resolved 6. That we rejoice that the vexed question of slavery is now settled so it can no more engender strife between our respective sections of country, and while we are unable to solve the problem of its disposal, yet we believe that God who has shaped emancipation will mature some plan for the future employment and direction of the freedmen.

Resolved 7. That we recommend to all Union men to repair at once to Baton Rouge and there re-assume their allegiance to the Government in such manner and way as it may require.

Resolved 8. That we ignore the doctrine of State rights and secession as a very dangerous political heresy; we regard it as fatal to the peace and integrity of the Republic, and a fit tool for tyrants to use for wicked purposes.

Resolved 9. That we recommend to each citizen and returned soldier to stand up for the principles of law and order, and abide by the fallen fortunes of our States.

T. E. Tate—"I move the resolution be amended by striking out the words, 'and abide by the fallen fortunes of our States.' I do not think those words are in harmony with the preceding resolutions."

The vote was taken and the amendment sustained.

Resolved 10. That we send a delegation of twenty citizens to Baton Rouge with a copy of these resolutions, and that they are hereby requested to solicit the protection of the United States authorities of the place for our section of country. Passed.

Resolved 11. That we hoist the stars and stripes here to-day.

Vice Pres. Bickham—"I am not in favor of putting up the flag to-day."

Chairman—"What is the gentleman's objection to hoisting the flag?"

Vice Pres. Bickham—"I consider it premature. It has never yet been hoisted in our parish."

Chairman—"That is the very reason we wish it hoisted to-day."

Loud cries from the crowd—"The flag! The flag! Is there a flag here?"

Vice Pres. Alford—"I also consider the movement premature, and besides, this is a sacred place. I am opposed to the commingling of Church and State; it is that which has brought us to what we are."

T. E. Tate—If gentlemen are afraid of violating the sanctity of the place, I would remind the meeting that yonder forest-crowned hill is free from the objection here urged. We can repair to it and gladden our eyes once more with the sight of the Star Spangled Banner."

Many voices—No! No! Up with it here!

Here the meeting became tumultuous and the chairman arose to speak.

Vice Pres. Simmons—"I call the chairman to order. He is speaking without having the chair filled. I have mistaken the objects of the meeting. I came here to hear a thanksgiving sermon. Our hearts should at least be filled with humility, and not with the rapturous exultation that pervades this assembly. If we hoist any flag I think it should be a white one in token of surrender. We are but a part of a conquered province."

A voice from the crowd—"The Union never was, never will be conquered."

Parson English—"I am for hoisting the flag to-day. It is our flag, and we have the right to hoist it. The Confederates have pulled theirs down; they do not hope to see it go up again on this side of the great river. In putting ours up we are doing no violence to any party. When the opposition put theirs up we made no resistance. We stood still and saw their insane experiment, and now as ours is up, we simply propose to put the old one up in its ancestral place."

Chairman Alford—"I have kept still just as long as I could, and if I am out of order, pardon me. There is a lady here who has a Union flag—Mrs. T. E. Tate. When her State seceded she made it and laid it away like Aaron's rod, as a sacred memento mori of her once glorious country. For four years that flag has been a hidden and a banished thing. Will you let it longer thus remain? Already its light folds are stirred, and like the pinions of the fallen angel of Moore, they are trembling for their home on high. I am going to make you a proposition: If there is but one man or woman here who wishes to see their ancestral Banner tossed by the lovely breeze of spring that is now stealing through this grove, let him, let her hold up their right hands."

The crowd sprang up as though they had received an electric shock.

A. C. Booty, Esq.—"Had I ten thousand right hands, I'd freely raise them all."

Vice Pres. Simmons—"I call the chairman to order. The meeting has become a tumult."

Chairman—"Friends, we have met to-day but for one purpose. We have assembled here beneath the majestic shade of these gay green trees to give utterance to the pent-up feelings of our hearts. I see faces here to-day which though once familiar, long have been unseen; they have been keeping a long and lonely vigil beneath the dark green trees to keep from warring against their consciousness of right. They are here to-day to see that old flag that waved in the breeze at old Fort Moultrie. That flag that was immortalized when old Yorktown's day was done, once more stirred by the gentle zephyrs that now are fanning our sunny land. The resolution is adopted. Put up the flag!"

The excitement here was intense. Fair hands soon brought the banner out from its long dark hiding-place and attached it to the flagstaff, and then amid the wild shouts of its friends, stalwart arms raised the long staff to its perpendicular. A gentle breeze swept by, and Columbia's ancient banner once more streamed out in its old ancestral air.—While it was being erected a committee sang the following original song, composed by Mrs. Mary C. Berry, a native of Louisiana:

SONG.

Aye! bring it from its biding place,
That banner of the brave,
And let its striped folds once more
In Southern sunlight wave;
Let shouts of triumph rend the air,
While smiling Angels see
A nation saved from tyrant's chains,
Restored to liberty.

Long have we been denied the sight,
Though secretely we pined
To see our Country's Flag again
Float proudly in the wind.
We've cherished for it in our hearts,
A depth of Love Untold,
And hid it from the sight of men
As misers hide their gold.

For it has been a banished thing,
Denied and traduced;
And those who dared to own its cause,
Insulted and abused;
Drove by conscription from their homes,
And oft when forced to flee,
Pursued with blood hounds thro' the woods
Where once they wandered free.

We've groaned beneath oppression's power
And all the ills of war,
And dying shrieks and wails of woe
Have burdened Southern air;
A pale darkness o'er us hung
Like that which shrouds the tomb
And hope's faint star was almost lost
Amid the deepening gloom.

Now thanks to God the dawn has come,
The night of terror o'er,
The golden sun of Liberty
Shall gild our Southern shore;
Fling out our banner to the breeze,
Bid all its friends rejoice,
And songs of praise to God ascend
From every heart and voice.

After the singing of this appropriate ode, and when order had become sufficiently restored, short speeches were made by Vice President Alford, and Jacob J. Ott, Esq ; and subsequently a thanksgiving address or sermon was delivered by the Rev. James English—L. Psalm, 14 verse: "Offer unto God thanksgiving, and pay thy vows unto the Most High."

After appointing twenty citizens as delegates, the meeting adjourned.

It is only necessary to state that the delegates appointed repaired to Baton Rouge and discharged the duties assigned them, on the 24th of May, 1865.

SECOND SONG.

We are a loyal Union band,
Just rescued from oppression's hand,
We come, protection to implore,
And see our Country's Flag once more.

We pledge to it our love anew
And yield it our allegiance true,
The only Flag beneath the sky
To which our hearts owe fealty.

We, for its sake have suffered shame,
Been branded with a traitorous name
Because we would not recreant be
To yon fair Flag of Liberty.
With specious words our leaders tried
To win us to secession's side.
They flattered, wheedled and cajo'led,
And many a specious tale they told.

They boasted of great victories won,
Said our Old Union was undone,
To bloody strife they called us all,
And said, if we refused the call,,
That we should all disfranchised be,
Down to our last posterity;
And that our children yet unborn,
Should reap a heritage of scorn.

They threatened us with banishment,
Inflicted on us punishment;
They followed us o'er hill and dale,
With blood hounds scenting on our trail;
But all in vain, we would not fight
Against our consciousness of right;
The flag of slavery o'er us rolled,
We scorned to fight beneath its fold.

We waited patiently and long
To see right triumph over wrong;
See truth and justice win the day,
And despotism fade away.
Now be our banner wide unfurled,
That emblem of the freeman's world,
And send this shout to distant lands,
Our Union yet unbroken stands.

The Letter of Lentulus.

This famous document purports to be a Report from a Roman proconsul to the senate, describing from actual observation the form, features, voice, bearing, look and manner of the Messiah,—the pure and open brow, the rich wine-colored hair parted in the middle and falling on the shoulders, the clear blue eyes, the regular features with their grave yet sweet expression; painting, in short, so far as words can paint, the very beau ideal popularly received of the mortal attributes of the Divine Founder of our faith. It has been confidently alleged that this letter was extracted by Eutropius from the archives of the senate; that several Fathers of the Church made mention of it; and that portraits were painted after it by the command of Constantine the Great.

To all tihs, the decisive reply is, that there was no proconsul named Lentulus in Judea at the period; that no trace of the letter is discoverable in Eutropius; that none of the Fathers (including St. Augustine, who speaks of pretended portraits of Christ) make mention of it; and that the earliest notice of it occurs in the fifteenth century, when the famous preacher Pere Olivier Maillard, produced it in macronic French.

Not content with these strong grounds for incredulity, M. Feuillet de Conches maintains that it would not be difficult to arrive at the source of the forgery, to pick out word by word the elements in the different traditional portraits in writing which lie scatterd amongst the Fathers or the Greek ecclesiastical writers. He proceeds to proof, and a valuable piece of criticism is the result, from which we shall simply borrow an episodical passage or two o the startling doubt which long vexed and divided the Fathers, namely, whether the Divine Essence was reflected in the beauty of the outward and visible form, or hidden, for the wisest and best o purposes, under a mean and unattractive exterior.

The New Testament gave no help to either side. The Old Testament inflamed the controversy by an apparent diversity: "Thou art fairer than the children of men," is the inspired language of the Psalmist. "He hath no form nor comeliness," is the similarly inspired prophecy of Isaiah. The holy disputants, as was their wont, declined any rational explanation or reconciliation of the texts; and as no reference was made to the authority of Lentulus, the fair inference is that none of them had ever heard of him. St. Justin declared positively for ugliness: "By appearing under an abject and humiliating exterior, our Savior did but add to what the mystery of the redemption offers of sublime and touching." Tertullian was strong for the same theory. The pagans accustomed to deify beauty, saw their advantage and struck in. "Your Christ is ugly," exclaimed Celsus with true Epicurean logic. "Then he is not God" The three great divines of the Western Church, St. Ambrose, St. Jerome, and S. Augustine, stoutly held out for beauty, and the opposite opinion, discredited in Europe, was eventually confined to the Manichæans and some doctors of the East.

It may be collected from these disputes that no certain image or representation of the form and features of Christ has been handed down by tradition. There is also much weight in the remark, that the most ancient effigies are stamped with a Greek or Roman character, both in physiognomy and costume, without any trace of the Arabian or Israelite type.—Edinburgh Review.

A Sermon.

BY REV. S. M. SMALL, (COLORED.)

Preached at Alexandria, La., March 17, 1867.

Jeremiah, vi.: 16.—Thus saith the Lord, stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls.

I am glad to have before me such a well behaved and respectable body of people. Now it is very important, at this time and in this place—it is our duty to pray, and be in earnest about it. My text says—"Thus saith the Lord stand in the ways." When these words were spoken by the prophet, it was a solemn time, and why I call your attention to it now, is, because of sin and rebellion, such as was going on at the time referred to. God, when he has a work to do, always provides some one to carry it on. Read of the work of God, in any part of the Bible ; you will find he always made provision to make himself conqueror. He works in favor of man whenever it can be for his good. Now Jerusalem was inhabited by God's peculiar people ; it was a place he often visited, just as to-night. God has promised to meet his people in his temple, and if we get no blessing it will be because we do not do our duty. God has required of those who wait upon him a pure heart; resigned and believing, they will be sure of his blessing. The people of Jerusalem were much favored, and they became proud; self-deceived often. I want my congregation to examine themselves on this account. Those people had been favored of God, and became selfish; they thought to take their cause out of God's hands, and do it themselves. While they were becoming so rebellious, God was preparing his servant Jeremiah, called before he was born. In the old days God sent his word to men by his prophets, telling what his will was. So at this day. God has sent his servants to go and declare his word to a wicked and perverse generation, who say by their works they will not have him for their king—and tell them, he that believeth not shall be damned. Oh, what a message ! It is terrible to have the frowns of the Almighty upon us. It's as good as being in hell while on earth. They were so wicked as to pretend to be prophets and to be priests. It is awful for men to pretend to be called of God, and so deceive the people. Seeing them so inclined to leave Him, God sent Jeremiah four hundred and thirty years before the coming of Christ. Those false prophets called out peace when there was no peace; it was a false peace; we are to judge a tree by its fruits. While in this rebellious state God sent Jeremiah to say, Turn from your evil ways; you have been disobedient, turned away from my laws; go to Jesus, ask forgiveness, fall down before him humbly, or else you never can have peace. They seemed to stop a moment t listen. Often men stop and think how can I get out of this bad course? It weighs on their minds. They want to, but hardly know how or what to do, afraid to remain under God's dreadful frown, but ashamed to start in the good way, afraid of their companions. The message of Jeremiah was, Jerusalem should be destroyed, terrible judgments for its wickedness was told about; none should be spared. How often have we seen the pestilence destroying its thousands. Why, once in New Orleans, when I could not read newspapers, I bought one every day, and was so anxious to know about the terrible pestilence, that I soon got able to read them. Why, 400 was one day said to have died. In one place where I lived it was so dreadful to see them die and hear their groans that I moved to another neighborhood. It was the same there, and again I moved, and then again; I said, oh Lord, what shall I do. It made me move from place to place, and then it made me pray. When we hear God's voice, and tremble and call, He hears us. What love and pity for poor sinners. There is a path where God is always to be found—at the place of prayer, in the path of rectitude. To these paths I calls the people. Do right and look to God; wait on him and he will answer, for we have the glorious promise, "Stand in the ways, walk therein, and ye shall find rest to your souls." Ask for the old paths, the good old way; the old prophets and old kings have gone home in this way. They tried it and found it a good way, and thousands have found that all its paths are peace. I tell you, if you want religion, you can never find it in the way of the grog shop, in the ball room, at the card table, with evil company, but in the old paths. Here are witnesses that God will meet you more than half way; then throw away all these little, worth nothing things. They say to you, "come, its no harm;" go here, or go there, do this or that. They are not your friends, but they cheat your soul. They lead you off further and further from God. Why, my brethren, how did you get a blessing, how did you find Jesus? Is there any other way? Oh, no; then "stand in the way." How often, when one is bewildered in a journey, they are not certain of the road, or how to go; but they stand and wait until some one passes by, and we ask for the right path So wait upon God, and he will send some one to help you, and it will be a friend indeed; he will tell you just what you want; but best of all you will get help from the Most High God, his spirit poured into your soul, to make you happy. You believe many old Christians have hewed out the way to heaven by faith and prayer: you must think and do as they did. You must pray for yourself, and Christians around are praying for you, and then the answer of prayer comes down; and when people say, "Oh, you are out of your head, you are crazy," you can tell them, oh, no, master, oh, no, missus, and you can be so bold as to go right up to any one and tell what Jesus has done and what he wants to do for them. Why, I had twelve months, brethren without a cross, and then it came, and I had to stand still and wait for Jesus to show me what it meant, and how to carry it. Oh, crosses will come, and the safe way is not to run from them, but take them up; we are seeking for Jesus and heaven. Are not some here seeking for that way. God grant that you may be wise, seek aright, and find the old paths, and reach heaven and eternal glory.

Secret Prayer.

If you live in the neglect of secret prayer you show your good-will to neglect all the worship of God. He that prays only when he prays with others, would not pray at all were it not that the eyes of others were upon him. He that will not pray where none but God seeth him, manifestly doth not pray at all out of respect to God, or regard to His all-seeing eye, and therefore doth in effect cast off all prayer; and he that casts off prayer, in effect casts off all the worship of God of which prayer is the principal duty. Now, what a miserable saint is he who is no worshipper of God! He that casts off the worship of God, in effect casts off God himself; he refuses to own Him or to be conversant with Him as his God. For the way in which men own God, and are conversant with Him as their God is by worshipping Him.—Jonathan Edwards.

General Anglican Council.—We have already called attention to the proposed convocation of a "General Anglican Council," to consist of all the bishops of Great Britain, the British colonies, and the United States. We now learn from the latest English papers received in this city, that the Archbishop of Canterbury has given notice that the meeting will be held in Lambeth palace on the 14th of September. Besides the bishops of England, Ireland, Scotland, the colonial and missionary bishops, and the bishops of the United States of America, the bishops of any other churches that hold communion with the Church of England are invited. This is the first General Council of the Anglican churches ever held, and as an attempt to give to a branch of the Protestant Church a universal instead of a merely national organization, it deserves the profound attention af all Protestant Christians. And whatever may be the merely denominational designs contemplated, we cannot but regard the assembling of this Council as a most happy omen for the future unity and power of the Protestant branch of the Church of Christ on earth. God grant that the decisions of the Council may be wise and to His glory.

The wages of sin is death.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion $1 50
" each subsequent insertion ... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞ Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simons, 85 Baronne street.

Official Dishonesty.

Why is it, that official dishonesty is generally considered less disreputable, than dishonesty in a private citizen? When fairly compared, whether by the standard of Divine or human justice, the former involves the greater guilt. Nevertheless, society views the man who feloniously appropriates to himself public monies, with less abhorance than he who steals private property. This fact is apparent to every observant mind. The notoriously dishonest official is not excluded from what is known as the best society, while the poor man, however otherwise respectable, who steals a loaf of bread for a starving family, is branded as a felon and shunned by community. Why this palpable inconsistency? On what grounds is it tolerated?

Evidently the dignity of his office covers the dishonest official, and in most cases, like an impenetrable coat of mail. His position of trust and power commends him to our consideration; we are slow to believe evil of the ruler of our people; we dread his displeasure. His eminent abilities awaken our admiration, and his good fortune in having been chosen by the people inspire our respect. His person is sacred. It is also true that the evils resulting from his peculations fall upon the many and not upon one. Taxes are collected from all; no one portion of community suffers thereby; all suffer alike. It would be different were an individual, or a banking company, or any other corporate body, the party defrauded. And bribes come from interested parties whose interest it is to cover the wrong. Persons concerned in the passage of a bill, or the letting of a contract, not unfrequently bribe the officer of State, and then to screen themselves they screen him. And perhaps the prevalence of official corruption reconciles the community to the continuance of the evil.—The commission of a crime may become so general as not to be subject to control. People frequently quietly endure what they cannot help, and in process of time the public conscience becomes stupified and indifferent. In Rome the Pope has a State lottery, and this species of gambling goes uncondemned; in Mexico, the priest attends a bull-bate on Sunday, and is not regarded the less holy; but in Protestant America, the practice of such things would offend the whole community. As a rule in any place, all that is required of a public man is to reflect the public conscience—sometimes, however, the public conscience reflects him. Where morals are thus lax the corrupt official stands in no dread of exposure and punishment. Everybody knows that he steals officially, and he is joked for his smartness. There are always those who stand ready to share his ill-gotten gains, and who become the eulogists of his crime. In this country wealth is power, and no matter how obtained, its possessor is courted and flattered. We rarely inquire into the moral character of a rich man. He has wealth, and all do him deference. A man goes into office to-day penniless and friendless; suddenly he appears upon the road "two-in-hand," and every passer-by doffs his hat at the lucky official. His "money answereth all things." His importance in the community is also increased by his ability to contribute for political ends, and this at once acts as a temptation to sin and a cover to his iniquity. Such are some of the reasons why official dishonesty is considered less disreputable than that practiced by private individuals; others might be named, but these are most apparent.

But this indulgence to the offences of public men is false and ruinous. No community can long survive its terrible results. Poisoning the very fountains of society, it sends its polluted streams into all the channels of human life.—From whatever stand-point we view official dishonesty, we are forced to pronounce it of deeper moral turpitude, of greater criminality, and meriting severer, swifter punishment than the offense of him who has not the public confidence. If we analyze its nature we discover that it is the quintessence of whatever is violative of the laws of God and man. It is the concentration of all those fearful elements which sunder the bonds that bind society together, and which undermine the fabric of social, commercial, political and religious goodness, power and glory.

It were a truism to say that it is dishonesty; yet we go further, and affirm that he who appropriates to himself public funds is worse than the man who is a downright robber. For to his crime of robbery the former adds hypocrisy, treachery and perjury. He is not what he assumes to be. The custodian of the public interests, he has betrayed the public confidence. Inducted into office by an oath invested with all the solemn attributes of religion, God was called to witness his promise of fidelity, yet the stolen gold cankers his perjured soul. The ordinary felon is not chargeable with these extraordinary attributes of crime. His is the single, bold offense of feloniously taking from another, what is not his own. He violates no solemn oath of office; he betrays no public confidence; he acts not contrary to his professions; he is simply a thief, but his official comrouge is more.

[To be continued.]

Eminent Letters from Eminent Men.

Some time since the N. O. Times invited several of our well known citizens to publish their opinions on the "situation." It was a N. Y. Herald idea. It was a good thing for the Times. Overcome by the temptation, two classes of persons have written—soldiers and lawyers. Having read the "eminent letters" severally as they appeared, we confess our preference for those written by the soldiers. Not that their rhetoric was preferable, nor their logic more compact, but their spirit was better and their advice more practical. War is the soldier's fighting time; peace, the lawyer's. Beauregard was foolish and insulting in comparing the loyal people of this country to the sediments which discolor the Mississippi, and which are destined to sink, and was vain in likening the people of the South to the Mississippi purified of its sediments; yet he was entirely sensible in suggesting to his friends that submission is now a virtue and a duty. Longstreet's letter is thoroughly Southern in spirit, yet it is manly, frank, practical—submission or voluntary exile are the alternatives he presents. Nothing can be more sensible.

But the letters of Christian Roselius and J. Addison Rozier are defiant and belligerent. In reading them, we fancied we saw Roselius in his uniform again, and that Rozier had donned the armor of Mars. "To the courts, to the courts!" they cry; there let the battle of treason be fought again by our legal giants. The cry seemed a bid for a case. What a magnificent opportunity it would be for our Nestor and his brother-in-law to display their forensic powers, could they but be chosen to defend Louisiana before the bar of the great tribunal of the nation. Were a stranger to read the letters of these four gentlemen, he would infer that Generals Beauregard and Longstreet were tolerably fair Union men, but that Messrs. Roselius and Rozier were the most fanatical of all secessionists. Mr. Roselius says, "we must submit with the best grace we can;" while Mr. Rozier has framed one of the strongest arguments to justify secession we remember to have read. He is for delay, for appeal, for anything rather than for peaceful acquiescence. He declines to serve on the "State Executive Committee of the National Reconstruction Party of Louisiana," and then in two "mortal columns" gives his "reasons why." But he went too far. The Times got more than it bargained for, and in its evening edition of the 9th inst., abused Mr. Rozier for expressing "his opinions." What a muddle! We guess the Times wont call for any more letters from our "original Union citizens."

City Removals.

We have heard much complaint because Major Gen. Sheridan, and his Honor Mayor Heath, have not removed from office certain objectionable city officials. These complaints come from two classes of citizens: those who really desire to see good men in office, and those who feel themselves competent to fill such offices with honor. It may be enough for us to say that Maj. Gen. Sheridan understands the situation here better than any other man, and that he will act according to his best judgment and in the interest of the cause he represents. His appointments thus far have been exceedingly judicious; and in due time, we presume, he will make others.

As to his Honor Mayor Heath, he has no power under the city ordinances to make removals, and can fill vacancies only with the consent of the Common Council. The truth is, the Mayor cannot appoint a city park-keeper without the consent of the Council. The people should understand this, and open their eyes to the fact that, in anticipation of Monroe's removal, the appointing power has been gradually taken away from the Mayor. But his Honor is doing a good work by his vetoes and by keeping a sharp lookout for the city finances.

Monday Morning Papers Abolished.

The following preamble and resolution are published as a reason for the discontinuance of our Monday morning edition. Persons engaged in the production of newspapers require rest and recreation quite as much as any other class of citizens, and just as readily recognize the advantages of that ancient law which requires the labor of a week to be performed within six days:

New Orleans, April 8, 1867.

At a full meeting of the Associated Press of New Orleans, held this day, the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

Whereas, The labor, mental and physical, necessary to the production of a Monday morning paper, must be almost entirely performed on Sunday, while that for the issue of a Sunday morning edition is, with the exception of delivery, performed on the previous day; and, whereas, the physiological as well as psychological requirements of human nature render one day of rest out of seven particularly desirable; therefore,

Resolved, That in order to afford all persons connected with our respective offices an opportunity of enjoying such rest, recreation or religious exercises as the conscience of each may respectively approve, we hereby agree to discontinue the Monday morning edition of the journals we severally represent.

Kendall, Holbrook & Co., Picayune.
J. O. Nixon, Crescent.
Dufour & Limet, Bee.
Wm. H. C. King & Co., Times.

The above notice appeared last Saturday in our principal city dailies, and whatever the motives were which prompted the action, we rejoice in the result. It is the public approval of the holy Sabbath, and the recognition of that Divine law which restricts all labor to six days in the week. The reasons assigned for this action are physiological, psychological and religious, all of which are good and substantial. Experience and history combine to prove that the human system requires one-seventh of each week in addition to night, for rest; and it is clear that the former is added to the latter as a compensation for the wear and tear of life, for the repair of which night is not sufficient. It is a law of nature, applicable alike to man and beast, that one day in seven must be devoted to rest, and where this beneficent law is not observed, life is shortened one-seventh, the animal system enfeebled, and in the case of man, where the labor is intellectual, the mind suffers accordingly.

And now, taking advantage of the occasion, we enter a plea in behalf of the actors and actresses engaged in our city theatres; and we do this from personal knowledge of the fact that they desire rest from their professional duties on Sunday. The same arguments are applicable in their case which our city editors have applied to compositors, and should be practically acknowledged. The mental and physical strain incident to rehearsal and performance for seven consecutive days and nights, month after month, is not only wasting to the energies of mind and body, but suicidal. We therefore sincerely hope that the managers and lessees of our theatres will follow the good example of our city editors, and close their theatres on Sunday. Let it be done at once.

Judge Sharkey's Bill.

In the Supreme Court of the United States, on the 5th inst, Judge Sharkey, of Mississippi, gave notice of a motion for a preliminary injunction against Andrew Johnson, President, and Gen. Ord, commander of the military district comprising Mississippi, and stated that the motion was founded on a bill of equity which he proposed to file, brought by the State of Mississippi, complainant, against the parties named, to enjoin them from executing the acts of Congress recently passed, called the military bill and the supplemental bill.

This action on the part of Governor Sharkey does not surprise us; indeed, we would have been disappointed had not such action been taken, either by himself or some other representative of the "ten excluded States." It is the last and dying struggle of the rebellion.

Having tried the sword and failed; having sought to deter Congress from further legislation in the work of reconstruction, by rejecting the Constitutional Amendments, and failed, a few fanatics now appeal to the Supreme Court as the last resort. Of course, we cannot now state positively the result of the appeal, but we doubt whether the Court will so act as to interfere with the execution of the Military Bill. It is the opinion of some of our best jurists that the Supreme Court has not original jurisdiction in the case under consideration; at all events, it is short-sighted in Mr. Sharkey to seek to induce the judiciary to control the executive branch of our government. Knowing that Congress cannot be reached directly, he now attempts to restrain the President from discharging his constitutional duties. It is a bold move—a desperate case. But we have it from a gentlemen just from Washington—brother to a member of Mr. Johnson's cabinet—that the President disapproves of Governor Sharkey's bill, and the report is confirmed by Attorney General Stanberg's course in the preliminary action. We therefore think that Judge Sharkey's effort to arrest the reconstruction of the South under the Sherman bill will amount to nothing. We are assured that he has not the sympathy of the leading Southern men in New Orleans, many of whom have publicly pledged themselves to accept the situation; and they regard his action in the case as exposing them to the charge of insincerity. No doubt they, with many others, would have rejoiced had the Supreme Court decided the military bill unconstitutional; but believing that there is not a shadow of a hope from this source, they prefer wisely to endure what they cannot cure. More than this: The people of the South are penetrated with the conviction that were the Supreme Court to render such a decision it would increase rather than diminish their troubles. A heavier burden would await them. Congress is master of the situation, and will not yield one "jot or tittle." The loyal North is a unit on this question, and the impression is almost universal that the Sherman Bill is a finality in the reconstruction of the South. Then on with the work of reconstruction!

Editorial Items.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach in the Hall of the House of Representatives, to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.

Bills.—We have sent bills by mail to those of our patrons whose subscription for 1867 is now due. We hope for an answer without delay. We also now give notice that on receipt of their subscription, the same will be acknowledged in the columns of the Advocate.

We are authorized and requested to announce William Fortinberry, Esq, as the Union candidate to represent the Parish of Washington in the State Convention, to be held under the late act of Congress.

Our thanks are due A. Simons, General News Agent, 85 Baronne st., for "The Children's Hour," "Oliver Optics," and "The Nursery," all of which are interesting Magazines for children and youth. Also copies of the N. Y. Independent.

Attorney-General Stanbury says that Gen. Sheridan has not the power to make removals. Has Mr. Stanbury forgotten the President's veto message on the Military Bill, which he himself wrote? He therein objects to the bill because it gives unlimited power to the District Commander. What consistency!

In the House of Commons, last Monday, Mr. Law stated that alarming news had been received in Berlin from Paris, and that the King of Prussia had sent for Count Bismarck at two o'clock Sunday morning.

The State Senate of Ohio has concurred in the House amendment to the suffrage bill, extending the franchise to all male citizens except rebels and deserters.

The treaty between Russia and the United States, by which the former cedes to this country all her possessions in North America for seven millions and a half of dollars, has been confirmed by the Senate.

Our readers have seen the reports of the rebuilding and dedication of the churches at Carrollton and Jefferson City. The work was done by Mr. M. H. Rogers, whom we can heartily recommend as an efficient workman and builder. He is settled in Jefferson City, where he has opened a carpenter's and joiner's shop, and is ready to receive orders, which he will execute with neatness and dispatch. Let any one desiring work in his line give him a call.

Good Appointment.—Our friend and fellow-citizen, Col. Charles H. Fox, has been appointed Inspector of Internal Revenue for the District of Louisiana. This position is one of great responsibility, and the new appointee has the executive ability requisite for the faithful and honorable discharge of the duties of his office. Col. Fox deserves well of his country, having fought hard for the Union, and we rejoice that his services have been thus handsomely recognized. Another son of that grand State of Illinois is thus elevated to power in Louisiana by this timely appointment.

Steam Communication Between New Orleans and Hamburg.—The gratifying announcement is made that direct steam communication will be opened between the ports of New Orleans and Hamburg by the Hamburg American Packet Company. Two elegant iron steamers will be dispatched to this port, and it is anticipated that emigration will be largely facilitated through the maintenance of this line. Efficient agents have been appointed in this country and in Europe. those in this country being Messrs. Williams, Ruperti & Co., 63 Carondelet street, and Messrs. Maury & Co., 118 Gravier street.

Colored Delegates in the General Conference.—Franklin Rand, Esq., of the Zion's Herald, in a note respecting a call he made upon the Washington Conference, says:

The body embraces some three or four score ministers, who, in personal appearance and forensic ability, are not a whit behind an average Conference of whites. We were pleased to learn from Bishop Scott that he had decided that this—the Washington—and the other colored Conference—the Delaware—not being strictly mission Conferences, will be entitled to representation in the General Conference. So four or five colored men will undoubtedly take their seats in the next session of that body.

LIST

OF MONEY LETTERS RECEIVED FROM APRIL 8TH TO APRIL 11TH.

Melville E. Mead; J. Welch; H. F. Pickles; Rev. N. Mount; Mrs. G. Cook; T. J. Durant; North, Murphy & Mason; S. R. Gray; John W. Young; Rev. J. E. King.

To Colored Voters.

SECOND PAPER.

Having been invested with the sovereign power of the ballot, its first exercise by you is a matter of deepest import. For six years your battles have been fought by the loyal people of this nation. The results have been steadily in your favor. One after another of your rights have been secured, till at length you have risen to the full height of enfranchised citizens of the United States. Your destiny is now in your own hands. Ample means for self-protection are within your reach, and you are charged with the future of your race. But a dark danger threatens the entrance upon your new career. You are devoid of political experience, are without recognized leaders, have but a slight hold upon the public press, and the great body of your people are unable to read or write.

Thus unprepared, you enter the political arena and stand face to face with an old, ably led, thoroughly organized, and powerful political party, secure in the possession of the principal State offices, and sustained almost unanimously by the press of the country. This party, thus fortified in all its citadels of power, is bent upon retaining control throughout the South. It has hitherto been unfriendly to you. Its full strength was exerted in the late war to make your bondage perpetual, and to spread slavery over the entire continent. It has opposed, step by step, your advancement to your present elevation, and you now enter upon your political rights in the face of its unanimous protest. No wonder that in this critical moment in your history there should center upon you a universal interest. The nation is looking to you; your friends are waiting and solicitous; your enemies bitter and active. All feel that you are nearing momentous interests; immense issues that are to tinge your entire future are quivering in the ballance and must soon be decided. It is at stake whether your present rights are to be secured by sanction of constitutional law; whether you are to have the privilege of general education; whether you are to have access to the honorable avocations and professions; whether your right to hold office and positions of public trust shall be recognized, and whether your claim to manhood dignity shall be allowed.

The coming election is your great opportunity. It is the grand testing time which shall prove whether you can measure to the full height of your new duties, or meanly surrender your high advantages. What, then, is to be your action? Where will you be found upon the great issues of the hour? In the contest that still lingers between liberty and oppression, will you train with the friends or with the enemies of freedom? We regret to express the doubt which these questions imply, but the recent course of some colored men in shaking hands at once with rebels, is a strange fact, and has already raised doubts whether you can be safely trusted with your own liberty. There surely can be no colored man so ignorant as not to know the purposes of the present conservative party of the South. The men who fought to keep you slaves, who regarded as unparalleled wickedness the effort to make you free, who deprecated liberty as a curse and denounced your exercise of suffrage as insufferable, are not your friends. They have no purpose of giving you an equal chance in the race of life; yet, with an effrontery never surpassed, they claim a special right to your support.

Stubbornly opposed as they have been to your being allowed to vote, they all at once discover that they are the only men entitled to your confidence or your votes. With a persistency utterly amazing, they claim to be your "best friends." But what have they done on which to ground this claim? Is it that they have planted their feet upon the neck of your race for generations that have passed? Is it that they shouted over the massacre of Fort Pillow, rejoiced over the murders at Memphis, and impiously thanked God over the butcheries of last July? Or what great kindness do they purpose for the future? Do they now willingly yield to you your rights? Are they willing you should be educated, intelligent, respected, honored and elevated? Do they ever apologize for the wrongs of the past? Not so. Straining every energy to have the law under which you are enfranchised declared unconstitutional, openly charging you with unfitness for the position to which the loyal have called you, they yet claim the special guardianship of your political conduct. No other man may dare to confer with you on this subject. On peril of their sore displeasure you must turn at once from all northern mercenaries, all Yankee missionaries, as the sworn enemies of your race.

Will you yield to these arrogant demands? Will you tamely submit to have the yoke again placed upon your necks? You can prevent it. It is in your power to break at once and forever the rule of your former masters. It is in your power to plant loyalty so firmly in the South that no coming storms can disturb its strong foundation. It is in your power to bind liberty upon your heart, and hand it down as a priceless legacy to your latest generations. Attempt no compromise with your enemies. Stand firm by the loyal heroes who, under God, have bought you the boon of freedom. Rally in a firm, unshaken band, round the flag of loyalty. Let union men, white and black, unite, and the long, dark night will at once end. Remember that the responsibility of the success or defeat of rebels at the coming election is suspended solely on your fidelity. The duty and the consequences are alike with you.

The Bureau and the Freedmen's Aid Associations.

We copy the following from a Boston journal:

Rev. E. J. Wheelock, who has for some time been laboring in Galveston, Texas, thus writes to a friend:

"I am laboring under heavy difficulties here. The Bureau of Freedmen is run wholly on sectarian evangelical grounds. I am the only Unitarian who has position in the Bureau, and am expecting my dismissal at any moment.—The State is filled with hungry, wolfish bigots, who are indorsed by the various Freedmen's Aid Societies, and who come to fleece the freedmen. Of course I oppose them, and shall do so, both in this world and the next; so I have a stormy time.

"The liberal Christians are not wise, in that they contribute bountifully to professedly benevolent associations that use the means thus generously given for narrow proselytism and small denominational ends. I shall probably give the work up and go North in a few weeks."

The statements contained in the above paragraph from the pen of Rev. E. J. Wheelock, at present Inspector of Schools in the Freedmen's Bureau for the District of Texas, are worthy of notice, and are startling if true. From an intimate knowledge of the machinery and its working, derived during the occupancy of the position of Superintendent of Schools for over a year, commencing early in the administration of General Gregory, Mr. Wheelock certainly ought to be qualified to speak advisedly of the subject on which he writes. We have watched the proceedings and developments of the Freedmen's Bureau in this State with deep interest; and while we have noticed in the journals of secession proclivities an almost infinite variety of charges against it, we have never seen any of a graver character than those made by this prominent officer. His first charge is, the prostitution of this department of the Government to sectarian purposes. The language of Mr. Wheelock, "The Bureau of Freedmen is run wholly on sectarian evangelical grounds," is somewhat ambiguous in its scope. It may include the entire staff at Washington, as we believe Gen. Howard is a Congregationalist, but it probably has reference only to Texas; we hope so, at least.

What are the facts?

On examining the records we find that under General Gregory, who appointed Mr. Wheelock, there was one clergyman (Chaplain Geo. W. Honey, 4th Wisconsin Cavalry,) appointed Assistant Superintendent of Schools, and another, (Chaplain Rand, of 1st Iowa,) Sub. Asst. Com. at Lagrange. So far as we can ascertain, these are the only clergymen ever employed in the Bureau in this State, beside Mr. Wheelock himself.

Mr. Honey was under Mr. W. about four or five months and was discharged in May, 1866; and Mr. Rand was discharged, we believe in February, when his regiment left Austin.

So far as the personnel of the Bureau is concerned, the charge of Mr. W. is palpably false, unless he is running it on Unitarian grounds.

But it may be possible that Mr. Wheelock is in possession of orders or instructions of a character never made public, touching the policy to be employed in the appointment of the agencies of the Bureau; if this is the case, we think it the duty of Mr. W. as a good citizen, to go on in the exposure he has commenced, and give his specifications.

Until he presents something more definite than we yet have, we must conclude the defendant not guilty. His second charge is twofold—first, against the Freedmen's Aid Societies and their agents, of fleecing the freedmen,—second, against the government, of permitting, or conspiring in this outrage.

We know of no agencies of these Aid Societies, except the teachers of the Bureau schools In what manner is the fleecing accomplished? We know that heretofore, the freedmen have been charged $1,50 per month for each scholar taught. But this fee was fixed at Galveston, and published in the regulations of Mr. Wheelock. We have long been of the opinion that this was more than they were able to pay, but never that it was more than a teacher should have. And while we thought that the freedmen should not pay it, we always believed that either the State or the general government should. We are glad to know that the arrangement has been made at last, by which the Government and the Aid Societies, against which Mr. W. flings his inuendoes, bear a chief part of the expenses of the Freedmen's schools.

But while upon this subject, we wish to remark for the benefit of Mr. Wheelock, that the fleecing has yielded more noise than wool. An investigation into the incomes derived from these schools during the admimistration of Mr. W., would reveal the fact, that with three or four exceptions, the teachers of the Bureau schools of Texas have barely met their expenses, and some of them are in debt to this day.

A more abused, self-denying class of workers in the great reconstruction, we do not know. If they have left their homes, the confidence and respect of communities, for such fleecing as is to be obtained in Texas, we pity them.

"But the government permits them to fleece the freedmen." Is it possible that after giving to the slave his freedom, and his all; after lavishing both money and blood without measure, the government of the United States, stoops to fleece the poor, naked freedman?

We so understand Mr. Wheelock. But with all deference to his knowledge derived from official sources, we deny that the administration of the Bureau in Texas, has permitted the offence; and we deny that the State is full of hungry, wolfish bigots, who have come to attempt it.

Mr. W. tells us that "of course" he opposes them, and "shall continue to do so in this world and in the next."

Of course, we should expect him to oppose such a scandalous proceeding in this world, though as to his continuing it in the next, we doubt it.

But, aside from the determination evident in the language above quoted, we seriously doubt the efficiency of a system, where the controlling power, or the administration, is at war with the instrumentalities. If Mr. W. had desired to destroy an obnoxious system, or a cruel and wicked imposition, we submit, that it would have been done more satisfactorily and effectually by exposing it, than by "opposing it in this world and in the next."

The liberal christians are then censured for their folly in contributing to "professedly benevolent associations that use the means thus generously given for narrow proselytism, and small denominational ends."

We are aware that there has been a great deal of opposition to the interference of benevolent associations in the work among the freedmen, but we were not aware that any of it came with such a spirit, from the head of the Educational department in Texas.

From our knowledge of the acquirements and qualifications of Mr. Wheelock, and the influence conferred upon him by the possession of these, we the more deeply deplore the position that he takes on these questions. When such assaults are made by open and avowed enemies, we are prepared for them, and understand them; but comming from a prominent officer in the service of the Government, we are astounded. We take this opportunity of denying most unequivocally the statements and charges of Mr. Wheelock in the foregoing extract.

THE MILITARY BILL.

REGISTRATION ORDERED—NAMES OF THE REGISTRARS—REGISTRY TO BE MADE BETWEEN 15TH OF APRIL AND 15TH OF MAY.

The following order from the District Commander, Major Gen. Sheridan, gives the initiation to the reconstruction of our State under the military bill.

We trust that every man who has a vote under the acts of Congress will be registered at once.

HEADQUARTERS FIFTH MILITARY DISTRICT,
New Orleans, La., April 10, 1867.

Special Orders No. 15.
(Extract.)

* * * * *

2. In obedience to the directions contained in the first section of the law of Congress, entitled "An Act supplemental to an Act entitled 'An Act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States,'" the registration of the legal voters, according to that law in the parish of Orleans, will be commenced on the 15th inst., and must be completed by the 15th of May.

The four municipal districts of the City of New Orleans, and the parish of Orleans, right bank, (Algiers,) will each constitute a registration district. Election precincts will remain as at present constituted.

The following appointments of Boards of Registers is hereby made—to continue in office until further orders, viz:

First District—John A. Roberts, William Baker and W. M. Geddes.

Second District—Edward Ames, T. C. Thomas and Michael Vidal.

Third District—Charles F. Berens, John McWhorter and H. Stiles

Fourth District—John L. Davis, Henry Bensel, Jr. and Edmund Flood.

Orleans Parish, Right Bank—W. H. Seymour, Thomas Kenefec and Georg Herbert.

Each member of the Board of Registers, before commencing his duties, will file in the office of the Assistant Inspector General at these headquarters, the oath required in the sixth section of the act referred to, and be governed in the execution of his duty by the provisions of the first section of that act—faithfully administering the oath therein prescribed to each person registered.

Boards of Registers will immediately select suitable officers, within their respective districts, having reference to convenience and facility of registration, and will enter upon their duties on the day designated. Each Board will be entitled to two clerks. Office hours for registration will be from 8 o'clock till 12 A. M., and from 4 till 7 P. M.

When elections are ordered, the Board of Registers for each district will designate the number of polls, and the places where they shall be opened in the election prscincts within its district—appoint the commissioners and other officers, necessary for properly conducting the elections, and will superintend the same

They will also receive from the commissioners of elections of the different precincts the result of the vote, consolidate the same, and forward it to the Commanding General.

Registers and all officers connected with elections will be held to a rigid accountability, and will be subject to trial by Military Commission for fraud, or unlawful, or improper conduct in the performance of their duties. Their rate of compensation and manner of payment will be in accordance with the provisions of sections 6 and 7 of the supplemental act.

Brevet Brig. Gen. J. W. Forsyth, Assistant Inspector General of the Fifth Military District, is hereby directed to supervise the Board of Registration for the parish of Orleans, to listen to and adjust, or refer to this office all just causes of complaint. He is authorized to employ such experts as may be necessary to detect fraud in regi-tration or elections.

Every male citizen of the United States twenty one years old and upward, of whatever race, color or previous condition, who has been a resident in the State of Louisiana for one year and parish of Orleans for three months previous to the date at which he presents himself for registration, and who has not been disfranchised by act of Congress or for felony at common law, shall, after having taken and subscribed the oath prescribed in the first section of the act herein refered to, be entitled to be, and shall be, registered as a legal voter in the parish of Orleans and State of Louisiana.

Pending the decision of the Attorney General of the United States on the question as to who are disfranceised by law, Registers will give the most rigid interpretation to the law, and exclude from registration every person about whose right to vote there may be a doubt. Any person so excluded, who may, under the decision of the Attorney General be entitled to vote, shall be permitted to register after that decison is received—due notice of which will be given.

* * * * *

By command of Major Gen. P. H. Sheridan.

GEO. L. HARTSUFF,
Assistant Adjut. Gen.

Official:
GEORGE LEE, 1st Lt. 21st U. S. Inf.,
Acting Assistant Adjut. Gen.

THE RUSSIAN AMERICAN TREATY.—This treaty especially includes the strip 400 miles long which extends down the coast, thus nearly excluding British America from the ocean. The cession excites intense interest. Influential parties regard it as significant of Russian policy in view of the impending European complications on the Eastern question.

Russia cedes her American territory for the same reasons that induced Napoleon to sell Louisiana. In the event of war Rnssia would probably lose this territory, and by parting with it the czar secures the friendship of our government. The English representation is deeply chagrined, and it is said Sir Frederick Bruce will telegraph to Earl Derby for instructions to protest against its acceptance by our government. This acquisition more than doubles the United States coast on the Pacific.

From Baton Rouge.

BATON ROUGE, April 3d, 1867.

According to Gayarre, the origin of the name of the whilom capitol of Louisiana, was on this wise: Le Page du Pratz relates that in his time there was yet to be seen on the present site of that city a famous over-grown cypress tree, out of which a carpenter had offered to build two boats, one of sixteen tons, and the other of fourteen. One of the first travelers who arrived at this locality, gazing in wonder at the tree in its prodigious highth, its huge trunk shorn of its branches, its lofty head wearing a leafy crown, its wood of a reddish color, remarked that "that tree would have made a fine stick for one of the Titans of old Greece to handle!" And ever after the tree was known as the Titan's red stick. It stood alone in in its pride, and in nature's book of architecture represented the pillar with its chapiter, which towered almost beyond sight. Its name—Baton Rouge—descended to the spot which gave it birth, and finally to the city built upon the site where it grew.

Friday, March 29th, we took passage on the Henry Ames for the above place. It closed the quarter and completed our first round on the New Orleans District. It was raining when we started (at 4 o'clock P. M.,) and the night proved one of the darkest, wildest, and most terrible of the season. The rain fell in torrents and the wind blew a perfect gale. The river was full to overflowing, the water was in many places, ten feet above the land, several crevasses were opened, and others threatened to open, and a pretty fair prospect for a general overflow. The passengers were discussing the probabilities of the Crescent City being inundated, when one of them, a planter from up the river, (a member of the Legislature,) expressed the hope that it would be, "because then the yellow fever will be sure to follow, and that will kill the—niggers off; and the quicker we are rid of them the better will it be for city and country." He charged upon the poor freedmen the war, and all the calamities the South has suffered, and with a burning oath, wished them all in a much hotter place than is to be found anywhere in this latitude: Another evidence that, "having always lived with them, we are their best friends." Said planter was very complacent in conversation and manner, and seemed never for once to have suspected that he, himself was in the broad-way to that brinstone country to which he wished all the descendants of Ham to emigrate. Yet he was practicing in the dialect of devils as industriously as tho' he were expecting soon to do business in that language and ambitious to become proficient in its use against the approaching time of need. And we must do him the justice to say, that we have no doubt that in that particular, as in several others we might mention, he will find himself "perfectly at home" among the fire-eaters of that torrid region Strong affinities are drawing him on—

"As gravitation to the larger orb, the less Attracts thro' matters whole domain"— and he will soon be there. We think that about one more session of the legislature would finish him, and send him to "his own place," where Yankees and freedmen will cease from troubling him, and military authority will no more disturb the fellow-ship of kindred minds! "So mote it be."

We reached "Red Stick" the next day about noon, the storm still continuing. Sunday-morning it rained harder than at any time for three days. But it so far abated that at 11 o'clock A. M., a few came out, and we preached; and again at 3 o'clock. At night administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and eight persons united with the church. Monday, visited the school taught by Mr. and Mrs. Wight, employed by the Freedmen's Aid Society of our Church. It is well attended and numbers increasing, and is a model school for order and thorough teaching; scholars are made understand what they learn. The Freedmen's Bureau also has a school in the place. Several independent schools are privately kept by incompetent colored people, who are doing their race a great injury by their labors. They can neither write legibly, nor read correctly, and yet these schools are a heavy tax upon those who support them, and we wonder that parents have not more judgment than to patronize them instead of the free schools taught by experienced and efficient teachers. It is a great evil and should be speedily corrected. We say not a word against independent schools, where they are taught by competent teachers. There are such, as in New Orleans, and we rejoice in them, and do everything we can to encourage them—the more there are of such, the better. But we protest against the waste of money to support incompetent teachers, especially when free-schools, with accomplished instructors are maintained in the same places.

Monday night we preached again and 19 persons came forward for the prayers of the church. The people have built a nice pulpit, platform and altar, which are well-trimmed and furnished, adding very much to the appearance of the house and comfort of the pastor in his pulpit labors, and the house at night is well lighted. Brother Hayward is industrious, has the good-will and confidence of the people, and is doing a good work. A revival spirit prevails, and a prosperous future is before the church in Baton Rouge There is a Sunday-school of 77 scholars, and a large bible-class. Six persons have joined in full connection the last quarter and 44 on probation—whole number at present 142. One of the above six was Rev. W. F. Watkins, an ordained deacon in Free-Will Baptist Church. He will be an efficient man among them.

Owing to the high-water the people could not get to quarterly meeting from the country appointments, nor could we reach Clinton, so we have no late report from that place. We shall visit there as soon as possible.

Tuesday morning as we were entering the State House grounds on the north side, we heard angry words, on the corner below near the river, and turning, saw a civil officer deal a colored man a heavy blow with a cane, which staggered him and came near felling him to the ground. But gathering himself up, he started to run when the officer drew his revolver and fired upon him. The fugitive cried out that he was shot but continued to run. The shooting, and the cry for help by said officer, soon raised a crowd of both whites and blacks. The freedman was soon overtaken, arrested and lodged in jail. Upon inquiry as to the cause of all we had witnessed, we were told that the freedman who had been beaten and shot had failed to pay his house-rent; that the officer had taken all his goods for debt, and this not meeting the land-lord's claim, he ordered the man arrested and imprisoned till the rest was paid. The freedman unwilling to submit to such a novel process of collecting rent, was trying to escape, when the above scene transpired—we saw it all.

Doubtless that officer and that land-lord have by this time succeeded in impressing upon the mind of that freedman that, "having always lived with him they are his best friends." And doubtless when said officer comes before the people for re-election, all the freedmen of Red Stick, especially those who witnessed the clubbing and shooting of their fellow citizen on that morning will be expected to vote for him. And perhaps (?) they will be in haste to do so! We shall see.

The fifteen months which have passed since we left Baton Rouge, have wrought many changes in society and among our former acquaintances—changes which impart the most solemn and weighty lessons of life, mutation, and time—lessons which will leave their impress upon men and morals to the latest generations. The place is sacred to us by many memories: It was the place of rendezvous for our troops in the department of the Gulf: It was our home during two of the most momentous years of our country's history: Here we preached the Word to thousands whom we shall never see again till we meet at the last great day: Here we performed the last sad rites at the death-bed, and the tomb for hundreds of our country's bravest and ablest men: And here we witnessed in many, many instances the power of the Gospel to comfort in life, to sustain in death, and to save to the uttermost those who fled to the eternal Rock for refuge. The times have changed, but the Cross and the Comforter remain the same, and they are still our only boast, the joy of our pilgrimage, the theme of our song, the strength of our heart and hope and our portion forever. To-morrow we return to the city. B.

The Russian Treaty.

RUSSIAN AMERICA CEDED TO THE UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, March 31.

The President has communicated to the Senate, in its Executive Session, a treaty with Russia, by which that power surrenders to the United States its sovereignty over all Russian America and the adjacent islands. It especially includes the strip 400 miles long, which extends down the coast, thus excluding British America from the Ocean. The Treaty was laid on the table, and will be taken up next week. The Treaty was concluded between the Secretary of State, on behalf of the President of the United States, and the Russian Representatives, on behalf of the Emperor of Russia. The Russian Government agrees to convey to to the United States Government all its possessions on the American continent, known as Russian America, in consideration of the payment of $7,000,000.

The negotiation was discussed at a Cabinet meeting on Friday night. The Russian Minister afterward visited the State Department to arrange the terms, and at an early hour on Saturday morning the arrangement was definitely perfected. The English representatives here are deeply chagrined, and it is said that Sir Frederick Bruce will telegraph to Earl Derby for instructions to protest against its acceptance by our Government. This acquisition more than doubles the United States coast on the Pacific, which now extends from Lower California to Behring Straits, with the exception of the narrow strip comprising British Columbia. The territory ceded by Russia comprises the whole of the Continent of North America west of longitude 141°. It is bounded by British America and the Pacific and Artic Oceans. It includes a great number of islands, and is of the highest importance as a naval depot, and for strategic purposes, It is a valuable fur country, and embraces a vast section of territory, the possession of which will influence in our favor the vast trade of the Pacific. The purchased territory covers upward of 400,000 square miles, and contains about 60,000 inhabitants, half of whom are Esquimaux. The fisheries are very extensive, but the principal commercial wealth of the country is in its fur trade, which would, henceforth, be altogether controlled by American merchants. The acquisition of this territory would give our Government the control of the Russian American telegraph, in case the work should be completed.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY AND THE RUSSIAN POSSESSIONS.

WASHINGTON, March 31.

A small request has been largely answered, as the following petition sent from Washington Territory, seems to have been more than gratified, in the negotiations yesterday, of the treaty concluded between the United States and the Russian Government, for the purchase of the Russian American possessions:

To His Excellency Andrew Johnson, President of the United States:

In reference to the cod and other fisheries, your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of Washington Territory, beg leave to show that abundance of lead-fish, halibut and salmon of excellent quality have been found along the shores of the Russian Possessions. Your memorialists respectfully request your Excellency to obtain such rights and privileges of the Government of Russia as will enable our fishing vessels to visit the ports and harbors of its possessions to the end that fuel, water and provisions may be easily obtained; that our sick and disabled fishermen may obtain sanitary assistance, together with the privilege of curing fish and repairing vessels in need of repairs. Your memorialists further request that the Treasury Department be instructed to forward to the Collector of Customs of this (Puget Sound) district such fishing licenses, abstract journals and log-books as will enable our hardy fishermen to obtain the bounties now provided and paid to the fishermen in the Atlantic States.—Your memorialists finally pray your Excellency to supply such ships as may be spared from the Pacific naval fleet, in exploring and surveying the fishing banks known to navigators to exist along the Pacific coast from the Cortes Banks to Behrings Straits, and, as in duty bound, your memorialists will ever pray.

Passed the House of Representatives Jan. 10, 1866.

EDWARD ELDRIDGE,
Speaker of the House Reps.

Passed the Council Jan. 13, 1866.

HARVEY K. HINES,
President of the Council

The petition is accompanied by the certificate of the Secretary of the Territory as to its being a true copy. The petition, it is seen, was passed more than a year ago, and is the foundation of the treaty now awaiting the ratification of the Senate.

THE CEDED TERRITORY.

The cession of Russian North America to the United States, if consummated, will be the most important international event effecting this continent which has occurred in many years. Such an unimportant part indeed has Russian-America played in the affairs of nations and of men that, when an offer for its cession from one power to another is made known, the announcement conjures up in the mind of nearly every one visions of a cold, barren and uninhabited region, converging about Behrings Straits, and celebrated only because Capt. Beechy and Sir John Franklin voyaged on its coasts. But in this resuscitation of school-day memories, or even in a casual glance at the map of the continent itself, the most important part of the territory would likely escape notice. These are the peninsula of Alaska and the archipeligoes known as George III and Prince of Wales—rather peculiar names for a series of islands forming part of the possessions of the Russian Bear. It is noticeable, however, that the Russians know the islands by other names, and the one named George III by Van ouver, forming part of the archipelago known by the name of that monarch, is by them called Baranov. These islands are formed by inlets of the ocean, and are more properly a narrow strip of land extending for nearly 400 miles along the coast of the Pacific, broken by narrow causeways and arms of the sea extending in every direction.

The principal settlements are in these islands, the largest town being New Archangel, on the island of Sitka, which has a population of only 1000. On the island called George III, or Baranov, is the seat of the governor of all the establishments of Russian America. It has a governor's residence and fortifications, and magazines built of wood, and on its coast is usually a fleet of two frigates and two corvettes. The whole region along these coasts, including the archipelago of Kodiac and the peninsula of Alaska, is exceedingly mountainous, being a succession of lofty peaks, most of them volcanic, one of them reaching nearly fifteen thousand feet in height, and another being little inferior in altitude. The part of the mainland south of Mt. St. Elias, one of the volcanic peaks above referred to, and the loftiest summit on the continent, is nowhere more than thirty-three miles wide. The islands and coasts of the mainland have generally been well explored, but the interior of the country, which looms up prominently on the map is almost entirely unknown. The estimated area of the whole territory is about 394,000 square miles. It has an average length and breadth of 600 miles. The longest line that can be drawn across the country, from Cape Prince of Wales on Behrings Straits, through the narrow strip bordering on British Columbia and the Pacific Ocean, to the extreme southern point of the Russian possessions is 1,600 miles. But it will be seen from its average length and breadth that the mass of the country is tolerably compact. From several expeditions that have been projected into the interior, it seems that the western part of the country is elevated and uneven, while the part extending along the Arctic Ocean is generally flat. The north coast was discovered early in the present century, Capt Cook having previously, as early as 1778, penetrated as far north as Icy Cape. In 1826 Capt. Beechy reached Point Barrow, and at the same time the lamented Sir John Franklin, then Capt. Franklin, traced the coast from the mouth of the Mackenzie River to Return Reef.

The population of Russian America is about 60,000, of which at least 50,000 are Esquimaux. The remaining portion of the inhabitants are Russians, Creoles, Kodiaks and Aleoots. The principal pursuits and chief dependence of the inhabitants are the fisheries and fur-hunting. Little attention is given to agricultural pursuits; but to view this vast territory as wholly forbidding and barren is to fall into a grave error. For, its shores being washed by the warm Pacific stream which sweeps up from the China Sea and breaks near the extreme northwest point of the continent, its atmosphere is toned down to the salubrity of points on the Atlantic coast which are many degrees further from the pole. Far inland there is a region of almost perpetual snow; but on the coast, and as far inland as the breezes from off the China Sea current may reach and modify the rigors of the climate, the land is fruitful and the country inviting.

The fur product has for many years been made a monopoly by the Russian Government, but the United States and Great Britain succeeded in obtaining a lease for the territory from 50° 40' north latitude to 58° 13', and the exclusive privilege of supplying the Russians with agricultural produce and provisions was granted to the Hudson's Bay Company. The monopoly of the other territory remains with the Russian American Company.

It is noticeable that, by the treaties with the United States and Great Britain made in 1824, the late Russian possessions comprehend all the American coast of the Pacific, and the adjacent islands north of the parallel of 54° 40' north latitude, and the whole of the mainland west of the meridian of 141° west longitude, which passes through Mount St. Elias. This boundary treaty was accepted and made binding so long ago as 1824.—N. Y. Tribune.

The richest man in England is the Marquis of Westminister, whose income is about two and a half millions of dollars a year, representing a capital in real and personal estate of about sixty millions. John Jacob Astor, the wealthiest of Americans, is worth about forty millions; A. T. Stewart between twenty and thirty millions, though trade profits make his revenue returns larger than Mr. Astor's. Mr. Peabody is certainly not worth more than Mr. Stewart, if so much. All the Rothschilds, and the Barings, with Mr. Astor, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Peabody thrown in, are not worth one hundred million sterling.

Since 1600 Austria has spent 160 years in 31 different wars, 10 of which were waged with France, 6 with Turkey, 5 with Prussia, 4 with Spain, 1 with Holland, 1 with Denmark, and 4 were relative to the succession. One war lasted 30 years, one 16, one 14, one 13, one 9, and three 7, while the others were from a few months to six years.

Statistical Report

Of Schools for Freedmen in the State of Louisiana, for the month ending March 15, 1867.

Day schools	162
Night schools	48
Total schools	210
Teachers	184
Scholars	8232
Sabbath schools	70
Sabbath School scholars	4058

Only four of the above schools are supported by northern associations.

FRANK R CHASE, 1st Lt. V. R. C.,
and Gen'l Sup't Ed., Bu. R. F. & A. L.
Louisiana.

MARRIED.

At Napoleonville, La., April 7, 1867, by Rev. Thomas Kenneday. LORENZO FAIRFAX to MARTHA HOLSEY.

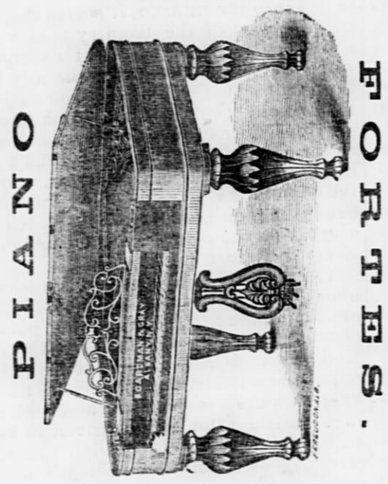
At Napoleonville, La., by the same, ARCHIE CHRISTIAN to ELLEN JONES.

By the same, and at the same place, ROSEMO ELLICK to MARIE JUDY.

By the same, and at thes same place, CHARLES WILLIAMS to PRISCILLA MELANCER.

Information Wanted.

By Nelson Collins, concerning his brother named Ben. Collins, formerly owned by Ned Hicks, in Virginia, and moved to Red River. Please address A. Ross, Wesley Chapel, New Orleans.



By Washington Parker, concerning his father and mother, named Jeffrey and Gracie; were owned by William Branch, in Dinwiddie county, Va.; both afterwards owned by Wm McFarland, Petersburg Va. Also about his brother Monroe, owned by James McFarland, of Petersburg. It has been 30 years since he heard from them. Address Washington Parker, care of W. W. Pugh, Napoleonville, La.

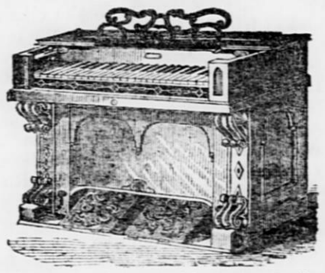
By Jack Lawless, concerning his sister Rachel, in Howard county, Missouri; also concerning Cynthia Lawless; used to belong to Anthony Drain, same State. Also of Bird Lawless, same county and State; belonged to same Drain; also Roland Hughs. Also Hannah; used to belong to Bird Lawless. Any information will be thankfully received by Jack Lawless, Grand Caillou.

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.



Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow Tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER CENT SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,
Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL,

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans, Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.

Corner of Gold street.

FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.
J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

W. H. PEMBERTON,

158.....POYDRAS ST.,.....158

NEW ORLEANS,

Between St. Charles and Carondelet Streets.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN

Drugs, Medicines. Paints, Oils, Colors, Varnishes, Glass, Etc.

Has in store and to arrive, a large supply of the following goods, which he will sell at low figures, either wholesale or retail.

White Lead in Oil, all kinds.
Window Glass, French and American, all sizes.
French and American Zinc.
American and English Venetian Red.
Oils of all descriptions.
Varnish of all kinds.
Stove Polish.
Bi-Carbonate of Soda.
Sal Soda.
Alum.
Castile and Colgate Soaps.
Wash Blue.
Black Writing Ink and Marking Ink.

Manufactured by himself.

Also a great variety of Perfumery and Fancy Articles for the Toilet.

The Store is also well supplied with all kinds af Drugs and Medicines, Fresh and of the Best Quality.

Strangers visiting the City would do well to give him a call. 66-89

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS.

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit a the World's Fair, over the best makers from London Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at tha American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

LANDRETH'S

Warranted Garden Seeds

Have been familiarly known to the American Public for upwards of three-quarters of a century.

THEY SPEAK THEIR OWN PRAISE

WHEREVER PLANTED.

Dealers in Seeds whether country Merchants, Pooksellers, Druggists, or Regular Seedsmen, not already customers of the subscribers are invited to become such.

OUR WHOLESALE PRICE LIST,

Published to the Trade only, will be mailed to all dealers who apply.

Landreth's Rural Register and Almanac for 1867,

Containing numerous hints on Horticulture, will be mailed to all applicants who enclose a two cent stamp with their address to

DAVID LANDRETH & SON,
63:66 Philadelphia, Penn.

MARK YOUR CLOTHING!

Clark's Patent Indelible Pencil!

"Much more convenient than Ink, and equally good as to performance—we judge after several months trial."—Am. Agriculturist.

"Invaluable for marking linen."—Chicago Tribune.

"Remarkable for the ease and neatness with which they can be used."—Detroit Tribune.

"One of the greatest conveniences that can be presented to a housekeeper."—Charleston (S. C.) News.

Manufactured and sold at wholesale by

The Indelible Pencil Co.,
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.

Every Pencil Warranted.

FRANK S. DAME, No. 18 Commercial Place, New Orleans, General Agent for the Southwest. 63:66

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,
Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

ZION'S REFRESHING SHOWERS.—A new Revival Hymn and Tune Book, containing nearly 300 Hymns and Tunes, principally used by Whitfield, Wesley, Knapp, Nettleton, Finney, Earl, Hammond, and other Evangelists, in their revival meetings. It is one of the best books ever published for such services as well as for Sunday Schools and Social Meetings. Price, paper covers, 30 cents, $3 25 per dozen, $25 per 100. Board Covers, 35 cents, $4 per dozen, $30 per 100. Cloth Embossed, gilt, 50 cents, $5 per dozen. $40 per 100. Mailed at the retail price. Compiled by Horace Walters. Author of "S. S. Bell," Nos. 1 and 2, "Choral Harp," "Day School Bell," "Athenæum Collection," "Christian Melodist," etc.

Just published by C. M. TREMAINE,
64:66 No. 481 Broadway, N. Y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By L. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

feb. 3 ly PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO. Cincinnati,

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK, Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,
BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South.

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 STREET

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade. 2—eowtf

THE PIANIST'S ALBUM:

A COLLECTION OF

Marches, Waltzes, Polkas, Redowas, Galops Mazourkas, Quadrilles, Four-hand Pieces, Dances, &c.

A BRILLIANT SET OF PIANOFORTE GEMS,

Suited to every grade of capacity, and indispensable to every Pianist who would become familiar with the POPULAR MUSIC OF THE DAY.

This new volume, being the third of the "HOME CIRCLE," will be welcomed by all who desire to have the Best Pieces in a convenient form. A very large number of the Gems contained in this new compilation are not to be found in any other, though much admired and in constant demand—a fact that will render it the leading book of its kind. Price—plain, $2 50; cloth, $3; cloth, full gilt, $4. Sold by all music dealers, and mailed, post-paid.

OLIVER DITSON & CO, Publishers,
1y 277 Washington st., Boston.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM'L L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,
Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.
O. J. DUNN, Secretary.
C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfeld & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfeld.....Messrs. Rosenfeld, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowltaon & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.
D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the Institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not forgotten."

[feb31

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says; "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Adveriser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened,
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—If turning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Hagard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bile, foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,
J. SWORDS, Proprietor,
No. 52 Dey street, New York.

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, slipping stifle, over heating, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine of Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Baricks & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philadelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. mr12-3 m

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,
NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Psychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Marteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.
feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and under-tand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference: none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandize in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1y

DOCTOR

L. Q. C. WISHART'S

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL!!

A GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE CURE OF

THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

☞ It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safe and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the Pine Tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system.

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs.

It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation.

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Blind and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, and Diptheria, etc., etc., etc.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

There is not a medicine discovered that has so much power to dissolve the thick mucus that stops up the wind passages of the lungs as the Pine Tree Tar Cordial, which subdues the fever and inflammation that destroy the power and vitality of the lungs, and consign the patient to the grave. We say to all whose lungs are affected, use Dr Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial with great confidence, as it has restored thousands of cases to health that were hopelessly give up to die.

COLDS AND COUGHS

are speedily cured by the use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it does its work at once, and the patient is cured before other medicines would have had time to have any beneficial effect.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR SCROFULA.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial will purify the blood and cleanse it, of all scrofulous matter that is constantly breeding sores internal and external. Salt Rheum, Sore Legs, and all Skin Diseases are especially cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial; it is good to be applied internally and externally in the above cases, as it has great power to heal where it comes in contact with the human flesh.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

is a great remedy for Chronic Croup and Diptheria, which is sending thousands and thousands of children to a premature grave. It can be cured by Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

Out of ten thousand cases where it has been tried in the past two years, it has never missed a case where it was taken in time. All families should have it on hand, as it gives instant relief in Croup and Diptheria.

BLIND AND BLEEDING PILES.

Thousands of cures of this most painful and dangerous complaint are now enjoying the blessings of health by the use of the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. Its great healing properties will stop the bleeding and pain immediately.

CONSTIPATION OF THE BOWELS.

Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is a great remedy for costiveness, as it acts upon the surface of the stomach and causes a flow of gastric juice, enabling the stomach rapidly to digest the food, which gives health and vigor to the bowels, and causes regular evacuations. Let no one that is suffering from constipation of the bowels neglect to use the Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND GRAVEL

are speedily and permanently cured by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. It subdues the inflammation in the Kidneys, and in Gravel it dissolves and carries away the sediment which forms what is called stone in the bladder.

ASTHMA AND COUGH.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial gives instantaneous relief in cases of Asthma and Whooping Cough. It often cures whooping before it has run half its course; as it acts at once upon the phlegm and mucus, and expels them from the throat, and the sufferer is relieved. In cases of Asth-

DR. WISHART'S DYSPEPSIA PILLS WITH THE CORDIAL,

as they have never been known to fail to cure that disease.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The Pine Tree Tar Cordial acts with great power upon the Liver, and restores it to a speedy action, giving it a healthy secretion by its cooling and equalizing principle.

THE CAUSES OF CONSUMPTION IN THE LUNGS.

A sharp and poisonous corroding humor, either coming from other parts, or breeding in the lungs. From our own observation, we conclude that of ninety-six out of every hundred that die with consumption, their disease originated first from Dyspepsia—Indigestion. The food fermenting, souring and rottening in the stomach, creating a poisonous catarrh, which is drawn by the brain to the head, passing through its different ramifications, creating inflammation throughout its course. The brains, eyes, and all the organs of the head receiving its poisonous and corroding effect, uniting together, they struggle to relieve themselves from its grasp hence comes dizziness, dimness of vision, headache, and staggering in walking. This phlegm and catarrh is discharged from the head to the throat, falling on the bronchial tubes filling up the air passages of the lungs, and if suffered to remain there, will chicken, corrode, and breed ulcers in the lungs; then comes ugh and consumption. We say to the sick, use with great perseverence, one bottle after another, until it has had power enough to dissolve the mucus and phlegms which stop up the air passages, and expectorate it from the lungs.

DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

☞ In all cases of Dyspepsia with Consumption use

DR. WISHART'S

Great American Dyspepsia Pills,

WITH THE

TAR CORDIAL.

L. Q. C. WISHART, M. D.,
Office and Store 10 North Second Street, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. of America.

WHOLESALE AGENTS:

BARNES, WARD & CO., 24 Magazine street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

☞ Sold by all Druggists. mh3 1y

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,
West Troy, N. Y.

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE,

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollar per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS

OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytania Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,
Agent for locating Homesteads,
Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.
Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR,

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in COLD water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $455, $540, $550, $600, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms, &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room.—Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhau, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority being largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 536 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT,
No. 71 Nassau street,
Mh2m1 New York City.

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 16. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1867. Whole No.—66.

Tour in the East.

RUINS OF CÆSAREA.

(Editorial.)

At 2 P. M. we left Sebustieh for Cæsarea, and at 8 o'clock in the evening reached the little village of Bakah on the Plain of Sharon. It was a charming night; the full moon silvered plain and mountain; a soft breeze was blowing from the South; an unbroken silence rested on all nature, and the hour was well adapted to meditation and prayer.

At 7 o'clock the next morning we were in the saddle, but while waiting for the dragoman to load the baggage-mules, an April shower came on, deluging the plain. Burnooses and Macintoshes were called for, but did us little service. The rain ceasing, we started on our journey, but had not reached the southern limit of the town when the storm was renewed with ten-fold violence. For an hour we stood upon the plain uncovered, amid a drenching rain and exposed to the fury of a raging wind. But when the storm had spent its fury, and the clouds were emptied of their waters, a gorgeous rainbow spanned the heavens, and onward we dashed over hill and plain. Coming to a stream without a bridge, our horses plunged in, sinking to their haunches, and struggling hard for the opposite bank. We were now on the prairie-like plain of Sharon, of whose famous "rose" Solomon sang, and of whose "ornaments" Isaiah spake. Its pasture land has a fame as old as David, for here lived Shitrai, the Sharonite, who kept the king's flocks We inquired of the natives for the "Rose of Sharon," but found them unacquainted with it by that name. We were shown the "Imperial thorn," which some believe to have been the same as those composing the Savior's crown. It is large and gorgeous, with a long, lancet-like briar, and well becoming a mock imperial crown. At 10 A. M. we came to the shores of a clear blue lake, said to have been lost since the days of the Crusaders. Flocks of wild duck were floating on its bosom, and the Bedouins informed us that it is perennial and abounds in delicious fish. It is bounded on the north-west by a high sand bank—the color and fineness of the sand reminding us of Debbet er Ramleh, in Arabia. It was here we enjoyed the best view of Sharon—of its extent, undulating surface, oaken groves, grain, fields and flowers. For an hour we rode over a rich tract of meadow-land, now overgrown with a forest of thorns and brambles, pricking and scratching both man and beast in the most merciless manner. In half an hour we reached the outer wall of ancient Cæsarea, and at 1 P. M. encamped within its massive ruins.

Owing to the intestine broils among the Beduins, and the frequent robberies committed here, few travelers have attempted the visit; but trusting in Him who rules all hearts, we were permitted to explore these interesting ruins during nearly two days without molestation. Few cities have a more important political and religious history than Cæsarea. From a solitary town it rose to be the most magnificent city in Palestine, under the auspices of Herod, the subject and friend of Augustus.

Impelled by on unbounded ambition to rival, if possible, the commercial and political importance of Rome, he spared neither art or treasure in founding his new imperial city. He encompassed it with walls many miles in circumference, and upon a commanding hill within the walls built the acropolis, surrounding it with another wall, much of which, with its bastions, gates and towers, still remain. Upon the summit of that hill he erected his famous temple in honor of Augustus, in which he placed idol statues not inferior to that of Jupiter Olympus. In front of the acropolis, on the rock-bound shore, he constructed one of the grandest harbors ever made; to the south-east of it he built a circus for chariot racing, and to the south a theater, commanding a view of the sea.

But the history of Cæsarea was as brief as it was splendid, and the rapidity of its decline was only equalled by the suddenness of its rise. Of all those magnificent structures, only heaps of ruins remain. The outer wall is so hidden by weeds and rubbish that some have supposed that it never existed, and have wondered at the smallness of the town, supposing the walls of the acropolis to have defined the limits of the city. Not a stone of the temple of Jupiter can be identified, and the splendid mole, the boast of the age, is a complete wreck. Enough, however, of the latter remains in the form of arched ceilings, mosaic pavements, polished columns, and sculptured capitals, to indicate its pristine grandeur. Beyond a little bay to the north are the remains of another harbor, or perhaps a pier, extending 270 feet into the sea, and whose 100 prostrate columns are washed by the surging waves. The walls of the acropolis indicate great strength; they are flanked with bastians and surmounted with towers; a deep moat surrounds them on three sides; in the north-east angle is a grand arched gateway, now in ruins, which seems to have been the principal entrance to the city. Upon the site of the temple of Jupiter are the remains of the Cathedral of Cæsarea. It was built of bevelled stones, and consisted of a nave, two side aisles and a semi-circular chancel in the east end. On the west are four immense buttresses, which formed a grand portico to this temple of Christian worship. But the most interesting ruin is the theater, in which occurred the death of Herod. It is to the south of the town, and was probably a semi-circle. The ground retains the form of the building, and much of the masonry has survived the waste of time. In the arena are broken granite columns; the one we measured was three feet in diameter. As in the amphitheaters of Rome, Capua and Pompeii, there is, no doubt, a circular passage way between the arena and the outer wall, which is now closed and hidden by the rubbish that has accumulated for centuries. On the south side is one of the principal entrances to the arena, and the only one now to be seen. It is 10 feet 6 inches wide, and 48 feet long. In the north-east part of the building is one seat entire, and in its place, just as it was left by the last spectator who occupied it. Viewed in its connection with sacred history, this amphitheater awakened within us an impressive interest. The arrangement of the interior is in keeping with the account of Herod's death as furnished by St. Luke. Like all Oriental theaters, it was without a roof; the seats of the auditors were arranged on the east, and the throne on which the king stood was on the west, toward the sea. Herod had just put St. James to death, and had attempted the death of Peter. Coming to Cæsarea to celebrate the festival, he arrayed himself in the gorgeous robes of state, and early in the morning entered the theater to deliver an oration. The sun rising over the eastern wall shone in his strength upon the dazzling robes of the king, and intoxicated by the magnificence of the spectacle, and the eloquence of the royal orator, in all the fulsome flattery of the east, the people shouted; "It is the voice of a god, and not of a man." But how great must have been their consternation when "immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory; and he was eaten of worms and gave up the ghost." And now, after the lapse of 18 centuries, the scene of the tragedy is a desolation. Rank weeds grow where royal feet trod. The hungry jackal and sly fox haunt the palace of kings, and winds and waves mournfully resound in deserted halls, where the voices of revelry were heard.

But there were holier associations and dearer memories that attracted us to Cæsarea. It was the residence of Philip and his four virgin daughters. It was the abode of the devout Cornelius, at whose house Peter preached, and here was the prison and pulpit of St. Paul. There he preached of "righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come" before a trembling Felix; here he made that matchless defense before Agrippa, which almost persuaded the king to be a Christian; and from this harbor, now in ruins, he sailed a prisoner to Rome.

The Story of the Iliad.

A SHORT SUMMARY FOR THE BENEFIT OF THOSE WHO NEVER READ THE GREAT POEM OF ANTIQUITY.

From Fenton's Lectures on Greece.

The story of the Iliad is very simple. It begins with the quarrel of Agamemnon and Achilles about a captive girl in the ninth year of the war. Achilles in anger withdraws from the Grecian camp. A series of battles follow, in which the Greeks, deprived of their swift-footed champion, suffer defeat and slaughter. In the meantime the secondary heroes press forward and become the leading figures in the martial picture. In separate chants, the valiant deeds of Diomedes, Ajax, Menelaus, Agamemnon are commemorated. But the Trojans, led on by the crested Hector, drive the Greeks down to the very ramparts of the ships. One by one the heroes are wounded and disabled, and the prospect of disastrous overthrow stares the army in the face. Agamemnon, at length, convinced of the fatal error, and anxious to recall the hero, sends an embassy with the offer of ample reparation.

The proposal is haughtily rejected. The war again proceeds, with varying fortune. The Greeks are driven within their walls, and the Trojans, led on by Hector, threaten to fire the ships. The battle wavers, Hector is wounded, and the Trojans are driven back. Achilles at length consents that Patroclus, his brother-in-arms, shall put on his armor and go to battle. The appearance of this champion, clad in the complete steel of the son of Thetis, at first strikes terror into the hosts of Troy, and gives heart to the Argives. But he is slain and despoiled of his arms by Hector, and fierce combats for the possession of the dead body follow. The Greeks prevail, and bear the slain hero back to the camp. Achilles, overwhelmed with sorrow, abandons himself to unrestrained lamentation. This calls his mother, Thetis, up from the sea. She finds him prostrate with grief, yet eager to exact a bloody vengeance from Hector and the Trojans; but Hector has the armor. She goes to the smithy of Hephalistes, who readily forges a new shield of divine workmanship, a breast-plate brighter than the blaze of fire, a strong-wrought helmet with a golden crest and metal greaves. Achilles receives the arms, becomes reconciled with Agamemnon, who sends him precious gifts and restores the captive Brisels. After lamenting over the dead Patroclus, he mounts the car and rushes to the field, careless of life and longing only for vengeance. And now the war comes to its turning point. The Trojan and Grecian champions are arrayed in deadly strife, and the divided deities share, according to their several likings, in the battle. As the action approaches a close, the description rises in grandeur. At length both armies are withdrawn from the field and Achilles and Hector alone remain. A single combat follows, and Hector falls. Achilles insults the body of his foe, lashes him to his car, and drags him down to his tent, in the sight of Priam and his Trojans, who gaze heart-stricken from the walls upon the dreadful spectacle.

The Greeks returning to the camp, funeral games are performed in honor of Patroclus, and twelve Trojan youths are slaughtered to appease his shade. Thus twelve days are consumed. Priam resolves to visit the hostile camp and to implore Archilles the restoration of his dead son. An auspicious omen inspires him with hope. He departs, taking with him costly gifts, by which to appease his vindictive enemies. He is met by Hermes in the form of a young man, who guides him to the tent of Achilles. The Grecian hero, astonished at his sudden appearance, gives him a hospitable reception, and, overcome by pity for his unequaled woes, consents to surrender the body of Hector. It is borne back to the city; the inhabitants receive it with loud lamentations; funeral rites are performed, and so the poem closes International Anti-Slavery Conference.

An anti-slavery conference will be held at Paris in the second or third week of June. It is expected that representatives will be present from Brazil, England and the English colonies, France and the French colonies, Holland and the Dutch colonies, Hayti and St. Domingo, the African Republic of Liberia, Portugal, Spain and the Spanish Antilles, Venezuela and the United States of America. It is hoped that Chili, Peru and Mexico will also be represented, and that missionaries and recent travelers will be present to give an account of the actual condition of Africa.

The programme announces three sections—the slave trade, slavery, the results of emancipation. The papers under the first section will embrace statistics relating to the trans-Atlantic slave-trade, the internal trade in Africa, the Brazilian coast trade, the Chinese and Indian coolie traffic, and the engagé system of France. The slavery section will discuss the general subject, with special reference to emancipation in Brazil, the Portuguese colonies and the Spanish Antilles.

In the third section, papers will be read on the results of emancipation in the British, French and Dutch colonies, and on the condition and prospects of the freedmen of this country. Written statements or documents upon these subjects are solicited from those who cannot be present. It is desired that as many as possible of those who have been identified with the anti-slavery movement, or are interested in it, shall take part in this meeting, either personally or by communication.

A circular letter from Mr. Chamerovzow, secretary of the British sub-committee, states that Mr. Cook has placed himself at the disposal of those who wish to attend this meeting. All communications should be sent before the 15th of May at latest, to one of the following gentlemen:

Paris—M. Augustin Cochon, 25 Rue St. Guilliame, Fauborg St. Germain.

Madrid—Senor J. L. de Vizcarrondo, Calle del Soldado, 4, Principal.

London—L. A. Chamerovzow, 27 New Broad Street, E. C.

Drew Theological Seminary.

The Church has already been informed of the gift of half a million from Daniel Drew, of New York, to found a Theological Seminary and Female College at Carmel, Putnam Co., N. Y. On the thirteenth of March an additional step in the history of these institutions was taken in the organization of their respective Boards of Trustees. The Board for the Theological Seminary is composed of seventeen members; the President of the Faculty; eight ministers, and eight laymen; and a majority of them must always be members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The eight ministerial members of the Board are Bishop Janes, and Revs. M. D. C. Crawford, W. H. Ferris, A. C. Foss, C. B. Sing, L. M. Vincent, D. Curry, and W. Wells; and the lay members are D. Drew, E. L. Fancher, D. D. Chamberlin, D. L. Ross, J. H. Achershausen, W. H. Drew, B. F. Manierre, and F. H. Root. At their meeting for organization, Rev. John McClintock, D. D., was elected President of the Faculty, and so became the seventeenth member of the Board. This Board of Trustees is so constituted that their term of office is to be eight years; eight of them going out of office in 1868, the General Conference naming their successors, and the remaining eight going out in 1872, the right of nomination always remaining with the General Conference. By such provision the institution is forever secured to the Church.

After the organization of the Board, Mr. Drew signified his intention to endow the institution at once by a donation of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in productive securities, to be kept as a perpetual fund, and its interest to be employed in paying Professors' salaries and the current expenses of the institution. He also made known his purpose to donate to the institution a farm of about one hundred acres, and an additional lot of about four acres and a dwelling house It is his purpose additionally to erect at his own expense the necessary buildings; and this is to be done at an early day. The Board voted to accept these princely gifts and appointed a committee to arrange for their legal acceptance. It then adjourned to meet again on the third of May.

As Mercury sprang full grown from the brain of Jupiter, so this "school of the prophets" starts at once into a full and vigorous manhood from the munificent hand of its founder. It will begin with a Faculty selected from the ablest men in the Church, and will soon congregate around itself extensive libraries and cabinets; those essential prerequisites of a liberal education. Mr. Drew, in his magnificent educational foundation, gives substantial evidence that he has not lived in vain. He has added to the world's instrumentalities for human improvement. And he will live in grateful memories as long as men shall attach importance to the culture of the brain and the heart.—Pittsburg Advocate.

African M. E. Church.

The following is from the able pen of Bishop Payne, of the A. M. E. Church, published in the Western Christian Advocate of March 20th, and as it fully corroborates our views of the subject on which it treats, we give it to our readers:

THE COMMISSION.

BALTIMORE, MD., March 22, 1866.

Revs. John Turner, Charles Burch, and Henry M. Turner:

DEAR BRETHREN,—You are hereby commissioned to appear before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and present the document that accompanies this.

In the speeches you may be called upon to make, or the questions to answer, do not forget that you are to keep within the letter and the spirit of our written propositions; saying nothing and yielding nothing that would fetter or jeopardize our ecclesiastical freedom, or, that may conflict with the principles of right, equity, and truth.

And may the Lord Jesus be with you, to render your mission a blessing, spiritual and temporal, to all concerned.

DANIEL A. PAYNE.
ALEXANDER W. WAYMAN.

Such are the Proposals, such the instructions, such the restrictions given our Commissioners to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. What is meant by them? Nothing more, nothing less than "glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men."

Yes, we say to all men, North and South, East and West, that if the African Methodist Episcopal Church did not, and would not excite their enslaved brethren to insurrection, she can have no possible reason to excite her emancipated brethren to insurrection. "Love your enemies," is the command of our Lord—love our enemies is the response of our hearts. To execute our Proposals of peace and good-will, we commissioned our delegates.

To these Proposals, based upon the principles of justice, equality and truth, we restricted our erring delegates.

But alas! alas! for them and for us, overleaping these boundaries, they must lift their arm to strike a blow at the Methodist Episcopal Church! Is there a word in the Proposals or in the Commission authorizing such a deed? One shall look in vain to find it What induced them so to act, I know not. They may have been goaded to it by the treatment of certain agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church. To me, it always has been a cause of chagrin, because they were not sent to widen the breach between any Church and ourselves, but, if need be, to imitate the example of the self-sacrificing Roman, and leap into the chasm, that it might be closed forever!

Having shown what we meant by our Proposals and protested against the attack which our Commissioners made upon the Methodist Episcopal Church, we now enter our disclaimer against the sentiments and views of the "Texas Christian Advocate" concerning "The Position of the African Methodist Episcopal Church." In its issue of January 10, it says:

"The fraternal relations established at our late General Conference between the Church South and this excellent body of Christians remains undisturbed. It is a little remarkable that while the Northern Church declines to fraternize with us on account of the negro, the most intelligent body among this race on this continent deliberately announce to the world, that it regards the Southern Branch of the church its true friend, and has voluntarily sought our friendship and support. This act of the African Methodist Episcopal Church has perplexed our Northern friends amazingly. It is easily explained. The Southern Church—and, we may add, the Southern people—are now, and have ever been, better friends to this people, more deeply concerned for their welfare than any other class or section in this land. The colored people have found it out. They prefer the logic of facts to the sophistry of empty professions, and judging each section by its own works, they give their verdict in favor of the Southern branch."

To all this, as one of the Bishops of the African Methodist Church, I earnestly protest, and feel in duty bound to say, that while we are anxious to live in fraternal relations with our Southern brethren, we do not "prefer" them to our Northern friends. In a State where two thousand and seven hundred freedmen have been butchered in cold blood during the short period of one year, they may make such a declaration for the purpose of saving their lives.

But the members of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, who for a half century presented an unbroken phalanx against caste in the North and slavery in the South, can say, and will say, no such thing. "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace," we have lived, and intend to live, side by side with our white brethren, but with the full conviction that the civilization of the North is as superior to that of the South as the glory of the sun is above that of the moon—that the Christianity which opens the common school and the college to all, must be preferable to that which closes them against millions of men simply because they are of African descent.

Since the above was written, the Christian Recorder informs us that "Bishop Andrew, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in a letter to the Nashville Christian Advocate, says:

'We have lost millions of dollars by having our slaves taken from us by arbitrary power, and we accept the issue in good faith, and intend to abide by it; but our convictions and opinions are not changed.'

Now, this aged Bishop is also the veteran leader of the African Methodist Episcopal Church; and when we recollect his relations to the split of 1844, we know exactly what he means when he says, "Our convictions and opinions are not changed."

Now, put this declaration of the Bishop along side of that of the Texas Christian Advocate, and then we see what a servile attitude the African Methodist Episcopal Church is made to occupy. And should the Church of which I am a minister indorse the utterance of the Texas Christian Advocate, I shall be ashamed of her, because it will prove her to be not only cringing and servile, but more—it will prove her to be an incorrigible dolt, fit not for liberty and freedom, but for perpetual bondage or serfdom.

Referring to this subject, the Methodist of March 30th, makes the subjoined sensible remarks in which we most cordially concur:

The relations between our Church and the African Methodists are assuming a shape far from agreeable to either party. In order to secure the lease of the churches, built and paid for by the Southern colored Methodists but legally held by white trustees belonging to the Church, South, the African Methodist Commissioners have entered into close fraternal relations with the Southern Methodist Church, and have, with Bishop Wayman, assumed an attitude of bitter hostility to the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Texas Advocate quotes the resolutions of an African Methodist official board in Texas violently denouncing us, and an equally denunciatory document put forth by Bishop Wayman. On the other hand, African Methodist Bishop Payne condemns the proceedings of the Commissioners sent by his Church to the Southern Methodist General Conference, and declares that they have exceeded their instructions. The truth is, that the African Methodist Church finds itself in the enviable position of being assiduously courted by two lovers. The one has good principles, but the other has—property! What wonder, if at a loss how to choose, she should be momentarily dazed? Our Church will act wisely, we think, and escape from a humiliating position, if it shall let the African Methodist Church alone and go its own way.

Vienna Correspondence London Telegraph.

Terrible Scene in a Ball-Room.

While hecatombs of fowels and oceans of beer were disappearing in these apartments, the chairs were all being cleared out of the concert room, and about half-past twelve o'clock dancing commenced, shortly to be brought to an untimely close by one of those terrible tragedies of every-day life that realize the ghastly Egyptian custom by which one guest, at least, at every feast was compelled to accept a skeleton for a neighbor. A very charming and accomplished young lady, the wife of Earnesvon Teshenberg, the editor of the Wiener Zeitung, was leaving the supper-room with her husband, intending to return home. While crossing the ball-room, where a brilliant waltz was being played, a friend asked her to take a single turn round the room. The temptation was to great to be resisted, so consigning her bernous to her husband, she joined the dancers, and was whirled off with great rapidity by her partner. She had scarcely got half round the huge circle when she fell from his arms, as though struck by a thunderbolt, dead. They raised her from the ground gently, and carried her into another room. A dozen doctors were in attendance, and every expedient that science could suggest was tried to restore consciousness to the fair young form lying so strangely still in its gay toilette. All was in vain. She was dead. A smile upon her lips; flowers in her hair. Of the scene I cannot convey an idea; such agony as that I witnessed on Sunday morning in the robing-room of the Gartenbaugesellschaft is too dreadful to recall—too sacred to describe. The gay groups melted away in breathless, horror-striken hurry; within a few minutes the spacious ball-room was silent and empty; of all the "Hesperus" members and their guests, none but a handful of mourners remained behind to watch over that which half an hour before had been a happy wife and mother. I have now witnessed three sudden deaths in ball-rooms—the first two were, if possible, even more terrible than the last. In the first case, a lovely girl was shot through the heart by the man whom she was engaged to; in the second, the belle of the ball was burned to death before her garments, which had caught fire while she was being whisked past the open fireplace, could be torn off. But the tragical episode of yesterday morning is rendered more melancholy than either by the remembrance that two little children, the eldest not three years old, are left motherless by the consequences of a waltz!

Be truthful. Speech without truth is mere babble. There might be more honesty in society; men and women, by flattery, try to deceive each other. But this same flattery is nothing but devil's sugar—sweet in the mouth, bitter in its results.

New Orleans Advocate.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Rev. J. P. NEWMAN, D. D. . . . Editor.
Rev. W. M. HENRY, ... Asst. Editor.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

Rev. A. C. McDonald.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman.
Rev. R. K. Diossy.
Rev. Jos. Welch.
Rev. W. N. Darnell.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

One Year $4 00
Six Months 2 00
Three Months 1 00

INVARIABLY IN ADVANCE.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

One Square, first insertion.....$1 50
" each subsequent insertion... 75
(10 lines of solid Nonpareil constitute a square.)

☞Liberal arrangements will be made with yearly advertisers.

SATURDAY, APRIL 20, 1867.

The New Orleans Advocate can be obtained at the News Room of A. Simeus, 85 Baronne street.

Official Dishonesty.

That our denunciation, in a former article, of official dishonesty was not over severe, is evident from God's scathing rebuke of the sin and evil under consideration. With a directness which admits of no doubt: with a severity of language which discloses the high displeasure of the Divine mind, and with a constancy in reproving this iniquity which never falters either out of respect to person, time or place, God's penmen warn, reprove and denounce those who are guilty of official corruption. Let us take a few of the more pungent passages of Scripture to illustrate the statement: "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with God, which frameth mischief by a law? Woe unto them which justify the wicked for a reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him. Her princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, to destroy souls, and to get dishonest gains. Thou shalt not take a gift; for a gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the ways of the righteous. He that receiveth gifts, overthroweth the land." This is God's opinion of dishonest officials. And it was in a moment of conscious innocence and honest pride that Samuel said, "Whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or of whose hand have I received any bribe to blind my eyes therewith? and I will restore it you. (To do this, some of our office-holders would have to give up all they have.) And the people said, Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken aught of any man's land." This is a clean record!

Such is the testimony of God against the sin under consideration. And now conceding the prevalence of official dishonesty, and its condemnation alike by human and Divine law, the pertinent question is, How can the evil be corrected? Evidently public sentiment should be educated up to the point of correction. As a rule, the moral character of civil officers reflects the moral character of the people; yet we cannot safely charge the American people with such laxity of morais as to approve the corruption of those in power. Public evils frequently result from public indifference, and we judge this to be true of the case in hand. In our larger towns especially, the better class of community manifest but little concern as to those elected to administer the affairs of state. Left to themselves, the low, ignorant and selfish elevate to office those of their own stamp, and supported by such a constituency, office-holders feel at liberty to defraud the public to the extent of their wishes and opportunity. The responsibility, therefore, rests upon the better class of citizens, whose unconcern in political matters has allowed the rabble to rule and ruin. But the pulpit, the press, the rostrum, and every agency that can educate public opinion is bound to give "line upon line, precept upon precept; here a little and there a little," until our public men are compelled to measure up to a higher standard of morality.

And this result is to be attained by the nomination for office of men of the right stamp. Hitherto the difficulty has been that good men declined to hold office. Love of retirement, preference for private enterprises, unwillingness to associate with the vile and unscrupulous, are the motives which have worked this disinclination. But such reasons are insufficient. The public weal, and not private preferences, should be the honorable choice of every citizen. Rising above the selfishness of personal pursuits, he should display that patriotism which is ever the crowing glory of the State. If the public welfare is not a sufficient inducement to accept the suffrages of the people, then it would not be unwise to compel the acceptance by penal laws. For we hold that the citizen owes his first duty to the State, and if in neglect of that duty the State suffers, he should suffer accordingly. But the chief difficulty of the case lies not so much in this as in a failure to nominate for office our best men. Such men can be induced to accept office if properly brought before the people. Not office-seekers themselves, and indifferent as to popular applause, they await the call of their fellow citizens. It may not be easy to accomplish this contemplated revolution, yet it is practicable. It should be inaugurated by those municipal, state and national officials who have large appointing powers. There the reformation should commence. For it is a palpable fact, that the appointees, whether in city, State, or nation, control the nominating conventions and the ensuing elections. Let our mayors, governors, the President, and heads of departments set the example, and the people will follow and the revolution will be complete.

And as a final security against the evil we contemplate, the salary of our civil officials should be commensurate with their duties and their expenses of living. We believe the inadequate compensation which such persons receive is one of the most fruitful causes of official dishonesty. A man with a large family to support, receives the pittance of $1500 per annum, which is barely enough for his individual wants. This, in itself, is a temptation to steal, and we do not doubt that in too many cases such is the fact. Men in private life can live on less than those in official stations. Safety and duty, therefore, demand that those who honorably serve the State, should be so compensated for their services, as to be placed above the temptation to rob the public. Remove the temptation, and then if the official is guilty of peculation, let him suffer the fullest and severest penalty of the law.

"New Comers"

Old Jacob Barker wrote a letter to the N. O. Times, one day this week, in which he makes another "fling" at "new comers," that is, those who have settled here since the commencement of the war. Did we believe the "old banker" to be the only "respectable citizen" of New Orleans, who entertains such sentiments and feelings towards the new residents of this city, we should pity his gray hairs and pass over his folly in silence, but regarding him as the representative of a large class in this community, whose views on this subject are identical, we cannot therefore omit the opportunity to express our emphatic dissent from him and all who sympathize with him on this subject. And it is pertinent to inquire, who are the "new comers," at whom the "old man" launches his anathemas? The majority of them are the honorably discharged soldiers of the Republic. In the hour of national peril, they left happy Northern homes and lucrative business pursuits, to put down armed rebellion; and when such men as Jacob Barker were not suspected of their loyalty, they were enduring the hardships of a Southern camp life, to save the Union of their fathers. It were natural for them to settle on the soil which they had helped to conquer, and men capable of such conquest cannot but make good citizens. In the six thousand now residing in New Orleans, there is a larger per centage of average intelligence, industry and enterprise than can be found in any other class of like numbers in the South. Next to the soldiers, are those who came for business purposes, and not a few of them are among the most successful and public spirited citizens in our midst. They adorn every profession with their skill, and are the shining ornaments in every department of secular life. A few of the "new comers" have proved themselves unworthy of the Northern States which gave them birth, but most of the unworthy ones were pure when they came and fell after they arrived.

Now we object to the abuse of our new residents for the following reasons:

1. It is anti-American. American citizenship is as broad as our national domain. The sectional proscription which grew out of the anti-republican doctrine of State-rights, fell with the rebellion and is buried in the same tomb; there is not therefore, even this pretense against the right of any citizen of the United States, to reside in any State of the Union he may elect. For prudential reasons, the election laws of any State may demand a residence for a given time within its limits, before one may vote, yet excepting this, there is no legal bar to the possession and exercise of all the rights and immunities of American citizenship, in whatsoever State a residence may be chosen. And in this connection, we cannot but express the wish, that Congress may assume to define the rights of citizenship for the whole nation, so that wheeever the citizen may be so-journing at the time, he may permitted to vote for President and members of Congress.

2. This prejudice is not only anti-American, but the history of New Orleans is proof of its folly. The men in our city, who to-day are eminent in the several departments of life, were "new comers." The great men of this city were born on a foreign soil. Christian Roselius, of lawyers first, is a Swede by birth; Dr. Stone, the acknowledged head of our medical faculty, is a native of Vermont, where he worked as a stone-cutter; while Jacob Barker himself, was born a hickory quaker, at Nantucket, where there and in New York, he was an original aboltionist, and from his lips Judge Kelly of Pennsylvania, received his first lessons in abolitionism. Most of our prosperous merchants were born on or around the "Hub" of the universe, and are still proud of the city of "new ideas." To come down from great things to small, even Mr. King of the N. O. Times, whose paper has so much to say about the "descent of the harpies" and the "one fell-swoop of adventurers" and the "turbulent new comers," even Mr. King, is a Pennsylvania Dutchman by birth. Most of these gentlemen came to New Orleans as "adventurers," resolved either to wait for "something to turn up," or to turn up something for themselves; and their prosperity is conclusive that the Crescent City is a good place to turn up in; it is a capital city for "new comers," and we can only account for the violent prejudices of Messrs. Barker and King to our new residents, on the old score, that "two of a trade can't agree." But gratitude requires that these gentlemen shall "look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged." And this reminds us of another passage of Holy Writ: "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

3. And this prejudice is impolitic and not economical. This community needs an infusion of new blood once in seven years, at least. Left to themselves, they would relapse into barbarism like the Chinese, before the English "new comers" took possession of the Celestial City. It is a great historic fact, that all the mighty cities of the past and present, owe their greatness to "new comers." Jerusalem, to the Hebrews; Athens and Carthage, to the Tyrians; Rome, to Remus and Romulus; Paris and London to the Romans; New York, to the Dutch; Boston to the Puritans; and New Orleans, to the English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh, French, Germans, Italians, Spanish, Chineese, Africans and Yankees. Among the more respectable of the world's "new comers," we may mention, Abraham, Cadmus, Romulus, Alexander, Julius Cæsar, Napoleon, Andrew Jackson, all of our forefathers and Jacob Barker.

"New Orleans Republican."

A good face adds much to a man's appearance Mechanically the Republican does not excite our admiration. For the sake of the cause it represents, we could have wished that our new Union Daily had been issued in quarto-form and with a bolder heading. This wish however, may yet be realized, for time and prosperity will enable the publishers to make these desirable improvements.

But the inspiring spirit of the Republican is admirable. The profoundest sympathy is expressed in every line with the great questions of the day. Dignified in diction, its editorials are earnest vindications of Unionism and Freedom. Not censorious, its suggestions are judicious, and while it does not designedly excite sectional animosities, yet it is firm in its defence of the right and the true.

We hail with gladness the advent among us, of its editor-in-chief, Gen. Brown, late of Chicago. Having bravely fought to save the nation, he is now here to assist in the reconstruction of the South. A cultured gentleman, he is withal a devout and earnest christian; he is therefore enabled to impart a moral tone to his paper, which cannot fail to be appreciated by every good citizen. New Orleans stands in need of moral instructions no less than sound political ideas. Associated with Gen. Brown, are Messrs. Page, Tracy, Young, Robinson and Rierdon, whose graceful pens will add largely to the interest and success of the Republican. These gentlemen are in every sense qualified to furnish us with a loyal and high-toned daily, which to Union men is a desideratum. Professing to be neutral, our City Dailies are notoriously partizan Forgetting the thousands of loyal men in New Orleans, who have been compelled to read the Times and its cotemporaries to learn therefrom the news, the editors thereof have had no word of comfort for them. A common respect for the opinions of our Generals in command and for others whom we have mentioned, should have impressed our city editors, that they should have given, at least, one loyal editorial out of seven, but in lieu thereof, every day's morning and evening issue has been intensely partizan and always on the wrong side. But the good time has at length come, and our loyal citizens can now read a Union Daily.

To Colored Voters.

THIRD PAPER.

We wish in this paper to call your attention to a preparatory step which all must take who would become voters. In order to ascertain definitely and without question who are and who are not entitled to vote, a registration of the legal voters is ordered in all the rebel States. Complete lists giving the name and residence of every voter can thus be placed in the hands of commissioners or judges of election in each precinct. By this means all illegal and fraudulent voting can be prevented, and the false-swearing, violence, ballot-stuffing and other great abuses that have prevailed in past elections may be avoided. Before any election is held, registers will be appointed, due notice will be given, and a fair opportunity will be furnished to all the people to have their names registered. It is important that you attend to this duty promptly. In the parish of Orleans registration is already commenced, and will be continued till the 15th of next month. Let every colored man of this city register at once. To neglect this duty is to lose your vote. Every vote here is of vast importance. A few more Union votes at our last city election would have given us a Union Mayor and prevented the horrible scenes of last July. Let every man come to the rescue; let the full Union force of the city unite in one grand effort and our entire city government shall be rescued from the control of traitors. A victory here will be the pledge of victory all over the State.

When so much depends upon your action for the next few weeks we may well understand why your enemies are so anxious to prevent colored men from registering. Most affectionately do they advise you to be satisfied, to live in peace and quiet and not disturb your minds about politics. They assure you that these matters are too high for you, and generously propose to do all the thinking and all the voting, while you "poor ignorant negroes" may go forward in your own humble sphere of common laborers. Why do they thus insult you? Is it because they are your "best friends," and are really seeking your good? No. It is because they are losing their hold upon you, and know that unless by some means they divide your vote, their power is ended. They have boasted that they will be able to control you. They say you are poor simpletons, that you don't know how to take care of yourselves, and are silly enough to be beguiled by their stories. The means they employ show that this is precisely the estimate which they form of your character. They come to you with bribes in their hands, and by the offer of a few paltry dollars expect to buy from you the birthright of a sovereign voter. Others industriously circulate that a fee of five dollars will be charged upon each one who shall register. Some who have colored workmen in their employ take them aside and reason thus: "I am doing a good part by you, and if as a good workman you will stay at home and not register, you shall be favored; but if you register I shall dismiss you." When all these means fail, you are then told that a few of you who are more intelligent will be allowed to vote, but if the ignorant ones attempt it they shall be killed. Thus entreaty, bribery, intimidation and threats of violence are employed to prevent your registering.

It is with you to show these men that they have mistaken your character.—Let them know that poor as you may be they have not gold enough to buy you. Give them to understand that, meanly as they may think of your abilities, you are shrewd enough not to be gulled by their shallow arts. Show them that though your advantages in the past have been limited you still have some common sense and some self-respect. Let them feel that you properly resent their unmanly treatment.—When they come to you with their filthy bribes, spurn them as you would a dog, from your presence. Let them feel that you are men, and they may learn at last that it would be much more appropriate and far more reputable to turn their contribution of one hundred thousand dollurs to the support of their starving poor rather than to the low work of corrupting the colored vote.—Should there be a single colored man base enough to sell himself to his enemies, see to it that he be found out and exposed. Discard him from society as one who has sought to betray his race, and let him feel that the brand of a burning indignation is resting upon him. Search out those who have been intimidated by threats, and let them know that none may be excused from duty.—The crisis is upon you, and every man must do his duty.

But who are entitled to vote? After the terrible rebellion that has been waged through these Southern States, it is thought best to have a restricted ballot. No man will be allowed to register or to vote who will not pledge upon his oath that he "will faithfully support the Constitution and obey the laws of the United States." This will debar all who are now disloyal.

But this is not sufficient; there are many in the South who once took this oath of loyalty and afterward became rebels, and it is therefore required of all to swear that "they have not been disfranchised for participation in the rebellion," and that "they have never taken an oath as a member of the Congress of the United States, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State to support the Constitution of the United States, and afterwards engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof." There are many in the South who are very anxious to vote, that will hang upon this searching requirement. It cuts short the political hopes, as well as the votes of great numbers of the leading rebels.

On the other hand it is expressly provided in the order issued by General Sheridan that "Every male citizen of the United States twenty-one years old and upward, of whatever race, color, or previous condition, who has been a resident in the State of Louisiana for one year and parish of Orleans three months previous to the date at which he presents himself for registration, and who has not been disfranchised by act of Congress or for felony at common law, shall, after having taken and subscribed the oath prescribed in the first section of the act herein referred to, be entitle to be, and shall be, registered as a legal voter in the parish of Orleans and State of Louisiana."

You now see who are entitled to vote. As none of you have ever held office or taken an official oath, every man who is not a confirmed rebel may be registered. But be careful not to change your residence when it can be avoided. Baffled in other efforts, your enemies will try to hire or otherwise induce you to move into some new parish. Don't do it, sacrifice something rather than lose your vote. For the first time in your lives you are vested with the highest prerogatives of citizens. Use your new power so that your friends may be encouraged and your enemies confounded.

City Registration.—The work of the registration of voters under the Military Bill is in progress. There is a very general disposition on the part of our citizens to register; up to the present time the larger number are colored men. We have heard complaints that in some sections of the city, the police intimidate the blacks from registering and attending ward meetings; but our colored citizens should pay no attention to such attempted interference. Go forward and quietly assume your rights. Let every man register. In another column we give the places where the offices of registration are held. Remember you cannot vote, if you do not register.

Some of our city Dailies complain that there is a want of fairness on the part of the city registrars, and Mr. J. B. Gribble has written a note to the N. O. Times to that effect. We hope the General Commanding will investigate the ground of such complaints, for we are sure he desires and is determined to do justice to all.

Maximilian is a fugitive from justice!

Passion.

This word Webster defines thus: "The feeling of the mind; the sensible effect of impression; excitement; perturbation; agitation of mind." The passions of the mind are various, as joy, grief, hope, fear, love, hatred, desire, disappointment, malice, envy, jealousy, &c. The word usually denotes violent rage or angry excitement of mind, from whatever source it may arise, and we now use it in that sense. Anger is a state, or emotion of mind; passion is a habit of mind. The angry man may be vehement, impetuous, fierce, for the time, but the storm sweeps by and a calm ensues. The passionate man is habitually prone to violent agitation, like the rough sea that cannot rest.

Passion is power—it is the great motor of humanity. Understood as we use it here, it is power for evil. It may have high endowment of talent, genius, imagination, language, energy, but it is a fallen angel, and all its affinities are with fiends. It has no regard for right, no love of truth, no respect for the claims of heaven, no thought upon the retributions of eternity. It is the fell enemy of our race. It substitutes sentiment for conscience, impulse for principle, pleasure for duty, self-interest for humanity, and exalts a depraved heart, deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, above God. It occasionally has something of sympathy and tenderness, and at times can melt into tears, but its softness it strangely blended with savage violence; we see in it the luxurious and the cruel, the voluptuous and the fierce, the intelligent and the brutal, as in the Grecian mythology we see Venus knitting her hands with Mars—the goddess of love and beauty, but also of sensuality, allying herself with the god of slaughter. Lust and War walking the earth locked arm in arm. Whatever it touches it transforms into its own fallen likeness.

Passion is lawless; it spurns authority in the family and the State, in parent and magistrate, Spenser has told in his inimitable manner how passion lays siege to and wars

> "Against the fort of Reason evermore,
> To bring the soul into captivity."

And it fights most successfully; it destroys peace of mind in the individual, poisons domestic bliss, engenders animosity among friends, and makes war among nations. Byron, the passionate sentimentalist, the sensual philanthropist—Byron, whose heroes were "passions personified rather than persons impassioned"—has written the whole history of the influence of passion upon the human heart in a single line—it was his own sad experience—

> "Youth wasted, mind degraded, honor lost:" and then passionately exclaims:

"These are thy fruits, successful Passion, these!"

Again he pictures passion as the vilely fertile field, whence arise

> "But weeds of dark luxuriance, tares of haste,
> Rank at the core, though tempting to the eyes,
> Flowers whose wild odors breathe but agonies,
> And trees whose gums are poison; such the plants
> Which spring beneath her steps as Passion flies
> O'er the world's wilderness, and vainly pants
> For fruits, all-tempting, but forbidden to our wants."

This is an age of passion. Its storm has been wild upon us, and slill rages, though the crisis of its fury is past.—A few years back, we saw what we now see—the reign of passion—fiery, fierce, vindictive, lawless passion. The lewd pantomime and the dance, the wine cup and the gambler's saloon, love of gold and lust of power, the sanguinary duel and the brutal pugilistic combat recalling the gladiatorial shows of old Rome, were the order of the day—the favorite amusements and recreations of the pleasure-seeking, passion-driven million. And (we cannot fail to remark,) much the same were they, with the favorite entertainments of the ancient empire when, "plethoric by its wealth, enervated by its luxury and boastful of its power," it was about to be trodden down by the nations of the North. Lawlessness, too, was rife. Obedience to law was the exception, and legitimate control was resented as usurpation. Restraints of honesty in the political and commercial intercourse of society were feebly felt. Embezzlements and defalcations were frequent and rapidly multiplied, till sovereign States, catching the contagion of the times, were found repudiating their plighted word and bond. Good faith between man and man seemed drying out, and society seemed crumbling into a ruin. Private revenge and popular violence, supplanting laws and dispensing with judges and prisons, ran riot.—The laws of God were no more regarded than the laws of man. The law of marriage, of parental authority, of the holy Sabbath, and others, were all trampled under foot. There was less regard for law, less security for life in many parts of the country, and less punishment for crime, than in some parts of the old monarchies of Europe. In our halls of legislation, State and National, brawls and murders occurred in which representatives and senators were the combatants and the victims. The nation itself, acting in bad faith, violated its time-honored compact.

True hearts trembled for the ark of the republic. Patriots eyed these omens, and saw the coming judgment: they saw printed upon every page of the past that national anarchy brings national violence: that "men left without law, fly for refuge to a sceptre of iron and a law of blood": that the arts of the reckless demagogue have always led to national peril—the Catalines have always prepared the way for the usurping Cæsars, the blood stained and passionate Robespierres, for the more bloody Napoleons. At last the seed-sowing of widespread and violent passion ripened into maturity, and the dark-winged, and bloody reapers, descended to the harvest of Death! * * *

The woe is past, the harvest ended but the sad gleanings of its sanguinary field remain to us—the violence of the storm is laid, but the waves of passion still run high. * * *

What power can lull the angry waves to rest? What hand shall smoothe the furrows of hate from the nation's wrinkled brow? What voice shall "speak peace to the people" and restore tranquility, and calm the agitated mind? Legislation may do much, though it is liable to the bias of passion. Benevolence and human kindness will in some degree conquer animosity. Education is a mighty power for good, but it often stores the head while it starves the heart, thus leaving the very fountain of passion uncleansed and uncontrolled.

Religion, the only power that could have prevented the evil, is the only means of its cure: It is peace on earth and good will to men. It teaches us to love God with all the heart, and our neighbor as ourselves. It teaches us to forgive injuries, as we hope to be forgiven of God, to love our enemies, and return good for evil. The lamb and the dove are its chosen emblems. It composes the thoughts, calms the passions, purifies the heart, controls the life, and gives universal concord. It is the light of the world, the salt of the earth, and God's unspeakable gift to man. It begins its work where all true reformation must begin, in the heart, and by regulating and, harmonizing the individual, insures harmony in all his relations, and to the entire race.

It is the mission of Christianity, through the church, the pulpit, and the press, to destroy the works of the devil and bring in the reign of universal peace. This will be accomplished in proportion as its office is performed in each heart, and as each individual performs his own part in the great work. Each individual must let his light shine, as each star in the firmament contributes to the glory of the heavens. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.' "He that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city."

"What profits us, that we from heaven derive
A soul immortal, and with looks erect
Survey the stars, if, like the brutal kind,
We follow where our passions lead the way!"

Let each one watch his own heart, keep the door of his own lips, control his tongue and pen, and let not word, or thought, or act, fuel the flames of passion in his own breast, or enkindle them in the breasts of others. And let each address himself to this work of peace and good-will, with a care and diligence proportioned to the position he occupies, the influence he wields. Check the first rising of immoderate and evil passion. Habitually carry this carefulness into every relation in life. Think nothing insignificant. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth." A spark may light the train and explode the magazine which wraps a great city in conflagration, and clothes a nation in mourning. A French writer has beautifully said, "The passions act as winds to propel the vessel, reason is the pilot that steers her; without the winds she would not move; without the pilot she would be lost." Let love be the master-passion of the soul—love of the beautiful, the pure, the true, the good.

"Our passions hold a pleasing reign,
When love inspires the breast,
Love the Divinest of the train,
The sovereign of the rest."

B.

Editorial Items.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach in the Hall of the House of Representatives, to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.

Special attention is called to Dr. Pemberton's advertisement in another column. As a druggist he keeps on hand the best assortment of drugs and medicines in the city. Also those of our patrons who are building Churches, Dwellings, and Stores, or who are reparing the same, will find at Dr. Pemberton's, the best quality of Paints, Oils, Colors, Varnishes, Glass, &c. The Doctor's gentlemanly bearing to all his customers, adds to the pleasure of purchasing at the store of a loyal citizen. He is located at No. 158 Poydras Street.

We are indebted to Rev. Brother De Puy, assistant editor of the Christian Advocate for an advanced copy of the appointments for the New York and New York East Conference.

Mayor Heath is becoming as notorious for vetoes as President Johnson is; but we are happy to state that his vetoes are on the right side. He is a terror to dishonest officials. Go ahead, Mayor, there is a big job before you!

Another Victim of the July Massacre.—On Wednesday last we were called to attend the funeral of Mr. S. H. Hurst, who died from the effects of wounds received in the massacre of July last.

He went into the Convention room as a spectator, and when the butchery was commenced by the police, he was shot, stabbed and beaten. We are informed that he has been confined to his bed ever since, and that his sufferings have been very great. One arm was amputated some months ago, but it seems did not avail to save his life.

Mr. Hurst was a member of the city police from the time that Gen. Butler took possession of the city, until after the close of the war.

We are informed that he was a quiet, upright man. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss.

But as the blood of martyrs has ever proved to be the seed of the Church, so the blood of those butchered by rebel hate, in July last, has proved to be, and will continue to be, the seed of liberty.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

Political Organization.

Organization must be made or defeat is inevitable. It must also be complete and practicable. Experience is the best school-master, and by imitating those States whose system of party drill and organization has achieved success are good preceedents to follow, being good evidence that their system is a good one. The workings of the Radical party in the State of Louisiana under the present arrangements appears entirely impracticable. The Executive Committee is too large a body, too unwieldly, and is different from that of any other State. The workings of the Radical party in the State of Illinois is considered to be as effective and thorough as that of any other similar organization. There the executive committee is composed of one member from each congressional district, and two for the State at large; it has a President, one vice-President, a treasurer and corresponding secretary. The President resides at the Capitol of the State. The duties of the Committee are to receive funds and documents for distribution, to arrange mass-meetings in various places and provide speakers for the same; and to receive information from the counties or parishes in the State concerning the condition of the party, and supply documents, &c, for their use. In each county there is a similar organization, a county Executive Committee which is composed of one delegate from each voting district. The said Committee's organization is the same as that of the State Committee. The State's Executive Committee is elected once in two years, at a regular State convention for the nomination of State officers. The county Executive Committee is elected in the same manner, at a regular county convention for the nomination of county officers. Each voting district organizes clubs, which are under the supervision of the county Committee. The President of the county Committee is required to be in regular correspondence with the President of the State Committee, advising as to the condition of the party in his county, and if documents are required. Under such an organization the State Committee are constantly posted up as to the prospects of success at an approaching election, and can even know the exact numbers of the party in the State, and if any one section or district is in danger, he can, with the consent of the Committee, act in any manner deemed most practicable. Some system similar to the above is demanded in Louisiana. All that is now needed is a thorough and complete organization, every friend of freedom, liberty and equal rights doing all in his power to promote harmony and unity of action; laying aside all prejudices and former feelings, unite in solid column, march forward to the victory, which is certain in the coming contest, if all will do their duty, and by unity of action, throw dismay and confusion into the ranks of our opponents, but more especially convince the colored voters that the Radicals of Louisiana are a unit, and that in the exercise of the franchise they will not only be protected in that right, but that the party by their determination, zeal and energy will not only triumphantly succeed at the ballot box, but will place them in their newly acquired rights upon a firm basis for the future. F.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

Opelousas District.

"Slowly they entered the Teche, where it flows through the green Opelousas."
Longfellow.

The lover of nature who can spare a fortnight from busy care will enjoy greatly a trip to the Attakapas region. All monotony may be avoided by taking the steamboat at New Orleans, going up the Mississippi to Red River, down the Atchafalaya to Bayou Teche, and up this beautiful stream to St. Martinsville, returning by Berwick's Bay and the Opelousas railroad to the city. It is like stepping into fairy land, especially along the Teche, made famous by Longfellow in "Evangeline." This stream is a wonderful natural canal, uniform in depth and volume all the year, navigable for over a hundred miles, its banks fringed with beautiful live-oaks, draped with Spanish moss, as says the Poet:

"Near the banks of the river, o'ershadowed by oaks, from whose branches
"Garlands of Spanish moss and mystic mistletoe flaunted,
"Such as the Druids cut down with golden hatchets at Yule-tide."

This moss is gathered in great quantities for the use of upholsterers; a good band with hooks provided for the purpose, will gather a ton a day. It is cured by leaving it two or three weeks in still water, and has a ready sale at 5 to 8 cts. a pound. I conversed with a man who gathered enough by night and Sunday work to buy his freedom, at a profit on his purchase by the vendor of three hundred dollars.

FRANKLIN QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

The meeting was well attended, the official members are learning their duties; eleven were present and others reported through the Pastor; one member was suspended and another censured for untruthfulness and other unchristian conduct. The Sabbath services were full of interest; though the morning was very cold, the children came out to their meeting and acquitted themselves well. The Provost marshall and his lady were present, the latter has been teaching the scholars to sing, and her labor has not been in vain. At 10 A. M., love feast was held, many rejoiced in the hope "of that bright world, where it would be all the time how d'ye and never good bye;" one said, "when God set my soul at liberty I was 300 feet under ground; it was light as noon-day there, and Jesus said, 'my little one, go on, and everywhere tell what a savior you have found;'" (this was chanted.) Another said, "I have a fortune; I feel to day as I owned the world; I don't believe so or hope so, because I was wide awake when Jesus spoke to me, so I've told bold before sinners, my care and troubles; my work and joy is to find my way to heaven." Sixteen persons were received into full membership. At 2 o'clock, there was preaching; seven adults and two infants were baptised, after which the Lord's supper was celebrated, and the meeting closed with the altar crowded with mourners, many of them young persons; several joined class. Our work is growing finely here, in spite of many adversaries and hindrances.

A DISCOURAGED MINISTER—COMPLAINTS OF THE BUREAU.

Next day I visited some of our people and found some earnest praying christians; called on the South methodist preacher, lately sent here; he gave me a friendly reception, but frankly said he thought our work mischievous, we could do the negroes no good; only by the strong hand could they be benefitted; he was also despondent as to labor among the whites; religious interests were prostrated, he feared beyond recovery. The M. E. Church, South, has a fine school-building and a neat frame church, but out of repair, and very poorly sustained. Surely God is the same evermore, and when his conditions are met, He will pour out his blessings We will hope for mightier gospel triumphs in this land, than ever before enjoyed.

Many complaints are made of the Government Agent here, that his sympathies are not with the freedmen, and little attention being paid to their interest.

ST. MARTINSVILLE—CIVIL RIGHTS BILL—INSURRECTION

The journey to this place is disagreeable because of landing at mid-night to take the stage at New Iberia; added to this discomfort, was a cold rain storm, and the tedious night-ride in the leaky hack was made more miserable by two or three times being stalled in the deep mud. St. Martinsville is an old city, has a venerable look and does not prosper very much. The steamers only make weekly visits. The court-house and Catholic church are fine buildings; a few private dwellings are above the average. The Rip Van Winkles at the court-house refused to acknowledge the authority of our conference preacher, Brother Bryant, to solemnize marriage, on the ground that he was not a citizen of the United States. These men seem to have slept soundly through all the changes of years. The civil rights bill was referred to, to settle the question, and it was discovered that a heavy penalty was affixed to discrimination on account of color or former condition. The officers seemed to doubt whether this bill was to stand as law, but decided to admit its de facto validity; so the licenses applied for were issued.

A terrible alarm occurred here recently which did not get into the papers. A preacher well known as a good, quiet man, was addressing his audience at some plantation meeting, and being dissatisfied with their apathy, tried to stir them up by saying, he would come and bring his army from St. Martinsville, meaning his more lively members, religious fighting material. Some ignorant or mischievous person got hold of this and passing from one to another, it was magnified to an intention and deep laid plot to gather the colored men and go through the parish to murder, rob, and ravish. Meetings were thereupon held, patrols set, weapons prepared, and the whole community in excitement. The Bureau Agent happend to be away, on his return, he was told at New Iberia of the state of things, and his aid implored. Happily no lives were sacrificed in this foolish affair. Its only result, its object probably, was to intimidate the colored people, suspend for a while their meetings, and give bad, dishonest employers a chance to oppress their laborers with impunity. The Provost marshall here, is disposed to enforce his authority and protect his ward. Some progress is being made in organizing colored schools. I accompanied him to several places, where he urged upon the laborers the necessity of doing their duty in schooling their children. Some good schools are in operation, but all under difficulties; small, ill-furnished shanties, crowded with children; sometimes with inefficient teachers; one with seventy scholars, and think of it—lady-teachers with mouthfuls of tobacco!

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE OF ST. MARTINSVILLE

This interesting circuit, including New Iberia, St. Martinsville, Breux Bridge and Vermillionville, a great work, and rides of 30 or 40 miles. It is a rich planting and stock country, increasing in population, and inviting christian effort. God will give us much fruit among all classes there if we are faithful. Our preacher is able to make himself understood in French, and has his heart earnestly in his work. The Conference organized with the Presiding Elder and the preacher only, and closed with 64 members, 9 official brethren, 1 school of 75 scholars, and $75 obtained towards the purchase of a church lot. Four appointments were recognized; Sabbath, children's meeting, 106 of the little folks present. Taught them a hymn and arranged lessons for the future. It was a delightful season. At 11 o'clock love-feast was held for the first time in the place; christians rejoiced and and sinners wondered; 2 o'clock, preaching, baptising and the Lord's Supper. It was a high day, the building was thronged outside and in, many members of other churches joined us, perceiving that God was with us of a truth, and that united effort on the part of his children was all important, against the world and satan. At night the Pastor preached an excellent sermon. It was cheering to see how kindly all the people came to our help, Catholics, Baptists, all sects and classes, stimulated by a desire for reformation, and for the erection of a church. They are certainly worthy of aid from the mission board, and no where will such an investment do more good.

Before leaving the place, the whole sum to pay for a lot was raised, $125, and the deeds made out. Soon as the money is received from the Missionary Society, trustees will be elected, for they have here men of intelligence and property, for such an office. Ten names for the Advocate were obtained, and if a portion of its reading was in French, more than double that number would be taken.

POST OFFICE—WHISKEY—CONFEDERATE HEROES.

Very little Post Office business is done here, and no where are the Scriptures on sale. At New Iberia, they are more alive. 140 weeklies are taken from the Post Office, only eight of them, however, are religious. Liquor shops, dancing and gambling, as elsewhere are doing much to demoralize and impoverish the people. A colored man and his daughter got into the hack which took me to Newtown; he had been indulging pretty freely in drink, and discovering my profession, eagerly declared himself to be a preacher, (not in our church,) so here was an opening not to be neglected, for a temperance lecture five or six miles long, which it is not likely this whisky preacher will soon forget. Towards night we reached New Iberia, and for a wonder, at once got a boat, thanks to the good speed made by Felix, the little stage driver. On the steamer it was refreshing to find a large picture of Gen. Grant, of "the hero and his battles," hanging side by side with Gen Lee; if for no other reason, because it broke the monotony of countless confederate heroes, displayed in hotels, on steamboats and in photograph shops. On the mail steamer, a compromise is made by a very large picture of President Johnson, and in one other place his countenance brought up the rear of a long line of confederate Generals, as though he was guiding or driving them forward into the Union fold. I made the acquaintance here of an aged methodist, from New York, long a resident in Louisina. He seems to love Mount Zion still; before the war he built a Methodist church at Vermillionville, and though eighty-five years old, has his faculties and does much business.

Itinerant.

Ladies' Department.

Angel of the Vale.

NUMBER X.

Sixteen happy if not sweet summers had glided along my life's pathway, dear Minnie, when I traveled a greater distance than I ever had before to visit sister Miriam in her western home. On arriving there, a strange fact presented itself—no family altar in our sister's home. Unfortunately, Miriam's husband was not a christian, and therefore there was no priest to minister before the hallowed altar. Beside little Fannie, the eldest, and only daughter, who, by the way, was quite a large girl, only one year your junior, Minnie—there were several sons growing up without this restraining influence, which was a very sad reflection in my mind.

Miriam decided to return with her husband, whose business called him East again, and visit home, hoping to bring Mama back with her. The city was four or five miles from their home where they were to take the boat; I accompanied them, and as they got out to leave, took the reins to drive back, where I was to remain with the children during their absence of several weeks. Dalton, Miriam's husband, said to me as he took the traveling bag from the carriage—"be careful in driving home; remember that horse once ran away with me." I assumed a dignified attitude, and grasping the reins, said: "I think I can manage him very well;" then hastily exchanging adieu, turned toward home.

The road lay along the pebbled shore of Lake Ontario, whose vast expanse of blue waters stretched as far as the eye could reach; white sails dotted its pure surface in every direction. The afternoon sun struggled in long lines of light down through magnificent clouds, which assumed a thousand unique forms not unlike gorgeous temples with gilded spires and minarets—gateways of glory, kings, thrones, crowns and scepters. I was conscious and even admiring all these beauties—still my thoughts were absorbed in the responsibility hitherto unknown to me that would devolve upon me in the coming weeks. Suddenly one of those mysterious voices which conscience so unmistakably recognizes, whispered that it would become my duty to erect a family altar, and lead in morning and evening prayer the tender little group left in my charge. I endeavored at once to stiffle this idea of duty by saying, What! I, a girl only sixteen, and feeling it a duty to erect a family altar in my eldest sister's house, when some of the children are almost as old as myself? They may consider it an intrusion, and surely it would be absurd. At our own home, Papa had always led in the family devotions—but Friday evenings had for years been devoted to a family prayer meeting—also Sabbath evening for those who did not attend Church. On these occasions all in turn, prayed aloud, which proved a great assistance to personal piety, and thus early in our christian experience we were taught by pious parents to exercise the gifts with which Heaven had endowed us. I could frame no excuse from never having taken up this cross, even had not this scripture come to me, "He giveth more grace." I tried to make other excuses, which all in their turn were answered by some word of the Lord, who had commanded us to deny ourselves and take up our cross. At last I said to myself, I cannot do it—and thought the matter must end there; yet the voices of conscience were not silenced so easily, and I began to wonder how I could so willfully contend with what, after all, might be my duty; but if God would only speak to me and tell me, or in some wonderful manner make known to me this duty, I would then do it cheerfully. While these thoughts were revolving in my mind I looked ahead and saw two roads diverging just before me, and for my life I could not tell which one I was to take; with a moment's reflection I decided to take the one at my left, feeling sure it would lead me home. Having proceeded only a few rods, the horse appeared unwilling to go; had it occurred to me, I might have given loose reins to the horse and he would have taken me in the right way. I could no longer manage him, for he commenced to back and turn around. The road was banked up at a fearful height, and as the wheels went down the steep declivity, I slid out of the carriage as gently as if some one had lifted me down, and saw it coming over on me, which would have crushed me; then the horse would take fright and all would be ruin. I retained the reins in one hand, and raised the other to hold the carriage, which to my surprise went up as easily as if it were a toy. It appears to me, as I recall the scene, that in less time than it has taken me to narrate it, the carriage was righted, the horse's head turned toward home, and I seated in the carriage driving deliberately along. After collecting my thoughts the first thing that occurred to me was, is it possible that nothing about the carriage or harness is broken? I lifted my arms and limbs to be sure I was not injured. What a miracle, said I to myself. Looking down at my dress, I observed it was in perfect tatters—the only evidence that anything had occurred. What a struggle, thought I, and why was I not crushed to death, and why did not the horse run and break everything to pieces? At this moment the truth flashed upon my mind that only a short time before God had heard the condition on which I was willing to do my duty, and had in this singular manner proposd to test my sincerity. I seemed to see the scene reflected as in a glass. There stood an angel, lifting me down so gently when the carriage commenced to upset, and another holding up the carriage to prevent its crushing me, while a third held the reins of the horse, which prevented his running, and led him out into the right way. I could not have seen anything clearer with my natural eyes, and yet my eyes did not behold it, but my soul saw it and was satisfied. That evening by simple faith, the altar was erected, and as soon as the feeble offering was laid upon it, a holy perfume seemed wafted into our souls. From that time not unfrequently the children brought me the Bible long before it was dark, urging me to read and pray then, fearing they might fall asleep ere the appointed hour arrived for evening devotions, so deeply were they interested in this exercise.

Brother Wilberforce and family lived twelve or fourteen miles from Miriam's. One Sabbath morning, Fannie and I, in company with Dalton's brother and his wife, started bright and early to attend a Quarterly meeting near where they lived. Away we rattled, over log roads walled in on either side by tall forest trees, then out into fields where thousands of blackened stumps stared grimly at us, and contrasted strangely with the green and luxuriant grass growing up around them. We hastened on through this new country, hoping to be in time for the Love Feast. I had often heard Papa and Mama tell of Quarterly Meetings held in barns, and now it would be such a treat to attend one myself. It was genuine, and in true primitive style. The people turned out on foot and with horses and oxen, and with all sorts of conveyances. As the brothers and sisters shouted, talked and sang in the Love Feast, the fowls were cackling in the hay, the cattle bellowing in the yard, the horses neighing in the stable, making in all a singular commingling; still it was a precious good old fashioned time, and all the saints were happy in the Lord. The sermon, by the Presiding Elder, was no doubt an excellent one, but it passed from my mind after hearing an impromptu exhortation which followed, all in rhyme. It appears that they were going to have a donation for their preacher, and he took this novel way to exhort them to generosity. Among the many things enumerated in rhyme, I remember this,—

"Now if you would do your preacher good,
Let some one bring him a load of wood."

"And if you happen along that way,
Let another bring him a load of hay."

Thus he continued rhyming for nearly a half hour, until every article for the comfort of the Pastor was brought to mind. We were told that he was frequently called on for a speech on such occasions, but never would speak except in rhyme. After the meeting closed we went to Wilberforce's, not far distant, where some less than fifty sat down to dinner at their table, and after that left for their homes, for at this time, as in the early days of Methodism, many made a pilgrimage of twenty miles to attend quarterly meeting.

Evangeline.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Woodlawn, on the plantation of W. W. Pugh, parish of Assumption, Dominick Thompson, aged about 102 years.

For the last forty years (to my knowledge) he has been a member of the church.

Within two weeks of his last illness he rode daily on horseback, and exhibited unusual energy in his avocations. His memory continued clear to the last; and he often spoke to the writer of the dark day which occurred in the year 1780, and of the consternation which it excited among our forefathers. He had a distinct recollection of the passage of the Red coats under Lord Cornwallis, through Halipal, North Carolina, during the war of the Revolution; and also recollected to have seen General Washington, when he made a tour South during his Presidency.

The world has undergone many and great changes during the life of the departed—governments have been uprooted, dynasties swept-ed away, and numerous revolutions have disturbed the earth's peace—yet this old man pursued the quiet tenor of his way; and tho' humble his career, yet it is probable that at the approach of the "fell destroyer," he had less to regret than many whose names have been more known, and more honored. He was born in Bertie county, North Carolina, under the flag of Great Britain—by the Revolution he became a subject of the confederation—by another change, a subject of the United States—then by the course of events he was subjected to the Confederate States, (so called.) And finally died under the flag of the Union, of which he was a loyal citizen. Com.

NOTICE.

To the Voters of the First District.

The Board of Registers of Voters for the First District of the city of New Orleans, appointed by Special Orders No. 15, Headquarters Fifth Military District, April 10, hereby give notice that they will open their office on MONDAY, April 15, at 8 o'clock A. M., in the Registration Office, Room No. 5, basement, City Hall.

All voters who reside between Felicity Road and Canal street, and from the river to the lake, will register at this office.

Naturalized citizens must bring their naturalization papers with them.

JOHN A. ROBERTS,
66:0 WILLIAM BAKER,
W. M. GEDDES.

Registers' Office, Room No. 5, basement, City Hall.

NOTICE.

Second District Registration Office.

Public notice is hereby given that the Registration Office of the Second District will be opened on MONDAY, 15th of April, at 8 o'clock A. M., at No. 38 St. Louis street, between Royal and Chartres streets, and kept open every day (Sundays excepted) to the 15th of May next.

Office hours from 8 o'clock A. M. to 12 M., and from 4 to 7 P. M.

The Second District is that portion of the city comprised between Canal and Esplanade streets, the river and the lake.

Naturalized citizens must bring their naturalization papers with them.

New Orleans, 13th April, 1867.

The Board of Registrars;
EDWARD AMES.
E. C. THOMAS.
66:70 MICHEL VIDAL.

NOTICE.

Third District Registration Office.

Public notice is hereby given that the Registration Office of the Third District will be opened on MONDAY, the 15th of April, at 8 o'clock A. M., at the Marigny buildings, corner of Marigny and Front Levee streets, and kept open every day (Sundays excepted) to the 15 of May next.

Office hours from 8 o'clock A. M. to 12 M., and from 4 to 7 o'clock P. M.

The Third District is that portion of the city comprised between Esplanade street, the river, the Lake and lower limits of the city.

Naturalized citizens must bring their naturalization papers with them.

New Orleans, the 13th day of April, 1867.

The Board of Registrars,
C. F. BERENS.
JNO. McWHITHER,
66:71 H. STILES.

NOTICE.

To the Voters of the Fourth District.

The Board of Registrars of Voters of the Fourth District of the city of New Orleans, appointed by Special Orders No. 15, Headquarters Fifth Military District, dated April 10th inst., hereby give notice that they will open their office on MONDAY, the 15th inst., at No. 813 Magazine street.

Office hours from 8 o'clock A. M. until 12 M., and from 4 to 7 o'clock P. M.

All voters who reside between Felicity Road and Toledano streets, and from the river to the rear of the District, will register at this office.

Naturalized citizens must bring their naturalization papers with them.

JOHN L. DAVIES,
EDMUND FLOOD.
66:70 HENRY BENSEL, Jr.

NOTICE.

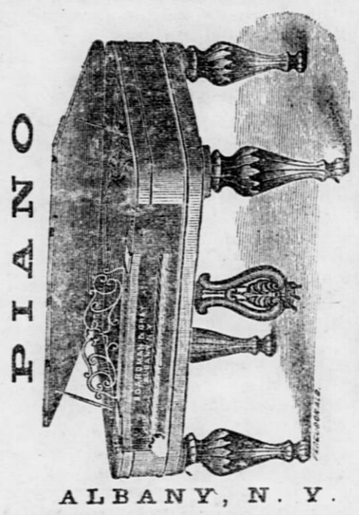
Parish of Orleans, Right Bank. Registration Office.

Public notice is hereby given that the Registration Office of the Parish of Orleans, Right Bank, will be opened on MONDAY, 15th of April, at 8 o'clock A. M., on Olivia street, between Patterson and Delaronde, in Algiers, and kept open every day (Sundays excepted) to the 15th of May next.

Office hours from 8 o'clock A. M. to 12 M., and from 4 to 7 P. M.

The District is that portion of the Parish of Orleans situated on the right bank of the river Mississippi.

Naturalized citizens must bring their naturalization papers with them.



The Board of Registrars,
W. H SEYMOUR,
THOMAS KENEFEC,
GEORGE HERBERT.

Parish of Orleans, R. B., April 13, 1867. 66:70

Wm. McCammon,

Manufacturer of

BOARDMAN & GRAY'S PATENT IMPROVED INSULATED IRON RIM AND FRAME

ALBANY, N. Y.

Pianos for Small Parlors, Sitting Rooms, Schools, Etc.

ALL four large, round corners. Full, round, mellow tone, easy and elastic touch, elegant and ornamental in appearance—a beautiful piece of furniture.

☞ All the Pianos have the patent Iron Frame and Rim cast in one piece, making them the most perfect and durable made, and especially adapted to warm climates. Address WM. McCAMMON, Albany, N. Y.

GEO. A. PRINCE & CO.'S

Melodeons, Automatic Organs & School Organs.

Can be found at all the principle music stores throughout the United States, Canada, and the British Provinces. No other musical instrument ever obtained the same popularity.

Forty thousand are now in use. Send to the manufacturers at Buffalo, N. Y., for an illustrated catalogue and price list, which is mailed to any address free of charge.

BELLS,

PURE BELL METAL (Copper & Tin.)

TROY BELL FOUNDRY.

CHURCH BELLS

Chimes & BELLS of all sizes for Churches, Factories, Academies, Steamboats, Plantations, Locomotives, &c.,

HUNG WITH PATENT ROTARY MOUNTINGS, THE BEST IN USE, FULLY WARRANTED.

FOR CIRCULARS ADDRESS,

JONES & CO., Troy, N. Y.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S

LABOR SAVING SOAP.

This Soap is made from pure and clean materials, CONTAINING NO ADULTERATION OF ANY KIND, will not injure the most delicate fabric, and is especially adapted for woolens, which will not shrink after being washed with this soap. It may be used in hard or salt water. It will remove paint, grease, tar, and stains of all kinds. One pound warranted equal to two pounds of ordinary family soap. Directions sent with each bar for making three gallons handsome soft soap from one pound of this Soap. Each bar is wrapped in a circular containing full directions for use, printed in English and German. Ask your grocer for "B. T. Babbit's Soap," and take no other.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 4, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington St., New York.

50 MAKE YOUR OWN SOAP PER CENT. SAVED BY

USING B. T. BABBIT'S PURE CONCENTRATED POTASH, or READY SOAP-MAKER. Warranted double the strength of common Potash, and superior to any other saponifier or lye in the market. Put up in cans of 1 pound, 2 pounds, 3 pounds 6 pounds and 12 pounds; with full directions in English and German for making hard and soft soap. One pound will make 15 gallons of soft soap. No lime is required. Consumers will find this the cheapest Potash in the market.

B. T. BABBIT,

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74, Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S BEST MEDICINAL SALERATUS, "made from common salt." Bread made with this Saleratus contains, when baked, nothing but common salt, water and flour.

Nos. 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72 & 74 Washington st., New York.

50 PER CENT SAVED BY USING

B. T. BABBIT'S STAR YEAST POWDER. Light biscuit or any kind of cake may be made with this "Yeast Powder" in 15 minutes. No shortening is required when sweet milk is used.

No. 64 to 74 Washington street, New York.

For sale by E. J. Hart & Co., Webster & Co., and others at New Orleans, and by Grocers and Druggists generally.

BROOKLYN White Lead Company.

ESTABLISHED 1825.

This Company continues to manufacture their superior PREMIUM WHITE LEAD.

Being one of the oldest and most extensive establishments in the country for manufacturing

White Lead, Red Lead and Lithrage

FROM THE RAW MATERIAL.

Dealers and consumers of White Lead are cautioned that no Lead is genuine unless branded with their full stamp, and labelled with their copyright Trade mark.

Sold by the leading houses in New Orleans. Business address,

89 Maiden Lane, New York.

Corner of Gold street.

FISHER HOWE, Treasurer

Freedmen's Aid Association of New Orleans.

This Association meets at 114 Carondelet street, on the FIRST and THIRD TUESDAYS of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

W. R. CRANE, President.

J. L. MONTIEU, Secretary

W. H. PEMBERTON,

158.....POYDRAS ST.,.....158

NEW ORLEANS,

Between St. Charles and Carondelet Streets.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN

Drugs, Medicines, Paints, Oils, Colors,

Varnishes, Glass, Etc.

Has in store and to arrive, a large supply of the following goods, which he will sell at low figures, either wholesale or retail.

White Lead in Oil, all kinds.
Window Glass, French and American, all sizes.
French and American Zinc.
American and English Venetian Red.
Oils of all descriptions.
Varnish of all kinds.
Stove Polish.
Bi-Carbonate of Soda.
Sal Soda.
Alum.
Castile and Colgate Soaps.
Wash Blue.
Black Writing Ink and Marking Ink.

Manufactured by himself.

Also a great variety of Perfumery and Fancy Articles for the Toilet.

The Store is also well supplied with all kinds of Drugs and Medicines, Fresh and of the Best Quality.

Strangers visiting the City would do well to give him a call. 65-89

Grovesteen & Co.,

PIANO FORTE MANUFACTURERS.

499 Broadway, New York.

These Pianos received the highest award of merit a the World's Fair, over the best makers from London Paris, Germany, the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, also the Gold Medal at tha American Institute, for FIVE SUCCESSIVE YEARS! Our pianos contain the French Grand Action, Harp Pedal, Overstrung Bass, Full Iron Frame, and all modern improvements. Every instrument is warranted FIVE YEARS. Made under the supervision of Mr. J. H. GROVESTEEN, who has a practical experience of over thirty-five years, and is the maker of over eleven thousand piano fortes. Our facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell these instruments from $100 to $200 cheaper than any first class piano forte. 1-42y1

LANDRETH'S

Warranted Garden Seeds

Have been familiarly known to the American Public for upwards of three-quarters of a century.

THEY SPEAK THEIR OWN PRAISE

WHEREVER PLANTED.

Dealers in Seeds whether country Merchants, Booksellers, Druggists, or Regular Seedsmen, not already customers of the subscribers are invited to become such.

OUR WHOLESALE PRICE LIST,

Published to the Trade only, will be mailed to all dealers who apply.

Landreth's Rural Register and Almanac for 1867,

Containing numerous hints on Horticulture, will be mailed to all applicants who enclose a two cent stamp with their address to

DAVID LANDRETH & SON,

63:66 Philadelphia, Penn.

MARK YOUR CLOTHING!

Clark's Patent Indelible Pencil!

"Much more convenient than Ink, and equally good as to performance—we judge after several months trial."—Am. Agriculturist.

"Invaluable for marking linen."—Chicago Tribune.

"Remarkable for the ease and neatness with which they can be used."—Detroit Tribune.

"One of the greatest conveniences that can be presented to a housekeeper."—Charleston (S. C.) News.

Manufactured and sold at wholesale by

The Indelible Pencil Co.,

NORTHAMPTON, Mass.

Every Pencil Warranted.

FRANK S. DAME, No. 18 Commercial Place, New Orleans, General Agent for the Southwest. 63:66

THE LITTLE CORPORAL

Is acknowledged by the leading papers to be

The Best Children's Paper in America!

Published monthly at One Dollar a year, [ten cents for sample copy] by

ALFRED L. SEWELL,

Circulars sent free. Chicago, Ill.

After a careful examination we can cheerfully say of The Little Corporal that it deserves all the praise that has been lavished upon it by the press everywhere.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

The Little Corporal.—The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate says: "The best paper for children published in this great country of ours is The Little Corporal. It is a gem in the catalogue of monthlies." My19-1y

ZION'S REFRESHING SHOWERS.—A new Revival Hymn and Tune Book, containing nearly 300 Hymns and Tunes, principally used by Whitfield, Wesley, Knapp, Nettleton, Finney, Earl, Hammond, and other Evangelists, in their revival meetings. It is one of the best books ever published for such services as well as for Sunday Schools and Social Meetings. Price, paper covers, 30 cents, $3 25 per dozen, $25 per 100. Board Covers, 35 cents, $4 per dozen, $30 per 100. Cloth Embossed, gilt, 50 cents, $5 per dozen, $40 per 100. Mailed at the retail price. Compiled by Horace Walters. Author of "S. S. Bell," Nos. 1 and 2, "Choral Harp," "Day School Bell," "Athenæum Collection," "Christian Melodist," etc.

Just published by C. M. TREMAINE,

64:66 No. 481 Broadway, N. Y

ROBERT PATON,

Manufacturer of

CHURCH, OFFICE & SCHOOL FURNITURE.

24 GROVE ST., N. Y.

WANTED—All over the South to sell the Centenary Pictorial, or Pictorial History of Methodism.

By D. CURRY, D. D., For particulars send to 37 Park Row, N. Y. N. TIBBALL

HALLOWED SONGS,

FOR PRAYER-MEETINGS AND SMALL CHURCHES.

A Small Hymn and Tune Book, of 25 pages, bound in muslin, at $1 each, or $75 per 100,

PHILLIP PHILLIPS & CO.

feb. 3 1y Cincinnati.

ROUGH & READY IRON WORKS

Danville, Montour Co., Penn.

WILLIAM HANCOCK,

Proprietor,

MANUFACTURER OF

RAILROAD IRON

OF ALL WEIGHTS AND PATTERNS

MINE RAILS.

Street Rails,

STRAP RAILS.

OLD RAILROAD IRON RE-ROLLED.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish all kinds of

STEAM ENGINES,

ROLLS,

ROLLING-MILL MACHINERY

Saw and Grist Mill

Machinery, gas retorts, mine car wheels and axles, globe valves, gague cocks—most improved styles, blow off cocks, steam whistles, steam and water fittings, screw bolts, iron and brass castings, and every description of foundry and machine work, boilers, &c., &c.

Plans, Designs, and estimates furnished without extra charge for all work ordered from

WM. HANCOCK,

BENJ. G. WELCH, General Agent.

KENT'S EAST INDIA COFFEE!

Equal to Java!

HALF THE PRICE!

GOES TWICE AS FAR!

Recommended and used by CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and Professional Men, as the cheapest, healthiest, and best beverage in the world!

Specially recommended by

BISHOP JANES,

and nearly all the Bishops and Clergymen of the M. E. Church. Also by

DR. IRENEUS PRIME,

Editor of the New York Observer, and by

DR. THOMAS A. UPHAM,

of Bowdoin College, Maine, and

Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, of Hartford.

By the N. Y. EYE INFIRMARY.

(It can be used alone, or if preferable, one-third of Java mixed with two-thirds of KENT'S EAST INDIA will make finer coffee than Java alone, and destroy the nervous effect of the latter.)

For Sale by All Grocers, North and South.

The Trade supplied through the New York City Wholesale Grocers, or direct from the Manufactory,

READE 154 SIXTH

NEW YORK.

RICHARD DAVIES, Proprietor,

and General Wholesale Dealer in Teas and Coffees.

☞ Put up in pound packages, and in boxes of 36, 60 and 100 pounds, suitable for wholesale and retail trade. 2—eowtf

THE PIANIST'S ALBUM:

A COLLECTION OF

Marches, Waltzes, Polkas, Redowas, Galops Mazourkas, Quadrilles, Four-hand Pieces, Dances, &c.

A BRILLIANT SET OF PIANOFORTE GEMS,

Suited to every grade of capacity, and indispensable to every Pianist who would become familiar with the POPULAR MUSIC OF THE DAY.

This new volume, being the third of the "HOME CIRCLE," will be welcomed by all who desire to have the Best Pieces in a convenient form. A very large number of the Gems contained in this new compilation are not to be found in any other, though much admired and in constant demand—a fact that will render it the leading book of its kind. Price—plain, $2 50; cloth, $3; cloth, full gilt, $4. Sold by all music dealers, and mailed, post-paid.

OLIVER DITSON & CO, Publishers,

1y 277 Washington st., Boston.

NATIONAL FREEDMEN'S SAVING AND TRUST COMPANY.

CHARTERED BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

OFFICERS:

M. T. HEWITT, President.
W. S. GRIFFITH, First Vice President.
A. S. BARNES, Second Vice President.
Rev. J. W. ALVORD, Cor. Secretary.
D. LANSING LAMBERT, Rec. Secretary.
SAM L. HARRIS, General Financial Inspector.

Principal office No. 87 Cedar Street, (American Exchange Bank Building,) New York City.

BRANCH AT NEW ORLEANS

No. 114 CARONDELET STREET.

Open every day, Sundays and holidays excepted, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M., and on Saturdays from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Deposits of One Dollar or more received.

Interest payable in January and July, in each year.

All deposits will be repaid with interest due when required.

All the profits belong to the depositors.

Branches have been established in the principal cities from New York to New Orleans, and accounts can be transferred from one Branch to another without charge or interrupting the interest.

Investments are made only in securities of the United States.

W. R. CRANE,

Chairman pro tem. Advisory Committee.

O. J. DUNN, Secretary.

C. S. SAUVINET, Cashier.

TENTH NATIONAL BANK,

240 Broadway. N. Y.

CAPITAL.....$100,000.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTORS:

J. T. Sanger.....formerly of Wm. H. Cary & Co.
E. L. Nancher, Esq.....No. 220 Broadway.
John Elliott. Messrs. Riggs & Co...Wall st. and Washington.
Lewis Elstien.....Messrs. Elstein, Rosenfield & Co.
John Falconer.....Seamless Clothing Manfg. Co.
Henry J. Baker.....Messrs. H. J. Baker & Bro.
Albert G. Lee.....Messrs. Coffin, Lee & Co.
C. K. Rosenfield.....Messrs. Rosenfield, Bros. & Co.
Charles G. Barrett.....Messrs. Randolph, Skidmore & Co.
Edwin F. Knowlton.....Wm. Knowlton & Son.
Jacob H. Dater.....J. G. McMurray & Co.
D. L. Ross.....Ross, Dempster & Co.

D. L. ROSS, President.

J. STOUT, Cashier.

Bankers' and Dealers' Accounts Solicited.

87-1

MEDICAL.

Dr. J. WHITE'S INSTITUTE,

127 CARONDELET STREET,

Directly in rear of the City Hall.

The first aim of human beings is happiness, and happiness implies health of body and mind.

This Institute is established for the cure of all forms of disease, Chronic, and Acute

Dr. White does not allow any disease afflicting his patients, however virulent to escape his vigilant care, as his patients universally testify.

It can easily be perceived how important it is that a full and correct diagnosis—detecting all the diseases that afflict the patient—should be attained. And it is no less important to the afflicted that the remedies should be equally clear to the physician; proving to his patient, that when the local disease is eradicated, the whole system is completely renovated and restored to its normal condition. "A sound mind is a sound body."

Dr. White's experience and success for thirty years, in an extensive practice in large cities, have brought to him for treatment a vast amount of every form of disease, justifying him in promising the cure of the patient, if the vitals and vitality are not irreparably wasted.

His remedies cure the worst eruptions of the skin; all forms of ulcers, of whatever nature, to the incipient cancer, which so grievously afflict humanity. The remedies restore the stomach, liver and blood, and all the secretions and excretions of the entire system, in unhealthy to a healthy condition. Instead of injuring the system or constitution, they renovate and repair the injuries and wastes of the entire organism.

One or two hours spent at the institute with Dr. White frequently saves weeks of fever or other suffering—often life.

N. B. Persons desiring Dr. White's advice and remedies, will be careful to call at 127 Carondelet Street, or address by letter, as there are several Dr. Whites in the city

☞ Consultation free—stamps not "forgotten." feb31

SPALDING'S CEPHALIC PILLS.

The great Headache Remedy—The best, safest and most Reliable Family Pills used—The public and the press are decided in their praise.

The Boston Bulletin says; "They are very efficacious for headache." The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Suffering humanity can now be relieved." The Providence, R. I., Advertiser says; "The testimony in their favor is strong." Letters from persons in all parts of the country who have used them, commend the Cephalic Pills in the most decided manner, as follows:

They cure Sick Headache, and all kinds of Headache,
Sour or acid Stomach—they correct the acidity.
Dyspepsia and Indigestion — Thousands cured with them.
Costiveness—The Cephalic Pills act gently on the bowels.
Business men and Laborers will feel strong and active.
Ladies in a Delicate Condition will find these Pills a gentle laxative, for whom they are particularly adapted.
Fullness and dizziness in the Head removed.
Bad Colds—A few doses will cure a bad Cold.
Poor Appetite and General Debility—the appetite restored and the whole system strengthened.
Liver Complaint and Yellow Skin are cured.
Pimples and Skin Eruptions disappear soon.
A great dinner pill—Distress after eating relieved.
Wine, Porter or Ale—Burning Acid on the Stomach, take one or two Pills.
Low Spirits and Sleepless Nights—Taken on going to bed, compose and have a happy effect.
Pale Faces and Haggard Looks soon look blooming.

Spalding's Cephalic Pills are the discovery and result of a long practice in medicine of an able physician; they contain rare ingredients which act upon the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Blood and Nerves. They remove all vitiated bile, foul humors and morbid secretions.

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists,

J. SWORDS, Proprietor,

No. 52 Dey street, New York.

DR. TOBIAS'

VENETIAN HORSE LINIMENT.

PINT BOTTLES AT ONE DOLLAR, for the cure of lameness, scratches, wind galls, sprains, bruises, splints, cuts, colic, stipping stifle, over heeting, sore throat, nail in the foot, etc. It is warranted cheaper and better than any other article ever offered to the public. Thousands of animals have been cured of the colic and over heating by this Liniment; and hundreds that were crippled and lame have been restored to their former vigor. It is used by all the first horsemen throughout the United States. Orders are constantly received from the Racing Stables of England for fresh supplies of this invaluable article. Over 2,500 testimonials have been received. Remember, one dollar laid out in time may save the life of your horse.

Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York. Sold by all Druggists. 1-43w3

It is the Solemn Verdict of the Medical Profession, verified by popular experience, that in cases of Consumption, scrofula, and bronchitis, a pure medicine al Cod Liver Oil, like that manufactured by John C. Baker & Co., No. 718 Market street, Philadelphia, for the last thirteen years, affords the only hope of cure. For sale by Barnes, Ward & Co., Wholesale Medicine dealers, New Orleans, La., and all Druggists. m12-3 m

SPALDING'S THROAT CONFECTIONS

These Confections are as beneficial for all complaints of the throat, Bronchitis, etc., as "Spalding's Cephalic Pills" are for curing headache of all kinds.

They remove Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Bad Breath, Coughs, Tickling in the Throat. Singers and public speakers are much benefitted.

Thousands who have used "Spalding's Throat Confections" pronounce them the best preparation for the above complaints in use. Try them. Take them. Only 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists, and J. SWORDS, Proprietor, 52 Dey street, New York. mr10

MUSICAL LEAVES.

Published by Phillip Phillips & Co., Cincinnati.

THE BEST SABBATH-SCHOOL SINGING BOOK EXTANT

Over 15,000 Sold in Eight Months.

This is the book that has been so highly recommended by the New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois State Sunday School Conventions.

☞ Send for specimen copy.

Forty cents each, or $30 per 100 copies.

J. HAWKINS. S. S. FISH. HENRY C. DIBBLE.

Hawkins, Fish & Dibble,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

No. 19 Commercial Place,

NEW ORLEANS.

STAPLETON & CO.,

UNION HAT STORE,

95.....CANAL STREET,.....97

NEW ORLEANS,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

HATS, CAPS AND MILITARY FURNISHING GOODS,

—ALSO—

GUNS, PISTOLS AND AMMUNITION.

jan20

CLERGYMEN are furnished with The Illustrated Phrenological Journal, devoted to Ethnology, Physiology, Phrenology, Physiognomy, Physychology, etc.—at Club rates. 1 50 a year—Single Nos. 20 cents. To others, $2 a year. Premiums of Melodeons, Pianos, Sewing Machines, and Books are given by

S. R. WELLS, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

SEAMLESS CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Manufacturers of Superfine Soft and Stiff WOOL HATS, of the latest and most approved styles; particularly adapted to the Southern trade. Also a fine assortment of Patent Seamless CAPS.

Sales-room, No. 255 Canal street, N. Y.; Factory at Matteawan, Dutchess county, N. Y.

JOHN FALCONER, Treasurer.

feb17 1y C. R. MARVIN, Sales Agent.

WANTED—A VERY RARE CHANCE—A Partner with a capital of $8000 or $10,000 in a drug house, doing a good wholesale and retail business, and in one of the best localities in this city. This is a very rare chance for any good business man that would like to engage in the drug trade in this city. Any party applying must be thoroughly a business man and understand the drug trade, and devote his whole time to the business. Must have good reference; none others need apply. Address lock box No. 160, N. O. P. O. jan25.

THE HORACE WATERS'

Grand Square and Upright Pianos, Melodeons, Harmoniums, and Cabinet Organs—wholesale and retail. Second hand Pianos at bargains from $60 to $225. Sheet music a little soiled, at 1½c per page. Cash paid for second hand Pianos. Old pianos taken in exchange for new. One of the largest stocks of sheet Music Music Books and Music Merchandise in the United States. Pianos tuned and repaired. Warerooms and Factory, 481 Broadway, N. Y. mr10-1y

The Great Strengthening Tonic.

(Not a Whiskey Preparation.)

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

Will cure debility, resulted from any cause whatever; Prostration of the system, induced by severe hardships, Exposure, Fevers, or diseases of Camp Life.

Soldiers, Citizens, male or female, adult or youth, will find this Bitters a pure Tonic, not dependent on bad liquors for their almost miraculous escape.

DYSPEPSIA.

And diseases resulting from disorders of the Liver and Digestive Organs, are cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. This Bitters has performed more cures, gives better satisfaction, has more testimony, has more respectable people to vouch for it, than any other article in the market.

We defy any one to contradict the assertion, and

WILL PAY $1,000

to any one who will produce a certificate published by us that if not genuine.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS

Will cure every case of

CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY

—AND—

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

Observe the following symptoms resulting from disorders of the digestive organs.

Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming at the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of vision, Dots or webs Before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

REMEMBER

That this Bitters is not Alcoholic, contains no Rum or Whisky, and cannot make Drunkards, but is the Best Tonic in the World.

READ WHO SAYS SO:

[From the Rev. W. D. Siegfried, Pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

Gentlemen: I have recently been laboring under the distressing effects of Indigestion, accompanied by a prostration of the Nervous System. Numerous remedies were recommended by friends, and some of them tested, but without relief. Your Hoofland's German Bitters were recommended by persons who had tried them, and whose favorable mention of these Bitters induced me to try them. I must confess that I had an aversion to Patent Medicines, from the "thousand and one" quack "Bitters," whose only aim seems to be to palm off sweetened and drugged liquor upon the community in a sly way, and the tendency of which, I fear, is to make many a confirmed drunkard. Upon learning that yours was really a medicinal preparation, I took it with happy effect. Its action, not only on the stomach, but upon the nervous system, was prompt and gratifying. I feel that I have derived great and permanent benefit from the use of a few bottles.

Very respectfully yours,

W. S. SEIGFRIED,

No. 264 Shackamaxon St

[From the Rev. E. D. Fendall, Assistant Editor, Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.]

I have derived great benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters, and feel it my privilege to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from derangement of the liver.

Yours truly, E. D. FENDALL.

[From Rev. D. Merrige, Pastor of the Passyunk Baptist Church, Philadelphia.]

From the many respectable recommendations given to Dr Hoofland's German Bitters, I was induced to give them a trial. After using several bottles, I found them to be a good remedy for debility, and a most excellent tonic for the stomach. D. MERRIGE.

[From Rev. Wm. Smith, formerly Pastor of the Vincentown and Milville (N. J.) Baptist Churches.]

Having used in my family a number of bottles of your Hoofland's German Bitters, I have to say that I regard them as an excellent medicine, specially adapted to remove the diseases they are recommended for. They strengthen and invigorate the system when debilitated, and are useful in disorders of the liver, loss of appetite, etc. I have also recommended them to several of my friends, who have tried them, and found them greatly beneficial in the restoration of health.

Yours truly, WILLIAM SMITH,

966 Hutonchis st., Phila.

[From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor Tenth Baptist Church.]

I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the practice out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart for once from my usual course to express my full conviction that, for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail; but usually, I doubt not, it will be very useful to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. H. KENNARD,

Eighth, below Coates street.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24, 1866.

Rev. J. S. Herman, of the German Reformed Church, Kutztown, Berns county, Pa., was cured of Dyspepsia of twenty years standing.

A. M. Spangler, Editor of the Culturist, No. 25 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, says this Bitters was recommended to him by a medical friend, and six bottles cured him of complete prostration of the nervous system.

Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge and Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia;

Rev. Thomas Winter, D. D., Pastor of Roxborough Baptist Church;

Rev. Levi G. Beck, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Pemberton, N. J., formerly of the North Baptist Church, Philadelphia, at present Pastor of the Baptist Church, Chester, Pa.;

These gentlemen express in the strongest terms their favorable opinion of this Bitters.

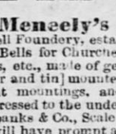
Beware of counterfeits!

☞ See that the signature "C. M. JACKSON" is on the wrapper of each bottle.

☞ Should your nearest Druggist not have the article do not be put off by any of the intoxicating preparations that may be offered in its place, but send to us, and we will forward, securely packed, by express.

Principal office and Manufactory.

No. 631 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.



JONES & EVANS,

(Successors to C. M. Jackson & Co.)

Proprietors

For sale by Druggists and Dealers in every town in the United States ma10 ew

BELLS.

Meneely's West Troy

Bell Foundery, established in 1826.

Bells for Churches, Academies, Factories, etc., made of genuine Bell-metal, [Copper and tin] mounted with improved patent mountings, and warranted. Orders and enquiries addressed to the undersigned, or to our General Agents, Fairbanks & Co., Scale Warehouse, 252 Broadway, New York, will have prompt attention, and an illustrated catalogue sent free, upon application.

E. A. & G. R. MENEELY,

West Troy, N. Y.

PITTSBURG FEMALE COLLEGE.

REV I. C. PERSHING, D. D. President.

Best sustained Ladies' School under the care of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States.

Superb Brick Buildings, with all the modern improvements.

Twenty-two Teachers.

Including Five Music Teachers.

Four Hundred and Twenty-six Pupils.

French and German by Native Professors. Sixty dollars per term, fourteen weeks, pays all expenses in boarding department, except washing. Fall term commences Sept 4th. Send to President Pershing, Pittsburg, Pa. for circular. aug 11-tf

HOMESTEADS FOR ALL LOYAL CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES.

All persons wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the late Act of Congress, granting Homesteads of eighty acres of land to loyal citizens of the United States, can get information upon this subject, by calling at No. 7 Prytan'a Street, New Orleans.

J. J. SAVILLE,

Agent for locating Homesteads,

Freedmen's Bureau, State of Louisiana.

Office Hours, from 8 A. M. till 4. P. M.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Pierce & Dwight's

SELF-RAISING FLOUR,

FOR

Bread, Biscuit, Cakes, Pastry, Etc., Etc.,

WITHOUT USING YEAST, YEAST POWDER, SODA OR SALT.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING.—Stir in cold water with a spoon, and bake at once, without kneading or waiting for the dough to rise.

For the healthfulness of Self-Raising Flour, consult your Physician.

Ask your Grocer for a six pound package.

For sale at

99.....Magazine street.....99

feb9 New Orleans.

MASON & HAMLIN,

MANUFACTURERS OF

CABINET ORGANS,

ALSO

PORTABLE ORGANS,

ADAPTED TO SECULAR AND SACRED MUSIC, FOR DRAWING-ROOMS, CHURCHES, SUNDAY AND DAY SCHOOLS, LODGES, &C., &C.

Uniting to a considerable extent the capacity of the Piano-Forte with that of the Pipe-Organ, and costing much less than either.

They occupy little space; are elegant as furniture; not liable to get out of order, and are securely boxed, so that they can be sent anywhere by ordinary freight routes, all ready for use.

Forty Styles, plain or elegant cases; one to twelve stops; Prices, $75, $90, $110, $125, $130, $1 0, $150, $160, $170, $200, $225, $250, $300, $435, $540, $650, $800, and upwards.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs were introduced four years since, and are a great improvement upon the Melodeon, Harmonium, and other reed organs, greatly excelling them especially in the excellent quality and variety of their tones; in power and quickness of action, and capacity for expression.

THEIR SUCCESS HAS BEEN ENTIRELY BEYOND PRECEDENT,

and proves how greatly such an instrument was needed. Again and again the manufacturers have been compelled to double their manufacturing facilities, until they have been increased six-fold. From the most eminent of the musical profession, the most distinguished pianists, organists, composers, and musical directors, the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have received an amount and degree of commendation never before bestowed upon any similar musical instrument. More than two hundred and fifty of the most eminent musicians in the country have given written testimonials to the value of the improvements contained in them, and that they excel all other instruments of this class.

FIFTY-TWO GOLD OR SILVER MEDALS, or other highest Premiums have been awarded to Mason & Hamlin for the important improvements effected by them, and for the

SUPERIORITY OF THEIR INSTRUMENTS TO ALL OTHERS.

Constantly exhibiting their instruments in competition with others, they have been awarded the highest premium in every instance, but three or four.

For churches, sunday schools, etc., the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs are the instruments long wanted, of the very best quality, abundant power, not too expensive, nor liable to get out of order.

For private use, in drawing-rooms &c. they are not less desirable, and are finding a place in the musical families of the principal cities.

They are adapted to a wider range of music than the piano, being fitted for all sacred music and for much secular music, while their quickness of action is such that the most lively, rapid music can be played on them. Then their cost is greatly less, as well as their liability to get out of order.

BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED MUSICIANS.

I should think they would become very much sought after as parlor instruments as well as for public performance.—Sigismond Thalberg, the world-renowned Pianist. Sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expenses. Far superior to everything of its class I have seen.—L. M. Gottschalk, the eminent Pianist. Such pure musical tones, promptness and smoothness of action and fine variety of effect, I have not found in any other instrument of the class.—S. B. Mills, the eminent Pianist. Really so excellent that there can hardly be much difference of opinion respecting them.—William Mason, the eminent Pianist. The best instrument of its class with which I am acquainted, and worthy a place in every drawing room. Harry Sanderson, the eminent Pianist. In every respect far superior to everything I have ever seen of the kind, whether in Europe or America.—Geo. Washbourne Morgan the eminent organist, N. Y. I can only reiterate what so many in the musical profession have said, that for equality, promptness and exquisite tone, they are unequalled.—John H. Wilcox, the eminent Organist, Boston. Surpasses everything in this line I have ever seen, whether French or American.—Jon Zundel, the eminent Organist, N. Y. The best reed instruments in the world are made in the United States, and your Cabinet Organs are greatly superior, and by far the best made here.—Max Maretzer, Musical Conductor, N. Y. Far surpasses all other similar instruments, which have come under my observation.—Carl Zerhan, Musical Conductor, Boston. Exceeds in my estimation every other instrument of this general class. Thos. Hastings. I can recommend them with confidence.—Lowell Mason. As soon as the people become acquainted with the superior merits of your instruments, your only trouble will be to supply the demand.—Wm. B. Bradbury. I have never seen anything of the kind which interested me so much.—Geo. F. Root. Exciting much interest in musical circles, and already becoming the fashion. N. Y. Home Journal. The highest accomplishment of industry in this department. This is not only our opinion, but the unanimous verdict of the organists.—Boston Advertiser. A glorious instrument for the temple service, so readily secured as to be available for any congregation, and effective and beautiful as to meet the desires of the most refined and fastidious.—N. Y. Observer.

The Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs must not be confounded with other reed instruments, from which they vary essentially, their superiority veing largely derived from PATENTED IMPROVEMENTS, which cannot be employed by other makers. Among them are,

The AUTOMATIC BELLOWS SWELL, patented, a most important invention, and greatly the best swell ever devised being much more effective and easily used than any other. The variety and beauty of effect of which it is capable, can not be appreciated except from actual use. The many attempts to imitate or find a substitute for this swell, prove its value. None of them, however, approach it in excellence and simplicity.

IMPROVED SELF-ADJUSTING VALVES patented, secure much more perfect action, durability, and freedom from liability to get out of order.

WOOD'S OCTAVE COUPLET patented, in effect nearly doubles the power of the instrument in which it is used.

NOISELESS SAFETY VALVES patented, prevent the hissing sound often heard.

The IMPROVED COMBINATION REGISTER patented, gives great facility in drawing stops.

Circulars, with full particulars and list with illustrations of styles and prices, sent free to any address.

Warerooms, 596 Broadway, New York; 274 Washington street, after November 1st, 154 Tremont street, Boston.

"To Ministers and Church Officers."

Just Published: American Ecclesiastical Law, The Law of Religious Societies, Church Government and Creeds; Disturbing Religious Meetings, and the Law of Burial Grounds in the United States, with practical Forms, by R. H. TYLER, Esq., Counsellor at Law. Price in sheep, $5 50; cloth, $5. Will send by mail, postage paid, on receipt of Price.

Also, all other Law Books supplied. Address DIOSSY & COCKROFT,

No. 71 Nassau street,

Mh2m1 New York City.

The New Orleans Advocate.

A Weekly Journal, Devoted to Christianity, our Country and Literature.

JOHN P. NEWMAN, D. D. Editor.

VOL. II.—No 17. NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 1867. Whole No.—67.

Poetry.

For the New Orleans Advocate.

The Miracle at Bethany.

Dark clouds of grief are hov'ring o'er a home
Once bright with joy; an only brother lies
Upon a couch, from which, 'tis feared, he ne'er
Again may rise. As gentle hands bathe oft
His fevered brow, in agony of heart
The sisters think of One, who even from
The grasp of death can save; whose cherished words
Have taught them "that good part"—and let us for
The Master send, at last is their resolve.
Now Jesus, Martha loves—her sister, too,
And Lazarus—but strangely lingers still,
Two days, unheeding their most earnest call
For help. How little do those stricken ones
Conceive the depth of sympathy which stirs
The Savior's breast, or how to comfort them
He yearns. Unto Judea's hills, at length,
He turns, and as they journey on, tells His Disciples of that last, long sleep, which to
Their friend has come; yet cheeringly he adds,
"I go to waken him;" the purpose of This long delay, He, too, reveals—"To the Intent ye may believe."

Though many come
With words consoling, yet the sisters long
For Jesus, for the peace His presence gives.
While at a distance, Martha meets her Lord,
And breathes the burden of her heart into
His gracious ear. "My brother had not died, Had'st thou been here." in half reproachful tone
She says; omnipotent the Master is,
And yet, stern fact, loved Lazarus is dead.
Her falt'ring faith cannot this obstacle
Surmount. How full of hope is His reply—
"I am the resurrection and the life,
Believest thou?" "Yea, Lord," in confidence
She cries; and Mary calls, who, falling at
His feet, repeats the first sad greeting o'er.
The heart that throbs in sympathetic woe
With all the sorrows which His children bear,
Is touched, and—"Jesus weept!" "Behold, how much
He loved him!" say th' astonished Jews, and earth's
Believing millions echo still the strain—
How wonderful is this redeeming love.
Then to the sepulchre they guide His steps,
To witness there His power over death,
And prove how fully God, the Father, shares
His glory with the Son.

Tried christian, do your fervent prayers for strength
Seem long unheeded? Does Jesus tarry when His presence most you need? Remember how
At Bethany, He suffered those He loved
To wait, and patiently abide His time.
He never leaves His trusting ones alone
To stem life's tide; when swiftly onward sweep
The billows, listen for his mandate, "Peace,
Be still!" and upward look. 'Tis always light
Above the clouds—O catch the faintest gleam.

BELLE.

New Orleans, April 4, 1867.

Tour in the East.

TYRE AND SIDON.

(Editorial.)

Mounting our horses at 11 A. M., we passed out of the south-east gate of 'Akka, en route for ancient Tyre. Our path lay along the western border of the plain of Phœinicia, winding through groves of olives and beside private gardens, rich in fruit trees and blooming with flowers. In three hours we reached the Scala Tyriorum, or "Tyrian Ladder," forming the boundary line between Phœnicia and the Holy Land. This promontory is the most southern root of Lebanon, with a white base dipping into the sea. The path over it is zig-zag, and in fancy resembles a winding flight of steps. The descent down the opposite side was rough and broken, now over low mountain spurs, and again through a narrow defile leading out on a noble plain. Occasionally we passed over bits on an old Roman road, now in ruins. Just before reaching Iskanderiyeh, in the mountain ravines to the east, we saw a company of French soldiers excavating a buried city, which has neither name nor story. They had succeeded in opening one temple and several elegant sarcophagi. As yet no inscription has been discovered to reveal the history of the unknown city. In half an hour we came to the white cliffs of Ras el Abyad, or the Promontorium Album of the ancients. This is one of the wildest, and at times most dangerous passes on the Phœnician coast. The path is cut in the white lime-stone rocks 500 feet above the level of the sea; the sides of the mountains are perpendicular, and the waves dash wildly against their base. Huge boulders had fallen from the cliffs above, and others seemed ready to follow. From the highest point of the pass we gained our first view of the plain below; the dreariness of our pathway was relieved by the glorious appearance of Hermon, whose snow capped summits were bright in the evening light, while the plain over which we rode was darkened by the shadows of the circumambient mountains. Traveling on for hours over the dry, sandy beach, we passed Ras el Ain in the dusk of the evening, but too late to examine those celebrated fountains; we pushed on and entered Tyre at 10 P. M. The next day was the holy Sabbath, and in the absence of a christian church we found it profitable to meditate upon the numerous prophetic allusions to this venerable city. Few cities can boast of a higher antiquity, of grander edifices, and of greater renown than Tyre. Originally it was founded by the Phœnicians, rebuilt by the Romans, and again restored by the Crusaders. The ruins of its marble castles, of its splendid palaces, of its triple walls and gateways, of its lofty towers and spacious harbors, are now seen half buried beneath the drifting sand, or washed by the restless waves. It was a "strong city" in the days of Joshua; it was the ally of Solomon, and was the coveted prize of Sha'maneser, Nebuchadnezzar and Alexander the Great. The cradle of commerce, Tyre became the Mistress of the Seas; her merchantmen traded in every port in the known world, and from her thriving shores she sent her sons, dotting the coasts of Europe and Africa with flourishing colonies. Nothing can excel the accuracy of detail and the elegance of graphic description of the 27th chapter of Ezekiel, on the wealth and glory of Tyre, and now, after the lapse of 25 centuries, her scattered ruins attest the truth of prophecy. Her walls are destroyed, her towers broken down; her stones and timber are in the midst of the water, and her ancient site is "a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea." Entering a small boat we passed out of the inner basin into the larger harbor, and in almost every direction we saw immense red granite columns lying prostrate beneath the surface of the clear water, and others imbedded in the solid rock, or cemented together by some powerful agent. In the south-east corner of the town are the remains of the church built in the fourth century by Paulinus, and consecrated by Eusebius, and in which repose the dust of Origen, and of the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa.

Six miles to the east of the town is the tomb of King Hiram. It is an imposing mausoleum, hewn out of the solid lime-stone rock, some 12 feet long, 8 wide, and 6 high, and surmounted with a pyramidal lid 5 feet in thickness, it rests upon a pedestal of hewn stones 10 feet high, and being located on a hill, commands a view of the city of the great king and all the sea beyond. On the north side of it is a large vault in which, no doubt, the dust of the good Hiram once reposed. Around it the country is strangely solitary; neither ancient ruin or human habitation is near, but standing alone, it is like a venerable relic of the past, and an impressive monument of the loneliness of death.

